The rule of the debtor seeking the creditor is not applicable in India for the purpose of determining the local jurisdiction of the courts because that would be engrafting something on to section 20 of the CPC.[2905] The common law rule, however, applies only when the creditor is within the realm. If he is not, the court will infer a negative intention and not apply the rule.[2906] Accordingly, a debtor in an Indian state was held not bound before independence to find and pay a creditor in British India.[2907] But, if the loan was made at a place in British India (Surat), there was an implied obligation to repay it at that place, although the debtor was a resident of an Indian State.[2908] In a claim for the return of a fixed deposit with a bank, it is essential for the plaintiff to prove the terms of the written contract governing the fixed deposit and the place of repayment. In the absence of such proof, the fixed deposit cannot be said to be repayable at any place where the plaintiff resides and makes the demand.[2909] Conversely, it has been held in Mahaluxmi Bank v Chota Nagpur Industrial and Commercial Association[2910] that a suit by a bank to recover amounts borrowed by a customer on overdraft account at its branch at Ranchi was not maintainable in Calcutta by reason of its head office being located there, even though the branch at Ranchi had been closed. The common law rule has no application to suits on negotiable instruments which are governed by law merchant.[2911] It has accordingly been held that a suit on a promissory note cannot be filed in the place where the payee resides if it was executed in a different place and the maker also resided there.[2912] The common law rule has no application if the parties do not stand in the relation of debtor and creditor.[2913] Where sales-tax payable under an order of assessment by the State of Bihar was paid by cheque

---

2902. EMES Chettiar v RMANA Chettiar, AIR 1974 Mad 305.
2903. Baidyanath v Cool Purchase and Inspection Agency, AIR 1971 Pat 229; Mumtaz Begum v Noor Mohammad, AIR 1965 AP 231.
2904. Oriental Bank of Commerce v Santosh Kumar Agarwal, AIR 2008 Cal 148 : (2008) 2 Cal LT 509 (DB).
2905. Jose Paul v Jose, AIR 2002 Ker 397 (DB).
2906. SPC Engineering Co v UOI, AIR 1966 Cal 259, 264.
2907. Bansilal v Ghulam, AIR 1925 PC 290 : (1926) 531 A 58 : 53 Cal 88.
2908. Nathubhai v Chabildas, AIR 1935 Bom 283 : (1935) ILR 59 Bom 365.
2909. Allahabad Bank Ltd v Gullilal, AIR 1940 All 243 : (1940) ILR All 207.
2910. Mahaluxmi Bank v Chota Nagpur Industrial and Commercial Association, AIR 1955 Cal 413.
2911. Sahni v State of Madhya Bharat, AIR 1954 MB 184 : (1954) ILR MB 343 (FB); Horsburgh v Chandroji, AIR 1957 MB 90; Jagdish Chandra v Santhi Moyee, AIR 1961 Cal 321 : 65 Cal WN 113.
2912. Sailum Easwarayya v Thakur Devi Singh, AIR 1953 Hyd 289 : (1953) ILR Hyd 510.
2913. Adinarayana v Lakshminarayana, (1940) 1 MLJ 558 : AIR 1940 Mad 588; Galley & Co v Appalaswamy, (1946) 1 Mad LJ 11; Shimoga Oil Mills v Radhakrishna Oil Mills, AIR 1952 Mys 111; Sundarlal v Jai Narain, AIR 1955 All 669; Rampal v Girdhar Lal, AIR 1955 Ajmer 49; Kadirsa v Shanmugha, AIR 1960 Ker 188, 1960 Ker 150.

at Calcutta, and subsequently, the order of assessment was set aside, a suit for the refund of the amount is maintainable at Calcutta on the basis of the common law rule that the debtor should seek the creditor.[2914]

[s 20.20] Negotiable Instruments

It is evident from sections 64 and 70 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, that in the case of a pronote, just as in the case of bills of exchange or cheques, presentment is necessary with the exception that in the case of pronote payable on demand and not payable at a specified place no presentment is necessary to charge the maker. The place of presentment indicated in section 70 would apply necessarily only to a case where presentment is contemplated. If presentment is not a requirement, even without such presentment the claim would be valid and such a case is one contemplated by the exception in section 64, namely, where a maker of a pronote is sought to be charged on a pronote payable on demand and not payable at a specified place.[2915]

If merely by making an endorsement on the negotiable instrument it is permitted to give rise to jurisdiction of a particular court, it would definitely defeat the purpose of section 20 (c) of the CPC.[2916]

The cause of action in a suit on a negotiable instrument arises wherever any one of the facts the proof of which is essential to plaintiff's case occurs. Thus, a suit may be filed at the place where the bill was drawn, or where it was accepted or dishonoured, or where it was payable. A suit may be instituted at the place where a hundi was drawn.[2917] Where a promissory note was signed by the defendant at Secunderabad and delivered to the plaintiff at Madras, the Madras court had jurisdiction as delivery was necessary to complete the plaintiff's title.[2918] If the promissory note is drawn in the jurisdiction of the court, the suit may be filed there, although the promisee is described in the note as resident of another place;[2919] but a promissory note is presumed to have been drawn at the place where it purports to have been executed.[2920] If a hundi was neither drawn nor payable in Bombay, it cannot be sued on in the Bombay High Court although it was for the balance of an account of Bombay transactions.[2921] A hundi may be sued on at the place where it was dishonoured[2922] or where it was payable.[2923] Courts within whose jurisdiction cheques were dishonoured will have jurisdiction.[2924] A suit on a promissory note executed at Vizanagram and payable at Secunderabad or Madras, is maintainable in the High Court of Madras.[2925] The export firm made payments for losses as per agreement at the headquarters of the corporation by a demand-draft which was encashed by the corporation at that place. Dispute arose as to liability for losses. It was held that the suit can be filed at the place of encashment.[2926] A promissory note not expressly payable at Delhi was delivered

---

2914. Borakar Engineering and Foundry Works v State of Bihar, AIR 1960 Cal 513.
2915. Ramasubramoniam v Ranganthan, 1978 Ker LT 906; Jose Paul v Jose, AIR 2002 Ker 397 (DB).
2916. Mohna Ramakrishanan v Yogam Bala Dev Raj, AIR 2003 Raj 88.
2917. Canara Industrial and Banking Syndicate v Narayan Venkatesh, AIR 1942 Bom 15 : (1942) ILR Bom 101 43 BLR 916; Rampurtab v Premsuk, (1890) ILR 15 Bom 93; Shivji v Hemraj, (1900) PR 57; Jewan Lal v Oudh Commercial Bank, (1916) 34 IC 191; Basant Ram v Kolahal, (1878) ILR 1 All 392.
2918. Winter v Round, (1867) 1 Mad HCR 202.
2919. Roman v Gopalachari, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 223.
2920. Meenakshi v Myle, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 19.
2921. Sewaram v Bajrangdat, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 473.
2922. D Mulchand v Suganchand, (1877) ILR 1 Bom 23; Narain Das v Kotumal, (1883) PR 132.
2923. Damodar Das v Benares Bank, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 536.
2924. Chanana Steel Tubes Pvt Ltd v Jaitu Steel Tubes Pvt Ltd, AIR 2000 HP 48.
2925. Surji Mull v Hudson, (1904) ILR 24 Mad 259.
2926. HP State Small Industries Export Corp v Export Credit and Guarantee Corp, AIR 1992 HP 17.

to the payee there and it was presumed to be payable, so as to give jurisdiction to the Delhi Court.[2927] The presumption in the case of a promissory note not made payable at a specified place is that it is payable at the usual place of business of the creditor.[2928] In the case of a cheque where it is drawn on a bank at place A but the creditor hands it over to his bankers at place B for collection, the court at A has jurisdiction as payment which is part of the cause of action takes place at place A.[2929] The whole cause of action in such a case stems from the draft which was obtained at Madras and which was not encashed by the payee but had been encashed by a totally different person through the help and assistance of the Bank of Madras as well as the bank at Bombay. As such, the obtaining of the draft at Madras would furnish part of the cause of action for the institution of the suit at Madras, within the meaning of section 20(c). The whole suit is based upon an infringement of the rights under the draft. Such infringement has necessarily to be established before the relief could be granted and the right to complain about the infringement arose, only on account of the obtaining of the draft at the place where it was obtained, namely, Madras. It is that place where the right is created, though the infringement of that right has taken place either in Madras or elsewhere.[2930] A draft was obtained by a firm at Madras, payable to R at Bombay. The draft was lost. Bank was instructed to stop the payment. Draft was presented and collected by a third person. Suit was filed against the bank at Madras. The civil court at Madras has jurisdiction to try it.[2931] Promissory note was executed at B, stating it as payable at "B" or any part of India. Promisee settled down at D and made demands from there. It was held that suit to recover the debt could lie at D. Debtor did not require specification of reasonable place for payment under section 49, Contract Act, 1872. Common principle that the debtor shall seek the creditor and pay to him where he resides, applied. Further, in this case, no presentment was necessary as against the maker, vide section 64, Exception, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.[2932] Where hundies are drawn at Delhi and accepted at Calcutta, part of the cause of action arises at Delhi and the Delhi High Court has jurisdiction.[2933] A bill of exchange was drawn by A in Bombay on B, having his registered office in England. Bill was discounted by A with the plaintiff bank in Bombay. Bill was accepted by B in England, but dishonoured on the due date. It was held that material part of the cause of action arose at Bombay. Hence, leave under clause 12, Letters Patent (Bombay), had been properly granted.[2934]

There has been some conflict of judicial opinion on the question of whether a suit can be filed in a court within whose jurisdiction a negotiable instrument has been assigned. In support of the view that an assignment is not in itself part of the cause of action, it is said that otherwise the provision in section 20(c) might be evaded;[2935] but the preponderance of authority is in favour of the view that the words "cause of action" would, in their accepted sense, include assignment and that the court where the assignment took place would have jurisdiction under section 20(c).[2936] This view would bring the law relating to assignment of 2927. Muhammad v Muhammad, (1916) PR 2.

---

2928. Nanu Mal v Firm Shiba Mal, AIR 1939 Lah 18.
2929. Bodh Raj v Earl Chawla & Co Pvt Ltd, AIR 1974 P&H 2.
2930. Vijaya Bank, Egmore, Madras v Kiran & Co, AIR 1983 Mad 357.
2931. Vijaya Bank, Egmore, Madras v Kiran & Co, AIR 1983 Mad 357.
2932. LN Gupta v Tara Mani, AIR 1984 Del 49.
2933. Delhi Cloth Mills v Ramjilal, AIR 1982 Cal 34.
2934. Dena Bank Ltd v Ironside Ltd, AIR 1987 Bom 227.
2935. Jupiter General Assurance Co v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1924 Rang 2, 1 Rang 231; Rameshwar Lal v Gulabchand, AIR 1960 Raj 243.
2936. Suganchand v Mulchand, 9 Bom High Court 272; Mangamma v Satya Raju, 31 Mad LJ 816; Dilbagh Raj v Valuram, AIR 1933 Lah 940; Harnath Raj v Choramani Sha, AIR 1953 Nag 192.

negotiable instruments in line with that relating to assignment of choices in action and other rights.[2937]

The Calcutta High Court has held that an endorsee may sue the drawer and acceptor at the place of endorsement. For when D drew a hundi at Benaras on his firm at Bombay in favour of BP & Co, a firm at Calcutta, and the hundi was endorsed by BP & Co to P in Calcutta, part of the cause of action was held to arise in Calcutta where the endorsement was made and P could sue in the Calcutta High Court after obtaining leave under clause 12 of the Charter.[2938] However, the case is different when the drawer of a hundi raises money by negotiating his own hundi. A seller of goods drew hundies outside Madras on the buyer firm in Madras and negotiated them outside Madras. The Madras firm paid the endorsee and was held entitled to sue the drawer in Madras to recover moneys overpaid as the amount of the hundi was in excess of what was due for the price of goods.[2939] The overpayment in Madras was part of the cause of action, but the payment received by the drawer from his endorsee could not be treated as a payment towards the contract. The negotiation by the drawer was only a provisional method of realising the money from the persons who were willing to accept the hundi for a small profit and take the trouble of getting paid. The High Court of Calcutta has held that if P accepts and pays a hundi in Calcutta for the accommodation of D in Cawnpore and D fails to pay, part of the cause of action arises in Calcutta.[2940] On the question of whether a suit can be filed in the place where a railway receipt is assigned, judicial opinion is divided. One view is that the assignment is sufficient to give jurisdiction to the court.[2941] Another is that it is not;[2942] and a third view is that while as assignment for consideration would give jurisdiction, an endorsement which merely authorises the endorsee to take delivery of the goods will not.[2943]

[s 20.21] Bill of Lading

A "bill of lading" is a memorandum signed by the master of a ship or captain of a ship, acknowledging the receipt of goods to be delivered by them at a certain place, subject to certain casualties for which they are not to be answerable, those being provided for by insurance. The bill of lading is signed in three parts: one part being kept by the consignor, another being sent to the consignee, and the third is kept by the captain.[2944]

As the bill of lading confers right of possession, if lawfully obtained, the captain is justified in delivering the goods to the person who presents it to him, as the bill is transferable by endorsement, unless it is presented under suspicious circumstances.[2945]

A bill of lading serves three purposes, viz,—

(i) it is receipt for the goods shipped, containing the terms on which they have been received;

2937. Abdul Gafoor v Sensmal, AIR 1955 Raj 53, (1955) ILR Raj 269; Muzaffar Ali Khan v Jawandmal, AIR 1955 Punj 93.
2938. Raghoonath v Gobindnarain (1885) ILR 22 Cal 451.
2939. Ponnusami v Damodarta, AIR 1924 Mad 646 : (1924) ILR 47 Mad 403.
2940. Ramchandar v Ganapatran, (1920) ILR 47 Cal 583.
2941. Alliance Assurance Co v UOI, AIR 1959 Cal 563 : 63 Cal WN 806.
2942. UOI v Adom Hajee, AIR 1954 Tr & Coch 362; Rama Rao v UOI, AIR 1961 AP 282.
2943. Fushraj Thanmull v UOI, AIR 1966 Cal 458; ISP Trading Co v UOI, AIR 1973 Cal 74; Comm for the Port of Calcutta v General Trading Corp Ltd, AIR 1964 Cal 290.
2944. See SK Sarvaria, rev. S Krishnamurthy Aiyar's Law Relating to the Negotiable Instruments Act, Universal Law Publishing Co., Delhi, 2005, 9th Edn, at p 30.
2945. SK Sarvaria, rev. S Krishnamurthy Aiyar's Law Relating to the Negotiable Instruments Act, Universal Law Publishing Co., Delhi, 2005, 9th Edn, at p 30.

(ii) it is evidence of the contract for carriage of goods, and

(iii) it is a document of title for the goods specified therein.

The contract of the ship-owners in the bill of lading is that they will deliver the goods at their destination, "in the like good order and condition", in which they were when shipped.[2946] On a bare reading of clause 3 of bill of lading, it is clear that any dispute arising under the bill of lading shall be decided in the country where the carrier has its principal place of business and the law of such country shall apply except as provided elsewhere in the bill of lading. Therefore, the exclusion clause refers to the jurisdiction of a court where the carrier has its principal place of business. Unless and until it is established that the defendant-carrier has its principal place of business at Singapore, the exclusion clause has no application. Simply because in the cause title of the plaint, the plaintiffs have described defendant no 2, Trustrade Enterprises PTE Ltd to be carrying on business at Singapore, would not ipso facto establish the fact that the principal place of business of defendant no 2 (respondent herein) is/was at Singapore to exclude the jurisdiction of the Calcutta court which admittedly has the jurisdiction to try the suit. Therefore, absence of reference of clause 3 of bill of lading in the pleadings cannot be said to be suppression of the material fact as the question of jurisdiction would be required to be adjudicated and decided on the basis of the material placed on record at the trial.[2947]

Where the contract was made to carry logs on board the vessel under bills of lading from foreign port for discharge at port of Calcutta, logs were found to be missing and landed at Calcutta, the suit by plaintiff at Calcutta for recovery of value of the logs and other charges was held maintainable as part of "cause of action" and arose within the jurisdiction of the Calcutta court.[2948]

[s 20.22] Partnership

A suit for the dissolution of partnership and for accounts may be instituted either where the contract of partnership was entered into[2949] or where the business of the partnership was carried on;[2950] and if the business was carried on in two places, the suit may be filed at either place.[2951] If the partnership has been dissolved and the accounts taken and balance struck, a suit for the balance will lie at the place where the balance was struck.[2952] The fact that a partnership owns immovable property does not make a suit for the dissolution of partnership and for accounts a suit for immovable property.[2953]

2946. SK Sarvaria, rev, S Krishnamurthy Aiyar's Law Relating to the Negotiable Instruments Act, Universal Law Publishing Co., Delhi, 2005, 9th Edn, at p 30; Ellerman & Bucknall Co Ltd v Misrimal Bherajee. (1966) SCC 1892, p 1896 : (1966) Supp SCR 92.
2947. Mayur (HK) Ltd v Owners & Parties, Vessel MV Fortune Express, AIR 2006 SC 1828 : (2006) 3 SCC 100 : 2006 (1) SCR 860 : 2006 (2) Scale.
2948. Mayur (HK) Ltd v Owners & Parties, Vessel MV Fortune Express, AIR 2006 SC 1828, at para 17 : (2006) 3 SCC 100 : 2006 (1) SCR 860 : 2006 (2) Scale.
2949. Durga Das v Jai Narain, (1917) ILR 41 All 513; Jagan v Gainda Mal, (1897) PR 62; Jaganandan v Kishna Chand, (1908) PWR 100.
2950. Alla Ditta v Shankar Das, (1916) PR 42; N Singh v Tulshi Ram, (1919) 17 All LJ 1015.
2951. Thimmappa v Kalakrishna, AIR 1926 Mad 427 : (1926) 50 Mad LJ 298.
2952. Luchmee Chund v Zorawur Mal, (1860) 8 Moo Ind App 291.
2953. Durga Das v Jai Narain, (1917) ILR 41 All 513.

[s 20.23] Suit on Foreign Judgment

A suit on a foreign judgment instituted in a court governed by the Code must satisfy the conditions of section 20. Where, therefore, a suit on a judgment of District Court of Colombo was filed in the Court of Subordinate Judge, Tiruchirappalli and the defendant did not either reside or carry on business or permanently work for gain within the jurisdiction of the court, it was held that the mere possession of property by the defendant within the jurisdiction of that court was not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of section 20 and that the suit was not maintainable.[2954]

[s 20.24] Place of Suing in Suits to Set Aside the Decree on the Ground of Fraud

The question of whether a suit can be instituted in one district for setting aside a decree passed by a court in another district has been the subject of many decisions. The result of the actual decisions ignoring what are merely obiter dicta may be stated thus. A suit to set aside a decree obtained by fraud in court X, where nothing is done beyond transferring a decree for execution to court Y, can only be maintained in court X, that is, the court which passed the decree.[2955] Where, however, a decree passed by court X is transferred for execution to court Y and the decree-holder makes an application to court Y for execution of the decree,[2956] or property belonging to the judgment-debtors is attached in execution by court Y,[2957] or the judgment-debtor is arrested by court Y in execution and released on giving security,[2958] the judgment-debtor may institute a suit in court Y for a declaration that the decree passed by court X was obtained by fraud, and for an injunction restraining the decree-holder from executing the decree. Similarly, if the judgment-debtor's property is sold by court Y in execution, he may sue the decree-holder in court Y for a similar declaration and for setting aside the sale and for possession.[2959] In all these cases, the cause of action arises in part within the jurisdiction of court Y; but, where the decree-holder has done nothing beyond getting the decree transferred for execution to court Y, and has not made an application to court Y for execution, the judgment-debtor, as stated above, cannot institute a suit in court Y for setting aside the decree, not even if the plaint includes a relief for injunction restraining the decree-holder from executing the decree.[2960] A high court will grant leave under its Charter and entertain a suit to set aside a decree of a mofussil court for fraud if part of the cause of action has arisen in its jurisdiction.[2961] Where a decree is passed by court A but the fraud on which the decree is sought to be set aside is alleged to have been practised within the jurisdiction of court B, a suit to set aside the decree could be instituted at court B as part of the cause of action has arisen there.[2962]

2954. Rajaratnam v Muthuswami, AIR 1958 Mad 203 : (1958) 1 Mad LJ 194.
2955. Umrao Singh v Hardeo, (1907) ILR 29 All 418.
2956. Banke Behari v Pokhe Ram, (1903) ILR 25 All 48; India Provident Co Ltd v Govinda, AIR 1923 Cal 425 : (1922) 27 CWC 359; Asgar Aly & Co v Satyanarayana, AIR 1957 Cal 317.
2957. Jawahir v Nekiram, (1915) ILR 37 All 189; Jawahir Singh v ED Sassoon & Co, AIR 1926 Lah 277 : (1926) 7 Lah 61; Danaji v Firm Puran Mal, AIR 1928 Oudh 88, (1928) 3 Luck 142; contra Dan Dayal v Mumalal, (1914) ILR 36 All 564.
2958. Khushali Ram v Gokul Chand, (1917) ILR 39 All 607.
2959. Kedar Nath v Prosonna Kumar, (1901) 5 Cal WN 559; Gauri Devi v Bishwanath Banerjee, AIR 1970 All 185.
2960. Dan Dayal v Mumalal, (1914) ILR 36 All 564.
2961. Nistarini Dasi v Nundo Lal, (1905) ILR 30 Cal 369.
2962. Natarajan v Saraswathi, AIR 1958 Mad 516 : (1958) ILR Mad 657 : 71 LW 167; Nand Lal v Abdul Hafiz, AIR 1960 J&K 76.

[s 20.25] Explanation: Suit Against Corporation

Normally, under clauses (a) to (c), plaintiff has a choice of forum and cannot be compelled to go to the place of residence or business of the defendant and can file a suit at place where the cause of action arises. If the defendant desires to be protected from being dragged into litigation at some place merely because the cause of action arises there, it can save itself from such a situation by an exclusion clause. The clear intendment of the Explanation, however, is that where the corporation has a subordinate office in the place where the cause of action arises, it cannot be heard to say that it cannot be sued there because it does not carry on business at the place. Clauses (a) and (b) of section 20 inter alia refer to a court within local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant inter alia "carries on business". Clause (c) on the other hand refers to a court within local limits of whose jurisdiction the cause of action wholly or in part arises.[2963]

The Explanation to section 20 is really an Explanation to clause (a). It is in the nature of a clarification on the scope of clause (a), viz, as to where the corporation can be said to carry on business. The Explanation is in two parts, one before the word "or" occurring between the words "office in India" and the word "in respect of" and the other, thereafter. The first part of the Explanation applies only to such a corporation which has its sole or principal office at a particular place. In that event, the courts within whose jurisdiction the sole or principal office of the defendant is situated will also have jurisdiction inasmuch as even if the defendant may not be carrying on the business at that place, it will "be deemed to carry on business" at that place because of fiction created by the Explanation. The latter part of the Explanation takes care of the case where the defendant does not have a sole office but has a principal office at one place and has also a subordinate office at another place. The words "at such place" occurring at the end of the Explanation and the word "or" referred to above, which is disjunctive, clearly suggest that if the case falls within the latter part of the Explanation, it is not the court within whose jurisdiction the principal office of the defendant is situated, but the court within whose jurisdiction it has a subordinate office which alone shall have jurisdiction "in respect of any cause of action arising at any place where it has also a subordinate office". The linking together of the place where the cause of action arises with the place where the subordinate office is located clearly shows that the intention of the legislature was that in the case of a corporation, for the purposes of clause (a), the location of the subordinate offices, within the local limits of which a cause of action arises, is to be the relevant place for the filing of the suit and not the principal place of business.[2964]

The clear intendment of the Explanation, however, is that, where the corporation has a subordinate office in the place where the cause of action arises, it cannot be said to say that it cannot be sued there because it does not carry on business at that place. It would be a great hardship if, despite the corporation having a subordinate office at the place where the cause of action arises, the plaintiff is to be compelled to travel to the place where the corporation has its principal place. The place should be convenient to the plaintiff; since the corporation has an office at such place, it will also be under no disadvantage. The Explanation provides an alternative locus for the corporation place of business, and not additional one. However, where the defendant chooses to challenge the choice of forum by the plaintiff on the basis of the alternative locus provided by the Explanation, it is required of him to bring sufficient evidence before the court to show that the alternative forum in accordance with the Explanation would be more convenient, less expensive and more appropriate. But in arriving at a conclusion as to the principal place of business, parties are required to place sufficient material before the court. The Supreme Court explained the point in the under-noted case,[2965] in the following words:

---

2963. New Moga Transport Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 2154 : (2004) 4 SCC 677 : 2004 (1) Suppl SCR 623.

2964. Patel Roadways Ltd, Bombay v Prasad Trading Co, AIR 1992 SC 1514 : (1991) 4 SCC 270. See also New Moga Transport Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 2154 : (2004) 4 SCC 677 : 2004 (1) SCR 623; Anant Raj Industries Ltd v Balmer Lawrie & Co Ltd., AIR 2003 Del 367.

> From this, it appears that the principal place of business would be where the governing power of the corporation is exercised or the place of a Corporation's Chief Executive Offices, which is typically viewed as the nerve center or the place designated as the principal place of business of the Corporation in its incorporation under the various statutes. Therefore, to arrive at a finding as to which is the principal place of business, the parties would be required to place the relevant material before the Court.

The word "corporation" in the Explanation takes in not only statutory corporations but also companies registered under the Companies Act, 1956.[2966] Irrespective of the Companies Act, 1956, the domicile of a trading company is fixed by the situation of its principal place of business,[2967] that is to say, its chief office where the central management and control are actually to be found.[2968] In the case of a company registered under the Companies Act, 1956, the controlling power is, as a fact, generally exercised at the registered office, and that office is, therefore, not only for the purposes of the Act, but for other purposes, the principal place of business.[2969] This is not, however, necessarily the case;[2970] and the question of whether that or some other place is the principal place of business of the company is in each case a pure question of fact to be determined upon a security of the course of business and trading;[2971] but, a company may have subordinate or branch offices in 50 different jurisdictions and it may be sued in any one of such jurisdictions in respect of a cause of action arising there.[2972] It will be noticed that clause (c) of this section is independent of clauses (a) and (b). Therefore, where the cause of action has arisen within the jurisdiction of the court in which the suit is filed, it would not be necessary in the case of a corporation, to rely on this Explanation.[2973] This Explanation contains a deeming provision that a corporation shall be deemed to carry on business at its sole or principal office irrespective of the fact that it carries on business at various purpose of deciding the question of jurisdiction under that clause, the test would be whether the corporation did in fact carry on business within the court's jurisdiction at the time the suit was instituted.[2974] Section 446(2) of the Companies Act, 1956, rules out this section. Under that section, it is the court which is winding up a company which has jurisdiction to try suits filed by or against such a company.[2975]

Section 20 embodies a common treatment of all defendants, whether natural persons or juristic persons. Hence, there must be a common treatment qua the presence of the defendant in the particular place, whether with reference to the residence or with reference to the activity

---

2965. Mayar (HK) Ltd v Owners & Parties, Vessel MV Fortune Express, AIR 2006 SC 1828 : (2006) 3 SCC 100 [PP Naolekar, J, speaking for the Bench].
2966. Hakam Singh v Gammon (India) Ltd, AIR 1971 SC 740 : (1971) 1 SCC 286 : 1971 SCR (3) 314; Sasa Musa Sugar Works v Chunilal, AIR 1975 Gau 34; Associated Traders and Engineers v USCS Industries, AIR 1975 Mad 29 : (1975) 1 Mad LJ 96.
2967. Jones v Scottish Accident Insurance Co, (1886) 17 QBD 421.
2968. Jones v Scottish Accident Insurance Co, (1886) 17 QBD 421; De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd v Howe, AIR 1906 Cal 455; Gopal Singh v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1976 Del 115.
2969. Watkins v Scottish Imperial Insurance Co, (1889) 23 QBD 285.
2970. D Keynsham Blue Lias Co v Barker, (1863) 2 H&C 729.
2971. De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd v Howe, AIR 1906 Cal 455.
2972. Peoples' Insurance Co v Benoy Bhusan, AIR 1943 Cal 190 : (1943) ILR 1 Cal 564; Home Insurance Co v Jagatjit Sugar Mills Co, AIR 1952 Punj 142; Prag Oil Mils Depot v Transport Corp of India, AIR 1978 Ori 167.
2973. Central Warehousing Corp v Central Bank of India, AIR 1973 AP 387 (FB).
2974. Babulall v Caltex (India) Ltd, AIR 1967 Cal 205.
2975. Globe United E&F Co v HB Boveri Ltd, AIR 1974 Del 200 : (1974) 1 Del 398.

in which the defendant may be engaged.[2976] The plaintiff sued the State Bank of Amritsar. Since the plaintiff failed to show that any part of the cause of action has arisen at Amritsar, it was held that Amritsar court had no jurisdiction and it will be either the Bombay court within whose jurisdiction the principal office of State Bank of India (SBI) is situated or the Ghaziabad court within whose jurisdiction the branch where the account and locker are, which will have jurisdiction to try the suit against SBI.[2977] Where defendant is a corporation as per the Explanation attached to section 20(b), a corporation shall be deemed to carry on business at its sole or principal office in India, or in respect of any cause of action arising at any place where it has also a subordinate office, at such place. The Explanation to section 20, while providing a plaintiff a wider field to institute a suit against a corporation, takes care to see that the defendant in such a suit can conveniently put up its defence through its sole principal or subordinate office.[2978] Where the defendant/applicant has admitted that it has a branch office at 5A Bahadur Shah Zafar Marg, New Delhi and 5 Sansad Marg, New Delhi, the present case is not of the genre where the defendant had been put to a disadvantage, because of the plaintiff's choice of filing the suit in New Delhi. Even if the convenience consideration is set apart, the cause of action had arisen in Delhi. The plaintiff has asserted in the plaint that the order was accepted in Delhi, and this fact has not even been denied or even traversed by the defendant/applicant. It is immaterial whether dealings between the parties were through the defendant's Madras office, or that delivery of the software was to be effected in Cochin. It is trite to state that the cause of action arises at different times, and at different places, and any of these would be a legitimate venue for suing.[2979]

[s 20.26] Suit Against Non-resident Foreigners

The court has no jurisdiction in a suit against a non-resident foreigner on a cause of action which arose wholly outside the Indian territory.[2980] As already stated, the court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit against a foreigner resident within the limits of its jurisdiction in respect of a cause of action that has accrued abroad.[2981] A foreigner is not exempt from the jurisdiction of Indian courts.[2982] If a foreigner resident himself carries on business or personally works for gain, in India, it is clear that he is amenable to the jurisdiction of Indian courts. But what if a foreigner does not reside, or does not himself carry on business or personally work for gain, in India, and:

(i) the cause of action arises within the local limits of an Indian court; or

(ii) the cause of action arises outside India but the foreigner carries on business through his agent within the local limits of an Indian court?

As to case (a), it is settled that a non-resident foreigner, who is a subject of a foreign state such as a protected native state before Independence may be sued in the court of India, if the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of such court.[2983]

2976. State Bank of India v Neelam Sharma, AIR 1980 P&H 251.
2977. State Bank of India v Neelam Sharma, AIR 1980 P&H 251.
2978. Fertilizer Corp of India Ltd v Ranjit Misra, AIR 1980 Ori 152.
2979. KLG Systel Ltd v Fujitsu ICIM Ltd, AIR 2001 Dec 357.
2980. Bhamboo v Ram Narain, AIR 1928 Lah 297 : (1928) 9 Lah 455.
2981. Ismailiji v Ismail, AIR 1921 Bom 460 : (1921) ILR 45 Bom 1228; Bhujbal v Nanbeju, (1897) ILR 19 All 450.
2982. Smith v Indian Textile Co, AIR 1927 All 413 : (1927) ILR 49 All 669.
2983. Chunilal Kasturchand v Dundappa Damppa, AIR 1951 Bom 190 : (1950) ILR Bom 640; Ram Ravji v Pralhaddas, (1896) ILR 20 Bom 133; Girdhar v Kassigar, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 662; Tadepalli v Nawab Sayed, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 69; Annamalai v Murugasa, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 544 : 30 IA 220; Rambhat v Sankar (1901) 25 Bom 258; Srinivasa v Venkata, (1911) ILR 34 Mad 257 : (1911) 38 IA 129; affirming ILR 29 Mad 239; Swaminathan v Somasundaran, AIR 1938 Mad 731 : (1938) ILR Mad 1080; Neelakanda v Kunju, AIR 1935 Mad 545 : (1935) 68 Mad LJ 506.

Thus, if A, a subject of the native state of Sangli and residing at Sangli, borrows money from B at Belgaum, B may sue A for recovery of money in the Belgaum court, for the cause of action arises at Belgaum. The rule of private international law that a court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit against a foreigner who does not reside within its jurisdiction and who has not submitted to it is subject to the rules of municipal law. A suit is accordingly, maintainable in an Indian court within its jurisdiction.[2984] A decree passed in such a suit, however, would not be enforceable in foreign court and where the decree is against several defendants, some of whom are residing within the jurisdiction and some others not, while it will be executable against all within the state; outside the state it will not be executable against non-resident foreigners.[2985]

As to case (b), the High Court of Bombay in one case held that where no part of the case of action arises in Bombay, it had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit against a foreigner who did not reside in Bombay, but carried on business through an agent in Bombay;[2986] but this decision was disapproved in the later case of Girdhar v Kassiga.[2987] The point arises in a later case before the Privy Council, but it was left open.[2988] The Madras High Court has held that the expression "carrying on business" in clause 12 of the Letters Patent included carrying on business through an agent in British India by foreigners living outside jurisdiction.[2989] It has been held that a suit for specific performance of an agreement to convey immovable property situated within India could be instituted in the court within whose jurisdiction the properties are situated, wherever the agreement might have been entered into and even when the defendant is a non-resident foreigner.[2990] The question of whether the defendant resides within jurisdiction is relevant only when he is a foreigner. A decree passed by a court against its own citizen who owns a permanent dwelling house at the place is not open to attack on the ground that at the time of the action, he was not actually residing there or submitted to its jurisdiction.[2991] The fortuitous presence of the ship in the Bombay harbour will not entitle the owner to file a limitation action in the absence of any claim being made or apprehended against him or the vessel in that court. Therefore, bringing the ship to the Bombay port, in order to confer jurisdiction on Bombay High Court, has the character of forum shopping, rather than anything else. The presence of a foreign defendant, who appeared under protest to contest jurisdiction, cannot be considered as conferring jurisdiction on the court to take action. Unless a foreign defendant either resides within jurisdiction or voluntarily appears or has contracted to submit to the jurisdiction of the court, it is not possible to hold that the court will have the jurisdiction against the foreign defendant.[2992] Where the cargo was discharged by the vessel at the Madras port instead of Calcutta port where it was agreed to be discharged, Madras High Court would have admiralty jurisdiction to decide the suit filed by the owner of goods for damages for breach of court act when the suit was filed at the time when the ship was berthed in the Port of Madras. It cannot

---

2984. Narain v Balabadra, AIR 1957 Pat 256.
2985. Narasinga Rao v Sankar Saran, AIR 1958 All 775; affirmed in AIR 1962 SC 1737; Karnataka Films v Official Receiver, Madras, AIR 1952 Mad 481.
2986. Kesowji v Khimji, (1888) ILR 12 Bom 507.
2987. Girdhar v Kassiga (1893) ILR 17 Bom 662 (a case under the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, section 18).
2988. Annamalai v Murugasa, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 544 : 30 IA 220 (a case under section 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882, corresponding with section 20 of the Code).
2989. Janoo v Batchu, AIR 1924 Mad 158 : (1936) 45 Mad LJ 471; dissenting from ILR 12 Bom 507; following Girdhar v Kassigar, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 662.
2990. Md Yusuf v Subramaniam Chettiar, AIR 1950 Mad 27 : (1949) 2 Mad LJ 735; Panchanan v Tarapada, AIR 1961 Cal 193 : 65 Cal WN 661.
2991. Jhumarla v Tansukrai, AIR 1957 Assam 127.
2992. World Tanker Carrier Corp v SNP Shipping Services Pvt Ltd, (1998) 5 SCC 310.

be said in such a case that the Madras High Court would have no such jurisdiction as the agreement between parties conferred jurisdiction on the courts in the country where the carrier has his principal place of business namely that of Canada in the instant case. It was more so when there was no ouster of jurisdiction in respect of other courts.[2993]

A contract was entered into by the plaintiff with a foreign company incorporated in the United States of America for the supply of brass dross of guaranteed 90 percent of metallic recovery. The foreign company had been carrying on its business in India through agents. The offer for supply was given and contract signed by Indian agency on behalf of foreign company at New Delhi. It was held that a suit against the foreign company can be filed at New Delhi.[2994]

[s 20.27] Agreement as to the Choice of Court

In regard to jurisdiction of court under the Code of Civil Procedure over a subject-matter, one or more courts may have jurisdiction to deal with it having regard to the location of immovable property, place of residence or work of a defendant or place where cause of action has arisen. Where only one court has jurisdiction, it is said to have exclusive jurisdiction; where more courts than one have jurisdiction over a subject-matter, they are called courts of available or natural jurisdiction. The growing global commercial activities gave rise to the practice of the parties to a contract agreeing beforehand to approach for resolution of their disputes thereunder, to any of the available courts of natural jurisdiction and thereby create an exclusive or non-exclusive jurisdiction in one of the available forum or to have the disputes resolved by a foreign court of their choice as a neutral forum according to the law applicable to that court.[2995]

By a long series of decisions it has been held that (where two courts or more have under the Code of Civil Procedure jurisdiction to try a suit or proceeding, an agreement between the parties that the dispute between them shall be tried in any one of such courts is not contrary to public policy and in no way contravenes section 28 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.)[2996] Therefore, if on the facts of a given case more than one court has jurisdiction, parties by their consent may limit the jurisdiction to one of the two courts. But by an agreement parties cannot confer jurisdiction to a court which otherwise does not have jurisdiction to deal with a matter.[2997]

Normally, under clauses (a) to (c) of section 20 of the CPC, plaintiff had a choice of forum and cannot be compelled to go to the place of residence or business of the defendant and can file a suit at a place where the cause of action arises. If the defendant desires to be protected from being dragged into a litigation at some place merely because the cause of action arises there, it can save itself from such a situation by an exclusion clause.

In view of the non-obstante clause in section 46 of the Insurance Act 1938, a clause in an insurance policy providing for a choice of forum does not bind the policy holder.[2998]

2993. Supreme Paper Mills Ltd v Owner and other persons Interest in the Motor Vessel 'ARABELLA', AIR 1999 Mad 118.
2994. Nandan Iron and Metal Industries v Fensty Inc, AIR 1992 Del 364.
2995. Modi Entertainment Network v WSG Cricket Pte Ltd, AIR 2003 SC 1177 : 2003 AIR SCW 733 : (2003) 4 SCC 341.
2996. New Moga Transport Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd., AIR 2004 SC 2154 : (2004) 4 SCC 677 : 2004 (1) SCR 623; see also Dilip Kumar Ray v Tata Finance Ltd, AIR 2002 Ori 29.
2997. New Moga Transport Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd., AIR 2004 SC 2154: (2004) 4 SCC 677 : 2004 (1) SCR 623; see Hakam Singh v Gammon (India) Ltd, AIR 1971 SC 740 : (1971) 1 SCC 286 : 1971 SCR (3) 314 and Shriram City Union Finance Corp Ltd v Rama Mishra, AIR 2002 SC 2402 : AIR 2002 SCW 2617 : (2002) 9 SCC 613.
2998. Isaq Mahmad v United India Fire & General Insurance Co, AIR 1978 Guj 46.

Where two or more courts have jurisdiction to try a suit or a proceeding, an agreement between the parties that the dispute between them shall be tried in one of such courts is valid and is not contrary to the public policy.[2999] Such agreement does not contravene section 28 of the Contract Act, 1872.[3000] Thus, where the cause of action has arisen wholly or in part within the local limits of the jurisdiction of another court, the parties can agree that the disputes between them shall be decided by one of such courts.[3001] Accordingly, the words "Subject to Rajkot jurisdiction only" in a contract between the parties have the effect of excluding the jurisdiction of courts other than those at Rajkot having jurisdiction otherwise to try the suit.[3002] In such a case, the plaintiff by such agreement waives his right to file the suit in a particular court and therefore cannot object to an order by that other court returning the plaint for presentation to the court agreed to by him and defendant.[3003]

According to section 19 of the Code, in case of suits for compensation for wrong done to the person or to movable property, if the wrong was done within the local limits of the jurisdiction of one court and the defendant resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, within the local limits of jurisdiction of another court, the suit may be instituted at the option of the plaintiff at either of the said courts. But filing of suit in a wrong court is no ground for rejecting the plaint under O VII, rule 11 of the Code. Rather, it should be returned for presentation before proper court.[3004]

Where in a dispute arising out of contract, the contract was made at Calcutta, the defendant's principal office was situated at Calcutta. The clause in the contract required all communications to be addressed to the Managing Director at Calcutta, implementation and execution of contract was monitored from Calcutta and even the arbitration proceedings were required to be taken under the jurisdiction of Calcutta High Court, it was held by the Bombay High Court that were absence of words like "only", "alone" or "exclusively" in clause in contract would not mean that exclusive jurisdiction was not conferred on Calcutta High Court.[3005]

On the point of ouster of jurisdiction by terms of contract, the Supreme Court has explained this aspect in ABC Laminart Pvt Ltd v AP Agencies.[3006] It has been stated in para 20 of the decision as follows:

> When the Court has to decide the question of jurisdiction pursuant to an ouster clause it is necessary to construe the ousting expression or clause properly. Often the stipulation

---

2999. Bhagat Ram v Ramnivas, AIR 1949 Ajmer 44; National Petroleum Co Ltd v Meghraj, AIR 1937 Nag 334; Hakam Singh v Gammon (India) Ltd, AIR 1971 SC 740 : (1971) 1 SCC 286 : 1971 SCR (3) 314; Bombay Goods Carriers v Sha Multhanmal Haslinal & Sons, AIR 1974 Kant 1; Manganlal v Satya Narain, AIR 1978 All 455.

3000. Achratlal Kesavalal Mehta & Co v Vijayan & Co, AIR 1925 Mad 1145 : 49 Mad LJ 189; Raghaviah v Vasudeviah Chetty, AIR 1944 Mad 47 : (1943) 2 Mad LJ 375; HK Doda (India) Ltd v MP Sugar Mills Co Ltd, AIR 1954 Mad 845 : (1954) ILR Mad 885 : (1954) 1 Mad LJ 434 Tilak Ram Chowdary v Kodumal Jethanand, AIR 1928 Bom 175; Haji Abdulla v Stamp, AIR 1924 Bom 381; Lakshmi Vilas Mills v Vinayak, AIR 1935 Bom 195; Nilton & Co v Ojha Automobiles Engineering Co, AIR 1931 Cal 279 : ILR 57 Cal 1280; Continental Drug Co v Chemoids and Industries Ltd, AIR 1955 Cal 161; Musaji Lukmanji v Durga Das, AIR 1946 Lah 57 : (1945) Lah 281 (FB); National Petroleum Co Ltd v Meghraj, AIR 1973 Nag 334; Muhammad Khasim v Shri Hanuman Industries, AIR 1956 T C 200.

3001. Hakam Singh v Gammon (India) Ltd, AIR 1971 SC 740; Timber Pvt Ltd v Skandia Ins Co, AIR 1973 J&K 86; Singhal Transport v Jesram, AIR 1968 Raj 89.

3002. Kanpur Sugar Supply v Harsukhal, AIR 1971 All 502; Jhun Jhunwala Bros v Subbaramier, AIR 1968 Mad 194; Beacon Pharmaceutical v Khosla, AIR 1973 Punj 160.

3003. Rajendra Mills v HVM Haji Hasan Dada, AIR 1970 Cal 342.

3004. SC Bose and Co v G Srikanth, AIR 2006 AP 337 : 2006 (4) Andh LT 589.

3005. Pacific Refractories Ltd v Stein Heurtey India Projects Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 Bom 231 : 2006 (3) Mah LJ 438.

3006. ABC Laminart Pvt Ltd v AP Agencies, AIR 1989 SC 1239 : (1989) 2 SCC 163.

is that the contract shall be deemed to have been made at a particular place. This would provide the connecting factor for jurisdiction to the courts of that place in the matter of any dispute on or arising out of the contract. It would not, however, ipso facto take away jurisdiction of other courts.

In para 21, the Supreme Court further went on to observe as follows:

... Where such an ouster clause occurs, it is pertinent to see whether there is ouster of jurisdiction of other courts. When the clause is clear, unambiguous and specific accepted notions of contract would bind the parties and unless the absence of an ad idem can be shown, the other courts should avoid exercising jurisdiction. As regards construction of the ouster clause when words like "alone", "only", "exclusive" and the like have been used there may be no difficulty. Even without such words in appropriate cases the maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius"—expression of one is the exclusion of another—may be applied. What is an appropriate case shall depend on the facts of the case. In such a case mention of one thing may imply exclusion of another. When certain jurisdiction is specified in a contract an intention to exclude all others from its operation may in such cases be inferred. It has therefore to be properly construed.

Similar issue came up before the Supreme Court in another case,[3007] wherein it was observed as follows:

Clause 17 says—any legal proceedings arising out of the order shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts in Mumbai. The clause is no doubt not qualified by the words like "alone", "only" or "exclusively". Therefore, what is to be seen is whether in the facts and circumstances of the present case, it can be inferred that the jurisdiction of all other Courts except Courts in Mumbai is excluded. Having regard to the fact that the order was placed by the defendant at Bombay; the said order was accepted by the branch office of the plaintiff at Bombay; the advance payment was made by the defendant at Bombay; and as per the plaintiff's case the final payment was to be made at Bombay; there was a clear intention to confine the jurisdiction of the Courts in Bombay to the exclusion of all other Courts. The Court of Additional District Judge, Delhi had, therefore, no territorial jurisdiction to try the suit.

In a case where the parties agreed in MOU that all matters between them must be settled before court of Hyderabad, it was held that though words like "alone", "only" and "exclusively" and the like have not been used, mentioning of certain jurisdiction shows intention of parties to exclude all other courts.[3008]

Plaintiff, who was proprietor of a theatre at Kallakurichi, had sued the defendant, a film distributor, on the basis of a contract for the exhibition of movie, part of cause of action had taken place at Kallakurichi, but no cause of action took place at Chennai. The Madras High Court held that court at Kallakurichi has jurisdiction to deal with the matter even though the contract conferred jurisdiction on court at Chennai.[3009]

Where two or more courts have jurisdiction, the parties can, in agreement, choose one of those courts and give it exclusive jurisdiction.[3010] Where there are two or more competent courts which can entertain a suit, the parties to the concerned transaction can contract to vest jurisdiction in one of such courts to try their disputes. If such a contract is clear, unambiguous and explicit, it is not hit by section 28 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, either.[3011] Parties can

---

3007. Hanil Era Textiles Ltd v Puromatic Filters (Pvt) Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 2432 : (2004) 4 SCC 671 (Mathur, J, speaking for the Bench).
3008. Andhra Pradesh State Trading Corp v Auro Logistic Ltd, AIR 2006 Mad 205 : (2007) 2 BC 683.
3009. Arputham Line Release v Raja Theatre, AIR 2006 Mad 344 : 2006 (3) Mad LJ 795.
3010. Globe Transport Corp v Triveni Eng Corp, (1983) 4 SCC 707.
3011. Chandeshwar Singh v Dahu Mohd, AIR 1983 Pat 257 (FB).

choose one of the two competent courts which deal with the subject matter of litigation.[3012] Unless oppressive, such an agreement should be enforced by the court.[3013]

Where a part of the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of two courts, the parties can agree that any dispute arising between them shall be tried by one of those courts only. It is also an accepted principle that though the choice of forum made by the parties by consent is to be respected, the enforcement of the choice by the courts cannot be ruled as imperative in all circumstances. It depends on the facts of each case and taking them into consideration, it is open to the court to hold that despite such an agreement between the parties, since the clause becomes oppressive for the plaintiff, it may not enforce the clause in a particular case. Thus, where no independent material has been produced to show that there was an agreement between the parties to oust the jurisdiction of the competent court, the view of the lower court that its jurisdiction stands ousted merely because of the clause printed on the reverse of the consignment note, would be unsustainable.[3014]

So long as the parties to a contract do not oust the jurisdiction of all the courts which would otherwise have jurisdiction to decide the cause of action under the law it cannot be said that the parties have by their contract ousted the jurisdiction of the court. When there may be two or more competent courts which can entertain a suit consequent upon a part of the cause of action having arisen there within, if the parties to the contract agreed to vest jurisdiction in one such court to try the dispute which might arise as between themselves, the agreement would be valid. This cannot be understood as parties contracting against the statute.

When the court has to decide the question of jurisdiction pursuant to an ouster clause, it is necessary to construe the ousting expression or clause properly to see whether there is ouster of jurisdiction of other courts. When the clause is clear, unambiguous and specific, accepted notions of contract would bind the parties and unless the absence of ad idem can be shown, the other courts should avoid exercising jurisdiction. (However, in construction of the ouster clauses when words like "alone", "only", "exclusive" and the like are used, there may be no difficulty. In such cases, the maxim "expressio unius est exclusio alterius"—expression of one is the exclusion of another, may be applied.)

Often the stipulation is that the contract shall be deemed to have been made at a particular place. This would provide connecting factor for jurisdiction to the courts of that place in the matter of any dispute on or arising out of that contract. It would not, however, ipso facto take away jurisdiction of other courts.[3015]

It is open to the parties to choose one of the forums for filing the suit by agreement and exclude the other forums, but it is not competent to the parties to invest jurisdiction on a court when it has no jurisdiction as consent cannot confer jurisdiction.[3016]

Choice of forum by the parties cannot be allowed by the agreement, where only one court has jurisdiction.[3017] Parties chose to restrict dispute to a particular court. Such option does not

---

3012. EDI Parry (India) Ltd v Sanami Transport, AIR 1980 AP 30, 32.
3013. Ganpatrai Agarwal v Fertiliser Corp of India, AIR 1984 Cal 35.
3014. Paradeep Port Trust v Hindustan Mercantile Transport Corp, AIR 1985 Ori 106.
3015. ABC Laminart Pvt Ltd v AP Agencies Salem, (1989) 2 SCC 163; Cheema Enterprise v Mayur Enterprise, AIR 1998 Gau 86; Rajaram Maize Products v MPEB, Jabalpur, AIR 1999 MP 44; Neyveli Lignite Corp v Vinay Engineering, AIR 1992 Mad 333; Kitax v D Surekha, AIR 1992 Ker 334 (DB).
3016. Prakash Roadline Pvt Ltd v HMT Bearing Ltd, AIR 1999 AP 106 (DB); Nagesh Sales Corp v Kerala Soaps and Oils Ltd, AIR 1994 Ker 150; Jabalpur Cable Network Pvt Ltd v ESPN Software India Pvt Ltd, AIR 1999 MP 271; Patel Roadways Ltd, Bombay v Prasad Trading Co, (1991) 4 SCC 270.
3017. GM, ONGC, Sibsagar v Raj Eng Corp, AIR 1987 Cal 165.

oust jurisdiction of the court which is competent. Revisional court cannot interfere in such a case. Such interference is possible only if the revisional court comes to the conclusion that the conclusion reached by the trial court is illegal, perverse, arbitrary or mala fide.[3018]

In a Calcutta case, a contract was entered into between the parties, at a place where the corporation had its subordinate office. No stipulation conferring exclusive jurisdiction on a particular court existed. Cause of action arose in relation to a transaction entered into at the subordinate office. It was held that the civil court at the place where the subordinate office was situated, was not debarred from entertaining the suit.[3019]

[s 20.28] Agreement as to Choice of Foreign Court

The parties to a contract in international trade or commerce may agree in advance on the forum which is to have jurisdiction to determine disputes which may arise between them and the chosen court may be a court in the country of one or both the parties, or it may be a natural forum. If this is the settled position then, even if it is found that the applicants 1 and 3 have signed the agreements in France and not in England, even then the parties will be governed by the English laws in terms of Articles 15.1 and 8.1 of the agreements which they have undisputedly executed and therefore the same will be binding on them. [3020]

The plaintiff purchased some materials from a foreign company situated in West Germany. The bill of lading was executed in Germany. Consignment was shipped from Germany, under a marine insurance policy. The insurance company was also situated in Germany. The contract of insurance covered the risk of transit upto place S, where the plaintiff resided. The consignment was short of 799 kg. The plaintiff filed a suit in the court at K, having jurisdiction over place S. It was contended that as per Article 12, the court at K has jurisdiction over place S. It was further contended that as per Article 12 of insurance conditions read with Article 48 of VVG (stated to be the German law relating to insurance matters), the suit could be filed only in Germany. It was held that the court at K had jurisdiction to try the suit. The ends of justice would be better served by a trial in the court at K, rather than in Germany.

In a particular case by clause 12 of the agreement, the parties agreed to submit to the non-exclusive jurisdiction of the English court (without reference to English conflict of law rules). In a case of this type where the parties have agreed on a neutral forum, the question of granting injunction would arise only when the proceedings are brought in a foreign court in breach of the contract, i.e., in a court other than the court which is chosen by the parties. Where the agreement confers non-exclusive jurisdiction on the designated court and where the proceedings are brought in that court, it is not permissible to contend that the institution of the proceedings is breach of contract and any application for stay of such proceedings on the ground that there was another forum which was more appropriate will have to be made to that court. The remedy of the plaintiffs is to raise objection before the court in England where the defendant has instituted its claim.[3021]

An agreement providing that suits relating to disputes thereunder should be filed in a foreign court is not void but it cannot deprive courts in India of their jurisdiction to try them,

---

3018. State of Rajasthan v GS Construction Corp Ltd, AIR 1988 Guj 73.
3019. National Hydroelectric Power Corp Ltd v Sova Enterprises, AIR 1991 Cal 324 (DB).
3020. Rhodia Ltd v Neon Laboratories Ltd, AIR 2002 Bom 502.
3021. WSG Cricket Pvt Ltd v Modi Entertainment Network, AIR 2002 Bom 365(DB); Spiliade Maritime Corp v Consulex Ltd, [1987] AC 460.

and a suit filed in India in contravention of the agreement is not incompetent.[3022] The court in India may adjudicate such a suit if it considers that the ends of justice will be better served by the trial of suit in this country.[3023]

An agreement totally barring the jurisdiction of Indian courts is void by reason of the prohibition in section 28 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872. An agreement which restricts a party absolutely from enforcing rights under a contract in the usual legal proceedings in ordinary tribunals is void. It is no answer that the aggrieved party could take proceedings in England.[3024]

Where the dispute was between two foreign parties, part of the cause of action arose in a foreign country and the contract between the parties contained a forum selection clause under which they had chosen a foreign place as the forum, it was held that the principles of international law require relinquishment of jurisdiction in favour of the chosen forum. Accordingly, the plaint was returned under O VII, rule 10 of Code of Civil Procedure.[3025]

Indian courts certainly have jurisdiction to restrain the defendant from proceeding in the suit which he has filed in another country though generally speaking when the parties have agreed to abide by a particular forum, the court must hold the parties to their bargain. However, this is not an absolute rule. How discretion of court has to be exercised in a given case would depend upon various circumstances. But to grant stay of the suit is still a matter within the discretion of the court.[3026] Any bilateral agreement in which exercise of option of jurisdiction of courts in a particular country can be effectively made is not opposed to public policy and will not be hit under sections 23 or 28 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872. In fact, what was opposed to public policy was indicated as an option to exercise the jurisdiction of a particular court, which originally lacks jurisdiction for the parties concerned, that resort to a private tribunal. In this case, the option was to exclude Indian courts. The parties lived in Connecticut, United States of America. They had jurisdiction there and it was not the case that the petitioner and the respondent herein were going to permanently reside in the United States of America. Hence, there is nothing wrong in the contract to have chosen except the courts in India, thereby including the courts in the United States of America.[3027]

[s 20.29] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Construction of Ouster Clause

(As regards constructions of the ouster clause when words like "alone", "only", "exclusive" and the like have been used, there may be no difficulty. Even without such words in appropriate cases, the maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius (expression of one is the exclusion of another), may be applied.)

A clause in the agreement provided that litigation under the contract would be taken up in a court at Kerala. It did not indicate that "only the Kerala Court" would have jurisdiction. In the suit filed in the Calcutta High Court, the only dispute was whether the manufacturer in Calcutta, who had undertaken to supply gunny bags to the purchaser in Kerala, was entitled

---

3022. LT Societa v Lakshminarayan, AIR 1959 Cal 669; Lakshminarayan v Vereenigde, AIR 1960 Cal 45; Motabhai v Mahalakshmi Cotton Mills, 91 Cal LJ 1.
3023. UL Lastochkina Odesea, USSR v UOI, AIR 1976 AP 103.
3024. Rajendra Sethia v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1991 Del 285.
3025. Sustainable EMS, LLC v Lee Harris Pomeroy Architects, PC (LHPA), AIR 2012 Cal 88.
3026. Modi Entertainment Network v WSG Cricket Pvt Ltd, AIR 2002 Bom 222.
3027. Nirmala Balagopal v Venkatesulu Balagopal, AIR 2004 Mod 255.

to the benefit of "force majeure" clause on the ground of strike. It was held that it could not be said that the Calcutta High Court would not have jurisdiction.[3028]

In a case of filing of a petition for arbitration, the owner of a property situated in Delhi had entered into an agreement with a developer to develop the property. The agreement was entered into at Faridabad where the owner resided. By the said agreement, the parties agreed to refer all disputes to the court at Faridabad. The Supreme Court held that it was not a suit for land and as such it will come under section 20 of the Code.[3029] It was observed by the Court as follows:

> One cannot look at para 16 alone in isolation. On the other hand, with open eyes, the parties had entered into the contract, they had agreed to refer all disputes to an arbitrator at Faridabad and they had agreed that the Faridabad Court alone shall have jurisdiction. In a matter of this kind, it cannot be said that the claim is similar to a suit for land. A housing complex has to be constructed at the site. When dispute arises, it will not be confined only to immovable property. Such disputes also require accounts to be maintained. The disputes also involve rendition of accounts. In the circumstances, in our view, Section 20 CPC alone is attracted.[3030]

An application under section 9 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 in a "Court" (including high court) as mentioned in section 2(1)(e) of the Act, when it would have jurisdiction to decide the question forming the subject-matter if the same had been subject-matter of a suit. But, where in a case, the cause of action arose at Mumbai and the arbitration clause of the agreement between parties also provided that only courts at Mumbai shall have jurisdiction, the application under section 9 cannot be entertained by the Delhi High Court.[3031]

The order form had a clause that "any legal proceedings in respect of any matters or claims or dispute on any account shall be instituted by the purchaser in Delhi High Court only". Bill issued also contained the words "subject to Delhi jurisdiction". Suit to recover price by the seller was filed. It was held that the jurisdiction of the court at Jaipur (the place where contract was entered) was not ousted by the above condition in order form and bill. Condition in order form applied only to legal proceedings instituted by plaintiff. As regards the condition in bill, there was no word "only", used after the words "subject to Delhi jurisdiction" in the bill. The mere use of the words "subject to Delhi jurisdiction" cannot mean that only Delhi courts have jurisdiction.[3032]

The High Court of Andhra Pradesh has held that if the jurisdiction of a civil court under section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to be excluded, that must be done by clear and specific language in the agreement. A condition in a purchase order, "subject to jurisdiction of Bangalore court", cannot be taken as excluding jurisdiction. The clause or condition did not use the word "only" or "alone".[3033]

The intention of the parties can be culled out from use of the expressions "only", "exclusive", and the like with reference to a particular court. But the intention to exclude a court's jurisdiction should be reflected in clear, unambiguous, explicit and specific terms. In such case, only the accepted notions of contract would bind the parties.[3034]

3028. Periwal Packing Industries v Fertilizers, AIR 1982 Cal 350.
3029. Jatinder Nath v Chopra Land Developers Pvt Ltd, AIR 2007 SC 1401 : (2007) 11 SCC 453.
3030. Jatinder Nath v Chopra Land Developers Pvt Ltd, AIR 2007 SC 1401, at p 1408 : (2007) 11 SCC 453; Kapadia, J (as he then was) speaking for the Bench.
3031. Jay Polychem (India) Ltd v Kotak Mahindra Bank Ltd, AIR 2009 Del 187 : 2009 (158) DLT 363.
3032. Jaishree Luxury House Kota v Kathotia Sons, Delhi, AIR 1980 Raj 42.
3033. Sponge Iron India v Andhra Steel Corp, AIR 1989 AP 206.
3034. New Moga Transport Co v United India Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 2154.

Where parties to the agreement have unambiguously, clearly and explicitly arrived at a consensus that any dispute under the respective agreement shall be tried only before the court having a definite jurisdiction mentioned in the said agreement, then it would operate as bar to the filing of suit in a court other than specified in the agreement. Merely because the clause relating to the jurisdiction of the court does not contain the exclusionary words like "exclusive", "alone", "only" and the like, the jurisdiction of the court other than specified in the agreement cannot be invoked.[3035]

[s 20.30] Agreement as to Choice of Court-ignoring of Ouster Clause

The court would ordinarily have regard to the choice of the parties but where, however, the court whose jurisdiction has been ousted is satisfied that the stipulation would operate harshly, is oppressive in character, inequitable or unfair, for the ends of justice, it can relieve the party of the bargaining. The ouster clause can be ignored in a case where the plaintiff having filed the suit for permanent injunction, at a place where seizure was attempted and as such cause of action arose for restraining the respondent from interfering with his possession of the truck in question, as it would have definitely caused him hardship, if he was to run to court in another state for such relief.[3036]

An agreement to refer a dispute to a particular court may be ignored if the facts demand that the other court (excluded by the agreement) should entertain the suit in the interest of justice.[3037]

Agreement was made regarding the forum of suing where the plaintiff's goods were consigned by agent through the defendant's carrier, but not delivered. Suits for compensation filed in Nowgong were met with plea of defendant that agreement under contract was to file suits only in Malda. It was held that the agreement regarding the forum of suing contained in the consignment note, could not be enforced in the light of the principles relating to the enforceability of such an agreement. The plaintiff as principal was, no doubt, bound by what was agreed by his agent. It was, however, doubtful if the plaintiff had knowledge about the said agreement, regarding the forum of suing. The plaintiff was an inhabitant of Hojai, which was near Nowgong and far removed for Malda. What was more important was that the defendant carrier had its branch office at Hojai too. All these showed that the trial at Nowgong court would be perfectly just, with no real inconvenience to any side.[3038]

In a case where the Calcutta High Court entertained the plaintiff's plea and granted an order of injunction restraining the defendant from proceeding with the arbitration proceeding ignoring the jurisdictional clause in the agreement between parties, the Supreme Court held that when contract between parties contained a clause that dispute under the contract shall be decided by the court at Bombay, the high court has no jurisdiction to try the suit and grant injunction staying the arbitration proceedings at Bombay. It was observed that before granting injunction, the high court should have recorded a clear finding that it has territorial jurisdiction instead of a general remark that the plaintiff has an arguable case.[3039]

The contract between the parties vested jurisdiction in courts at Bombay. If the district munsif, Coimbatore entertains and disposes off the suit, it will only be an irregular exercise of jurisdiction and the resultant decree will not be a nullity. In such a situation, when the matter

---

3035. Consolidated Agencies v Gujrat Carbon & Industries Ltd, AIR 2002 Mad 396 (DB).
3036. Tara Chand Boid v Shikam Chand Bhora, AIR 1995 Ori 199.
3037. Rajasthan Golden Transport Co Ltd v United India Fire and General Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 1980 Guj 184.
3038. All Bengal Transport Agency v Hare Krishna Bank, AIR 1985 Gau 7 (RL Hansaria, J).
3039. Shree Subhlaxmi Fabrics Pvt Ltd v Chand Mal Boradia, AIR 2005 SC 2161 : (2005) 10 SCC 704.

is brought before high court under section 115, it has a discretion not to interfere with the order complained of, unless the order, if allowed to stand would occasion failure of justice and cause irreparable injury to the party against whom it was made.[3040]

[s 20.31] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Jurisdiction Cannot Be Conferred upon a Court Which Lacks It

Before the parties can agree to vest the jurisdiction in a particular court, two or more courts including the one in whom the jurisdiction is agreed to be vested must have the jurisdiction under section 20, Code of Civil Procedure. The parties cannot agree to vest jurisdiction in a court which does not have the jurisdiction. Such an agreement would be against the statute and, thus, would be hit by sections 23 and 28 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.[3041]

Neither can counsel waive the jurisdiction nor consent to confer jurisdiction on courts which do not otherwise have the jurisdiction.[3042]

But it is not open to the parties to confer by their agreement jurisdiction on a court which does not possess it under the Code of Civil Procedure and accordingly where the parties agree that a suit should be instituted at place A where there is only a district munsif's court, that court has no jurisdiction by virtue of the agreement of the parties to entertain a suit beyond its pecuniary jurisdiction.[3043]

Suit was instituted at Karur for the recovery of damages on the ground that consignment of goods entrusted at Karur for the recovery of damages for being carried to Calcutta and for being delivered to consignee there, was not so delivered. Contract conferred jurisdiction on Bangalore courts. It was held that the court in Bangalore did not have any jurisdiction. By mere agreement between the parties, such jurisdiction cannot be conferred upon the courts in Bangalore. It is not open to the parties by agreement to invest the court with jurisdiction, which it did not otherwise have, having regard to the provisions of section 20(a) and (c), read with the Explanation. Hence, it was not open to the petitioner to object to the jurisdiction of the court at Karur.[3044]

It is a well-settled principle that by agreement, the parties cannot confer jurisdiction where none exists on a court to which the Code of Civil Procedure applies, but this principle does not apply when the parties agree to submit to the exclusive or non-exclusive jurisdiction of a foreign court. Indeed, in such cases, the English courts do permit invoking their jurisdiction. Thus, it is clear that the parties to a contract may agree to have their disputes resolved by a foreign court termed as a "neutral court" or "court of choice" creating exclusive or non-exclusive jurisdiction in it.[3045]

3040. Renown Biscuit Co Bombay v Kamalanathan, AIR 1980 Mad 28.
3041. Ranjana Nagpal v Devi Ram, AIR 2002 HP 166. See also Dilip Kumar Ray v Tata Finance Ltd, AIR 2002 Ori 29.
3042. State of Gujarat v Sarti Devi, AIR 1996 SC 937 : (1996) 1 SCC 558.
3043. Dharmal v Jhankidas, 49 Cal WN 123; Ram Bahadur Thakur & Co v Devi Dayal (Sales) Ltd, AIR 1954 Bom 176 : (1954) ILR Bom 334; HK Dada (India) Ltd v MP Sugar Mills, AIR 1954 Mad 845; Sanghvi v Asher Textiles Ltd, (1961) 2 Mad LJ 337.
3044. Prakash Roadlines Pvt Ltd v PM Gounder & Co, AIR 1995 Mad 84.
3045. Modi Entertainment Network v WSG Cricket Pvt Ltd, AIR 2003 SC 1177 : 2003 AIR SCW 341 : (2003) 4 SCC 341. See also Hakim Singh v Gammon (India) Ltd, AIR 1971 SC 740 : (1971) 1 SCC 286 : 1971 SCR (3) 314; Patnaik Industries Pvt Ltd v Kalinga Iron Works, AIR 1984 Ori 182; Mahesh Chand Gupta v Assistant Collector Delhi, AIR 2004 Del 101.

In a suit for recovery, the contract between parties was for release and exhibition of a movie. Plaintiff, the proprietor of a theatre was seeking recovery of dues from the defendant distributor. The theatre was situated at place K, so part of cause of action had arisen at place K. No cause of action took place at place C. It was held that the court at place K has got jurisdiction to deal with the matter even though contract conferred jurisdiction on court at place C.[3046]

[s 20.32] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Effect on Third Party

Forum selection clauses are binding on the parties but cannot bind a third party, unless it is shown that he had been made aware of its implications.[3047]

The mere fact that a person not a party to such an agreement is added to as defendant makes no difference, provided the courts referred to under the agreement has jurisdiction against such a person.[3048] Since such an agreement does not tie the hands of the court, the court in an appropriate case may refuse to drive a party to the court agreed to under the agreement.[3049]

[s 20.33] Agreement as to Choice of Court—Mandatory in Nature

Where an agreement confers exclusive jurisdiction on the court at Gorakhpur and the court would be one of the competent courts under section 20, the agreement is valid and Calcutta High Court has no jurisdiction.[3050]

Such an agreement does not oust the jurisdiction of the court having jurisdiction. Nevertheless, court would ordinarily compel the parties to abide by such an agreement.[3051]

If through clause of the agreement, the parties have bound themselves that any matter arising between them under the said contract, it is the courts in Calcutta alone which will have jurisdiction. Once parties bound themselves as such it is not open for them to choose a different jurisdiction as in the present case by filing the suit at Bhubaneswar. Such a suit would be in violation of the said agreement. For the said reasons, the suit filed in the civil court at Bhubaneswar would not be valid in view of the said agreement.[3052]

[s 20.34] Choice of Court—Invoice, Insurance Policy, Lottery, Purchase Order, etc. Containing Printed Clause

A mere allegation by a plaintiff for the purpose of creating a jurisdiction should not be enforced for conferring jurisdiction. More so, a fact, which does not have any direct relevance with the lis but is made to occur only to defeat statutory provisions of section 20(c) of the CPC in order to deprive the court which must have territorial jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the suit, should not be accepted for the reason that the act has knowingly or purposely been performed to harass the defendant and deprive the court, which has territorial jurisdiction over the subject-matter to try the suit. Thus, if merely by making an endorsement on the negotiable

---

3046. Arputham Give Release by its proprietor, Pondicherry v Raja Theater, AIR 2006 Mad 344.
3047. Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 37.
3048. Shah Prabhudas v Eurasian Equipments, AIR 1977 Cal 449.
3049. S Sarabhai v ET Organisation, AIR 1975 Guj 72.
3050. Kumud v Fertiliser Corp of India, AIR 1985 Cal 89 (reviews case law).
3051. Bhagat Ram v Gupta Cables, AIR 1977 Cal 451; Ghatge and Patil (Transport) Ltd v Madhusudan, AIR 1977 Bom 299 : 79 Bom LR 378.
3052. Dilip Kumar Ray v Tata Finance Ltd, AIR 2002 Ori 29.

instrument, it is permitted to give rise to jurisdiction of a particular court, it would definitely defeat the purpose of section 20(c) of the CPC.[3053]

It is settled law that the jurisdiction of the court where the cause of action, wholly or partly arises, cannot be taken away by the choice of the party to the contract merely on the basis of the condition printed on the bills or the bilty as the case may be. The parties cannot create a jurisdiction in the court in whose territorial jurisdiction no cause of action has at all arisen.[3054]

Purchaser of lottery ticket is not bound by the clause of forum selection printed in small print on the reverse side of the lottery ticket. There is a distinction between the bilateral contract and unilateral stipulation.[3055]

The contract having been concluded in Delhi, payments being received in Delhi, material part of cause of action had arisen in Delhi, the courts of Delhi would have jurisdiction, even if the term of invoice conferring exclusive jurisdiction to Goa is not considered. The plea and objection of defendant of lack of jurisdiction is devoid of merit.[3056]

In view of the non-obstante clause in section 46 of the Insurance Act, 1938, a clause in an insurance policy providing for a choice of forum does not bind the policy-holder.[3057]

Where two or more courts have got concurrent jurisdiction, the parties can agree that any claim arising between them shall be instituted in one of the courts which has got jurisdiction; but the parties cannot confer jurisdiction on a court which has got none in law. In this case, the cause of action did not arise wholly or in part in Delhi and the head office of the company was situated in Bombay. The Delhi court had no jurisdiction. Hence, the condition in the policy was not binding on the parties. Since the cause of action arose at A, the court at A had jurisdiction to entertain the claim.[3058]

Where the consignment note contained printed words "subject to Bombay jurisdiction alone" and, apart from existence of these printed notes, the carrier had no case that there was meeting of minds between the consignor and the carrier, nor was there specific agreement in that behalf and the consignment note was signed only by employer of the carrier and was handed over to the consignor, but there was nothing to indicate that there was an agreement between the parties conferring exclusive jurisdiction on the Bombay court, it was held that the printed words, by themselves and without anything more, would not be sufficient to constitute an agreement to oust the jurisdiction of all courts other than the court specified.[3059]

For ouster of exclusion of jurisdiction of court having concurrent jurisdiction, the language in the agreement must be unambiguous, clear and specific. From condition in the purchase order "subject to jurisdiction to Bangalore courts", ouster of jurisdiction of other courts cannot be implied, position is different, if the condition is "subject to jurisdiction of Bangalore courts only or alone". Purchase order was with the condition "subject to jurisdiction of Bangalore courts". Party from Andhra Pradesh supplied goods in response to purchase order. The sale order contained the condition "subject to Andhra Pradesh state jurisdiction". It could not be said that there was any consensus or agreement between the parties on the question of jurisdiction of courts; courts at

---

3053. Mohna Ramakrishanan v Yogam Bala Dev Raj, AIR 2003 Raj 88.
3054. Hindustan Metals v Vishal Goods Transport Co, AIR 2002 Raj 248.
3055. Special Secretary v Venkataramana Sesha Iyer, AIR 1984 AP 5 (DB).
3056. Dura-Live India Pvt Ltd v BPL Broadband Network Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Del 186.
3057. Isaq Mahmad v United India Fire and General Insurance Co, AIR 1978 Guj 46.
3058. Babu Ram Lal, Mandi v New Delhi Assurance Co Ltd, New Delhi, AIR 1980 Raj 126.
3059. United India Insurance Co Ltd v ATC Pvt Ltd, AIR 1989 Ker 36.

both places had jurisdiction. The plaintiff (i.e., the party supplying goods) had, in the absence of exclusion of jurisdiction, choice in the matter of filing suit in a particular court.[3060]

Where the machinery was purchased and the whole transaction from the submission of quotation, accepting order and receiving payment was handled by the branch office of the manufacturer at Delhi—mere mention of "subject to Bombay jurisdiction" in the quotation of the manufacturer will not oust jurisdiction of Delhi court.[3061]

[s 20.35] Notice Under Section 80

A notice under section 80 presupposes the existence of a cause of action complete and enforceable. It is itself not part of the cause of action and a court therefore, would have no jurisdiction to entertain a suit solely on the basis of the issue of a notice under that section.[3062]

[S 21] Objections to jurisdiction.—[3063][(1)] No objection as to the place of suing shall be allowed by any appellate or revisional Court unless such objection was taken in the court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement, and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.

[3064][(2) No objection as to the competence of a Court with reference to the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction shall be allowed by any Appellate or Revisional Court unless such objection was taken in the Court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement, and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.

(3) No objection as to the competence of the executing Court with reference to the local limits of its jurisdiction shall be allowed by any Appellate or Revisional Court unless such objection was taken in the executing Court at the earliest possible opportunity, and unless there has been consequent failure of justice.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 21.1] Scope 519
[s 21.2] High Courts 520
[s 21.3] Sections 21 and 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure and Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887—Policy Underlying 520
[s 21.4] Meaning of "Jurisdiction" in Relation to 521
[s 21.4.1] Subject Matter 522
[s 21.4.2] Person 523
[s 21.4.3] Pecuniary Value of the Suit 523
[s 21.4.4] Place of Suing 523
[s 21.5] Judgement of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It 525
[s 21.6] Execution Proceedings: Sub-section 3 ... 525
[s 21.7] Waiver of Objection to Jurisdiction 525
[s 21.7.1] General Rule 525
[s 21.7.2] Want of Jurisdiction and Irregular Exercise of Jurisdiction 525
[s 21.7.3] Interlocutory Orders—Effect on 527
[s 21.8] Objection as to Place of Suing 528
[s 21.9] Objection as to Place of Suing, When to Be Taken 529
[s 21.9.1] General Rule 529
[s 21.9.2] Objection to Be Taken at Earliest Stage of the Suit 529

3060. Sponge Iron India Ltd v Andhra Steel Corp Ltd, Bangalore, AIR 1989 AP 206 (DB).
3061. Baldev Steel Ltd v Empire Dyeng & Manufacturing Co Ltd, AIR 2001 Del 391.
3062. Bata Shoe Co v UOI, AIR 1954 Bom 129.
3063. Section 21 re-numbered as sub-section (1) by Act 104 of 1976, section 8 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
3064. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 8 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[s 21.9.3] Outer Limit for Taking Objection 531
[s 21.9.4] Appeal and Revision—Conditions and Instances 531
[s 21.9.5] Legal Representatives—Limitation of..... 532
[s 21.10] Parties Not Raising Objection to Jurisdiction—Rejection of Plaint Improper 532
[s 21.11] Applicability of the Rule in Section 21(1) to Execution Proceedings 533
[s 21.12] Condition as to Consequent Failure of Justice..... 534
[s 21.13] Remand..... 534

[s 21.1] Scope

Sub-section 1 of section 21 was inserted with a view to expedite disposal of the suits and to avoid entertainment of technical objections about territorial jurisdiction, unless there is a failure of justice. Sub-section (1) of section 21 provides that the objection regarding territorial jurisdiction can be raised at the earliest possible opportunity and even if it is so raised, it would not be fatal, unless there is a failure of justice. Thus, the mandatory provisions as envisaged under sub-section (1) of section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure, clearly provides that before raising objections with regard to territorial jurisdiction before the appellate or the revisional courts, the appellants are required to satisfy three conditions precedent with regard to such an objection about the territorial jurisdiction, which are as follows:

(a) the objection must be taken in the court of first instance;

(b) the objection must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, i.e., before the issues are settled; and

(c) there has been consequent failure of justice.

It is thus, easily deducible that within the meaning of sub-section (1) of section 21, a statutory recognition has been given to the principle that the objection regarding territorial jurisdiction can be waived if the defendant waives this objection by his conduct or otherwise than subsequently on account of this waiver, he can be precluded from taking any such objection before the appellate or revisional courts.[3065]

However, the same high court, relying upon Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan[3066] has held that the objection regarding jurisdiction can be raised at any time even during the appeal. It was observed that when the court, which has decided the matter, had no jurisdiction to adjudicate the dispute, the decree passed by such court is nullity and its validity can be questioned at any time even in an appeal or even during the execution proceedings. Consent of the parties or the silence or the inaction of parties in challenging the jurisdiction will not confer jurisdiction on the court to adjudicate the dispute, which otherwise the court has no jurisdiction to decide.

The plea of jurisdiction goes to the very root of the matter. The trial court having held that it had no territorial jurisdiction to try the suit, the high court should have gone deeper into the matter and until a clear finding was recorded that the court had territorial jurisdiction to try the suit. No injunction could have been granted in favour of the plaintiff by making a general

---

3065. Punjab National Bank v Millen Sales Corp, AIR 1997 Raj 151; Pathumma v Kuntalan Kutti, (1981) 3 SCC 589.

3066. Manindra Chandra v Lal Mohan, AIR 1929 Cal 358 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 940; Bank of Chettinad v SPKVR Firm, AIR 1935 Rang 517; Jnan Chand v Jugal Kishore, AIR 1960 Cal 331.

remark that the plaintiff has an arguable case that he did not consciously agree to the exclusion of the jurisdiction of the court.[3067]

[s 21.2] High Courts

This section does not apply to high courts in the exercise of their original jurisdiction.[3068] Section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not applicable to the original side of the high court; but waiver can operate independently of section 21. Section 21 is a statutory recognition of the principle that the defect as to the place of suing (under sections 15–20) may be waived independently of this section, and the defendant who may waive the objection may be subsequently precluded from taking it.[3069]

However, the observations of Lord DERBYSHIRE, CJ, speaking for the Division Bench of Calcutta High Court in the undernoted case[3070] is very illuminating:

> .....It must be noted at this stage that Clause 12 gives this Court its jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the Original Side of this Court is not given to it by Section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 20, Code of Civil Procedure, does not apply to the Original Side of the Chartered High Court, (see Section 120 of the Code of Civil Procedure). If this Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit, there is no need to invoke the aid of Section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure. If this Court has no jurisdiction to entertain this suit, then the Judge in the Court of first instance has no jurisdiction to hear the case and this Court sitting as an Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. That being so, this Court has no jurisdiction to consider the matter and has no jurisdiction to apply Section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and it seems to me, therefore, that Section 21 of the Code can have no application in a case of this kind which is brought on the Original Side of this Court.....

In a decision, the Calcutta High Court reiterated the decision given in the Maharaja Bahadur of Hathwa case (supra) and held that section 21 of the Code does not apply to high court in exercise of its original civil jurisdiction. It further held that cases relating to banking transactions form exception to the rule that debtor should seek his creditor. Therefore, bank cannot be prevented from re-arguing point of jurisdiction over again.[3071]

[s 21.3] Sections 21 and 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure and Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887—Policy Underlying

The policy underlying sections 21 and 99 of the Code of Civil Procedure and section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887 is the same, namely, that when a case had been tried by the court on the merits and the judgement rendered, it should not be liable to be reversed purely on technical grounds, unless it had resulted in failure of justice, and the policy of the legislature has been to treat objections to jurisdiction both, territorial and pecuniary, as technical and not open to consideration by an appellate court, unless there has been a prejudice upon merits.[3072] The mere defect in the territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction, such as can be cured by section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 or section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act. 1887, does not make the decree a nullity. Therefore, a decree based on compromise between 3067. Shree Subhlaxmi Fabrics Pvt Ltd v Chand Mal Baradia, AIR 2005 SC 2161 : (2005) 10 SCC 704.

---

3068. Nandarani Bose v Ranchhoddas Muldas Ramanuj, AIR 1981 Cal 275.
3069. Jeevani Bano v Asha Arora, AIR 1997 Raj 261.
3070. Maharaja Bahadur of Hathwa v HE Beal, (1936) 40 Cal WN 65 (DB).
3071. Oriental Bank of Commerce v Santosh Kumar Agarwal, AIR 2008 Cal 148 : 2008 (2) Cal LT 509 (DB).
3072. Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340 : (1955) 1 SCR 117 : (1954) SCJ 514; Nand Kishore v Prabhu Narain, AIR 1976 Raj 20.

parties to a suit is not void ab initio or a nullity merely because it involves an amount which exceeds the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the court that passed it.[3073] A decree based on compromise, involving an amount exceeding the pecuniary limits of jurisdiction of the court passing it, is an irregularity which does not nullify a decree.[3074]

[s 21.4] Meaning of "Jurisdiction" in Relation to

The jurisdiction of a court may be classified into several categories. The important categories are (i) territorial or local jurisdiction; (ii) pecuniary jurisdiction; and (iii) jurisdiction over the subject matter. So far as territorial and pecuniary jurisdictions are concerned, objection to such jurisdiction has to be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and in any case at or before settlement of issues. The law is well settled on the point that if such objection is not taken at the earliest, it cannot be allowed to be taken at a subsequent stage. Jurisdiction as to subject matter, however, is totally distinct and stands on a different footing. Where a court has no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the suit by reason of any limitation imposed by statute, charter or commission, it cannot take up the cause or matter. An order passed by a court having no jurisdiction is a nullity.[3075] The views expressed by the Supreme Court in the DLF Universal's case (supra) has been reiterated in a later decision.[3076] In para 23 of the judgement, SB Sinha, J, has observed as follows:

> 23. We may, however hasten to add that a distinction must be made between a decree passed by a court which has no territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction in the light of Section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and a decree passed by a court having no jurisdiction in regard to the subject matter of the suit. Whereas in the former case, the appellate court may not interfere with the decree unless prejudice is shown, ordinarily the second category of the cases would be interfered with.

In Harshad Chiman Lal Modi's case (supra), the Supreme Court quoted with approval an earlier decision in Kiran Singh's case,[3077] wherein it has been observed as follows:

> It is a fundamental principle well established that a decree passed by a court without jurisdiction is a nullity and that its invalidity could be set up whenever and wherever it is sought to be enforced or relied upon, even at the stage of execution and even in collateral proceedings. A defect of jurisdiction … strikes … at the very authority of the Court to pass any decree, and such a defect cannot be cured even by consent of parties.

In a case relating to termination of service of an employee, where the Supreme Court found the dispute to be one under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, and the jurisdiction of civil court barred, it was held that it was not material whether the objection to jurisdiction was raised at the initial stage or not.[3078] Sirpurkar, J, speaking for the Bench, observed as follows:

> Once the original decree itself has been held to be without jurisdiction and hit by the doctrine of coram non judice, there would be no question of upholding the same merely on the ground that the objection to the jurisdiction was not taken at the initial, First Appellate or the Second Appellate stage.

3073. Gwala Prasad v Mathura Prasad, AIR 1937 Oudh 379 : (1938) ILR 13 Luck 340; relying on Ambadas v Vishnu Govind, AIR 1927 Bom 83 : (1927) ILR 50 Bom 839; Anil Kumar Das v Aruna Kumar Bannerjee, (1962) 66 Cal WN 476.
3074. Gosto Behari Pramanik v Malati Sen, AIR 1985 Cal 379.
3075. Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF Universal Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 4446 : (2005) 7 SCC 791 : 2005 (Supp 3) SCR 495 : 2005 (7) Scale 533.
3076. Hasham Abbas Sayyad v Usman Abbas Sayyad, AIR 2007 SC 1077 : (2007) 2 SCC 355.
3077. Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340 : (1955) 1 SCR 117. See also Nand Kishore v Prabhu Narain, AIR 1976 Raj 20 : 1975 WLN 814.
3078. Chief Engineer, Hydel Project v Ravinder Nath, AIR 2008 SC 1315, p 1321 : (2008) 2 SCC 350.

In a decision, the Supreme Court has held that it is permissible to raise objection to the jurisdiction as any stage when the objection is as regards the subject matter of the suit.[3079] It has been observed in the above case as follows:

> 19. A distinction, however, must be made between a jurisdiction with regard to subject matter of the suit and that of territorial and pecuniary jurisdiction. Whereas in the case falling within the former category the judgment would be a nullity, in the latter it would not be. It is not a case where the Tribunal had no jurisdiction in relation to the subject matter of claim. As a matter of fact the civil court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. If the Tribunal had the jurisdiction to entertain a claim petition under the Motor Vehicles Act, in our opinion, the Court should not have, in the absence of any finding of sufferance of any prejudice on the part of the first respondent, entertained the appeal.

By jurisdiction is meant the authority which a court has to decide matters that are litigated before it or to take cognisance of matters presented in a formal way for its decision. The limits of this authority are imposed by the statute, charter, or restricted by the like means. If no restriction or limit is imposed, the jurisdiction is said to be unlimited.[3080]

The question before the Supreme Court[3081] was that whether the motor accident claims tribunal, Kolkata had the jurisdiction to decide the claim application under section 166 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 when the accident had taken place outside Kolkata and claimant also resided outside Kolkata but the respondent carried on business in Kolkata and that whether the high court was correct in setting aside the award on the ground of lack of territorial jurisdiction in the absence of any failure of justice. It was held by the Supreme Court that there is no bar to a claim petition where the insurance company has business as per provisions of section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

A limitation may be: (a) as to the subject matter; (b) as to person; (c) as to the pecuniary value of the suit; or (d) as to place; or it may partake of two or more of these characteristics.[3082]

[s 21.4.1] Subject Matter

Subject matter depends upon the nature of the cause of action and the relief prayed for. Thus, a presidency small causes court has no jurisdiction to entertain certain suits such as suits for the recovery or partition of immovable property; suits for compensation for defamation; suits for dissolution of partnership, etc.[3083] If a presidency small causes court or a provincial small causes court entertains a suit which is excluded from its cognisance, its decree is a nullity.[3084] 3079. Mantoo Sarkar v Oriental Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2009 SC 1022 : (2009) 2 SCC 244 (Sinha, J. speaking for the Bench).

3080. Raja Soap Factory v Shantharaj, AIR 1965 SC 1449; Kunheema v P Balkrishnan, AIR 1967 Ker 97; Hriday Nath v Ramchandra, AIR 1921 Cal 34 : (1921) ILR 48 Cal 138; Amritrav v Balakrishna, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 488, p 490.
3081. Malati Sardar v National Insurance Co Ltd, (2016) 3 SCC 43.
3082. Vishnu v Krishnarao, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 153.
3083. See the Presidency Small Causes Courts Act, 1882 (Act 15 of 1882), section 19. Certain other suits are also excepted from the cognisance of a provincial small causes court. See Provincial Small Causes Courts Act, 1887 (Act 9 of 1887), section 15.
3084. See also Bombay Civil Courts Act, 1869 (Act 14 of 1869), section 28A, and Bengal, NWP and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887 (Act 12 of 1887), section 23.

[s 21.4.2] Person

The general rule as stated by Garth, CJ in Olner v Lavezzo[3085] is that civil courts here, as in England "have jurisdiction to try all civil suits against all persons of any nationality, within the local limits of their jurisdiction". Independent foreign sovereigns are exempt but may submit themselves to jurisdiction by appearance to a writ.[3086]

[s 21.4.3] Pecuniary Value of the Suit

Throughout India, there are courts of different grades having jurisdiction in suits of different amounts in different local areas. These have been set forth in the notes to section 15 where the principles regulating pecuniary jurisdiction are also discussed. A suit may be over-valued and instituted in a court of a higher grade; or it may be under-valued and instituted in a court of a lower grade, but section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887 (Act 7 of 1887), provides that an objection on this ground shall not be entertained by an appellate or a revisional court unless (1) the objection was taken in the court who first framed and recorded it, or (2) the appellate or revisional court is satisfied that the over-valuation or under-valuation has prejudicially affected the disposal of the suit on its merits.[3087]

The Himachal Pradesh High Court has held that the plea of under-valuation raised for the first time in appeal is not sustainable in the absence of merits of the case having been prejudicially affected. Further, no objection as to the competence of a court with reference to its pecuniary jurisdiction shall be allowed unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.[3088]

[s 21.4.4] Place of Suing

This phrase may refer to territorial jurisdiction in its wider sense as where the suit is not cognizable by an Indian court, being for instance, a suit for partition of land outside India; or in its narrower sense of the local venue in India for suits cognizable by Indian courts.

Judicial opinion has been divided as to in which of the two senses the phrase "place of suing" has been used in this section. Some decisions hold that it is limited to local venue for which rules have been enacted in sections 15–20;[3089] while others take the view that it applies to all questions of territorial as contrasted with inherent jurisdiction.[3090] The question is concluded by the decision of the Supreme Court in Hiralal v Kalinath.[3091] There, a suit was filed in the original side of the High Court of Bombay after obtaining leave under clause 12 of the Letters Patent on the allegation that part of the cause of action arose in Bombay. The suit 3085. Olner v Lavezzo, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 878.

---

3086. Mighell v Sultan of Johore, [1893] 1 QB 149. As to princes, chiefs, ambassadors and envoys, see section 86.
3087. Jose Antonio v Francisco, (1910) ILR 35 Bom 24; Rajlakshmi v Katyayani, (1910) ILR 38 Cal 638, 666, 672; Rachappa v Shidappa, (1919) ILR 43 Bom 507 : (1919) 46 IA 24; Jagtaram v Munder Kuer, AIR 1934 Pat 240 : (1934) ILR 13 Pat 290; Sitaram Singh v Tikarem, AIR 1942 Oudh 481; Appat Krishna v Lakshmi Nothair, AIR 1950 Mad 751.
3088. Ajay Singh (deceased by LRs) v Tikka Brijendra Singh, AIR 2007 HP 52 : 2006 (2) Shim LC 394; see also State of Himachal Pradesh v Smt Annapurna Pathak, AIR 2007 HP 88.
3089. Bhamboo v Ram Narain, AIR 1928 Lah 207 : (1928) ILR 9 Lah 455; Prema Dip Pictures v New Sound Pictures, AIR 1955 MB 193.
3090. Musaji Lukmanji v Durga Das, AIR 1946 Lah 57 : (1945) ILR Lah 281; Dinanath v Mahavir, AIR 1958 Punj 289.
3091. Hiralal v Kalinath, AIR 1962 SC 199 : [1962] 2 SCR 747 : (1961) 2 SCJ 592, affirming Hiralal v Kalinath, AIR 1955 All 569; Harichand v Virbal, AIR 1975 Guj 150 : (1974) 15 Guj LR 499.

was then referred to arbitration and it resulted in an award in favour of the plaintiff. A decree was passed in terms of the award and that was put in execution. The judgement-debtor resisted it on the ground that no part of the cause of action had arisen in Bombay, and therefore, the high court had no jurisdiction to try the cause and that the decree was a nullity. In rejecting his contention, the Supreme Court observed:

> It is well-settled that the objection as to local jurisdiction of a court does not stand on the same footing as an objection to the competence of a court to try a case which goes to the very root of the jurisdiction and where it is lacking, it is a case of inherent lack of jurisdiction. On the other hand, an objection as to the local jurisdiction of a court can be waived and this principle has been given a statutory recognition by enactments like section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code.

In view of this decision, the question of whether section 21 applies in terms to objections to local jurisdiction other than those covered by sections 15–20 would appear to be academic as the general principal underlying the section would in any event be applicable.

This decision also settles the controversy in the Indian courts[3092] as to the validity of the decree passed by court A in a suit which had been instituted in that court in violation of the agreement of the parties specifying court B as the forum for adjudication of disputes under the contract. As already stated, courts in India derived their jurisdiction from the Code and it is not open to the parties by agreement to invest them with or divest them of their jurisdiction.[3093] There being therefore, no inherent lack of jurisdiction in court A, any objection based on the agreement is one relating to a place of suing and that falls within the saving of section 21. The decisions therefore, which hold that the decree passed by court A would be a nullity are no longer good law.[3094] In section 21(1), the expression "place of suing" covers also objection to the place of suing on the ground that the forum chosen is in violation of the forum selection clause.[3095] The plaintiff had submitted to the jurisdiction of a court by valuing his suit at a particular level. He had sought a relief from the court and, on being denied the relief, had agitated against the decision in the appellate forum, without raising any objection. It was held that the objection as to under-valuation and want of jurisdiction, cannot be raised by the plaintiff's legal representatives, who had been substituted for the plaintiffs.[3096]

If the plaint does not disclose any wrong done to plaintiff at Delhi, then the court at Delhi does not have jurisdiction to entertain subject suit and if summons/notice of suit are issued to defendant, it would cause harassment and inconvenience to defendant. The court is not forum convenience to entertain suit on averments contained in plaint.[3097]

In a suit for specific performance, a plea was taken that court at Hyderabad had no territorial jurisdiction as the property was situated in Medak district. The Hyderabad court rejected the objection on the ground that relief of specific performance could be entirely obtained through personal obedience of defendants residing in Hyderabad; therefore, it had territorial jurisdiction. In the meantime, the Supreme Court had pronounced in Harshad Chiman Lal Modi[3098] that a suit for specific performance could only be filed where the property is situated.

3092. Prem Dip Pictures v New Sound Pictures, AIR 1955 MB 193; Gulabchand v Anandan, AIR 1954 Mad 11; Dinanath v Mahavir, AIR 1958 Punj 289.
3093. See notes to section 20: "Agreement as to Choice of Court".
3094. Prem Dip Pictures v New Sound Pictures, AIR 1955 MB 193; Gulab Chand v Anandan, AIR 1954 Mad 11.
3095. Savani Transport v Sukumar Chakravarty, AIR 1986 Cal 330 (DB).
3096. Shioprasad v Mohanabai, AIR 1989 Bom 349.
3097. Escorts Ltd v Tejpal Singh Sisodia, 2019 SCC OnLine (Del) 7607 : LNIND 2019 DEL 851.
3098. Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF Universal Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 4446 : (2005) 7 SCC 791 : 2005 (7) Scale 533.

The instant issue, therefore, travelled to the Supreme Court,[3099] which held that as in the first appeal, the high court had accepted this plea and followed the judgement of the Supreme Court in Harshad Chiman Lal Modi, holding that the court in Hyderabad had no territorial jurisdiction and as a result of which the appeal was allowed and ordered to be filed in an appropriate court, no consequent failure of justice had taken place and conclusively the matter was remanded to the high court for adjudication on merits.

[s 21.5] Judgement of the Court Not Competent to Deliver It

See notes to section 11 under the same heading.

[s 21.6] Execution Proceedings: Sub-section 3

The section before its amendment did not apply to execution proceedings.[3100] The new sub-section (3), however, extends the rule of waiver laid down in this section to execution proceedings also. Hence, an objection as to the competence of the executing court with reference to the local limits of its jurisdiction would be disallowed by the appellate or revisional court, unless the conditions therein laid down, viz, that such objection was preferred in the executing court at the earliest opportunity and that there has been a consequent failure of justice, are complied with. The words of sub-section (3) are mandatory. Hence, the appellate or revisional court must reject the objection unless both the conditions which are cumulative have been complied with.

[s 21.7] Waiver of Objection to Jurisdiction

[s 21.7.1] General Rule

It is a fundamental rule that a judgement of a court without jurisdiction is a nullity.[3101] Where by reason of any limitation imposed by statute, charter, commission, a court is without jurisdiction to entertain any particular action or matter, neither the acquiescence nor the express consent of the parties can confer jurisdiction upon the court nor can consent give a court jurisdiction if a condition which goes to the jurisdiction has not been performed or fulfilled. Where a limited court takes upon itself to exercise a jurisdiction it does not possess, its decision amounts to nothing.[3102] The general rule, therefore, is that consent cannot give jurisdiction, and, want of jurisdiction cannot be waived.

[s 21.7.2] Want of Jurisdiction and Irregular Exercise of Jurisdiction

There is an apparent conflict in the reported cases on this subject owing to the failure to keep clearly in view the distinction between want of jurisdiction and irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction, or to use the phrase of Mookerjee, J, irregularity in the assumption of jurisdiction.[3103] The leading case on the subject is Ledgard v Bull[3104] decided by the Privy Council in 1886. The suit was for damages and an injunction for infringement of a patent. Under the 3099. KP Ranga Rao v KV Venkatesham, (2015) 13 SCC 14.

---

3100. Vasireddi Srimanthu v Devabhaktuni, AIR 1947 Mad 347 : (1948) ILR Mad 18 (FB).
3101. Rajlakshmi v Katyayani, (1913) ILR 38 Cal 639; Kiransingh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340.
3102. Bepin Behary v Mohit Kumar, AIR 1942 Cal 496 : (1942) ILR 1 Cal 149; Raghuraj v Basudeo, AIR 1950 Pat 318 : (1950) ILR 29 Pat 318; United Commercial Bank Ltd v Workmen, AIR 1951 SC 230.
3103. Gurdeo Singh v Chandrika, (1909) ILR 36 Cal 103.
3104. Ledgard v Bull, (1887) 13 IA 124 : (1886) ILR 9 All 191; Vishnu v Krishnarao, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 153.

Patents and Designs (Amendment) Act, 1950 (stands repealed as of the 21st century), such a suit could only be brought in a district court, but it was brought in the court of a subordinate judge who had no jurisdiction to entertain it. The suit was eventually transferred from the subordinate judge's court to the district court, and there heard and decided. The defendant contended that an order for transfer of a suit from one court to another under section 24 could not be made, unless the suit had been brought in a court having jurisdiction, but his contention was overruled. The same view was taken by the high court on appeal. The judicial committee held that the suit having been instituted in a court which had no jurisdiction, no order of transfer could be made, but that the district court being competent to entertain and try the suit if it were competently brought, the defendant could waive the objection to the irregularities of its institution, but that he had not done so, and the decree of the district court could not, therefore, stand and it ought to have been set aside by the high court. Lord WATSON in delivering the judgement of the Board said:

> The District Judge was perfectly competent to entertain and try the suit, if it were competently brought, and their Lordships do not doubt that, in such a case, a Defendant may be barred, by his own conduct, from objecting to irregularities in the institution of the suit. [But] [w]hen the judge has no inherent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a suit, the parties cannot, by their mutual consent, convert it into a proper judicial process, although that may constitute the judge their arbiter, and be bound by his decision on the merits when these are submitted to him. But there are numerous authorities which establish that when, in a cause which the judge is competent to try, the parties without objection join issue and go to trial upon the merits, the Defendant cannot subsequently dispute his jurisdiction upon the grounds that there were irregularities in the initial procedure, which, if objected to at the time, would have led to the dismissal of the suit.

The principles laid down in Ledgard v Bull were reiterated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Meenakshi Naidu v Subramania Sastri.[3105] That was a case in which no appeal was provided for by an enactment. Their Lordships held that the decree of the high court was a nullity. In the course of the judgment, their Lordships said:

> In the present case there was an inherent incompetency in the High Court to deal with the question brought before it and no consent could have conferred upon the High Court that jurisdiction which it never possessed.

These two cases illustrate the distinction between want of jurisdiction and irregular exercise or assumption of jurisdiction. Irregular exercise or assumption may be waived as it could have been in Ledgard v Bull and therefore, if a court were erroneously to assume jurisdiction, to try a suit over which it has inherent jurisdiction, its decree may be set aside but it cannot be treated as a nullity;[3106] but, when the court is not competent to entertain to try the suit, there is want of inherent jurisdiction which cannot be waived. Thus, where a suit was exclusively triable by the revenue court under section 38 of the Rajasthan Tenancy Act, 1955, but was tried by a civil court, it was held that the objection as to jurisdiction could be raised at the stage of appeal.[3107] If the railway at the destination station is not liable for damages to goods or person as under the unamended section 80 of the Indian Railway Act, 1890, the court at the destination station is incompetent to entertain the suit. Such an infirmity being of inherent lack of jurisdiction, the section is inapplicable to such a situation.[3108]

3105. Meenakshi Naidu v Subramania Sastri, (1888) ILR 11 Mad 26 : 14 IA 160; Jeramchod v Dakore Temple Committee, AIR 1925 PC 155 : (1925) 27 Bom LR 872.
3106. Bepin Behary v Mohit Kumar, AIR 1942 Cal 496; Girwar Narayan v Kamla Prasad, AIR 1933 Pat 104 : (1933) ILR 12 Pat 117; Yaruva Chinnapa Redi v Shriniwasrao, AIR 1935 Mad 835 : (1936) ILR 59 Mad 62; Ajam Ibram v Bai Hana, AIR 1939 Bom 85 : (1939) ILR Bom 472.
3107. Mohanlal v Ratna, AIR 1971 Raj 164; Venkata Rao v Brijpal, AIR 1972 Mys 339.
3108. UOI v Bhagat Ram, AIR 1972 All 288.

[s 21.7.3] Interlocutory Orders—Effect on

If the court had no jurisdiction at all to entertain the suit, then anything done by it, eg, interlocutory orders passed by assuming such jurisdiction, would be totally without competence. The mere fact that such incompetence is discovered subsequently, would not render the intermediate acts and findings till the date of discovery of such incompetence as valid. To accept this argument would lead to a very strange situation. Orders passed by a court, which is incompetent to entertain the proceedings: (i) would then be valid between the date when the proceedings are entertained and the discovery of its incompetence; but (ii) would not be either binding or operative, after the date of discovery of the incompetence of the court. Either the court is competent, or it is incompetent, to entertain suits and to pass orders therein;[3109] but here again, there are certain exceptions. If the objection to the jurisdiction is on the ground that the trial court had no jurisdiction because the suit being of a small cause nature, was not cognizable by it, such objection, if not taken in the trial court, cannot be raised in revision.[3110] Similarly, objection to the assumption of jurisdiction by the district judge in a suit for dissolution of marriage under the Muslim Marriages Act, 1939, after the district judge had recorded the finding of the husband's impotence was held impermissible under this section, save where failure of justice was established.[3111] If the court has no owing jurisdiction to some privilege attached to a party, that party can waive such privilege. Thus, a defendant may waive his status as an agriculturist. Another exception is in the case of pecuniary jurisdiction enacted in section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887 (Act 7 of 1887), and this section proceeds on the lines of that section. A third expression to this section is that to a place of suing or the local venue of suits within the cognisance of Indian courts.

Section 21(2) of the CPC prohibits the appellate and revisional courts from allowing objections as to the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court of first instance unless such objection was taken in the court of first instance at the earliest possible time and also proves that decision by a court without jurisdiction has led to failure of justice. Relying on this and plethora of judicial decisions on the point, the Supreme Court in Om Prakash Agarwal v Vishan Dayal Rajpoot,[3112] observed that a party who did not raise any objection regarding the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court and took a chance to obtain judgement in his favour on merits, cannot be allowed to turn around and take the plea before the revisional court that the judgement was rendered by a court without jurisdiction and, thus, it is a nullity. It held that section 21 has been enacted to prevent a party from taking such a plea only after the decision on merit goes against him. The court stated that section 21 contains a legislative policy which has an object and purpose. The object is also to avoid retrial of cases on merit on basis of technical objections. The Court also took note of the law laid down by the single judge of the Allahabad High Court in Tejumal v Mohd Sarfraz,[3113] where it was held that "defects of jurisdiction whether pecuniary or territorial or to the subject matter cannot be cured and can be set up at any stage of the proceeding". The Supreme Court held that the same cannot be approved as it does not lay down the correct law.

3109. R Venkatashwami Naidu v South India Viscose Ltd Coimbatore, AIR 1985 Mad 275.
3110. Poonam Chand v Ramprasad, AIR 1969 MP 44.
3111. Abdul Azeen v Fahimunnisa, AIR 1969 Mys 226.
3112. Om Prakash Agarwal v Vishan Dayal Rajpoot, AIR 2018 SC 5486 : 2018 (131) ALR 453 : 2018 (14) Scale 116.
3113. Tejumal v Mohd Sarfraz, (2017) (121) ALR 392.

[s 21.8] Objection as to Place of Suing

The words "place of suing" occur in the heading of sections 15–25, a group of sections which refer to the local venue of suits cognizable by Indian courts in India and in places to which the Code applies. Sections 15–20 lay down rules as to place of suing and there is no doubt that in that section the expression is used with reference to those rules. Those rules regulate the venue in places in India where the Code applies. They deal with matters of domestic concern and prescribe rules for assumption of territorial jurisdiction by Indian courts in matters within their cognisance. Section 21 is, therefore, limited in the same way and has no application to a case not cognizable by Indian courts.[3114] The decision of the Privy Council in Setrucherla v Maharaja of Jeypore[3115] makes this clear. The suit was instituted in the court of subordinate judge of Vizagapatam on a mortgage of property which was partly situated in Vizagapatam and partly in a scheduled district to which the Code did not apply. The defendant did not object to the jurisdiction of the court and a decree was passed for the sale of the whole of the property. On appeal, the defendant objected for the first time to the jurisdiction of the trial court. The high court overruled the objection in view of the provision of section 21. The Privy Council, however, upheld the objection on the ground that section 21 only applied when the right place of suing was one subject to the Code. Their Lordship said:

> This is not an objection to the place of suing: it is an objection going to the nullity of the order on the ground of want of jurisdiction.

Another instance is the case of Manjappa v Rajagopala,[3116] where a court in the Madras Presidency passed a decree in a suit which was in the cognizance of a foreign court in Mysore, and the high court held that the defect of jurisdiction could not be curbed by section 21. Again, when a subordinate judge passed a decree on a mortgage of lands in the Santhal Parganas, in a suit which the legislature had withdrawn from the cognisance of the civil court as they were under settlement, there was no question of the application of section 21, and the court of execution was entitled to treat the decree as a nullity and to refuse to execute it.[3117] In the courts of the jurisdiction it was, however, observed "that where the decree presented for execution was made by a court which apparently had [no] jurisdiction whether pecuniary or territorial or in respect of the judgement-debtor's person to make the decree the executing court is entitled to refuse to execute it on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction". (See the interpretation put upon the word "apparently" occurring in this passage in Amalabala Dasi v Sarat Kumar Dasi.[3118]) A defect in the territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction such as can be cured by section 21 of the Code or section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, does not make the decree a nullity and so, the execution court cannot refuse to execute it.[3119]

On the other hand, when the suit is one within the cognisance of Indian courts and the want of jurisdiction is only as to its local venue under sections 15–20, the defect may be waived under this section. This section is a statutory recognition of the principle that the defect as to place of suing under sections 15–20 may be waived. Where the defendant allows the trial to proceed to judgement without raising the objection and takes the chance of a verdict in his

---

3114. Bhamboo v Ram Narain, AIR 1928 Lah 297 : (1928) ILR 9 Lah 455.
3115. Setrucherla v Maharaja of Jeypore, (1919) 42 Mad 813 : 46 IA 151.
3116. Manjappa v Rajagopala, (1918) Mad WN 378.
3117. Gora Chand v Prafulla Kumar, AIR 1925 Cal 907 : (1926) ILR 53 Cal 166 (FB); dissented from as to the powers of a court in execution in Nathan v Samson, AIR 1932 Rang 252 : (1932) ILR 9 Rang 480; see note "Proof of Jurisdiction" in commentary on O XXI, rule 7.
3118. Amalabala Dasi v Sarat Kumar Dasi, (1931) 54 Cal LJ 593.
3119. Maqsood Ali v Hunter, AIR 1943 Oudh 338 (FB).

favour, he waives the objection. Long and continued participation in the proceedings without any protest may, in an appropriate case, also amount to a waiver. Such a waiver is, however, limited to objections as to jurisdiction in the appellate and revisional court.[3120] Thus, if the defendant, a resident in the jurisdiction of court A, is sued in court B on the allegation that he resides in its jurisdiction, he cannot raise this objection for the first time in appeal,[3121] nor can in a subsequent suit the decree be set aside as a nullity.[3122] If a suit on a mortgage of land in the jurisdiction of court B is instituted in court A contrary to the provisions of section 16, and the defendant does not object, the decree is not a nullity.[3123] So also, where the territorial jurisdiction of the court is altered by a notification during the pendency of the suit.[3124]

Where a suit pending in a civil court in its original jurisdiction was transferred to a small cause court which had no jurisdiction to try it, it was held that the decree was nullity and that the objection, thereto did not fall within section 21 as it related not to the place of suit, but to a court.[3125] A passing of action founded on an allegation of infringement of trade mark must be filed under section 73 of the Act in the court not inferior to the district court. The City Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit and the decree passed therein is a nullity and, that is an objection which can be raised in execution proceedings.[3126]

[s 21.9] Objection as to Place of Suing, When to Be Taken

[s 21.9.1] General Rule

The general rule is that an objection to jurisdiction may be taken at any stage of the proceedings provided there are materials on the record to sustain it.[3127] A plea regarding under-valuation and insufficiency of court fee can be taken in the written statement and separate application is not necessary.[3128] It must be taken for the first time in appeal or in second appeal,[3129] or in revision,[3130] or after remand in second appeal,[3131] or in appeal to the Supreme Court, provided the objection is patent on the face of the proceedings.[3132] This section which is framed on the analogy of section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, is an exception to this general rule.[3133]

[s 21.9.2] Objection to Be Taken at Earliest Stage of the Suit

The law is well-settled that if objection to territorial and pecuniary jurisdiction is not taken at the earliest, it cannot be allowed to be taken at a subsequent stage.[3134]

3120. Bahrein Petroleum Co v PJ Pappu, AIR 1966 SC 634.
3121. Ratti Ram v Kundan Lal, (1914) PR 87.
3122. Annammal v Sambasiva, (1919) 37 Mad LJ 349.
3123. Zamindar of Ettiyapuram v Chidambaram, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 675 (FB); Achut Anant v Governor General in Council, AIR 1955 Cal 331.
3124. Chokkalinga v Velayudha, AIR 1925 Mad 117 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 448; Ramani v Narayanaswami, AIR 1924 Mad 697 : (1924) 4 Mad LJ 192; Dirgopal v Kesho Prasad, AIR 1928 Pat 324 : (1928) ILR 7 Pat 216 (alteration of jurisdiction by diluvion).
3125. Govinddas v Parameswari Das, AIR 1957 MP 71; Chandra Bhushan v Brik Nandan, AIR 1978 All 459.
3126. Swamy v Mohideen, AIR 1958 Mad 490 : (1958) ILR Mad 622 : (1958) 1 Mad LJ 355 : 71 LW 383.
3127. Ramani v Narayanaswami, AIR 1924 Mad 697 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 192.
3128. Pannalal v Mohan Lal, AIR 1985 Raj 178.
3129. Ram Pheron v Shiv Ram, AIR 1947 Oudh 174 : (1947) ILR 22 Luck 164.
3130. Nidhi Lal v Mazhar Husain, (1884) ILR 7 All 230.
3131. Sayad Nyamtula v Nano, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 282; Velayudam v Arunachala, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 273.
3132. Bibi Ladli v Bibi Raje, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 650.
3133. Beerappa v Yeshwantrao, AIR 1972 Mys 338.
3134. Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF Universal Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 4446.

As a matter of interpretation, it will be seen that forum can be chosen by the parties on their options and all objections regarding choosing the forum is to be determined at the first instance and if necessary by passing order returning the plaint (O VII, rule 10) for presentation in proper court. It is also the settled question of law that all objections towards jurisdiction are to be taken at the earliest point of time as per mandate of section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. It is not proper on the part of the appellate court to set aside the judgement and order of the trial court on this technical ground, unless there was a finding that due to assumption of such jurisdiction, the case is likely to end in a case of failure of justice.[3135]

In a suit, tenant respondent did not raise any objection regarding competence of court and took a chance to obtain judgments in his favour on merits. The court observed that he cannot be allowed to turn around and contend that Court of Additional District Judge had no jurisdiction to try small cause suit or judgement was without jurisdiction and nullity. Section 21 has been enacted to thwart any such objection regarding competence of court and allowed the matter to be heard on merits.[3136]

In a suit for declaration of right, title, interest and possession of property in dispute, the defendant did not in the original written statement, raise the question of want of pecuniary jurisdiction. Long after the issues were settled and the suit set down for hearing, an amendment on the ground of pecuniary jurisdiction cannot be allowed. If the plea was accepted, the jurisdiction of the trial court would be ousted. An amendment to oust jurisdiction of a court should not ordinarily be granted, particularly on a belated application for amendment.[3137] The only objection of the judgment-debtor was that the properties which were the subject matter of the mortgage suit were outside the territorial jurisdiction of the court. Having taken this objection, the judgment remained ex parte, both at the stage of the preliminary decree and at the stage of the final decree in the suit. It was held that the judgement-debtor must be deemed to have waived whatever objection to the territorial jurisdiction he might have put forth in his written statement which he filed in answer to the claim.[3138] If the objection of pecuniary jurisdiction is taken after the evidence is recorded, the prayer of de novo recording of evidence (in the transferee court to which the suit is transferred from the incompetent court), cannot be granted.[3139]

The section does not refer to the court of first instance and objection may be taken at any time before the final judgement.[3140] It can be raised even before the filing of written statement[3141] or by the court itself even if it is not raised by the defendant.[3142]

The objections relating to the pecuniary or territorial jurisdiction should be raised at the earliest, and if the parties omit to plead and raise the objection at a later stage, the unsuccessful party would be precluded to raise lack of jurisdiction.[3143]

3135. Germenthangi v F Rokunga, AIR 2004 Gau 42.
3136. Om Prakash Agarwal v Vishan Dayal Rajpoot, (2019) 14 SCC 526.
3137. Abdul Rahiman Rawther v Kamalathammal, AIR 1980 Mad 114.
3138. Abdul Rahiman Rawther v Kamalathammal, AIR 1980 Mad 114.
3139. Ramesh Chander v Bhusan Lal, AIR 1984 P&H 345; Pathumma v Kuntalan Kutty, AIR 1981 SC 1683 followed.
3140. Maha Prasad v Ramani Mohan, 42 Cal 116 : (1914) 41 IA 197; Ramlal v Kishanchand, AIR 1924 PC 95 : 51 Cal 361 : 51 IA 72; Raichander v Premanand, AIR 1978 AP 349.
3141. Sasa Musa Sugar Works v Chunnilal, AIR 1975 Gau 24.
3142. Anil Kumar v Manasnath, AIR 1975 Cal 293.
3143. Indermani Kirtipal v UOI, AIR 1996 SC 1567 : JT (1996) 2 (SC) 646.

[s 21.9.3] Outer Limit for Taking Objection

Under section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure it is clear that no objection as to place of suing shall be allowed by any appellate or revisional court unless the same objection was taken in the court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity and before the settlement of issues. Therefore, under the terms of the section, the following position is clear: (a) normally objection as to place of suing should be taken at the court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity and (b) the outer limit of this earliest opportunity is the time before the issues are settled. The issues are settled by the court under O XIV of the Code of Civil Procedure only after the pleadings are filed under O VII and O VIII.[3144]

In writ proceedings, there is no procedure for settlement of issues but if at the threshold of hearing after the pleadings have been filed, these issues of jurisdiction have been raised by the respondents. Therefore, the respondents are well within their right to raise the issue.[3145]

[s 21.9.4] Appeal and Revision—Conditions and Instances

Conditions to be fulfilled, if the appellate or revisional court is to entertain an objection to the territorial jurisdiction of the trial court:

(i) the objection was taken in the trial court;

(ii) it was taken at the earliest opportunity and, where issues have been framed, it was taken before the issues were framed;

(iii) trial in the wrong court has occasioned failure of justice.

All these three conditions must be satisfied.[3146] Even if objection of jurisdiction has been taken by the petitioner at the earliest possible opportunity, what has to be established under section 21(1) is that entertainment of the suit by the trial court had caused failure of justice.[3147] Plea of want of territorial jurisdiction on the part of the trial court must be rejected on appeal, unless it be shown that want of territorial jurisdiction had led to the failure of justice.[3148]

But, under this section, a court of appeal or revision will entertain the objection if it has been taken at the earliest possible opportunity in the court of first instance, and if issues have been settled, at or before the settlement of issues. Even then the court of appeal or revision will not allow the objection unless there has been a failure of justice.[3149] The new sub-section (2) makes these two requirements necessary to the objection as to the pecuniary limits of the court's jurisdiction. If the objection is raised for the first time in appeal or revision, it is excluded by the terms of the section;[3150] but, in a case where the court of small cause sets aside an ex parte decree, although the application should have been made to the munsif of another court, the objection was entertained in revision on the ground that it referred not only to the place of

---

3144. IFB Automotive Seating & System Ltd v UOI, AIR 2003 Cal 80.
3145. IFB Automotive Seating & System Ltd v UOI, AIR 2003 Cal 80.
3146. Koopitan Uneen (daughter) v Koopitan Ununi (Son), AIR 1981 SC 1683 : (1981) 3 SCC 589 : 1982 SCR (1) 183.
3147. Renown Biscuit Co, Bombay v Kamalanathan, AIR 1980 Mad 28.
3148. Manager, Hardware & Tools Ltd v Saru Smelting Pvt Ltd., AIR 1983 All 329 (DB); Special Secretary, Government of Rajasthan v Venkataramana Seshaiyar, AIR 1984 AP 5.
3149. Prabhakar v UOI, AIR 1970 Bom 285; Manappa v Bhaskhappa, AIR 1978 Kant 113.
3150. Keshav v Vinayak, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 22; Muthappa Chetty v Raman Chetty, AIR 1935 Mad 574; Vijaya Ramraj v Vijaya Anatha, AIR 1952 All 564; Akkamma v Kullampattian, AIR 1956 Mad 593; Ayesha Bai v Daleep Singh, AIR 1961 Raj 186.

suing but to the nature of the court itself.[3151] So also, where the defendant appeared and orally objected to the jurisdiction of the court and was directed to raise the same in his written statement, he cannot be held to have waived his objection by complying with the order of the court and is entitled to put forth the same in the suit.[3152]

Objection to the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court, raised for the first time in revision, could not be allowed. Section 21(2) of the CPC specifically provides that an objection to the pecuniary jurisdiction of a court should be raised at the earliest stage of proceedings in a suit and that it should further be shown that some prejudice had resulted to the aggrieved party, before the proceedings of the court not having the requisite pecuniary jurisdiction could be set aside. An order passed in revision, allowing the objection regarding want of pecuniary jurisdiction in ignorance of the Code of Civil Procedure, was clearly erroneous and, as such, could be reviewed.[3153]

Where preliminary issue pertaining to jurisdiction was decided by the trial court in affirmative but no decision regarding pecuniary jurisdiction was given in the order, the plaintiff amended the plaint and defendant thus having no opportunity to file appeal/revision against order on the question of pecuniary jurisdiction of the court, additional written statement was filed by defendant subsequent to amendment of plaint and objection as to pecuniary jurisdiction reiterated therein. While passing decree, trial court gave finding as to pecuniary jurisdiction though no specific issue to that effect was framed, such finding being given for the first time, the defendant was found entitled to raise objection against it in first and second appeal.[3154]

[s 21.9.5] Legal Representatives—Limitation of

Where the plaintiff had submitted to the jurisdiction of a court, by valuing his suit at a particular value, and the finding went against him, he appealed to the district judge, but died during the pendency of the appeal. On his death, his legal representatives sought to challenge the valuation praying for leave to amend the plaint, stating that the valuation was much higher and that the court below had no jurisdiction. It was held that the legal representative could not do so. Legal representative of a decreased party cannot take a plea which the deceased himself could not have raised.[3155]

[s 21.10] Parties Not Raising Objection to Jurisdiction—Rejection of Plaint Improper

When there was neither an application for rejection of the plaint nor for return of the plaint under O VII, rules 10 and 11 of the CPC, filed by the respondents/defendants and the order of the high court directing return of the plaint was wholly outside the scope of the pending appeals. In fact, the issue relating to territorial jurisdiction of the high court to entertain the appellants' suit was not even raised in the Memorandum of Appeal.[3156]

3151. Dwarka Das Pyarelal, AIR 1930 All 873 : (1930) ILR 52 All 947.
3152. Premier Automobiles Ltd Lakshmi Motors, AIR 1960 Raj 208.
3153. Surinder Singh Arora v Sohan Singh Arora, AIR 1986 Del 293.
3154. Maheshpur Tea & Industries Pvt Ltd v Mantala Tea Co Ltd, AIR 2001 Gau 152.
3155. Dareppa v Mallappa, AIR 1947 Bom 307 followed; Shioprasad v Mohanbai, AIR 1989 Bom 349.
3156. Exphar SA v Euphrama Laboratories Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 1682 : (2004) 3 SCC 688 : JT 2004 (3) 1 : 2004 (2) Scale 589.

Besides when an objection to jurisdiction is raised by way of demurrer and not at the trial, the objection must proceed on the basis that the facts as pleaded by the initiator of the impugned proceedings are true. The submission in order to succeed must show that granted those facts the court does not have jurisdiction as a matter of law. In rejecting a plaint on the ground of jurisdiction, the high court should have taken the allegations contained in the plaint to be correct.[3157]

Apart from the ex-facie contradiction of this statement in the judgement itself, the high court erred in going beyond the statements contained in the plaint.[3158]

[s 21.11] Applicability of the Rule in Section 21(1) to Execution Proceedings

The rule of waiver embodied in section 21(1) extends to execution proceedings. If a defendant has not raised during the trial any objection as to the place of suing, he will not be permitted to do so during execution proceedings. The extension was formulated by Wallis, CJ, in Zamindar of Ettiyapuram v Chidambaram[3159] in the following words:

> The effect of the section in my opinion is that objections which the appellate or revisional court is thereby precluded from allowing, must be considered cured for all purposes, unless taken before the passing of the decree of the original court. The ordinary way of questioning a decree passed without jurisdiction is on appeal or revision, and if this is forbidden, a court of first instance cannot by execution do that which the appellate or provisional court is precluded from doing.

Dealing with this matter, the Supreme Court observed in Hiralal v Kalinath:[3160]

> The validity of a decree can be challenged in execution proceedings only on the ground that the court which passed the decree was lacking in inherent jurisdiction in the sense that it could not have seisin of the case because the subject-matter was wholly foreign to its jurisdiction or that the defendant was dead at the time the suit had been instituted or decree passed, or some such other ground which could have the effect of rendering the court entirely lacking in jurisdiction in respect of the subject-matter of the suit or over the parties to it.[3161]

But it is different where after the passing of a preliminary mortgage decree, the court which passed it ceased to have territorial jurisdiction over any of the mortgaged properties. In such a case, failure on the part of the mortgagor to object to the passing of the final decree, precludes him from disputing the validity of the decree, but not from objection to the jurisdiction of the court to order a sale.[3162]

When a court executing a decree transferred to it, attached and sold properties after territorial jurisdiction had been withdrawn from it, the Madras High Court held that the judgment-debtor's failure to object estopped him from questioning the validity of the sale; but that there

---

3157. Exphar SA v Euphrama Laboratories Ltd., AIR 2004 SC 1682 : (2004) 3 SCC 688 : JT 2004 (3) 1 : 2004 (2) Scale 589.
3158. Exphar SA v Euphrama Laboratories Ltd., AIR 2004 SC 1682 : (2004) 3 SCC 688 : JT 2004 (3) 1 : 2004 (2) Scale 589.
3159. Zamindar of Ettiyapuram v Chidambaram, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 675, at p 686 (FB); Maqsood Ali v Hunter, AIR 1943 Oudh 338 (FB); Jagannath v Shivnarayan, AIR 1937 Bom 19 : (1936) 38 Bom LR 1023; Gomatham v Komandur, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 118.
3160. Hiralal v Kalinath, AIR 1962 SC 199 : [1962] 2 SCR 747 : (1961) 2 SCJ 592.
3161. For instances in which, on the application of the above principle, objection of the court was repelled in execution proceedings, see the following cases: Anand Rao v Kishendoss, AIR 1954 Hyd 190; Swanikannu v Arumugham, (1955) 2 Mad LJ 16; Iswar v Najpal, AIR 1956 Pat 280, 35 Pat 610; Sheonath v Balaswami, AIR 1959 Pat 489; Rajaram Sah v Narad Thakur, AIR 1960 Pat 136.
3162. Sivas Kamal v Raja of Jeypore, AIR 1927 Mad 667 : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 882.

was no estoppel against a subsequent purchaser of the same property at a sale held in execution of a decree passed against the same judgement-debtor in another suit, for the estoppel of the judgement-debtor did not operate against such purchaser.[3163] The same court has also held that if a court continues to execute a decree against immovable property after territorial jurisdiction has been withdrawn from it, the judgement-debtor's failure to object will preclude him from raising the point in appeal.[3164] So also, where the executing court sold properties outside its territorial jurisdiction in addition to some properties within its jurisdiction, it was held that objection, not having been taken before sale, could not be raised at a later stage.[3165]

The rule of waiver enactment in sub-section (1) is extended to the executing court by the new sub-section (3) which requires that the objection as to the local limits of jurisdiction of the executing court must have been raised in the executing court at the earliest opportunity, and even where it has been so raised, there must have been consequent failure of justice.

[s 21.12] Condition as to Consequent Failure of Justice

Even though the objection has been raised at the earliest opportunity and wrongly disallowed, the judgement will not be disturbed unless the trial in the wrong court had led to a "failure of justice".[3166] In order to ascertain whether there has been a failure of justice, the appellate court must go into the merits of the case and form an opinion upon the justice or otherwise of the decision of the first court.[3167] Where a defendant has raised an objection as to the place of suing but has not pressed it for decision and has participated in the trial taking the chance of obtaining the favourable verdict, he cannot be heard to say that he was prejudiced or that there was failure of justice.[3168] Even though the objections to the pecuniary jurisdiction was taken before the courts at the earliest opportunity, there was no consequent failure of justice; hence, the objection of the jurisdiction was rejected.[3169] The Madras High Court, relying upon RSD v Finance Co Pvt Ltd,[3170] held that even if the objection was raised by the defendant in the trial court at the earliest opportunity, unless it is shown in the appellate court that on account of the trial by the wrong court, there has been failure of justice, the appellate court cannot interfere in the finding of the trial court on the ground of jurisdiction of the court.[3171]

[s 21.13] Remand

There is no question of territorial jurisdiction when a suit is remanded by a court of appeal, for, jurisdiction then depends entirely upon the order of remand.[3172]

3163. Veerappa v Ramasami, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 135.
3164. Manavikraman v Ananthanarayana, AIR 1924 Mad 457 : (1924) 46 Mad LJ 250; Ramani v Narayanaswami, AIR 1924 Mad 697 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 192; Rajagopala v Tirupathia, AIR 1926 Mad 421 : (1926) ILR 49 Mad 746.
3165. Ayisass Nagratna, AIR 1934 Mad 573.
3166. Bhag Singh v Labh Singh, (1916) PR 93; Gajendra v Sunder Singh, AIR 1934 All 549; Champalal v Saligram, AIR 1961 Raj 235; Inderrnal T Mahajan v Ramprasad, AIR 1970 MP 40; Champalal v Saligram, AIR 1961 Raj 235 : (1961) ILR Raj 614; Yogeshwar Raj Puri v Yog Raj Puri, AIR 1967 Punj 163.
3167. Lachharam v Virji, AIR 1921 All 66 : (1921) 19 All LJ 305.
3168. Nanakchand v TT Elec Supply Co, AIR 1975 Mad 103 : (1974) 2 Mad LJ 431.
3169. Surender Mahanti v Ghasi Ram Mahanti, AIR 1996 Ori 172.
3170. RSD v Finance Co Pvt Ltd, AIR 1993 SC 2094.
3171. G Loganathan v S Chenniya Chettiar, AIR 1996 Mad 224.
3172. Uthman v Nania, AIR 1923 Mad 351 : (1923) 44 Mad LJ 238.

[3173][[S 21A] Bar on suit to set aside decree on objection as to place of suing.—No suit shall lie challenging the validity of a decree passed in a former suit between the same parties, or between the parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title on any ground based on an objection as to the place of suing.

Explanation.—The expression "former suit" means a suit which has been decided prior to the decision in the suit in which the validity of the decree is questioned, whether or not the previously decided suit was instituted prior to the suit in which the validity of such decree is questioned.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 21A.1]	Scope	535	[s 21A.4]	Litigating Under the Same Title	536
[s 21A.2]	Former Suit	536	[s 21A.5]	Objection as to Place of Suing	536
[s 21A.3]	The Same Parties, or Between the Parties Under Whom They or Any of Them Claim	536

[s 21A.1] Scope

Section 21 lays down that no objection as the place of suing shall be allowed by any appellate or revisional court, unless such objection was taken in the court of the first instance at the earliest opportunity. The section does not expressly provide as to whether such an objection can be permissible in a separate suit challenging the decree. On that question, there was a conflict of judicial opinion. The Madras High Court[3174] and the Lahore High Court[3175] held that if the defendant did not object to jurisdiction and allowed a decree to be passed against him, he could not in a subsequent suit, set aside the decree for want of jurisdiction. The Nagpur High Court held that section 21 was not limited to appeals and revisions in the same suit,[3176] and this was also the view taken by the Oudh Chief Court;[3177] but the Allahabad High Court considered that it was not legitimate to extend the bar of section 21 beyond the limits provided by the section, and that in such a case, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an independent suit for the avoidance of the decree.[3178] In a later decision, the same High Court took the view that if the objection as to jurisdiction has not been taken in the trial court and the suit has been allowed to be disposed by a judgement and no appeal has been filed against such a judgement, the decree became final and was a bar in a subsequent suit, wherein the objection as to local jurisdiction would not be permissible.[3179] It is submitted that the view taken by the Madras and Lahore High Courts was correct, for, once the objection as to jurisdiction was waived under section 21, it was waived for all purposes. The contrary view was opposed to the policy underlying the section, in that though such an objection was impermissible in an appeal or a revision against the decree, it was still permissible to be raised in a subsequent suit. This section gives effect to the view taken by the Madras, Lahore and Nagpur High Courts and the Chief Court of Oudh.

3173. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 9 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
3174. Nageshwara v Ganesa, AIR 1942 Mad 675; Annammal v Sambasiva, (1919) 37 Mad LJ 349; Chokkalinga v Velayudha, AIR 1925 Mad 117 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 448.
3175. Parshotam Das v Radhakishan, AIR 1929 Lah 449 : (1929) 11 Lah LJ 306.
3176. Firm Jagniram v Ganpati Damaji, AIR 1941 Ngp 31 : (1941) ILR Nag 1.
3177. Maqsood Ali v Hunter, AIR 1943 Oudh 338.
3178. Raghubar v Harilal, AIR 1931 All 454 : (1931) ILR 53 All 560.
3179. Chitranjan Prasad v Addl Commissioner, Varanasi, AIR 1967 All 375.

The expression "former suit" means a suit decided before the decision in the suit filed to question the validity of the decree, and it is immaterial whether it was filed before or after the suit which challenges such validity.

[s 21A.2] Former Suit

See notes to section 11 under the same heading.

[s 21A.3] The Same Parties, or Between the Parties Under Whom They or Any of Them Claim

See notes to section 26(B) Condition II. See notes to section 11 under the same heading. Also see sub-headings under section 11. As to synopsis (a)–(j), see notes under section 11.

[s 21A.4] Litigating Under the Same Title

See notes to section 26(B) Condition III. See notes to section 11 under the same heading.

[s 21A.5] Objection as to Place of Suing

Section 21A was inserted in the Code of Civil Procedure by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976)on the recommendation of the Law Commission of India. The object, meaning and purpose of section 21A has been explained by the Supreme Court in the case of Subhas Mahadevasa Habib,[3180] in the following words:

> Though Section 21A of the Code speaks of a suit not being maintainable for challenging the validity of a prior decree between the same parties on a ground based on an objection as to "the place of suing", there is no reason to restrict its operation only to an objection based on territorial jurisdiction and excluding from its purview a defect based on pecuniary jurisdiction. In the sense in which the expression "place of suing" has been used in the Code it could be understood as taking within it both territorial jurisdiction and pecuniary jurisdiction. Section 15 of the Code deals with pecuniary jurisdiction and, Sections 15 to 20 of the Code deals with "place of suing". The heading "place of suing" covers Section 15 also. This Court in the Bahrein Petroleum Co. Ltd. v P.J. Pappu [(1996) 1 SC R 461] made no distinction between Section 15 on the one hand and Sections 16 to 20 on the other, in the context of Section 21 of the Code. Even otherwise, considering the interpretation placed by this court on Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act and treating it as equivalent in effect to Section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as it existed prior to the amendment in 1976, it is possible to say, especially in the context of the amendment brought about in Section 21 of the Code by Amendment Act 104 of 1976, that Section 21A was intended to cover a challenge to a prior decree as regards lack of jurisdiction, both territorial and pecuniary, with reference to the place of suing, meaning thereby the court in which the suit was instituted.

[S 22] Power to transfer suits which may be instituted in more than one Court.—Where a suit may be instituted in any one of two or more Courts and is instituted in one of such Courts, any defendant, after notice to the other parties, may, at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement, apply to have the suit transferred to another Court, and the Court to which such application is made, after considering the objections of the other parties

---

3180. Subhas Mahadevasa Habib v Nemasa Ambasa Dharmadas, AIR 2007 SC 1828 (Balasubramanyan, J. speaking for the bench).

(if any), shall determine in which of the several Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

SYNOPSIS

[s 22.1]	Scope of Sections 22–25	537	[s 22.3]	Grounds of Transfer	538
[s 22.2]	Transfer Where Plaintiff Has a Choice of Courts	537	[s 22.4]	Notice	538
			[s 22.5]	Stay of Suit	538

[s 22.1] Scope of Sections 22–25

This and the next section are concerned with a case where the plaintiff has the choice of two or more courts in which he may properly institute a suit. They deal with the right of a defendant to apply to a court to have the case transferred from the court in which it is filed to another court. They postulate that the several courts concerned shall each have jurisdiction. It follows that an application by the defendant under section 23 for transfer cannot be entertained where he has pleaded want of jurisdiction of the court in which the suit has been instituted.[3181] The two sections contemplate three possibilities: (a) where the alternative courts are subordinate to the same appellate court; (b) where they are subordinate to different appellate courts but to the same high court; and (c) where they are subordinate to different high courts.

The case where the two courts are high courts is not expressly dealt with. Sections 24 and 25 are concerned with an entirely different kind of case. They are not concerned with the right in the defendant alone to apply to have transferred to one of alternative possible courts, a suit which his opponent, the plaintiff, has filed in one of those possible alternative courts. The sections are broken up into two different categories. The first category is dealt with in section 24 and the second in section 25.[3182] The Specific Relief Act, 1963, does not confer a power of transfer. What could not have been asked for originally, cannot be asked for by amendment.[3183] An order of transfer under section 22 is based on balance of convenience. The fact that the suit was filed earlier, is immaterial.[3184] When a transfer petition is filed making allegations against the additional district judge, impugning his fairness, independence and impartiality in the transfer application, the report if any, and when called for, should normally be confined to the allegations made against the impartiality or fairness of the judge and not with respect to the correctness or otherwise of the order passed by him.[3185]

Apprehending injustice on the ground of earlier decision against the applicant in another case by the munsif is no ground for transfer of case. Allowing transfers on such grounds would hamper course of justice.[3186]

[s 22.2] Transfer Where Plaintiff Has a Choice of Courts

The power of transfer given by this section is not a general power as in section 24. It is limited to cases in sections 16 and 20 where the plaintiff has the option to sue in more courts

---

3181. Babulal v Kotumal, AIR 1941 All 27 : (1940) ILR All 737; Krishnaji Rao v Gokuldas, AIR 1953 Mys 115.
3182. Kanhaiyalal v Zumerlal, AIR 1940 Nag 145. See notes under section 24.
3183. Rajkumar v Benoy Kumar, AIR 1985 Cal 328.
3184. SS Mahalakshmi Mills v Rajesh Trading Co, AIR 1983 Bom 486.
3185. Pushpa Devi Saraf v Jai Narayan Parasrampuria, (1992) 2 SCC 676.
3186. K Subbarao v Laxminarayan Complex, AIR 1996 Kant 127.

than one.[3187] Prima facie, a plaintiff as arbiter litis has the right to select his own forum.[3188] That right is controlled by the power of transfer; but it is a right that ought not lightly to be interfered with.[3189] The words "shall determine" in the section clearly mean "shall make an order of transfer".[3190] Wife's application for custody was pending as the husband instituted the suit in a court at another place. Transfer application was made by the wife as the nature of both the proceedings was such that they should be heard by the same court. No suggestion by husband was made that financial difficulties prevented proper prosecution of the proceedings at the place where the wife's application was pending. Here, the prejudice to husband could not be assumed from the mere fact that he would have to undertake the journey. In this case, keeping in mind the abovementioned facts, the suit filed by the husband was transferred.[3191]

[s 22.3] Grounds of Transfer

See notes to section 24 under the same heading.

[s 22.4] Notice

The provisions of this section as to notice and time of application are mandatory.[3192] Notice should be given to all parties impleaded in the suit, whether as plaintiff or as defendant and not merely to parties arrayed on the opposite side.[3193] Under the terms of the section, notice must be given of the application before it is made, but it has been held that the defect could be cured by notice on the application itself.[3194]

[s 22.5] Stay of Suit

Section 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, provided for stay of proceedings in order to compel the plaintiff to take his case to another court. This has been omitted, as sufficient provision has been made by the power of transfer in sections 22–24; but the court has an inherent jurisdiction to stay any suit which is an abuse of its process.

Whether the institution of the suit in a particular court is an abuse of the process of that court is a question of fact. In a suit filed in the Bombay High Court, the fact that both the parties and the witnesses of the defendants were residents of Wardha in the Central Provinces (Madhya Pradesh), was held not to justify an order for the stay of the suit.[3195] The high court has also power to stay a suit in another court.[3196]

[S 23] To what Court application lies.—(1) Where the several Courts having jurisdiction are subordinate to the same Appellate Court, an application under Section 22 shall be made to the Appellate Court.

3187. Purna Chandra v Dhone Kristo, (1914) 12 All LJ 896; National Engineering Co v Rattan, AIR 1923 Lah 288.
3188. Khatija Bibi v Taruk, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 980.
3189. Umatul v Kulsoom, (1909) ILR 10 Cal 980.
3190. David v James, AIR 1958 Ker 82.
3191. Shakuntala Modi v Omprakash Bharuka, AIR 1991 SC 1104.
3192. Gulab Chand v Sher Singh, (1917) PR 11; Shiv Dutt v Moti Ram, AIR 1925 Lah 322 : (1925) 7 Lah LJ 93.
3193. Vijayaram v Dr. Vijaya Anand, AIR 1953 All 750.
3194. Basanti v Sahodra, AIR 1935 All 979 : (1955) All LJ 1093.
3195. Geffert v Rukchand, (1889) II R 13 Bom 178; Hindustan Assurance Ltd v Kail Mulraj, (1914) 27 Mad LJ 645; Shiv v Kanhaya, (1919) PR 167.
3196. See note under O XXXIX, rule 1.

(2) Where such Courts are subordinate to different Appellate Courts but to the same High Court, the application shall be made to the High Court.

(3) Where such Courts are subordinate to different High Courts, the application shall be made to the High Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the Court in which the suit is brought is situate.

SYNOPSIS

[s 23.1]	High Courts	539	[s 23.4]	Different High Courts	540
[s 23.2]	Scope of Sections 22 and 23	539	[s 23.5]	Suit Is Brought	541
[s 23.3]	Subordinate Courts	539

[s 23.1] High Courts

Sections 22 and 23 do not apply to high courts in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction.[3197]

[s 23.2] Scope of Sections 22 and 23

Sections 22 and 23 are complementary to each other. While section 22 confers a power on the defendant to apply for transfer subject to the conditions mentioned therein, section 23 specifies the court to which the application should be made. An application under section 23 must therefore, fulfil the conditions mentioned in section 22 and is liable to be dismissed if it is not made before the settlement of issues.[3198]

[s 23.3] Subordinate Courts

Subordination of court is regulated by section 3. A court of a subordinate judge is subordinate to the district court no matter what the forum of appeal may be in the particular case for the transfer of which application is made.[3199]

A full bench of the Rangoon High Court has held that for the transfer of a suit pending in a court on the original side of the high court, an application should be made to that court which has hold of the case and that court has power to transfer under section 151 of the Code.[3200] Prior to the filing of the petition by the husband against the wife for divorce under section 13, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, in the court of the additional district judge at Jind in Haryana, the respondent (wife) had already filed a petition under section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, for restitution of conjugal rights, against the petitioner-husband. An application under section 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure was filed by the wife (before the Jind court) for staying the proceedings therein, in view of the petition already filed by her at Delhi. The additional district judge, Jind, allowed the wife's petition under section 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that if the petition under section 13, Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, was allowed to continue, the petition filed by the wife under section 9 of the Act would be rendered infructuous.

3197. Mahindra Chandra v Lal Mohan, AIR 1929 Cal 358 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 940.
3198. Rajnath v Vidyaram, AIR 1953 All 772.
3199. Umatul v Kulsoom, (1901) 10 Cal LJ 208.
3200. Ramaswamy Chettyar v VT Chettyar, AIR 1934 Rang 265 : (1934) ILR 12 Rang 548 (FB).

The order of the additional district judge, Jind, staying proceedings was vacated by the High Court. In the interest of justice, the petition under section 13 of the Act, brought by the husband and pending in the court at Jind, was transferred to the court at Delhi.[3201]

[s 23.4] Different High Courts

From sub-section (3) of section 23 extracted above, it is clear that an application for transfer has to be made in the high court in which the suit brought is situated. The suit was instituted in the court at Surat, and since Surat is not within the jurisdiction of Andhra Pradesh High Court, the application for transfer has to be filed in the high court to which the court at Surat is subordinate but not in Andhra Pradesh High Court. It does not matter that the petitioner wants the suit to be brought to the jurisdiction of Andhra Pradesh court, which is subordinate to it. Andhra Pradesh High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the application for transfer. The expression "suit is brought" in section 23(3) of the Code of Civil Procedure relates to the place where the suit was instituted, and it cannot be interpreted to mean the court to which suit "has to be brought". So, the petition to transfer a suit instituted at Surat to a court, which is subordinate to Andhra Pradesh High Court, is not maintainable.[3202]

If suits between the same parties are instituted in courts subordinate to different high courts, either high court can transfer the suit from the court which is subordinate to it,[3203] and the transfer can be made to a court subordinate to another high court.[3204] A judge on the original side of the high court is not a court subordinate to the high court and a bench of the high court cannot entertain an application for the transfer of a suit from him to another court.[3205] In a case where the plaintiff in abuse of his power as dominus litis and in disregard of the convenience of both parties filed his suit in a court subordinate to the high court at Allahabad, that high court in its inherent jurisdiction transferred the suit to the Chief Court at Oudh.[3206]

The provisions relating to transfer of suits contained in sections 22 to 25 of the Code have been interpreted by various high courts of the country. But on the interpretation of section 23(3) of the Code, there has been divergence of views. While some of the high courts held the view that a high court acting under section 23(3) of the Code cannot transfer a suit pending in a court subordinate to it, to some other court subordinate to another high court and the power to make such inter-state transfer vested in the Supreme Court under section 25 of the Code, some of the high courts held a contrary view about the powers of the high courts under section 23(3) of the Code. Even the decision of the Supreme Court in Vijayalakshmi's case,[3207] did not set the controversy at rest, although the apex court doubted the correctness of the decision of Bombay High Court (Nagpur Bench) in Priyavari Mehta's case.[3208]

However, a decision of the Supreme Court has set the controversy at rest and laid down the correct law.[3209] It was held by the Supreme Court that high court has no power, authority or jurisdiction to transfer a case, appeal or other proceeding pending in a court subordinate to

---

3201. Ved Prakash Garg v Seema, AIR 1988 P&H 75.
3202. Shree Raghavendra Exports v Nauakar Enterprises, AIR 2004 AP 84.
3203. Venkata Sa Barod v Maksudan Das, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 541; Vallabhbhai v Chotalal, AIR 1927 Bom 79 : (1927) ILR 51 Bom 26, pp 29–30; Kanhaiyalal v Zumerlal, AIR 1940 Nag 145.
3204. Sadayandi v Venugopal, AIR 1960 Ker 91 : (1959) ILR Ker 180.
3205. Hayat Mahomed v Shaikh Mannu, AIR 1927 Cal 290 : (1927) 45 Cal LJ 71; Hindustan Assurance Ltd v Rail Mulraj, (1914) 27 Mad LJ 645.
3206. Datt Singh v Tej Singh, AIR 1934 All 14 : (1934) ILR 56 All 201.
3207. Guda Vijayalakshmi v Guda Sekhara Sastry, (1981) 2 SCC 646.
3208. Priyavari Mehta v Priyanath Mehta, AIR 1980 Bom 337. (Overruled in Durgesh Sharma's case.)
3209. Durgesh Sharma v Jayshree, AIR 2009 SC 285 : (2008) 9 SCC 648 : 2008 (13) Scale 54.

it to any court subordinate to another high court in purported exercise of power under sub-section (3) of section 23 and it is only the Supreme Court which can exercise the said authority under section 25. CK Thakker, J, speaking for the Bench observed as follows:

> 71. In our considered opinion, where several courts having jurisdiction are subordinate to one appellate Court, an application for transfer may be made to such appellate Court and the Court may transfer a case from one Court subordinate to it to another Court subordinate to it. Likewise, where such Courts are subordinate to the same High Court, an application may be made and action may be taken by the High Court transferring a case from one Court subordinate to it to any other Court subordinate to that High Court. But where such Courts are subordinate to different High Courts, it is only the Supreme Court (this court) which may pass an order of transfer. In other words, if two Courts are subordinate to different High Courts, one High Court has no power, jurisdiction or authority to transfer a case pending in any Court subordinate to that High Court to a Court subordinate to other High Court. It is only the Supreme Court (this court) which may order the transfer.

The Supreme Court in the above case, went on to observe further as follows:

> 72. Section 25, as originally enacted in the Code of 1908 and the decision prior to Amendment Act of 1976, have no application after substitution of Section 25 as it stands today. To us, Section 23 has no application to such cases and the only provision attracted is Section 25.
>
> 73. The language of Section 25 also supports the view which we are inclined to take. Sub-section (1) of Section 25 of the Code enacts that "on the application of a party", this Court may pass an appropriate order of transfer. Thus, Section 25 is "self-contained Code" and comprises of substantive as well as procedural law on the point. It allows a party to move the Court by making an application as also it empowers the Court to make an order of transfer.

As regards the correct interpretation of section 23, the Supreme Court observed further as follows:

> In our considered view, the fallacy in the argument lies in the fact that it presumes and presupposes that Section 23 of the Code is a substantive provision which authorises a Court mentioned therein to order transfer. It is not so. The said section, as held by us, is merely a procedural one or a machinery provision and provides mode, method or manner in approaching a Court for making an application. It does not empower a Court to effect transfer.

With these observations, the Supreme Court overruled the undernoted cases.[3210]

[s 23.5] Suit Is Brought

The expression "suit is brought" in section 23(3) of the Code of Civil Procedure relates to the place where the suit was instituted and it cannot be interpreted to mean, the court to which suit "has to be brought".[3211]

[S 24] General power of transfer and withdrawal.—(1) On the application of any of the parties and after notice to the parties and after hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion without such notice, the High Court or the District Court may at any stage—

3210. Lakshmi Nagdev v Jitendra Kumar Nagdev, (2004) 4 MPLJ 310; Mamta Gupta v Mukund Kumar Gupta, AIR 2000 AP 394; Priyavari Mehta v Priyanath Mehta, AIR 1980 Bom 337; State Bank of India v Sakow Industries Faridabad (Pvt) Ltd, New Delhi, AIR 1976 P&H 321.

3211. Shree Raghavendra Exports v Nauakar Enterprises, AIR 2004 AP 84.

(a) transfer any suit, appeal or other proceeding pending before it for trial or disposal to any Court subordinate to it and competent to try or dispose of the same, or,

(b) withdraw any suit, appeal or other proceeding pending in any Court subordinate to it, and—

(i) try or dispose of the same; or

(ii) transfer the same for trial or disposal to any Court subordinate to it and competent to try or dispose of the same; or

(iii) retransfer the same for trial or disposal to the Court from which it was withdrawn.

(2) Where any suit or proceeding has been transferred or withdrawn under sub-section (1), the Court which [3212][is thereafter to try or dispose of such suit or proceeding] may, subject to any special directions in the case of an order of transfer, either retry it or proceed from the point at which it was transferred or withdrawn.

[3213][(3) For the purposes of this section,—

(a) Courts of Additional and Assistant Judges shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Court.

(b) "proceeding" includes a proceeding for the execution of a decree or order.]

(4) The Court trying any suit transferred or withdrawn under this section from a Court of Small Causes shall, for the purposes of such suit, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes.

[3214][(5) A suit or proceeding may be transferred under this section from a Court which has no jurisdiction to try it.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 24.1] Alterations in the Section 543
[s 24.2] Accepted Judicial Norm 543
[s 24.3] Return of Plaint Distinct from Transfer of Suit 543
[s 24.4] Nature of Proceedings 544
[s 24.5] Consolidation and Transfer of Suits 545
[s 24.6] Scope of the Section 545
[s 24.7] Sections 24, 25 and Letter Patent Clause (13)—Court 545
[s 24.8] High Courts 546
[s 24.9] Allahabad High Court and Its Lucknow Bench and Other Instances 547
[s 24.10] Jurisdiction 548
[s 24.11] General Power of Transfer 549
[s 24.12] Grounds of Transfer 550
[s 24.12.1] Reasonable Ground 550
[s 24.12.2] Common Question of Facts and Law 551
[s 24.12.3] Comments by Judge 552
[s 24.12.4] Bias Attributed to a Judge 553
[s 24.12.5] Suspicion, Presumption or Apprehension 554
[s 24.12.6] Judicial Order 554
[s 24.12.7] Convenience 555
[s 24.12.8] Medical Ground 555
[s 24.13] Transfer from Rent Court to Civil Court Permissibility 555
[s 24.14] Disputes Between Husband and Wife 556
[s 24.15] Probate and Succession Certificate 557
[s 24.16] Election Petition 557
[s 24.17] Notice 558
[s 24.18] "At any stage" 559
[s 24.19] "Pending before it" 560
[s 24.20] District Court 560

3212. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977) for the words "thereafter tries such suit".
3213. Substituted by section 10, Act 104 of 1976, for sub-section (3) (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
3214. Inserted by section 10, Act 104 of 1976, (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[s 24.21] Clause (a): Court Subordinate To It 561
[s 24.22] Clause (a): Suit 562
[s 24.23] Clauses (a) and (b): "Other proceedings" 562
[s 24.24] Clauses (a) and (b): "Competent to try or dispose of the same" 563
[s 24.25] Clause (b): Withdrawal of Suit 563
[s 24.26] Competent Court 564
[s 24.27] Order of Transfer: When Takes Effect 565
[s 24.28] Re-transfer 566
[s 24.29] Sub-section (2): Applicability in Pending Proceeding 566
[s 24.30] Sub-section (4): Court of Small Causes 566
[s 24.31] Sub-section (5) 567
[s 24.32] Decree by Transferee Court 567
[s 24.33] Revision 568
[s 24.34] Appeal 568

[s 24.1] Alterations in the Section

Sub-section 1 remains unaltered. In sub-section 2, the words "the court which thereafter tries such suit" are deleted and the following words are substituted, viz: "the court which is thereafter to try or dispose off such suit or proceeding". Sub-section 3 is restructured and divided into clauses (a) and (b). Clause (a) is the same as the unamended sub-section 3. Clause (b) defines the word "proceeding" as including a proceeding for the execution of a decree or order. Sub-section 4 remains unaltered. Sub-section 5 has been newly added to clarify that a suit or a proceeding may be transferred from a court which has no jurisdiction to try it.

[s 24.2] Accepted Judicial Norm

One important aspect of the provisions of section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure is that the power of transfer is conferred on the high court or the district court, courts which normally exercise appellate or supervisory jurisdiction in the scheme of procedure envisaged under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. The power is conferred on a higher judicial forum. While it is an accepted judicial norm that the judges of the higher judiciary have the choice to hear a matter, the judge himself can recuse from the case and direct the matter to be posted before any other judges if he has the feeling that one of the parties to the proceeding may have a reasonable apprehension of bias if the proceedings should go on before him, may be for a variety of reasons such as a previous acquaintance of one of the parties to the proceedings, irrespective of the fact as to whether he is really biased or not — classic example, being that of a judge, not sitting in appeal over his own judgement, order or decision expressed earlier in respect of the subject-matter before him in any other context. But, in so far as the proceedings before the trial court are concerned, it is strictly determined as per sections 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20. What needs to be observed and pointed out in terms of the provisions of the CPC is that the judge of the subordinate judiciary does not have the power to recuse himself from the suit or proceeding pending before the court he presides.[3215]

[s 24.3] Return of Plaint Distinct from Transfer of Suit

Sometimes the presentation of a plaint in a wrong court can lead to piquant situations. In 1988, a suit was filed on the original side of the High Court of Delhi for declaration, for specific performance of agreement, for possession of property and for permanent injunction. Written statement was filed by the defendants contesting the claims of the plaintiff but without raising any objection as to the jurisdiction of the court. The suit was transferred to the district court,

---

3215. MV Ganesh Prasad v ML Vasudevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.

Delhi. After more than eight years, the written statement was amended raising an objection as to jurisdiction of the court at Delhi, since the suit was for recovery of immovable property situated in Gurgaon District. On the basis of the amended written statement, an additional issue as to the jurisdiction of the Delhi court was framed by the trial court. After hearing the parties, the trial court held that the suit was covered by clause (d) of section 16 of the Code and as such the Delhi court had no jurisdiction and the plaint was ordered to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper court. The said order was confirmed by the high court as well as the Supreme Court.[3216]

After the judgement of the Supreme Court in the above-mentioned case, which was CA No 2726 of 2000 decided on 26 September 2005, the plaintiff filed IA No 3 in the said disposed of appeal praying therein to direct the Gurgaon court to take up the suit from the stage at which it stands transferred. Rejecting the prayer made in the IA, the Supreme Court held that the Court at Gurgaon cannot be said to be a successor court for the purpose of section 24 of the Code.

Transfer of a case cannot be ordered on the ground that the court where case is pending does not have the jurisdiction. On such a ground, the party has to apply for dismissal of the case and not for transfer.[3217]

The return of plaint to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper court on the ground of want of jurisdiction of the court returning it is not a case of transfer of the suit but lack of jurisdiction of the court in which it was earlier filed. On presentation of plaint to the proper court, it will not be treated as continuation of proceedings, and the suit cannot be directed to be tried from the stage at which it has been transferred. The provisions of O XVIII, rule 15 which deal with succeeding judge proceeding with the case from where it was left by his predecessor are not attracted.[3218]

In a case, the civil judge transferred a suit suo motu to the high court on the ground of pecuniary jurisdiction. The high court did not issue any order to return the plaint, rather it registered the suit and entertained it. The Delhi High Court rejected the plea of de novo trial. It was held that since it was not a case of return of plaint, de novo trial cannot be allowed and no prejudice would be caused to the defendant if the suit was continued from the stage it was received.[3219]

[s 24.4] Nature of Proceedings

Petition filed before district judge under section 24, for transfer of the suit pending in a trial court, is a proceeding independent of the suit. It cannot be said that the order rejecting the petition passed by the learned district judge under section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure is an order passed in a pending proceeding in a suit, though the prayer in the application under section 24 is for transferring the pending suit to some other court which has jurisdiction. The order cannot be characterised as an order passed in the pending suit itself. If this is so, the proviso to section 115 of the CPC is not attracted and as such it cannot be said that unless the order is shown to have caused irreparable injury or has occasion to failure of justice, it is not revisable.[3220]

3216. See Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF Universal Ltd., AIR 2005 SC 4446 : (2005) 7 SCC 791.
3217. Neha Arun Jugadar v Kumari Palak Diwan Ji, AIR 2011 SC 1164 : (2011) 15 SCC 222 : 2011 (3) CTC 665.
3218. Harshad Chiman Lal Modi v DLF Universal Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 646 : (2006) 1 SCC 364.
3219. Sunil Dutt v Bhag Singh, AIR 2009 (NOC) 2759 : (2009) 157 DLT 41(Del).
3220. MV Ganesh Prasad v ML Vasudevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.

[s 24.5] Consolidation and Transfer of Suits

Where in the matter relating to management of educational society due to rivalry between members and persons claiming to be the members of the society, three suits for injunction were filed before three different courts. To avoid multiplicity of litigation and conflicting orders, all suits were directed to be tried simultaneously by consolidating them and were transferred to a competent court for this purpose.[3221]

[s 24.6] Scope of the Section

Section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure deals with general power of transfer and withdrawal and enables the district court to transfer any suit, appeal or other proceedings pending before it, for trial or disposal to any court subordinate to it and competent to try or dispose of the same.[3222]

Under this section, an application for transfer can be made by any of the parties to a suit, appeal or other proceeding. Whereas this section deals with the general power of a high court or a district court to transfer or withdraw any suit, etc, section 25 amended by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), confers on the Supreme Court the power to transfer a pending suit, appeal or proceeding from one high court or civil court in the state to a high court or other civil court in another state. Where "socially sensitive" suits, affecting considerable sections of the society are withdrawn, the order of withdrawal cannot be objected to by exaggerating the aspect of observation of demeanour of witnesses already examined, where the suits affect considerable sections of the public. Expeditious termination of litigation is vital in such cases.[3223] Even where section 21A of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 (consolidation and joint trial), is not applicable, a transfer can be ordered under section 24 of the Code.[3224] The motor accident claims tribunal constituted under section 110 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939, is a court subordinate to the high court within the meaning of section 24, CPC, and the high court can transfer the case from one tribunal in the state to another tribunal under section 24 of the Code.[3225] The Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, is a special Act and has been enacted to provide for the establishment of tribunal for expeditious adjudication and recovery of debts due to banks and financial institutions and for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto. Specific provisions for transfer of pending cases has been made in section 31 of the said Act and, therefore, provisions of the CPC, for transfer of suit as provided in section 24 will not apply.[3226] There can be an order of transfer in respect of a suit filed in pauperism.[3227]

[s 24.7] Sections 24, 25 and Letter Patent Clause (13)—Court

Sections 24 and 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure deal with courts and not tribunals. In any event, the Code of Civil Procedure is not applicable to tribunals; as such it has limited application by reason of specific provision provided in the Debt Recovery Tribunal Act. It does

---

3221. Shabbir Ahmed Khilji v Mehar M Sadique, AIR 2003 Raj 331.
3222. P Aisha Potti v Returning Officer Kollam, AIR 2002 Ker 268.
3223. Baselius Marthoma Mathews v Paulose Mar Atheinasius, AIR 1979 SC 1909 : (1980) 1 SCC 601 : (1980) 1 SCR 250.
3224. Paritokona Bannerjee v Rabishankar Bannerjee, AIR 1987 Cal 269.
3225. Kajetan Leo Vaz v Jagdish Raghunath Mankar, AIR 1996 Bom 62.
3226. PK Saraswat v UOI, AIR 1999 Sikkim 16.
3227. N Ram Mohan v J. Kasthuri, AIR 1976 Mad 271 : (1976) 1 Mad LJ 163.

not apply without such specific provisions. Clause 13 of the Letters Patent also deals with courts and not with tribunals. The debt recovery tribunal is not a court within the meaning of clause 13 of the Letters Patent or that of section 24 or section 25 of the CPC.[3228]

[s 24.8] High Courts

This section applies to high courts in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction.[3229] An application under this section might be heard by any judge of the high court, although such an application is an original proceeding[3230] whereas one under clause 13 of the Letters Patent must be made to a judge sitting in the original side.[3231] There was dispute between the management and workers' unions relating to conditions of service of workmen. Two writ petitions concerning the dispute and challenging the award passed by the industrial court were filed before the Allahabad Bench and one was filed before the Lucknow Bench. It was ordered that the latter petition filed before the Lucknow Bench should be transferred to Allahabad. In the interest of all parties, the case should be heard at Allahabad to avoid conflicting judgments.

When an application is filed under section 24 of the Code by one party to the suit and the court has to decide the matter of transfer or withdrawal of the case, it is an adjudicated order in the original jurisdiction of such court. The wording in section 5(i) of the Kerala High Court Act, 1958, is clear and gives no room for doubt that against such an order passed under section 24 of the Code by a single judge, an appeal will be maintainable to the Division Bench under Letters Patent. The high court can also pass interim order to prevent injustice.[3232]

JB Koshy, J (as he then was), speaking for the Full Bench of the Kerala High Court, observed as follows:

> When Section 5(i) clearly provides for appeal from orders, it cannot be stated that no appeal will lie from the adjudicated "order" under Section 24, CPC, of a Single Judge to the Division Bench. Merely because no appeal is provided from the order of District Court under Section 24, CPC, it cannot be stated that right of appeal given under Section 5(i) should be denied despite the clear wordings used in that section, if the District Court passes an illegal order, parties can approach the High Court under Article 227 of the Constitution of India.[3233]

The above-mentioned Full Bench decision of the Kerala High Court has quoted with approval Sutherland's Statutory Construction (3rd Edn, vol 3, para 6807) wherein it has been stated as follows:

> Statutes giving the right of appeal are liberally construed in furtherance of justice, an interpretation which will work for the forfeiture of that right is not favoured. Thus provisions limiting the time for bringing an appeal are liberally interpreted so that the party pursuing the remedy of appeal will not be defeated on mere technicalities. Likewise, an interpretation limiting the cases from which an appeal may be brought or person who may bring an appeal is not preferred.

3228. State Bank of India v Madhumita Construction Pvt Ltd, AIR 2003 Cal 7.
3229. Mahindra Chandra v Lal Mohan, AIR 1929 Cal 358 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 940.
3230. Sanganbhat v Vasudev, AIR 1976 Kant 229 : (1976) Kant 992.
3231. Srirangam Municipality v Palaniswamy, AIR 1951 Mad 807 : (1951) ILR Mad 897 : (1951) 1 Mad LJ 281; Lachinarayanan Jute Mfg Co v Dwip Narayan, AIR 1956 Cal 65.
3232. KV Balan v Sivagiri Sree Narayana Dharma Sanghom Trust, AIR 2006 Ker 58 : 2005 (4) Ker LT 865 (FB).
3233. KV Balan v Sivagiri Sree Narayana Dharma Sanghom Trust, AIR 2006 Ker 58, p 66 : 2005 (4) Ker LT 865 (FB).

[s 24.9] Allahabad High Court and Its Lucknow Bench and Other Instances

No doubt in Nasiruddin's case[3234] it has been held that there is no permanent seat of the High Court at Allahabad. This is true in the sense that there is nothing permanent in the world. But as things stand in the 21st century, the principal seat of the Allahabad High Court is indisputably at Allahabad. The Chief Justice and most of the senior and other judges ordinarily sit at Allahabad. The Registrar General of the Court also functions at Allahabad. The Allahabad High Court was created by Queen Victoria's Letter Patent in 1866, whereas Lucknow only had a judicial commissioner's court upto 1925 and thereafter the Chief Court for Avadh upto 1948, when the amalgamation order was passed. Hence, from the historical angle also, there can be no doubt that the principal seat of the High Court is at Allahabad.[3235]

The second proviso to clause 14 of the United Provinces High Courts (Amalgamation) Order, 1948, clearly indicates that it is only cases which arise out of Avadh area, that is to say, at least part of the cause of action arises in Avadh, which can be transferred by the Chief Justice to Allahabad. Hence, the Chief Justice has no jurisdiction to transfer a case in which no part of the cause of action arose in Avadh to Allahabad under clause 14. Such cases illegally filed at Lucknow must be returned at the very threshold to counsel for filing at Allahabad.[3236]

It was held in a case that while passing the order, the acting Chief Justice was exercising administrative powers. He was not obliged to write a detailed judgement, dealing with each and every point raised by one party and controverted by the other. It could not be said that the order of the judge did not reflect any basis for the transfer to Allahabad of the petition filed at Lucknow. The fact that the petition was filed by the petitioner at Lucknow did not bar the petitioner in seeking the relief of transfer. Nor could it prevent the Chief Justice from passing an administrative order of transfer, once it was brought to his notice that it was necessary on the merits of the case.[3237]

The question of interpretation of power of transfer of cases exercised by the principal seat of a high court and a permanent bench of that high court came up for consideration before the Madras High Court. While interpreting the expression "subordinate court" appearing in section 23 in the light of Madras High Court (Establishment of Permanent Bench at Madurai) Order, 2004, it was held that the said expression means all courts subordinate to the high court including court of small causes. In this view of the matter, courts lying within the jurisdiction of the Permanent Bench at Madurai can be termed as subordinate to the principal seat at Madras. Thus, the High Court at Madras can exercise power and transfer cases falling within the territorial jurisdiction of Permanent Bench at Madurai to other court within the territorial jurisdiction of the principal seat.[3238] It was observed by the high court as follows:

> 17. True it is, that the word High Court under Section 3(25) of the General Clauses Act is defined as, "High Court", used with reference to civil proceedings shall mean the highest civil court of appeal in the part of India in which the Act or regulation containing the expression operates. Although it may appear that the court of appeal for cases in the Districts lying within the Territorial Jurisdiction of Permanent Bench at Madurai would only be the latter, when once the proviso to Presidential Order abovementioned empowers the Chief Justice in the Principal Seat at Madras High Court to order for hearing of any

---

3234. Nasiruddin v State Transport Appellate Tribunal, AIR 1976 SC 331 : (1975) 2 SCC 671 : 1976 SCR (1) 505.
3235. Vijendra Pal Singh v Sr Regional Manager, FCI, Lucknow, AIR 2002 All 206 (DB).
3236. Vijendra Pal Singh v Sr Regional Manager, FCI, Lucknow, AIR 2002 All 206 (DB).
3237. Centre of Indian Trade Unions, UP State Committee v Acting Chief Justice, High Court, Allahabad, AIR 1990 All 55 (DB).
3238. T Kamatchi v S. Murali alias Kanagasabapathy, AIR 2006 Mad 159 : 2006 (1) Mad LJ 418.

> case pending in the Madurai Bench at Madras, it would only indicate that such power of appellate authority of the Madurai Bench is likely to be delegated to the Principal Bench at Madras. This delegation as connoted to the proviso to the Presidential Order cannot have any meaningful effect unless and until the Principal Seat is clothes (sic) with such power of appellate authority over the Territorial Jurisdiction of Permanent Bench at Madurai.[3239]

[s 24.10] Jurisdiction

Before the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), one view was that an order for transfer of a suit from one court to another court cannot be made unless the suit had been in the first instance brought in a court which had jurisdiction to try it.[3240] This was also the view taken by the Andhra Pradesh High Court which, however, held that the mere fact that there was a dispute about jurisdiction did not restrict the power of transfer.[3241] If after the transfer is made, the parties joined issue and went to trial upon the merits without any objection, the order of transfer could not subsequently be impeached.[3242] Where a district munsif transferred the records of a case to another district munsif in anticipation of an order of transfer by the district judge and it was disposed of on the merits without objection, it was held that there was a mere irregularity which could be waived and that the decree was not open to attack by reason thereof.[3243] The same rule applied to appeals.[3244] The Allahabad High Court took a contrary view and held that the fact that the court of first instance had no jurisdiction to dispose of the suit could not oust the jurisdiction of the high court or district court to transfer the same to a court competent to try it.[3245] This was also the view of the Nagpur High Court.[3246] The Parliament has, by inserting sub-section 5 accepted the Allahabad and Nagpur view as against the other view. In a decision by the Allahabad High Court in Ledgard v Bull and Raja Soap Factory v Shantharaj,[3247] the court has taken a view contrary to its earlier view and held that a suit, appeal or other proceeding cannot be transferred unless it was filed in the court with jurisdiction. Furthermore, it has confirmed the view of the district court, the transferee court, that the high court could not transfer to it an appeal which the high court had held it had no jurisdiction to entertain. The order by the district court was passed before sub-section (5) came into force and that the sub-section not being retrospective, did not affect that order.[3248] Nevertheless, a suit cannot be transferred to a court which has no jurisdiction (other than territorial jurisdiction) to try it.[3249] This is clear from the words "competent to try or dispose off the same" in clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1). Thus, a high court cannot transfer to a district court an insolvency petition presented to it under the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act, 1909;[3250] nor can a district court transfer a suit from one subordinate court to another subordinate court which has been newly created and empowered to try subsequently instituted suits;[3251] but it is not necessary that the court to which a suit is transferred should 3239. T Kamatchi v S Murali alias Kanagasabapathy, AIR 2006 Mad 159, at pp 162–163 : 2006 (1) Mad LJ 418.

---

3240. Rajah Soap Factory v SP Santharaj, AIR 1965 SC 1449.
3241. T Reddy v M Rao, AIR 1970 AP 194.
3242. Ledgard v Bull, (1887) ILR 9 All 191 : 13 IA 134; Peary Lal v Komal Kishor, (1880) ILR 6 Cal 30.
3243. Posan Singh v Inder Deo Singh, AIR 1952 Pat 328.
3244. Ram Narain v Parmeswar, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 39.
3245. Narain Das v Khunnilal, AIR 1934 All 569.
3246. Daftary v Dube, AIR 1955 Ngp 44 : (1955) ILR Nag 36.
3247. Ledgard v Bull, (1887) ILR 9 All 191 : 13 IA 134; Raja Soap Factory v Shantharaj, AIR 1965 SC 1449.
3248. Murarilal v Raman Lal, AIR 1978 All 106; Krishna Chand v Tej Ram, AIR 1978 J&K 9.
3249. Kishore Lal v Balkishan, AIR 1932 All 660 : (1932) ILR 54 All 824; dissenting from Jannat v Ghulam, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 588.
3250. Srinivasa v Official Assignee, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 472.
3251. Vaithilinga v Kaliaperumal, (1918) Mad WN 291.

have concurrent territorial jurisdiction and a high court or district court may transfer a suit from one subordinate court to another subordinate court which has pecuniary jurisdiction although it may not have territorial jurisdiction to try the suit.[3252] Where a suit was instituted in court A which would have on the valuation given in the plaint jurisdiction to entertain it and subsequently, the suit was transferred to court B which had higher pecuniary jurisdiction, and that court held that on its true valuation, the suit was beyond the jurisdiction of court A, it was held that the order of transfer was not open to attack on the ground that the suit was instituted in a court which had no jurisdiction to entertain it.[3253]

In a suit for damages and injunction, the court granted injunction in favour of the plaintiff. Thereafter, the plaintiff sought amendment of the plaint claiming higher amount of damages and the same was allowed. As a result of the amendment, the trial court lost pecuniary jurisdiction. The plaintiff filed a petition for transfer of the suit to avoid order of return of the plaint without continuation of interim injunction. It was held by the Delhi High Court that there was nothing in O VII, rule 10 of the Code which can be construed as a bar to maintain a petition under section 24 of the Code.[3254]

Dwelling on the ambit and domain of section 24 and Order VII of the Code, it was observed by the court as follows:

> Harmonious and constructive application of the above two sets of provisions of the procedural law would require the Court to adopt an approach which would satisfy the twin objects of the Code of Civil Procedure, namely, expeditious disposal of the case and achievement of the ends of justice, without causing prejudice to the parties. Convenience or inconvenience of the parties would hardly be a relevant consideration for the Court while laying down such a principle.[3255]

[s 24.11] General Power of Transfer

Section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure deals with the general power of transfer and withdrawal. As can be seen from the language of section 24 of the CPC, the powers, no doubt, are very wide; however, those powers are being exercised while transferring matters within certain permissible limitations.[3256]

This section gives a general power of transfer of all suits, appeals and other proceedings and is not limited like section 22 to suits in which the plaintiff has the option of suing in more than one court. It may be exercised at any stage of the proceeding and even suo motu without an application.[3257] Section 24 of the CPC deals with the general power of transfer and withdrawal of suits, appeals or other proceedings pending before the subordinate court to the high court or district court for trial or disposal to any court subordinate to them and competent to try and dispose off the same, or withdraw any suit, appeal or other proceeding pending in any court subordinate to them.[3258] The High Court of Andhra Pradesh recommended the government to transfer some areas from jurisdiction of courts at another place for the reason that the pendency in court at place from jurisdiction of which area was transferred was heavy and at

---

3252. Kishore Lal v Balkishan, AIR 1932 All 660 : (1932) ILR 54 All 824.
3253. Syam Nandan v Dhanpati Kuer, AIR 1960 Pat 244.
3254. Aviat Chemicals Pvt Ltd v Magna Laboratories (Gujarat) Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 Del 115 : 2006 (127) DLT 300.
3255. Aviat Chemicals Pvt Ltd v Magna Laboratories (Gujarat) Pvt Ltd, AIR 2006 Del 115, at p 123 : 2006 (127) DLT 300. Per Swatanter Kumar, J (as he then was).
3256. Satyasri Fertilizers v EID Parry (India) Ltd, Chennai, AIR 2003 AP 312.
3257. Seshagiri Rao v Somasundaramma, AIR 1949 Mad 65 : (1949) ILR Mad 94; Allahabad Bank v Raja Ram, AIR 1933 Lah 671 : (1933) ILR 14 Lah 779.
3258. Shamim Ahmed v Egmore Benefits Society Ltd, AIR 1996 Mad 63.

place to which area was transferred was very low. The district judge recommended transfer of area in question at latter place for achieving equal distribution of work among courts. It was held that there was nothing arbitrary and illegal in the notification of the government.[3259]

[s 24.12] Grounds of Transfer

As stated in the notes on section 22, the plaintiff as arbiter litis or dominus litis has the right to choose any forum the law allows him[3260] and it has been held that it is a substantive right like a right of appeal.[3261] But it is subject to control under sections 22–24. The burden lies on the applicant to make out a strong case for a transfer. As mere balance of convenience in favour of proceedings in another court is not a sufficient ground[3262] though it is a relevant consideration.[3263]

The court has laid down various propositions which can be considered as a ground to transfer the case.[3264] These are illustrative in nature:

1. balance of convenience or inconvenience to the plaintiff or the defendant or witnesses;
2. convenience or inconvenience of a particular place of trial having regard to the nature of evidence on the points involved in the suit;
3. issues raised by the parties;
4. reasonable apprehension in the mind of the litigant that he might not get justice in the court in which the suit is pending;
5. important questions of law involved or a considerable section of public interested in the litigation;
6. the plaintiff or the defendant is not likely to have a "fair trial.

[s 24.12.1] Reasonable Ground

As a general rule, the court should not interfere unless the expenses and difficulties of the trial would be so great as to lead to injustice or the suit has been filed in a particular court for the purpose of working injustice.[3265]

Where the applicant was a practicing lawyer, who sought transfer at a place where she was practicing, objection was raised that she will have an influence at that place. No foundation was made out for the objection. Such objection cannot be entertained. No doubt, such discretionary powers cannot be put within the strait-jacket of cast-iron for all the situations. It is always for the court to find out from the allegations so made, whether any reasonable ground is made out for transfer of the case.[3266] Transfer of cases from one court to another is a serious matter, because it indirectly casts doubt on the integrity or competence of the judge from whom the matter is transferred. This should not be done without a proper and sufficient cause. If there are good and sufficient reasons for transferring a case from one court to another, they must be clearly set out. What the court has to consider is whether the applicant has made out

---

3259. D Awastha Reddy v Govt of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1998 AP 174 (DB).
3260. Sadayandi v Venugopal, AIR 1960 Ker 91.
3261. Ganapathy v Commr of Hindu Religious Endowments, AIR 1955 Mad 378 : (1955) II R Mad 870.
3262. Re Norton's Settlement, [1907] 1 Ch 407, 409; Madho Prasad v Motichand, (1919) II R 41 All 381.
3263. Tula Ram v Harjiwan Das, (1883) ILR 5 All 60; Subha Bibi v Maqbul, (1916) 14 All LJ 242; Inayatullah v Nisar, AIR 1922 All 65 : (1922) ILR 44 All 278.
3264. Sadhana Badhoriya v Sunil Badhoriya, 2019 (4) MPLJ 331.
3265. Re Norton's Settlement, [1907] 1 Ch 407; Hindustan Co v Mulraj, (1914) 27 Mad LJ 645.
3266. Sudha Sharma v Ram Naresh Jaiswal, AIR 1990 MP 320.

a case to justify it in closing the doors of the court in which the suit is brought to the plaintiff and leaving him to seek his remedy in another jurisdiction.[3267]

In other words, the court held that mere apprehension of a litigant that he will not get justice from a court will not justify transfer of a case, as requirement of section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure will not be met in such a case. The court has to be very careful in transferring a matter on such grounds. There was no occasion for the petitioner even to presume that he will not get justice from the court concerned. The court has to be wary in transferring the case on the ground of biasedness as it casts aspersion upon integrity and competence of the presiding officer.[3268]

In the undernoted cases, the Supreme Court held the age of the wife and the distance between the place of residence and the place where the matrimonial proceedings were filed, as well as the absence of people who could escort her, were considered to be reasonable grounds for directing transfer of proceedings to a place more convenient to her.[3269]

Powers under section 24 cannot be exercised ipse dixit. Thus, where the high court, without applying its mind and without recording any reasons, allowed transfer simply observing that it would be appropriate to transfer the suit, the order was set aside by the Supreme Court. It was observed that the order of transfer must reflect the application of mind by the court and the circumstances which weighed in taking the action.[3270]

[s 24.12.2] Common Question of Facts and Law

Where two persons filed suits against each other in different courts on the same cause of action, it was held desirable that the suits should be tried by one and the same court.[3271]

Where there are two suits in different courts which raise common questions of fact and law, and the decisions in which are interdependent, it is desirable that they should be tried together by the same judge so as to avoid multiplicity in trial of the same issues and conflict of decisions.[3272] The involvement of common question of law and facts is not the only ground authorising the transfer of suits under section 24. It is only illustrative and not exhaustive. This is paramountly a matter involving the satisfaction of the court which exercises the power. If the facts of the suits sought to be tried together are inter-twined with cause of action in each suit, the transfer of suit may not be refused, provided the parties and subject matter of the suits are one and the same. When the court feels that facts intertwined with the different causes of action are separated and suits tried independently would result in conflicting decisions, it can allow the transfer and joint trial. Thus, where the litigating parties in both the suits were one and the same and the subject matter involved in both the suits was a two-shop room, thereby apart from the common nature, facts being inter-twined and overlapped, the possibility of conflicting decisions if the suits were tried separately could not be totally ruled out, transfer and joint trial was hence ordered.[3273] It has likewise been held that where different suits by 3267. Tula Ram v Harjiwan Das, (1883) ILR 5 All 60, 62.

---

3268. Amar Nath v Nanak Chand, AIR 2020 HP 153 : 2020 SCC OnLine HP 580.
3269. Anjali Ashok Sadhwani v Ashok Kishenchand Sadhwani, AIR 2009 SC 1374; Sapna Agarwal v Om Prakash Jalan, AIR 2009 SC 1641 : (2008) 17 SCC 602 : 2008 (15) Scale 155; Fatema v Jafri Syed Hussain (Parvez), AIR 2009 SC 1773 : (2009) 17 SCC 401; Pooja Bashistha v Bhupendra Bashistha, AIR 2009 SC 1673 : (2009) 17 SCC 385.
3270. Kulwinder Kaur v Kandi Friends Education Trust, AIR 2008 SC 1333 : (2008) 3 SCC 659.
3271. Rajulu v Govindan Nair, AIR (1938) ILR Mad 745; Zubeida Khatoon v Md Hayath, AIR 1933 Lah 635; Manjari v Nirupam, AIR 1975 Del 42 : (1974) 1 Del 135.
3272. Purna Chandra v Samantha, AIR 1953 Ori 46 : (1951) ILR Cut 1.
3273. Rosamma Joseph v PC Sebastian, AIR 1996 Ker 113.

different plaintiffs were filed in different courts raising the same question under section 13 of the Pensions' Act, 1871, it was desirable that all of them should be tried by one court and that orders of transfer should be made for that purpose under section 24.[3274] An order of transfer would also be made to prevent abuse of the process of the court.[3275]

The involvement of common question of law and facts is not the only ground authorising the transfer of suits under section 24. It is only illustrative and not exhaustive. This is paramountly a matter involving the satisfaction of the court which exercises the power. If the facts of the suits sought to be tried together are inter-twined with the cause of action in each suit, the transfer of suit may not be refused, provided the parties and subject matter of the suits are one and the same. When the court feels that facts inter-twined with the different causes of action are separated and suits tried independently would result in conflicting decisions, it can allow transfer and joint trial. Thus, where the litigating parties in both the suits were one and the same and the subject matter involved in both the suits was a two-shop room, thereby apart from the common nature, facts being intertwined and overlapped, the possibility of conflicting decisions if the suits were tried separately, could not be totally ruled out; transfer and joint trial was hence ordered.

In a case relating to succession certificate, the petitioner put forward his claim on the basis of a Will before Civil Judge (Senior Division). The respondent filed a suit before Civil Judge (Junior Division) for cancellation of the Will. It was held by the Allahabad High Court that the claims of the petitioner as well as that of the respondent were based on execution and non-execution of the alleged Will and therefore, it would be in the interest of justice that both cases are decided in the same court. It was further held that the expression "same court" in O IVA does not mean the same judge; rather, it means the same civil court and as such the order transferring the proceeding from the court of Civil Judge (Junior Division) to the court of Civil Judge (Senior Division) was proper.[3276]

In another instance, a partition suit had been filed and a probate case was also pending in another court. Same subject-matter was involved in both cases. The parties admitted that the stands of the parties in both the cases were almost same and the issues involved were almost similar and same set of oral and documentary evidence would be required to be led by both parties. Under these circumstances, it was held that in the interest of justice and convenience of parties, the partition suit and the probate case should be tried together.[3277]

[s 24.12.3] Comments by Judge

It is too much to say that if any statements are made, it means that the presiding officer has made up his mind with respect to the decision in the case. If this be the position, no case can be heard by any court. It cannot be expected that the judges should be silent without expressing any opinion. A sphinx-like attitude is not expected from the presiding officer especially when he is trying a matrimonial case or litigation between very near relations. There should be an effective discussion, an effective attempt to conciliate and an effective attempt to clarify the misunderstandings so that the disputes can be settled or a just and proper decision can be taken 3274. District Collector v Kerala Varma, AIR 1960 Ker 199 : (1959) Ker LJ 1219.

---

3275. State Bank of India v Sakow Industries, AIR 1976 P&H 321 : (1976) 78 Punj LR 638.
3276. Amardeep v District Judge, Lalitpur, 2007 (3) ALJ 691.
3277. Smt Pushplata Prasad v Dilip Kumar Sinha, AIR 2007 Jhar 1 : 2006 (3) AIR Jhar R 649.

by the presiding officer. If in that process, the presiding officer makes any comments on merits of the case, it cannot be misunderstood as an expression of the decision.[3278]

The mere fact that a judge, while deciding an earlier case, had made certain remarks, is no ground for the transfer of a subsequent case on the same point before him.[3279]

[s 24.12.4] Bias Attributed to a Judge

The apprehension of bias on the part of a litigant should be a "bona fide, reasonable apprehension" and not a mere apprehension of the litigant that can be the basis to order transfer of the pending case in the exercise of the power under section 24 of the CPC. The examination of the existence of such apprehension though requires to be decided from the point of the person expressing apprehension, nevertheless if extended to an extreme extent will result in the anomalous situation that whenever a litigant comes up before the court in application filed under section 24 of the CPC, that the applicant has a reasonable apprehension of bias operating against him by the presiding officer of the court being prejudiced against him, then the version of the applicant has to be automatically accepted and the transfer application allowed. This cannot be and is not the object of section 24 of the CPC. Until and unless the court is satisfied that the apprehension of bias or prejudice which a litigant expresses is bona fide and reasonable, expression of apprehension which is proved by the circumstances and material placed by such applicant before the court where the application is moved, an application of this nature cannot be automatically ordered.[3280]

Another ground of transfer is the pecuniary or other personal interest in the presiding judge[3281] or a reasonable apprehension of the litigant that he will not get a fair trial.[3282] The fact that an erroneous order has been passed is not in itself a ground for transfer as it does not necessarily lead to an inference of bias.[3283]

Vesting of power of adjudication of a sessions triable case under section 498A on a presiding officer who was dealing with matrimonial suit, cannot ipso facto lead to a conclusion that the court would be biased. Vesting of power in a particular court to decide civil lis and criminal matters is common practice and on this ground bias cannot be attributed to the court.[3284]

In a case where repeated adjournments were sought by the applicant due to sickness and the court, after taking note of earlier adjournments, uttered some words, that itself cannot be taken as a ground of bias against the litigant and transfer of case cannot be sought on that ground.[3285]

If the petitioners did not make out any case to prove their contention that there is every likelihood of bias to the presiding officer due to his acquaintance with the parties and their counsel, unless there are specific instances of bias and the presiding officer has personal interest in the subject matter of the suits, he cannot be branded as a biased officer. This would demoralise the officers in the eye of the public and it becomes very difficult for such officers

---

3278. Sangeetha S Chugh v Ram Narayan, AIR 1995 Kant 112.
3279. G Lakshmi Ammal v Elumaki Chettiar, AIR 1981 Mad 24.
3280. MV Ganesh Prasad v ML Vasudevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.
3281. Loburi v Assam Railway and Trading Co, (1884) ILR 10 Cal 915.
3282. Sher Singh v Thakur Das, (1903) PR 88; Ahad Shah v Ayshan, AIR 1923 Lah 564.
3283. Madan Lal v Babu Lal, AIR 1962 Mani 42.
3284. Anand Jhawar v Rinku Jhawar, AIR 2007 (NOC) 1963 (Cal).
3285. Virendra Bhushan v Rajendra Kumar, AIR 2007 (NOC) 2353 (Raj).

to work in a free and unbiased atmosphere. The mere apprehension of the petitioners on imaginary grounds cannot be accepted.[3286]

The Supreme Court, in a case where the husband was taking care of the child who was nine years old and was suffering from malignant disease, found that the high court ought to have transferred the case in favour of the husband.[3287]

The petitioner's apprehension that the presiding officer is biased against him was based on an incident in which it was alleged that the presiding officer while hearing the suit had used harsh language against the petitioner. The incident had happened when the suit which was pending before the trial court for about eight years had reached the stage of pronouncement of judgment. The developments in the case clearly indicate that there was an effect on the part of the petitioner to stall and prolong the proceedings. However, there was absolutely no allegation of bias or prejudice made against the presiding officer during this period. The apprehension of bias expressed on the basis of an incident which is said to have taken place in the course of the proceedings in the suit in respect of which the version of the petitioner is also not believed by the learned district judge and can never be said to have given the cause for formation of a reasonable apprehension that the presiding officer is biased against the petitioner. The district judge was therefore fully justified in rejecting the application filed under section 24 of the CPC on this ground.[3288]

[s 24.12.5] Suspicion, Presumption or Apprehension

A mere suspicion by a party that he will not obtain justice, does not justify transfer. There must be reasonable apprehension to that effect. A judicial order made by a judge cannot be legitimately made the foundation for a transfer application. Mere presumption or possible apprehension could not and should not be the basis of transferring a case from one court to another; only in very special circumstances it may become necessary to transfer a case from one court to another.[3289]

The mere apprehension of the petitioners on imaginary grounds cannot be accepted.[3290]

Application for transfer of a case on the allegation of bias against the Presiding Officer cannot be filed without being supported by affidavit.[3291] It has been observed as follows:

> It is to be always kept in mind that there should be a reasonable ground to justify the plea of apprehension in the mind of a party to a judicial proceeding about the dealing of the proceeding of a Judge. This must be in the realm of actuality. A fanciful idea, an imaginary suspicion or capricious plea can never be equated with the conception of reasonable apprehension.[3292]

[s 24.12.6] Judicial Order

A judicial order made by a judge cannot be legitimately made the foundation for a transfer application.

3286. Pasupala Fakhruddin v Jamia Mosque, AIR 2003 AP 448.
3287. Amandeep Goyal v Yogesh Rani, (2016) 15 SCC 267.
3288. MV Ganesh Prasad v ML Vasudevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.
3289. Rajkot Cancer Society v Municipal Corp, Rajkot, AIR 1988 Guj 63.
3290. Pasupala Fakruddin v Jamia Mosque, AIR 2003 AP 448. See also Nandini Chatterjee v Arup Hari Chatterjee, AIR 2001 Cal 26.
3291. Sudarshan Jain v Deep Chand Jain, AIR 2006 MP 6 : 2006 AIHC (NOC) 702.
3292. Sudarshan Jain v Deep Chand Jain, AIR 2006 MP 6, p 10 : 2006 AIHC (NOC) 702 [Per Dipak Misra J as he then was.]

Where a stay application against the trial court's order to issue interim injunction is filed in the appellate court, which refuses to grant stay, the defendant cannot seek transfer of appeal. Remedy against dismissal of stay does not lie in a petition for transfer.[3293]

[s 24.12.7] Convenience

Where in a suit for partition instituted in the court of 24-Parganas, the parties were residents of Calcutta and the major portion of the immovable property was also situated in Calcutta, the suit was transferred to the original side of the High Court of Calcutta on the ground principally, of convenience.[3294] In a suit to set aside certain deeds of gift executed by a deceased person on the ground that the deceased was not of sound mind and that the deeds were procured by undue influence, the High Court of Allahabad ordered the suit to be transferred to the court of the place where the deeds were executed on the ground that the witnesses were residents of that place and that the defence must turn upon local evidence.[3295]

The court while considering an application for transfer of a case cannot delve into the existence or lack of territorial jurisdiction of respective courts. The paramount factor would be convenience of both parties. Thus, where in a suit arising out of a contract, the petitioner had its head office at Visakhapatnam and an equally important Regional Office at Hyderabad. It was found that substantial portion of transaction had taken place at Hyderabad in the form of issuance and acceptance of tenders, undertaking negotiations. It was held that no inconvenience would be caused to the petitioner if suits are decided by court at Hyderabad.[3296]

Where the wife sought transfer of a petition for judicial separation filed by the husband on the ground that it was inconvenient for her to attend as she was serving in other district and her father was not in a position to accompany her, it was considered sufficient ground for transfer of the petition to the place where the wife resides.[3297]

[s 24.12.8] Medical Ground

In view of the fact that under the present CPC, the affidavit evidence relating to the chief-examination had been introduced for the purpose of cross-examination or otherwise, if there is any difficulty in this regard, the litigant is at liberty to move an appropriate application relating to expenses. Hence, it is needless to say that the litigant is at liberty to move such an application in the event of any difficulty on the ground of health.[3298] The fact that a party to the suit is a diabetic patient is therefore, no ground for transfer of the suit.[3299]

[s 24.13] Transfer from Rent Court to Civil Court Permissibility

The Rent Control Act, 1948 and the rules made thereunder are a complete Code covering the proceedings under the said Act. Even with reference to the transfer of the proceedings before the rent controller as well as before the appellate authority, it is provided under the Act

---

3293. Vijay Kumar v Uma Sanghi, AIR 1987 MP 41; See also Nandini Chatterjee v Arup Hari Chatterjee, AIR 2001 Cal 26.
3294. Jotendronath v Raj Kristo, (1890) 116 ILR Cal 771; Kumaragurubara Temple v KS Mudaliar, AIR 1977 Mad 27 : (1976) 2 Mad LJ 209; but see Oriental Bank v Pashole Tea Co, AIR 1975 Cal 476.
3295. Inayat-ullah v Nisar, AIR 1922 All 65 : (1922) ILR 44 All 278.
3296. Girijan Co-op Corp Ltd v Hukmichand Sachion Kumar, (2007) 2 Andh LT 18.
3297. Smt Varsha Rani Nag v Herald Vinay Nandan, 2007 CgLJ 145.
3298. Satyasri Fertilisers v EID Parry (India) Ltd, Chennai, AIR 2003 AP 312.
3299. Satyasri Fertilisers v EID Parry (India) Ltd, Chennai, AIR 2003 AP 312.

and the rules made thereunder. But, however, there is no provision for transfer of a proceeding from the rent control court to any other civil court. In fact, the powers of ordering eviction under the grounds specified under the Act are exclusively conferred on the specified or notified courts or the authorities. Therefore, such power conferred by notification under the provisions of the Act, cannot be conferred by the high court by transferring a rent control proceeding pending on the file of the rent controller to any civil court, as such powers are vested only in government. Therefore, the petitions seeking transfer of the proceedings pending before the rent controller to the civil court would not be maintainable. Further even on merits also, there is no case for ordering transfer as the conduct of the petitioners clearly showed that it is intended only to delay and protract the proceedings before the rent controller.[3300]

Under the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1960, there are provisions for making rules and rules have been framed thereunder known as the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Rules 1974. Rule 14 of the said rules provides for transfer of proceedings from one Controller to another and rule 17 provides for transfer of proceedings from one appellate authority to another. Since there are adequate provisions in the Act and the Rules governing transfer of cases, a proceeding before the Rent Controller cannot be transferred to high court under section 24 of the Code.[3301]

[s 24.14] Disputes Between Husband and Wife

The high court under section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 has unquestionable power to transfer cases from one court to the other court. Similarly, as the family court is also a court subordinate to the high court and is subject to the provisions of the CPC, the high court is empowered under section 24 of the Code to transfer cases from one family court to the other family court. Where the Supreme Court found that other proceedings between parties were pending at Jamnagar, the court found it fit to allow the appeal and transfer the divorce case instituted at Rajkot to Jamnagar at the instance of the wife.[3302]

In a Karnataka case, the suit was by the husband for restitution of conjugal rights. The wife sought transfer of the suit to her parent's place. She apprehended danger to her life in the event of entering the husband's town. Affidavit was filed by the husband assuring full security to her life. Efforts of the court to rid her of her apprehension were in vain. Transfer of the suit was allowed, having due regard to the state of mind of the wife.[3303] The overall picture which emerged in this case is that though the application of the petitioner appears to be earlier in time, it cannot be said that the non-petitioner has filed the case under section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 only as a counter-blast to her application for restitution of conjugal rights. in such a situation, no case of transfer is made out.[3304] A petition for divorce was filed by the husband at Mysore where he was working. The wife filed a petition for restitution at Bangalore where she was residing with the father. The wife admittedly suffered from a mental disorder and it was held in the interest of justice and equity proceedings that the wife cannot be forced to join proceedings at Mysore. The petition of the husband was transferred to Bangalore.[3305]

3300. LK Prakash Babu v Mohd Akbar, AIR 2003 AP 168.
3301. A Chandrasekar T Venugopal, (2008) 7 Mad LJ 625 : (2008) 3 Mad LW 915 (DB).
3302. Tejalben v Nihirbhai Bharatbhai Kothari, (2016) 3 SCC 69.
3303. Jayadevi v Basavraj, AIR 1990 Kant 273.
3304. Chand Kanwar vSantosh Kumar Singh, AIR 1997 Raj 190.
3305. RS Shyamala vr G Rajasekhar, AIR 1995 Kant 228. See also Anita Shrivastava v Ashish Saxena, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1354 (MP) : (2006) 2 MPLJ 271; Vandana vAngad Singh Jadav, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1152 (MP) : (2006) 1 MPLJ 463.

In a case, the Kerala High Court held that Family Courts are subordinate to the high court and as such the high court is empowered to withdraw case from one Family Court and transfer it to another Family Court irrespective of the fact whether or not the transferee court has competency and territorial jurisdiction to try the case. Such power can be exercised under section 24 of the Code without taking recourse to section 8 of the Family Courts Act, 1984.[3306]

In a case of matrimonial dispute, the wife and the husband appeared before Supreme Court Lok Adalat and there was a settlement between the parties with the intervention of mediators. The parties agreed that they want divorce by mutual consent and also agreed not to proceed with pending criminal and civil disputes. In view of this, the transfer petition filed by wife was disposed of in terms of the settlement and direction to grant divorce by mutual consent was issued.[3307]

Where the case was filed by husband against the wife at place D for declaration of marriage as void, the wife living at place Y and she had to travel by bus and had to change bus thrice for reaching place D, and at place Y her two brothers were residing where she could conveniently live and conduct the case also. Under the circumstances, the high court transferred the case at place Y, where wife was residing.[3308]

[s 24.15] Probate and Succession Certificate

The various provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 is that a proceeding for the grant of a probate or a succession certificate has to be treated and equated to a proceeding in a suit and the procedures governing those proceedings are as laid down in the CPC. A combined reading of the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 clearly suggests that the proceedings for the grant of succession certificate before the learned District Judge are in the form of regular suits and they are to be conducted according to the CPC. In any view of the matter, as the proceedings for grant of succession certificate is pending before a civil court subordinate to the high court, the application under section 24 of the CPC will certainly be maintainable for transfer of proceedings for grant of succession certificate under the Act.[3309]

Where two probate petitions, one filed by petitioner before the high court and the other filed by respondent before the distrct court; both based on two separate wills by same testator, involving the same parties, considering the fact that the petition had been instituted earlier before high court, a court of competent jurisdiction, the petition before the District Judge was directed to be transferred to the high court.[3310]

[s 24.16] Election Petition

Under section 88(b) of the Kerala Panchayat Raj Act (13 of 1994), the court having jurisdiction to try an election petition in the case of a district panchayat is the district court and if the government may by notification notify under sub-section (2) of section 88 of the said Act such other additional district court, then such other district court may have jurisdiction to try the election petition under section 88 of the Act. Section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure deals with general power of transfer and withdrawal and enables the district court to transfer any suit, appeal or other proceedings pending before it, for trial or disposal to any court

---

3306. Denny Antony v Mary Kutty Abraham, AIR 2007 AIHC (NOC) 2026 (Ker) : 2007 AIHC (NOC) 1658.
3307. Aparna Goyal v Rakesh Goyal, AIR 2009 SC 1836 (Three-Judge Bench).
3308. Samta Sanjay Kumar vSanjay Kumar Sharma, AIR 2006 AIHC (NOC) 1142 (Raj).
3309. Sushmita Dey v Sovana Dey, AIR 2003 Cal 38.
3310. DC Raizade v State, AIR 2003 Del 200.

subordinate to it and competent to try or dispose of the same. Though the district court is therefore, empowered to transfer a case to an additional district court, then also such additional district court should also be a court competent to try or dispose of the matter. For the limited purpose of section 24 of the CPC alone, an additional district court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the district court. Hence if an additional district court if otherwise competent to try to dispose of the election petition and if it is notified under section 88(2) then the district court is empowered to transfer to such additional district court notified. It is only by virtue of such notification that the additional district court will be competent to try and dispose of the matter. However, in case the petition is transferred to a court not notified by the government, the transfer of election case by district court to such other court is not legal since such other court will have no jurisdiction to try such case.[3311]

[s 24.17] Notice

No notice is necessary if the court acts suo motu. If an application is made, notice must be given by the court and not by the party as in section 22. The provision as to notice is imperative, and an order for transfer made without notice will be set aside;[3312] and so will an ex parte decree made by a court to which the suit has been transferred without notice to the defendant.[3313] Notice to the other party (of the application for transfer) is mandatory.[3314] Before transferring a suit under section 24, notice must be served on the parties. If the vakalatnama authorises the counsel to accept a notice issued by the civil judge and does not authorise the counsel to accept service of notice by any other court, then the district court cannot serve the notice of transfer on counsel. The parties must be notified personally.[3315] Rule 63 of Civil Rules of Practice contemplate that when a suit is transferred on administrative grounds by the district court invoking the general power of transfer and withdrawal under section 24, the transferor court has to issue notice either to the counsel who is on the record or to the parties intimating the date of their appearance before the transferee court. The endeavour though laudable, is not sufficient to remedy the difficulties of the parties who are not informed by their counsel representing them before the transferor court for some reason or the other, if notice is given to counsel and in the absence of notice also being issued to parties by the transferor court as contemplated under rule 63 of Civil Rules of Practice, even if notice is issued to the counsel appearing on their behalf.[3316] The mere bifurcation of a court does not mean (i) that a suit validly instituted within that particular court should cease to be within its jurisdiction; or (ii) that the suit should be necessarily transferred to the new court.[3317] On the other hand, the Madras High Court treats the matter of notice as one of practice and procedure and holds that notice may be waived[3318] and that want of notice is an irregularity which does not invalidate the order of transfer.[3319] The same is the view of the High Court of Calcutta which has held that a transfer without notice is only an irregularity if it does not prejudice the opposite side and, is not sufficient ground for holding that the court to which the case is transferred has

---

3311. P Aisha Potti v Returning Officer, Kollam, AIR 2002 Ker 268.
3312. Ram Das v Habibullah, AIR 1933 All 178 : (1932) ILR 53 All 916; Fatima v Imdad Ali, (1920) 18 All LJ 351; Demello v New Victoria Mills Ltd, AIR 1926 All 17.
3313. Gangaram v Gujar Mal, AIR 1923 Lah 444.
3314. Anjula v Milan Kumar, AIR 1981 All 178.
3315. Umesh Chandra v Mahesh Chandra, AIR 1983 All 290.,
3316. Koruprolu Atchaya v Bideshi Raghuram Singh, AIR 1995 AP 58.
3317. Maganlal Purshottamlal v Chimanlal Dabyabhai Modi, AIR 1980 Guj 14.
3318. Sankumani v Ikoran, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 211.
3319. Bellary Press Co v Venkata, (1911) 21 Mad LJ 829.

no jurisdiction to dispose of the case.[3320] According to the Karnataka High Court, a suo motu transfer by the high court or district court under section 24 does not call for the issuance of notice to the parties. It is only when the transfer is to be made on the application of a party that notice is required to be given and the matter heard. In the instant case, a suo motu transfer was made by the District Judge. Therefore, revision petitioners were not entitled to notice. However, though the District Judge may not issue notice when he directs a transfer suo motu, the transferee court is bound to issue a court notice to the parties, of the fact of transfer and to appear before the transferee court on the specified date.[3321] The Lahore High Court held that this section is wider in scope than section 22 and no notice before the filing of an application for transfer is necessary under this section.[3322] An order of the high court made suo motu under this section need not be in any prescribed form and accordingly, a memo of the high court directing that certain suits pending in court A should be tried by court B amounts to an order of transfer under this section.[3323] It has been held by the High Court of Andhra Pradesh that it is the duty of the court under rule 48 of the Civil Rules of Practice either to issue notice to the parties or to record its reasons before making an order of transfer.[3324] Such a notice is necessary to enable the parties to appoint their advocates in the transferee court.[3325]

The Supreme Court has held that the purpose of section 24, CPC is merely to confer on the court a discretionary power. A court acting under section 24, CPC may or may not in its judicial discretion transfer a particular case. Section 24 does not prescribe any ground for ordering the transfer of a case. In certain cases it may be ordered suo motu and it may be done for administrative reasons. But when an application for transfer is made by a party, the court is required to issue notice to the other side and hear the party before directing transfer.[3326]

[s 24.18] "At any stage"

These words and the substitution of the word "pending" for "instituted" settle the doubt as to whether a suit could be transferred or withdrawn after the hearing had commenced. The High Courts of Bombay, Madras and Allahabad had held when the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 was in force that a suit could be transferred or withdrawn at any stage even after the hearing had commenced, and even in the course of execution proceedings.[3327] On the other hand, the Calcutta High Court held that there was no power to interfere after the hearing had commenced and no power to transfer an execution proceeding.[3328] The change in the language of the section was clearly intended to give effect to the former view. It has nevertheless been held by the High Court of Calcutta that an execution proceeding is not included in the words "suit or other proceedings"[3329] but the contrary has been laid down by the Allahabad,[3330] Madras,[3331]

3320. Bhola Nath v Maharajadhiraj of Burdwan, AIR 1932 Cal 265.
3321. B Sundara Gowda v Martin D'Souza, AIR 1989 Kant 207.
3322. Mst Zabida v Mohammad, AIR 1933 Lah 635.
3323. Devi Chand v Rikhab Chand, AIR 1957 Raj 255 : (1956) ILR Raj 209.
3324. Subbarayadu v Rangiah, (1961) 1 Andh WR 212.
3325. Kishore Kumar v Basudeo Prasad, AIR 1977 Pat 131; Korn Prok Atchaya v Bideshi Raghuram Singh, AIR 1995 AP 58.
3326. Jitendra Singh v Bhanu Kumari, AIR 2008 SC 2987 : (2009) 1 SCC 130 : (2008) 6 SCR 377.
3327. Re Balaji (1881) ILR 5 Bom 680; Nassarivanji v Kharsedji, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 778; Muttalagiri v Muttayyar, (1883) ILR 6 Mad 357; Palanisami Thondama, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 595; Bandhu v Lakhi, (1885) ILR 7 All 342.
3328. Kishori Mohun v Gul Mahomed, (1888) ILR 13 Cal 177.
3329. Ranjit Kumar v Gour Hari, AIR 1956 Cal 655.
3330. Md Habibullah v Tikaram Chand, AIR 1925 All 276 : (1925) ILR 47 All 57.
3331. Rajagopala v Tirupati, AIR 1926 Mad 421 : (1926) ILR 49 Mad 746.

and Patna[3332] High Courts. Where there is a transfer of execution case under section 24, the transferee court need not be the court which passed the decree or a court to which the decree was sent for execution under section 39. It need only have pecuniary jurisdiction to dispose of the case.[3333] Under section 24, the District Judge can transfer the case at any stage, and this is so, notwithstanding that there was defect in the initial presentation.[3334] In view of clause (b) of sub-section 3 now inserted in sub-section 3, the Calcutta High Court view that the words "other proceeding" do not include an execution proceeding is no longer correct. The high court in exercise of the power under Article 227 of the Constitution and section 24 of the CPC has the power to suo motu transfer the matter from one court to another.[3335]

[s 24.19] "Pending before it"

Under the corresponding section of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, it was held that a District Judge had no power to transfer to a subordinate court a suit pending before himself.[3336] Clause (a) of sub-section 1 confers this power on high courts and district courts.

[s 24.20] District Court

District court in this section means a court of unlimited pecuniary jurisdiction. An order of transfer under this section cannot, therefore, be made by an Assistant Judge whose pecuniary jurisdiction is limited.[3337] A first class Subordinate judge in charge of a court can make administrative orders distributing the work of his court among the judges attached to it; but when once a judge has taken cognizance of a suit it cannot be removed from his file. Such a removal amounts to a transfer of a suit which can only be ordered by a district court or by the high court.[3338] If, however, the suit is transferred by the first class subordinate judge, and allowed to be heard without objection, so that there is a waiver of the objection as to jurisdiction, the legality of the proceedings cannot be challenged in appeal.[3339]

In view of the express provision of Article 235, under Chapter VI of Part VI of the Constitution of India, it appears that control over subordinate judicial administration vests completely with the high court and it is exclusively for the high court to decide before whom jurisdiction will vest, if a regular District Judge goes on leave. In that view of the matter an application before high court under section 24 of the Code for transfer of proceeding on the ground of lack of jurisdiction/power of the District Judge, Andaman and Nicobar Islands to deal with civil cases in absence of regular District Judge, has no basis.[3340]

The power exercised by a district court in relation to transfer of suit, cannot be considered as an order passed on an interlocutory application. It is an independent right given to a particular court and tried as an independent proceeding. Such an order cannot be challenged in a writ petition under Article 227 of the Constitution. The remedy is to file a revision under section 115 of the Code.[3341]

3332. Dasarath Baijanath, AIR 1960 Pat 285.
3333. Hakim Mohammad Ali v Bhanwari Rai, AIR 1981 Raj 176.
3334. Vishwanath Gupta v Parbati Devi, AIR 1982 All 106.
3335. Silver Granites v Murugan, AIR 1995 Mad 217.
3336. Sakharam v Gangaram, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 654.
3337. Haji Umar v Gustadji, (1910) ILR 34 Bom 411.
3338. Shankarji v Vrajlal, AIR 1935 Bom 286 : (1935) ILR 59 Bom 466 : (1935) 37 Bom LR 255.
3339. Ajam Ibram v Hava Bibi, AIR 1939 Bom 485 : (1939) ILR Bom 472.
3340. Thomas G Rathina Raj v UOI, AIR 2008 Cal 250.
3341. Miss Saroja Bhatija vSanjaya B Makhija, 2007 (1) AIR Kar R 286.

A full bench of the Calcutta High Court has held that section 20 of the civil courts Act, 1977 makes it clear that if a decree or order of a District Judge is not appealable to the high court then no appeal would lie to the high court from a decree and/or order of additional District Judge which makes it abundantly clear that for the purpose of exercising judicial power, the Additional District Judge is equivalent and/or equated to a District Judge. However, the general administrative power rests with the District Judge in terms of section 9 of the Civil Courts Act, 1887 as also the general power and jurisdiction of withdrawal under section 24 of the CPC. If Additional District Judges were to be deemed subordinate to the district court for all purposes, it would not have been necessary to insert section 24(3) in the CPC.[3342]

[s 24.21] Clause (a): Court Subordinate To It

A decree for dissolution of marriage under the Indian Divorce Act 4 of 1869, made by the Divisional Judge of Nagpur was confirmed by the High Court of Bombay; but after the confirmation of the decree by the Bombay High Court, it was held that an application for alimony must be made to the court at Nagpur. The Bombay High Court could not entertain it, nor could it transfer the application to the Nagpur court, for that court was not subordinate to it.[3343] The high court in its appellate side cannot transfer a case from the mofusil to its original side, as the court sitting in the original side is not subordinate to it.[3344] The high court can, under sections 22–24 of the Code, transfer a case from one family court to another. Family courts are civil courts within the meaning of these sections.[3345] A senior subordinate judge in Punjab cannot transfer a case from his court to that of a junior subordinate judge, for the latter is not subordinate to him.[3346] The section does not appear to empower a court to withdraw to its file an interlocutory application in a suit or original proceeding pending in a subordinate court while the suit or original proceeding itself remains on the file of that court.[3347] An agency court constituted under the Andhra Pradesh Scheduled Districts Act and the rules thereunder is a court subordinate to the high court. The high court can therefore, transfer a suit pending in such agency court to a civil court; but on such transfer, the procedure to be followed would be that which would have been applicable had the suit been tried by an agency court.[3348]

Being an appellate authority over motor accident claims tribunals, the high court can transfer a case from one tribunal to another tribunal.[3349] The power of transfer under section 24 can be exercised, only in respect of proceedings pending in a subordinate court. Where the plaint has been returned under the orders of the trial court for presentation to the proper court and there is no suit or plaint pending in a subordinate court, the case cannot be transferred under section 24, because there is no case pending.[3350] Application was made for transfer of proceedings to motor accident claims tribunal at place "for convenience, since all the parties and eye-witnesses to the occurrence were residents of place B", it was held that motor accident claims tribunal being a civil court subordinate to high court for the purpose of section 24, the transfer application is maintainable. Such transfer of proceeding can be ordered under

---

3342. West Bengal Housing Infrastructure Development Corp v Impression, AIR 2016 Cal 236 : (2016) 4 ALR 435 (Cal).
3343. Wallace v Wallace, (1916) ILR 40 Bom 109.
3344. Malampati Kondayya v Official Receiver, Nellore, AIR 1951 Mad 676 : (1951) 1 Mad LJ 97.
3345. Munna Lal v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1991 All 189 (DB).
3346. Kishan Lal v Jai Lal, (1920) ILR 1 Lah 158.
3347. Malampati Kondayya v Official Receiver, Nellore, AIR 1951 Mad 676.
3348. J Sitaram Rao v State, AIR 1978 AP 82.
3349. Raju Das v Sushil Kumar Das, AIR 1991 Gau 71.
3350. Ramesh Chand Bhardwaja v Ram Prakash Sharma, AIR 1991 Del 280.

Article 227 of the Constitution also.[3351] There can be no legal impediment for transfer of the proceedings pending before the family court to any of the competent civil courts subordinate to the high court. In the absence of any special provisions contained in the Family Courts Act 66 of 1984, prohibiting the exercise of power of transfer by the high court under section 24 of the Code, when the other concerned civil courts available in other parts of the state where no family court had been established, are competent to try the subject matter of disputes to be fought in family court, it goes without saying that the powers of transfer as contemplated under section 24 of the Code can by no stretch of imagination is held to have been whittled or taken away by the provisions of section 8 of the Family Courts Act of 1984.[3352] Application was filed by the landlady for eviction of tenant before the authority under section 23A(b) of Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, 1961. Jurisdiction of the authority was challenged. Authority held that it had no jurisdiction and transferred the case to the civil court. The case was registered as a civil suit. The high court, in revision, set aside the order of authority and remitted the case to the authority for disposal. The civil court, instead of transferring, and remitted the case to the authority for disposal. Here, the landlady filed an application under section 24 and 151 of the CPC before the District Judge for transfer of the case to authority. The District Judge allowed the application as order of civil court was nullity. It was held that order of District Judge could not be interfered with under Article 227 of the Constitution, as it would perpetuate a wrong committed by a civil court.[3353]

[s 24.22] Clause (a): Suit

One view was that an execution proceeding is not included in the expression "suit or other proceeding".[3354] But the expression "Suit, appeal or other proceeding" in clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section 1 is of wide import and there is no reason why an execution proceeding should be excluded from such a comprehensive expression. Besides, an execution proceeding is a proceeding in a suit and would therefore, be included in the words "other proceeding".[3355] Clause (b) of the newly added sub-section 3 has now defined the word "proceeding" to include an execution proceeding.

[s 24.23] Clauses (a) and (b): "Other proceedings"

The word "other proceedings" used in section 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 denotes the proceedings held under the CPC or in any other civil proceedings in which provisions of section 24 of the CPC is applicable or in the situation where any Civil Act is silent in respect of the applicability of the CPC, but not in the matter in which specific provisions of the CPC only have been adopted in which section 24 is not included. The Uttar Pradesh Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act (22 of 1972) is a special law, while the CPC is a general law and it is well settled that the specific law would prevail over the general law.[3356]

3351. Kanniammal v P Narayanan, AIR 1989 Mad 350.
3352. KR Srinathi v H Ramakrishnan, AIR 1990 Mad 330.
3353. Gopaldas v District Judge, Indore, AIR 1990 MP 279 (DB).
3354. Ranjit Kumar v Gauri Hari, AIR 1956 Cal 655; Chandravathi v Payapattillath, AIR 1966 Ker 318 : (1966) ILR 2 Ker 74.
3355. Muhammad v Tikamchand, AIR 1925 All 276 : (1925) ILR 47 All 57; Kuruppiah v Ayya Nadar, AIR 1965 Mad 435 : (1964) ILR 1 Mad 782 : (1965) 1 Mad LJ 75; Rajgopala v Tirupati, AIR 1926 Mad 421 : (1926) ILR 49 Mad 746; Dasarath v Baijnath, AIR 1960 Pat 285.
3356. Ganga Ram Dohrey v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2002 All 238.

The language of section 24(3)(b) of the Code is clear and explicit and an application for the enforcement of award filed under section 36 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 would come under the category of "proceeding" under the section. Therefore, the District Judge would have power and jurisdiction to transfer application under section 36 of the Act from a court which had no jurisdiction to decide the case in the first instance to court of competent jurisdiction.[3357]

The words "other proceeding" include an insolvency petition,[3358] but not a proceeding under section 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.[3359] The Madras High Court has held that a district court has power under the clause to withdraw to its own file proceedings in execution transmitted by it to a subordinate court.[3360] Under this section, the high court can transfer suo motu proceedings under sections 184, 185, 195–96 of the Companies Act, 1913[3361] corresponding to sections 467, 468, 477–78 of the 1956 Act. It has been held by the Madras High Court that the term "civil proceedings" is not a technical expression and that it would include all matters which the courts have jurisdiction to decide under the Code and that accordingly, a dispute as to possession which is referred to the district munsif under section 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 is a proceeding which could be transferred under this section.[3362] It has also been held that where a suit or proceeding is transferred from court A to court B, all interlocutory proceedings in the suit should be taken in court B and not court A.[3363]

[s 24.24] Clauses (a) and (b): "Competent to try or dispose of the same"

Insertion of words "Competent to try or dispose of same" in the section indicate that the competence of court required is both pecuniary and territorial.[3364]

Where it appears that the suit has been instituted in the court which has both pecuniary jurisdiction as well as the territorial jurisdiction and there is nothing to indicate either in the pleading or in the petition as to how the interest of the defendants would be served best in transferring the same to Berhampur Court, there is no justification to set aside the impugned order passed by the learned District Judge, Berhampur in rejecting transfer of petition.[3365]

[s 24.25] Clause (b): Withdrawal of Suit

A bare perusal of section 24 leaves no manner of doubt that the high court had the requisite jurisdiction to suo motu withdraw a suit to its file and adjudicate itself all or any of the issues involved therein.[3366]

However, the high court, while deciding writ petition ordered transfer of suits and appeals involving similar issues to it. An application for recall of the order was filed. It was held by the Supreme Court that the dismissal of suits by the high court on the ground that issues

---

3357. Shahab Uddin alias Munnan v District Judge, Muzaffarnagar, (2009) 2 All LJ 275 : (2009) 74 All LR 12.
3358. Nassarvanji v Kharshedji, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 770.
3359. Rameshar v Rajdhari, AIR 1927 All 469 : (1927) ILR 49 All 460.
3360. Velliappa v Subrahmanyam, (1916) ILR 39 Mad 485.
3361. Peoples Insurance Co v Sardul Singh, AIR 1961 P&H 87 : (1960) ILR Punj 341.
3362. Kochadai v Nagayaswami, AIR 1961 Mad 247 : (1961) ILR Mad 413 : (1961) 1 Mad LJ 342; Ramchandra v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1966 SC 1888.
3363. Mineral Development Ltd v State of Bihar, AIR 1962 Pat 443; Sheo Brich v Basgit, AIR 1957 Pat 73 : (1956) ILR 35 Pat 639; but see Jeharudin v Haricharan, AIR 1914 Cal 815 : (1914) 18 Cal WN 479.
3364. Dinabandhu Patro v State Bank of India, AIR 2003 Ori 129.
3365. Dinabandhu Patro v State Bank of India, AIR 2003 Ori 129.
3366. Abdul Rahman v Prasony Bai, AIR 2003 SC 718 : (2003) 1 SCC 488.

raised in the suits were being examined in the writ petition, without passing any order on the application for recall, was not justified, as the procedure adopted by it was unknown to law.[3367] But where ends of justice demand, an order by the high court transferring a proceeding to itself cannot be faulted. Thus, in a case under the Recovery of Debts due to Bank and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, where the borrower had taken loan from Bank but lingered the case for 30 years on technical grounds, the Division Bench of Orissa High Court held the transfer of proceeding to high court itself as proper. While rejecting the plea of the borrower for transfer of the proceeding to civil court for execution instead of being dealt with by tribunal on ground of pecuniary jurisdiction, it was observed that the borrower gave no reason what difference it makes to him if the recovery is made by one forum or the other.[3368]

[s 24.26] Competent Court

The court to which a suit is transferred must possess pecuniary jurisdiction, but it is not necessary that it should have territorial jurisdiction.[3369] The Chief Court of Oudh has held that it is not necessary that the transferee court should have territorial jurisdiction, and that competence means intrinsic competence and refers to the subject matter of the case and its pecuniary value.[3370] A civil court is excluded from trying it by tenancy legislation.[3371] The expression "district court" in the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 includes the court of the Additional district judge under section 8(2) of the Bengal, Agra, Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887, and therefore, it is competent for the district court to transfer an application under section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, to the court of the Additional District Judge.[3372] If a suit pending in a small cause court is transferred to a subordinate judge's court, it must be within the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the subordinate judge. If the subordinate judge is invested with small cause court powers, it matters not that those powers fall short of the value of the suit. This has been decided by the Bombay High Court[3373] dissenting from a Madras decision which made the competency of the court depend upon its small cause court powers.[3374] The Calcutta High Court agrees with the view of the Bombay High Court.[3375] The Madras High Court has also held that a district court may transfer any proceeding from a court of small causes to a court not having adequate small cause powers to deal with it as a court of small causes.[3376] The high court can pass an order transferring the appeal to its own court and not necessarily to the district court which also has jurisdiction over the same, as the section only requires that the transfer should be only to a court which has jurisdiction.[3377] The District Judge cannot, under section 24, transfer an appeal to a court not competent to try it.[3378] Under section 24(1)(b) and (c) of the Code, the high court can transfer to itself.

3367. Abdul Gafur v State of Uttarakhand, AIR 2009 SC 413 : (2008) 10 SCC 97.
3368. Rama Kanta Mishra v United Commercial Bank, AIR 2009 Orissa 163 (DB).
3369. Kishore Lal v Balkishan, AIR 1932 All 660 : (1932) ILR 54 All 824; not following a contrary opinion expressed in Ram Das v Habibullah, AIR 1933 All 178 : (1932) ILR 53 All 916; U Maung v U Nyo, AIR 1940 Rang 133.
3370. Sita Ram v Balak Ram, AIR 1933 Oudh 154 : (1933) ILR 8 Luck 347; Chouthmul v Bhonrilal, AIR 1956 Raj 192; Vidyamba v Lakshmi Venkiamma, AIR 1958 AP 218 : (1958) ILR AP 54; MN Jain v Rajasthan Financial Corp, AIR 1974 Raj 204; Karupiah v Ayya Nadar, AIR 1965 Mad 435 : (1964) II LR 1 Mad 782.
3371. Adam Aslam Dadabhai v Hiralal C Thakore, AIR 1965 Guj 131 : (1965) 6 Guj LR 99.
3372. Ajit Kumar v Kananbala, AIR 1960 Cal 565 : (1960) 64 Cal WN 246.
3373. Parshotumdas v Bhagubhai, AIR 1932 Bom 486 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 387.
3374. Muruesa v Venkata, AIR 1929 Mad 513 : (1929) 56 Mad LJ 649.
3375. Barada Kant v Jitendra Nath, AIR 1939 Cal 345.
3376. Kamalathammal v Harihara, AIR 1941 Mad 103.
3377. Ayesha Bai v Daleep Singh, AIR 1971 Raj 186 : (1960) ILR Raj 1271.
3378. Paresh Nath Mondal v Bejan Behari Mondal, AIR 1982 Cal 285 (DB).

at Jabalpur, the suit filed by the Union of India relating to compensation for loss caused to numerous victims of the Bhopal gas leak disaster. Such jurisdiction exists under Article 227 of the Constitution also, if the conditions of that article are satisfied. However, on the facts, such transfer was not considered necessary.[3379] The competence of the transferee court must be judged as on the date of the transfer. Thus, where appeals are preferred to the high court and as a result of subsequent legislation, the district court became competent to hear the appeals, it was held that the high court could transfer the appeals to the district court.[3380]

ILLUSTRATION

A suit for Rs 900 is pending in the small cause court at Ahmedabad. Application is made to transfer it to the court of the second class sub-judge at Ahmedabad whose jurisdiction extends to Rs 5,000, but who is invested with small cause court powers upto Rs 300. The high court has power to make the transfer, for the suit is within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the second class sub-judge.[3381]

Again, the competency of the court is not affected by the circumstance that the small cause court has under section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887 preferential jurisdiction; and a suit may be transferred from a small cause court to the court of a subordinate judge having jurisdiction within the same local limits,[3382] or to the City Civil Court, Madras.[3383] It is not necessary that the transfer must be made to a court which has small cause court powers;[3384] but the high court has no power to transfer an insolvency petition made under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, and pending before a subordinate judge to the judge of the high court exercising insolvency jurisdiction.[3385]

A suit under section 92 cannot be transferred to a court not empowered under that section.[3386]

[s 24.27] Order of Transfer: When Takes Effect

It has been held by the Punjab High Court[3387] that an order withdrawing a suit from a court under this section, whether made on an application of the party or suo motu, takes effect from the time when it is made and that thereafter, the court before which the proceedings are pending, has no jurisdiction to try it, and that accordingly, any decree or order made by that court in that proceedings is a nullity, even though the order of withdrawal had not been communicated to it. This view is based on decisions which have held that an order of stay of execution passed by the appellate court takes away the jurisdiction of the court below to proceed with the execution from the very time the order is made;[3388] but, the preponderance of judicial opinion is in favour of the view that an order for stay operates only from the time when it is communicated[3389] and it is submitted that an order of withdrawal cannot be held to oust the jurisdiction of the court before which the cause is pending, until it is communicated.

3379. Union Carbide Corp v UOI, AIR 1988 MP 206.
3380. Sarju Dei v Rampati, AIR 1962 All 503; Bhanwar Lal v Motilal, AIR 1971 Raj 242.
3381. Parshotumdas v Bhagubhai, AIR 1932 Bom 486 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 387 : 139 IC 194.
3382. Chockalinga v Palaniappa, AIR 1932 Mad 683 : (1932) ILR 55 Mad 960.
3383. Abdul Khadi v Pancharyappa, AIR 1940 Mad 9 : (1940) ILR Mad 251.
3384. Khwaja Afzal v Mahmood Hussain, AIR 1943 Oudh 449; Kamalathammal v Harihara, AIR 1941 Mad 103 : (1940) 2 Mad LJ 700; Vidyarthi v Ram Pearey Lal, AIR 1935 All 690 : (1935) All LJ 511; Har Prasad v Kedarnath, AIR 1935 All 350.
3385. Goculdoss v Sadasivier, AIR 1928 Mad 1091 : (1929) ILR 52 Mad 57; Re Oomer Ahmad Bros, AIR 1927 Rang 107 : (1926) ILR 4 Rang 554.
3386. Dhoribhai v Pragdasji, AIR 1935 Bom 172 : (1935) ILR 59 Bom 412.
3387. Nathuram v Jagannath, AIR 1960 Punj 521; Din Dayal v UOI, AIR 1954 P&H 46.
3388. Karam Ali v Raja, AIR 1949 Lah 108; Hukum Chand v Kamalanand, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 927.
3389. See notes to O XLI, rule 5.

[s 24.28] Re-transfer

Clause (b)(iii) gives power to re-transfer a suit to the court from which it was withdrawn. There was no such power in the Code of 1882 and the cases in footnote[3390] are obsolete.

Under this clause, the court making an order for transfer or withdrawal may issue special directions. The directions contemplated are as to trial de novo or proceeding with the suit from the point on which it was transferred or withdrawn. An order for joint trial with another suit is not within this section.[3391] If a suit is transferred to a court not having jurisdiction, its re-transfer to the competent court can be ordered. The expression "competent" in section 24 (1)(b)(ii) implies territorial competence also.[3392]

[s 24.29] Sub-section (2): Applicability in Pending Proceeding

Section 24 can be applied in a pending proceeding. During pendency of a suit filed before a court having jurisdiction to entertain it, an application for amendment for claim seeking ouster of jurisdiction of that court was filed and the same was allowed. It was held that until and unless a specific order is passed under O VII, rule 10 is passed directing return of plaint, it must be held that the suit was pending before the court and, therefore, the power order is passed under section 24 could be exercised by the judge in the facts and circumstances of the case.[3393]

Directions for the substantive questions at issue between the parties cannot be issued as "special directions" under sub-section (2).[3394]

[s 24.30] Sub-section (4): Court of Small Causes

The High Courts of Allahabad,[3395] Madras,[3396] Patna[3397] and latterly, also the High Courts of Bombay[3398] and Calcutta,[3399] have agreed that the expression "Court of Small Causes" in sub-section (4) includes a court vested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes. The High Courts of Bombay,[3400] and Calcutta,[3401] at one time held that it was restricted to a court established under Act 9 of 1887, but those decisions are no longer law.

The provisions of sub-section (4) do not constitute the court to which the suit is transferred as a small cause court.[3402] It derives jurisdiction to try the suit as a small cause suit from section 24(4),[3403] and is deemed to be a small cause court for the purposes of the suit[3404] with the result that its procedure in the trial of the suit is governed by the provisions of Act 9 of 3390. Amir v Prahlad, (1902) ILR 24 All 204; Nandan v Kenney, (1902) ILR 24 All 356.

---

3391. Sheobirch v Basgit, AIR 1957 Pat 73.
3392. Syndicate Bank v K Gangadhar, AIR 1992 Kant 163.
3393. Vivekanand Nidhi v Ashima Goswami, AIR 1997 Cal 340.
3394. Anand Issardas v Virji Raisi, AIR 1984 Bom 39 (DB).
3395. Mangal v Rupchand, (1891) ILR 13 All 324; Sukha v Raghunath Das, (1917) ILR 39 All 214; Chaturi Singh v Musammat Rania, (1918) ILR 40 All 525; Megi Mal v Hira Lal, (1924) 22 All LJ 880 : AIR 1924 All 761; Anand Issardas v Virji Raisi, AIR 1984 Bom 39 (DB).
3396. Sankararama v Padmanabha, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 25.
3397. D Bhagawan Das v Keshwar Lal, AIR 1923 Pat 49 : (1922) ILR 1 Pat 696.
3398. Narayan v Bhagubina, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 314 (FB).
3399. Badal Chandra v Srikrishna, AIR 1929 Cal 354 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 588; Madhusudan v Behari Lal, (1918) 27 Cal LJ 461.
3400. Ramchandra v Ganesh, (1899) ILR 23 Bom 382.
3401. Dulal v Ram Narain, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 1057.
3402. Krishna v Bhau Mansaram, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 61.
3403. Parshotumdas v Bhagubhai, AIR 1932 Bom 486 : (1932) ILR 56 Bom 387.
3404. Sankararama v Padmanabha, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 25.

1887,[3405] and no appeal lies if there is no appeal under that Act.[3406] The procedure will be that of a small cause court even though the District Judge transferring the suit directs it to be tried as a regular suit, for he has no jurisdiction to give such a direction.[3407] The decree will not operate as res judicata in a suit which the small cause court had no jurisdiction to entertain.[3408] The same principles apply where on the retirement or transfer of a subordinate judge having small cause court powers, the suit is transferred by order of the District Judge to another judge not invested with small cause court jurisdiction, and no appeal will lie from a decree passed by the latter judge;[3409] but, if no order of transfer is made, and if on the transfer of a munsif vested with small cause court powers, his successor, who is not so invested, takes cognizance of the suit under section 35 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887 and tries it as a regular suit, an appeal will lie.[3410]

In a recent decision, the Madras High Court, relying on a Full Bench decision of Allahabad High Court in Bhagwati Pande's case (supra), held that an ejectment suit which is exclusively triable by Court of Small Causes can be transferred to civil court for trial along with original suit for damages for use and occupation.[3411] It was observed as follows:

> 17. The statutory provision as contained in Section 24(4) was inserted only to lide over the difficulties which would arise on the point of jurisdiction in as much as the constitution of the Small Cause Court was made only as per the provisions of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882. However, the civil courts are established as per the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. Therefore, it is very clear that in the event of transfer of civil suit from the Court of Small Causes to a civil court, the Transferee Court shall be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes for the purpose of such suit.[3412]

[s 24.31] Sub-section (5)

The court to which application is made under section 24 for transfer, is not bound to grant the application. Hence, where the application is made for transfer of a suit pending in an incompetent court, the court empowered to transfer under section 24 can direct that the applicant (plaintiff) can apply to the trial court for withdrawal of the suit, with permission to file fresh suit in the competent court.[3413] Where the suit initially instituted in a court having no territorial jurisdiction is transferred by the District Judge to a court having such jurisdiction, the decree passed in the suit cannot be challenged for want of initial competence.[3414]

[s 24.32] Decree by Transferee Court

The decree drawn by transferee-court should always disclose original court in which suit was instituted, date of presentation of plaint to be mentioned in the decree is the date on

---

3405. Chhotey Lal v Lakshmi Chand, (1916) ILR 38 All 425; Ugrah Singh v Motihari Co Ltd, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 13.
3406. Sukha v Raghunath Das, (1917) ILR 39 All 214; Vidyamba v Lakshmi Venkiamma, AIR 1958 AP 218.
3407. Sankarama v Padmanabha, (1915) ILR 38 Mad 25.
3408. Dulare Lal v Hazari Lal, (1914) 12 All LJ 853.
3409. Kamalathammal v Harihara, AIR 1941 Mad 103; Kaulesher v Dast Muhammad, (1883) 5 All 274; Ramcharan v Kishore Lal, AIR 1929 All 50 : (1928) ILR 50 All 810; Anant Prasad v Chunnu Tewari, AIR 1939 All 452.
3410. Bhagwati v Badri, AIR 1931 All 574 : (1922) ILR 54 All 171 (FB); Bisheshar Pande v Tirloki Pande, AIR 1937 Oudh 398 : (1937) ILR 13 Luck 269.
3411. M Alwar v Hindustan Petroleum Corp Ltd, AIR 2010 Mad 47.
3412. M Alwar v Hindustan Petroleum Corp Ltd, AIR 2010 Mad 47, p 49.
3413. Shakuntala Devi v Amir Hasan, AIR 1986 All 234.
3414. Jagdish v Premlala Rai, AIR 1990 Raj 87.

which suit was instituted in the original court, and not the date on which it was received by transferee-court.[3415]

[s 24.33] Revision

Where the petition to the District Judge for transfer of suit pending in the trial court is dismissed the order rejecting petition is revisable and the proviso to section 115 is not attracted. Petition filed before District Judge under section 24, for transfer of the suit pending in trial court, is a proceeding independent of the suit. It cannot be said that the order rejecting the petition passed by the learned district judge under section 24 of the CPC is an order passed in a pending proceedings in a suit, though the prayer in the application under section 24 is for transferring the pending suit to some other court which has jurisdiction. The order cannot be characterised as an order passed in the pending suit itself. If this is so, the proviso to section 115 of the CPC is not attracted and as such it cannot be said that unless the order is shown to have caused irreparable injury or has occasional failure of justice, it is not revisable.[3416]

The interference with the order can only be if the revisional court finds that the subordinate court has exercised jurisdiction not vested in it by law or to have failed to exercise its jurisdiction or to have acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. It is only if the order impugned falls into any one or the other of these, it is amenable to the revisional jurisdiction of the high court under section 115 of the CPC.[3417]

While it is an accepted judicial norm that the judges of the higher judiciary have the choice to hear a matter in the sense that the judge himself can recuse from the case and direct the matter to be posted before any other judge/s if the learned judge has the feeling that one of the parties to the proceeding may have a reasonable apprehension of bias if the proceedings should go on before the particular judge. But, insofar as the proceedings before the trial courts are concerned, it is strictly determined as per the provisions of the CPC, particularly having regard to the provisions of sections 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20. In the scheme of the CPC the judges of the subordinate judiciary, do not have the power to recuse themselves from the suit or proceeding pending before the court over which they preside.[3418]

[s 24.34] Appeal

An order transferring a case under this section is not appealable.[3419]

[3420][S 25] Power of Supreme Court to transfer suits, etc.—(1) On the application of a party, and after notice to the parties, and after hearing such of them as desire to be heard, the Supreme Court may, at any stage, if satisfied that an order under this section is expedient for the ends of justice, direct that any suit, appeal or other proceeding be transferred from a High Court or other Civil Court in one State to a High Court or other Civil Court in any other State.

3415. M Krishna Rao v ML Narasikha Rao, AIR 2003 AP 498 (DB).
3416. MV Ganesh v ML Vasudevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.
3417. MV Ganesh v ML Vasudevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.
3418. MV Ganesh v ML Vasudevamurthy, AIR 2003 Kant 39.
3419. Khuntilal v Narain Das, AIR 1935 All 750; Dayabhai v Murgappa, AIR 1935 Rang 267 (FB) : (1935) 13 Rang 475. For transfer of suit from a Presidency Small Cause Court to high court, see notes to clause 13 of the Letters Patent and for powers of court to stay a suit pending before it, see notes to section 22 under the same head. For power of high court to stay suit pending in another court, see notes to O XXXIX, rule 1.
3420. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 11, for section 25 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

(2) Every application under this section shall be made by a motion which shall be supported by an affidavit.

(3) The Court to which such suit, appeal or other proceeding is transferred shall, subject to any special directions in the order of transfer, either re-try it or proceed from the stage at which it was transferred to it.

(4) In dismissing any application under this section, the Supreme Court may, if it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious, order the applicant to pay by way of compensation to any person who has opposed the application such sum, not exceeding two thousand rupees, as it considers appropriate in the circumstances of the case.

(5) The law applicable to any suit, appeal or other proceeding transferred under this section shall be the law which the Court in which the suit, appeal or other proceeding was originally instituted ought to have applied to such suit, appeal or proceeding.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 25.1]	Scope	569	[s 25.9]	Effect of rejection of earlier transfer application in other matter	577
[s 25.2]	Paramount Consideration	570	[s 25.10]	Sections 24, 25 and Letter Patent clause (13) Court	577
[s 25.3]	Withdrawal Before itself to Decide	572	[s 25.11]	Sections 10 and 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908	577
[s 25.4]	Family Matters	572	[s 25.12]	Return of Plaint Distinct from Transfer of Suit	577
[s 25.5]	Transfer of Civil Case from One State to Another	574	[s 25.13]	Effect of Allowing of Earlier Transfer Application in Other Matter	577
[s 25.6]	Minimising Hardship	575	[s 25.14]	Transfer of Subsequent Suit to the Court dealing with Earlier Suit	578
[s 25.7]	Transfer Application Allowed Instances	575
[s 25.8]	Transfer Application Disallowed Instances	576

[s 25.1] Scope

Under the section before its amendment, by Act (104 of 1976) it was the state government which had the power to transfer cases from one high court to another upon a report made by a judge of the high court that there were reasonable objections to its being heard by him. Such transfer could be effected by a notification in the Official Gazette. The section as it stood before its amendment was on the analogy of section 52 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. The new section is wider in scope than the unamended section.

The changes affected by the amendment:

(i) the power of transfer is conferred on the Supreme Court;

(ii) the power is wider in that, whereas under the unamended section the state government could transfer only a suit, appeal or other proceeding pending before a single judge of a high court, the Supreme Court can now transfer a suit, appeal or other proceeding pending not only before a single judge but also before a division bench of a high court or other civil court in any other state.

The application has to be made by a motion supported by an affidavit. If the Supreme Court finds that the application was frivolous or vexatious, it would naturally dismiss it and in doing so, can award as compensation to the opposing party a sum not exceeding rupees two thousand. Sub-section 5 is the same as sub-section 2 of the section before its amendment.

What is expedient for the ends of justice will have to be judged upon the totality of facts and circumstances in a given case.[3421]

The Supreme Court[3422] has held that in matrimonial or custody matters or in proceedings between parties to a marriage or arising out of disputes between parties to a marriage, wherever the defendants/respondents are located outside the jurisdiction of the court, the court where proceedings are instituted, may examine whether it is in the interest of justice to incorporate any safeguards for ensuring that the summoning of the defendant/respondent does not result in denial of justice. Order incorporating such safeguards may be sent along with the summons. The safeguards can be:

(i) Availability of video conferencing facility.

(ii) Availability of legal aid service.

(iii) Deposit of cost for travel, lodging and boarding in terms of O XXV of the CPC.

(iv) E-mail address/phone number, if any, at which litigant from out station may communicate.

In the case, both the parties have filed transfer petition in order to transfer the matrimonial disputes. The husband opposes the transfer petition filed by the wife under section 21A of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. The transfer petition of wife is subsequent to that of husband. The Hon'ble Supreme Court held that the case does not fall under the section 21A of the HMA, 1955 and furthermore, section 21A does not divest this court of the power available under section 25(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The only test prescribed in section 25(1) of the CPC for the exercise of the power of transfer by this court is "expediency for the ends of justice".[3423]

[s 25.2] Paramount Consideration

The paramount consideration for the exercise of power of transfer must be to meet the ends of justice. It is true that if more than one court has jurisdiction under the CPC to try the suit, the plaintiff, as dominus litis, has a right to choose the court and the defendant cannot demand that the suit be tried in any particular court which is convenient to him. The mere convenience of the parties or of any one of them may not be enough for ordering transfer. It must also be shown that trial in the chosen forum will result in the denial of justice. A party seeking justice may choose a forum most inconvenient to the adversary, with a view to depriving the adversary of a fair trial. The Parliament has, therefore, invested the Supreme Court with discretion to transfer the case from one court to another, to meet the ends of justice. Words of wide amplitude ("for the ends of justice") have been advisedly used, to leave the matter to the discretion of the Apex Court, as it is not possible to conceive all situations requiring or justifying the exercise of power; but, justice according to law, should be done. If, for achieving that objective, the transfer of the case is imperative, there should be no hesitation to transfer the case, even if it may cause some inconvenience to the plaintiff.[3424]

A Division Bench of the Delhi High Court has held that section 24 of the Code refers to the general power of transfer and withdrawal of proceedings, but the principle behind section 23 and section 24 is that the power would lie to the superior court having jurisdiction

---

3421. Arvee Industries v Ratanlal, AIR 1977 SC 2429 : (1977) 4 SCC 363.
3422. Nigam Krishna Veni v Harish Nigam, LNINDORD 2014 SC 4794.
3423. Shruti Kaushal Bisht v Kaushal R Bisht, (2021) 1 Mad LJ 200 : LNINDORD 2020 SC 23.
3424. Subramanian Swamy v Rama, AIR 1990 SC 113 : (1990) 1 SCC 4 : (1989) 1 SCR 469.

in the matter. The power under section 25 conferred on the Supreme Court is much wider.[3425] Dwelling on the doctrine of forum non-conveniens, it was observed by the Division Bench as follows:

> The principle of forum non convenience does not apply to civil suits in India which are governed by the said Code, there being no provision under the Code for the same and recourse to Section 151, CPC is not permissible for the application of the principle of forum non conveniens to domestic forums especially keeping in mind that it is the other side of the coin of the doctrine of anti suit injunction. An aggrieved party can, however, approach the Supreme Court under Section 25 of the said Code.[3426]

Explaining the doctrine of forum non-convenience the Division Bench observed that the doctrine of forum non convenience which originated in Scotland and thereafter brought to England. United States of America simply put means that if legal proceedings are initiated in a particular forum and that forum is of the opinion that there is a more convenient forum where such lis should be tried, it desists from trying the particular lis.

According to Dicey and Morris, the doctrine of forum non convenience, i.e. that some other forum is more appropriate in the sense of more suitable for the ends of justice, was developed by Scottish Courts in the nineteenth century, and was adopted (with some modifications) in the United States. The Scots rule is that the court may decline jurisdiction, after giving consideration to the interests of the parties and the requirements of justice, on the ground that the case cannot be suitably tried in the Scottish Court nor full justice be done there, but only in another court.[3427]

An offshoot of the above doctrine is the practice of granting anti-suit injunction. In the Spiliada Maritime case,[3428] the House of Lords has held:

> The basic principle is that a stay will only be granted on the ground of forum non convenience where the court is satisfied that there is some other available forum, having competent jurisdiction, which is the appropriate forum for the trial of the action....

However, the Division Bench of the Delhi High Court in Horlick's case (supra) held that the doctrine of anti-suit injunction though may be applicable both in foreign forums and domestic forums in different countries, it has no place in India regarding another domestic forum in view of the specific bar created by section 41(b) of the Specific Relief Act, 1963. But Indian Courts can apply the principle vis-a-vis foreign forums or while exercising discretionary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution.

The Supreme Court in Modi Entertainment Network v WSG Cricket Pvt Ltd[3429] observed:

> 9. The Courts in India like the Courts in England are Courts of both law and equity. The principles governing grant of injunction—an equitable relief—by a Court will also govern grant of anti-suit injunction which is but a species of injunction. When Court restrains a party to a suit/proceeding before it from instituting or prosecuting a case in another Court including a foreign Court, it is called anti-suit injunction. It is a common ground that the Courts in India have power to issue anti-suit injunction to a party over whom it has personal jurisdiction, in an appropriate case. This is because courts of equity exercise jurisdiction in personam. However, having regard to the rule of comity, this power

---

3425. Horlicks Ltd v Heinz India (Pvt) Ltd, 164 (2009) DLT 539 (DB).
3426. Horlicks Ltd v Heinz India (Pvt) Ltd, (2009) 164 DLT 539 (DB), p 595, (Sanjay Kishan Kaul J speaking for the Bench).
3427. Dicey and Morris, Conflict of Laws, 12th Edn, 1993, Third Impression, p 398.
3428. Spiliada Maritime Corp v Cansulex Ltd, [1987] AC 460.
3429. Modi Entertainment Network v WSG Cricket Pvt Ltd, AIR 2003 SC 1177 (Quadri J speaking for the Bench).

will be exercised sparingly because such an injunction though directed against a person, in effect causes interference in the exercise of jurisdiction by another court.

[s 25.3] Withdrawal Before itself to Decide

The Supreme Court, finding no hope to unite the parties, withdrew the petition to itself and granted a decree of divorce by mutual consent.[3430] When the transfer petition came up for hearing before the Supreme Court, the parties desired to settle the dispute outside the court and filed a Memorandum of Agreement before the Supreme Court. In view of the settlement arrived at between the parties, the Supreme Court considered it necessary to transfer the Hindu Marriage Act case to itself in the light of the agreement filed by the parties.[3431]

[s 25.4] Family Matters

Power to transfer a case under section 25 of the CPC is not excluded by sections 21–21A of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.[3432] Since family matters are sensitive in character and the judges of the family courts have to play a greater participatory role, that objective can only be achieved if a rapport is established by the judges of such courts with the parties concerned; hence, keeping in view the unfounded allegations of the petitioner, the Supreme Court declined to transfer the matter, however, leaving it to the judge concerned whether he would prefer to keep hearing the matter or recommend a transfer to another family court within the same jurisdiction.[3433] Having regard to the agreement between the parties seeking dissolution of marriage by mutual consent, the Hon'ble Supreme Court ordered transfer of the petition from the Court of District Judge, Bokaro to the District Judge, Delhi.[3434] Considering the fact that the husband is a high-ranking railway officer, who would be entitled to travel facility, in the opinion of the Supreme Court in the backdrop of events that have taken place, it would be expedient in the interest of justice to transfer the proceedings from one court to another for disposal in accordance with law.[3435] In the absence of any objection from the respondent, the petition under section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 was transferred to Delhi, where a petition under section 125 of the CrPC is pending.[3436] Considering the fact that a child out of the marriage aged about two and a half years was with the wife at Varanasi; and, since, the child could not be left alone at Varanasi, the petition was transferred from the Court of District Judge, Delhi to the Family Court, Varanasi.[3437] Though, the reasons given by the appellant for transfer of the case from the Family Court, Pune, to the Family Court, Delhi and the apprehension entertained by the appellant were totally unjustified, since the principal judge, Family Court, Pune, had taken the grievances made by the appellant before the court rather seriously and had commented adversely about the same, with a view to do complete justice between the parties, the case was directed to be transferred from the file of the Principal Judge, Family Court, Pune, to the Principal Judge, Family Court, Delhi.[3438]

3430. Anita Sabharwal v Anil Sabharwal, (1997) 11 SCC 490.
3431. Shashi Garg v Arun Garg, (1997) 7 SCC 565.
3432. G Vijayalakshmi v G Ramchandra, AIR 1981 SC 1143 : (1981) 2 SCC 646 : (1981) SCR 3 223.
3433. Shehnaz Mudbhatkal v Arvind Ramakrishna, (1998) 5 SCC 596.
3434. Seema Srinidhi v Praveen Kumar Tiwari, (1997) 8 SCC 712.
3435. Anita Laxmi Narian Singh v Laxmi Narian Singh, (1992) 2 SCC 562.
3436. Savitri v Harichand, (1998) 3 SCC 71.
3437. Jaishree Banerjee v Abhirup Banerjee, (1997) 11 SCC 107.
3438. Payal Ashok Kumar Jindal v Capt Ashok Kumar Jindal, (1992) 3 SCC 116.

Where the Supreme Court was petitioned for transfer from Gurgaon to Delhi, the court allowed it on an undertaking that the respondent father will follow the visitation rights for the child.[3439]

In a case where the marriage of a Hindu couple was performed in Goa, it was held that as the provisions of Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 would be applicable the proceedings for the annulment of the said marriage can be heard outside Goa and a petition for transfer the proceeding out of Goa is maintainable.[3440] Altamas Kabir J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench, explained the applicability of Hindu Marriage Act in the following words:

> 13. As far as the Civil Code as enacted on 25th December, 1910, and the provisions of the law of marriage as a Civil Contract in Goa, Daman and Diu which come into force on 26th May, 1911, are concerned, we are unable to agree with Ms. Aggarwal that all marriages performed within the territory of Goa unless registered should be void. The said provision was altered by the decree of 22nd January, 1946, which restored the validity of both Catholic marriages and Hindu marriages. Two Hindus, therefore, can contract a marriage according to Hindu Religious rites or by way of a civil marriage. Section 2 of the Hindu Marriage Act extends the operation of the Act to the whole of India except Jammu and Kashmir and also applies to Hindus domiciled in the territories to which the Act extends who are outside the said territories. In other words, the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, would be applicable to the petitioner's case and can be heard by any Court having jurisdiction within the territories to which it applies.[3441]

The Supreme Court further went on to hold as follows:

> 14. We are not convinced with the submissions made by Ms. Aggarwal that the annulment proceedings cannot be heard outside the State of Goa in view of the existing laws which made the Civil Code and the laws relating to marriage applicable to all persons residing within the State of Goa. In addition to the above, Sections 5 and 6 of the Goa, Daman & Diu (Administration) Act, 1962, indicate that the Central Government has authority to extend enactments applicable to the rest of the country. In other words, even if it were to be held that it is the customary law in Goa which would prevail over the personal law of the parties, the same could not be a bar to the transfer of the matter outside the State of Goa to any other State.[3442]

In a particular case the wife alleged that she was kidnapped and her signature was forcibly taken before the marriage registrar to show that she had married the respondent. She further alleged that she managed to run away from the custody of the respondent and apprehended threat of bodily injury/death if she were to visit the place of marriage. She alleged paucity of funds to engage a counsel at the place where the suit was pending. The allegations were not refuted by the respondent, so the court transferred the suit from the Court of Family Judge in West Bengal to the Court of Family Judge in the State of Bihar.[3443]

A suit for an injunction was pending in a court at Delhi, and was sought to be transferred to City Civil Court, Mumbai. The suit was in respect of a flat gifted by the father of the petitioner wife, alleged to have been filed by respondent husband with a view to harass the petitioner due to matrimonial disputes between parties, pending before the Mumbai Courts. The petitioner was finding it very difficult to cope with the harassment of respondent husband and to contest the case initiated by him at Delhi, in the atmosphere of fear, the petitioner wife had to leave the abovementioned apartment at Delhi and go to her parents at Mumbai. Considering all

---

3439. Akta Juneja v Sanjeev Kumar Juneja, (2016) 15 SCC 523.
3440. Vinisha Jitesh Tolani v Jitesh Kishore Tolani, AIR 2010 SC 1915 : (2010) 5 SCC 748.
3441. Vinisha Jitesh Tolani v Jitesh Kishore Tolani, AIR 2010 SC 1915, pp 1918–19.
3442. Vinisha Jitesh Tolani v Jitesh Kishore Tolani, AIR 2010 SC 1915, p 1919.
3443. Priyanka Biswas v Subrato Biswas, AIR 2005 SC 3119 : (2005) 13 SCC 436 : JT 2005 (6) 380 : 2005 (5) Scale 600.

the facts and circumstances, to serve the ends of justice better, the suit pending in the court at Delhi was directed to be transferred to the City Civil Court, Mumbai.[3444]

[s 25.5] Transfer of Civil Case from One State to Another

Considerations for the transfer of a civil case from one State to another by the Supreme Court are dealt with in the cases below.[3445]

On the question of transfer of civil cases from one State to another, see also note 4 to section 23 (ante.).

In Durgesh Sharma's case,[3446] the Supreme Court held that even when section 25 of the Code in its present form was substituted by the Amendment Act of 1976, sub-section (3) of section 23 of the Code has neither been deleted nor amended. It was observed that interpreting section 23 in the manner suggested by the learned counsel would result in allowing inroad and encroachment on the powers of the Supreme Court. It further held that section 23 must be read subject to section25 and even if the high court had the power to transfer a case from one State to another State, that must be taken to have been withdrawn from 1 January 1977 when the Amendment Act of 1976 came into force.

In Bank of Sharjah v Joplin Overseas Investment Pvt Ltd, the Supreme Court was seized of a transfer petition seeking the transfer of admiralty suit pending before the Gujarat High Court to the Bombay High Court, another transfer petition seeking transfer of a separate admiralty suit from Bombay High Court to Gujarat High Court and two SLPs filed by the owner of the vessel. It was held that though in the normal course, the Gujarat High Court should have been the appropriate high court to hear all the suits in view of the fact that the vessel had always been positioned in the territorial waters of India abutting the State of Gujarat and within the area of a port over which the Gujarat High Court had territorial jurisdiction, but there were various orders of arrest passed by the Bombay High Court prior to the filing of admiralty suit in the Gujarat High Court and in view of the fact that petitioner had filed a caveat before the Bombay High Court and took advantage of the orders of arrest passed by the Bombay High Court without raising any objection to the jurisdiction of the Bombay High Court, and in view of the fact that the conduct of petitioner before the Bombay High Court was found to be less than wholesome, all the admiralty suits pending in the Gujarat High Court with regard to the vessel in question were transferred to the Bombay High Court. [3447]

Sometimes it so happens that due to error of the Draftsman some provision in an enactment. which ought to have been deleted, are not deleted, as was the case with section 23(3) of the Code or some provision, which should have been incorporated in the repealing enactment are not provided for specifically. Such omissions cast added responsibility on Courts to interpret the law and find out the true intention of the legislature and remove the absurdity. It would be pertinent to make a reference to the observations of Lord Denning, LJ which was quoted with approval by a five-Judge Bench of the Supreme Court in M Pentiah's case.[3448] Denning LJ said:

3444. Reena Mehra v Rohit Rai Mehra, AIR 2003 SC 1002 : (2003) 2 SCC 291 : (2003) 1 Scale 433.
3445. Beni Shankar Sharma v Suryakant Sharma, AIR 1982 SC 52 : (1981) 3 SCC 627; Indian Overseas Bank v Chemical Const Co, AIR 1979 SC 1514 : (1979) 3 SCR 3 920; G Vijayalakshmi v GR Sekhra Sastry, AIR 1981 SC 143.
3446. Durgesh Sharma v Jayshree, AIR 2009 SC 285 : (2008) 9 SCC 648.
3447. Bank of Sharjah v Joplin Overseas Investment Pvt Ltd, (2015) 11 SCC 486 : (2015) 2 Scale 672.
3448. M Pentiah v Muddala Veeramallappa, AIR 1961 SC 1107 : (1961) 2 SCR 295 at p 314.

> When a defect appears a judge cannot simply fold his hands and blame the draftsman. He must set to work on the constructive task of finding the intention of Parliament..... and then he must supplement the written word so as to give 'force of life' to the intention of the legislature.....A judge should ask himself the question how, if the makers of the Act had themselves come across this ruck in the texture of it, they would have straightened it out? He must then do as they would have done. A judge must not alter the material of which the Act is woven, but he can and should iron out the creases.[3449]

In M Pentiah's case the Supreme Court also quoted with approval a passage from Maxwell, wherein it has been stated as follows:

> Where the language of a statute, in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction, leads to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, or to some inconvenience or absurdity, hardship or injustice presumably not intended, a construction may be put upon it which modifies the meaning of the words, and even the structure of the sentence.....Where the main object and intention of a statute are clear, it must not be reduced to a nullity by the draftsman's unskilfulness or ignorance of the law, except in a case of necessity, or the absolute intractability of the language used. Nevertheless, the courts are very reluctant to substitute words in a statute, or to add words to it, and it has been said that they will only do so where there is a repugnancy to good sense.[3450]

[s 25.6] Minimising Hardship

A suit was transferred from the file of the Subordinate Judge, Patna by an earlier order of the Supreme Court, to be tried along with another suit pending with the original side of the Bombay High Court. The suit pending on the original side of the Bombay High Court was subsequently decreed while the appeal against it was pending. The petitioners prayed for the transfer of the suit back to Patna on the ground that the order of the joint trial had outlived its purpose. The Supreme Court, giving regard to the facts and circumstances of the case, instead of re-transferring the suit to Patna, directed that the original side of the Bombay High Court should frame necessary issues in this suit within six weeks and try the suit on day to day basis from the date of framing of issues. The shares were forfeited by the appellant company, consequent to which proceedings were filed in a different state and within the state in different courts. The appellant company prayed for transfer of case to one single court. The Supreme Court, instead of transferring all these cases to one single court which would inter alia, cause hardship and unavoidable expenses to the respondent, observed that the petitioners move the respective high court to have the cases transferred for disposal within their respective jurisdictions so that the hardship to both the sides is minimised.[3451]

The Supreme Court has held that in a case seeking transfer, the "coparitive hardship" was more to the wife in the facts and circumstances of the case and therefore allowed the transfer petition[3452]. The convenience of the wife has to be looked in cases related to transfer of matrimonial proceedings.[3453]

[s 25.7] Transfer Application Allowed Instances

The reason for seeking transfer of the suit is that the first petitioner who was the Karta of the joint family of the petitioners was about 75 years old. The petitioners had no place to stay

---

3449. Seaford Court Estates Ltd v Asher, (1949) 2 All ER 155 (CA).
3450. Maxwell, Interpretation of Statutes, 10th Edn p 229.
3451. Vatsa Industries Ltd, Bombay v Shanker Lal Shroff, (1997) 10 SCC 333.
3452. Vaishali Shridhar Jagtap v Shridhar Vishwanath Jagtap, (2016) 14 SCC 356.
3453. Aarti Rana v Gaurav Rana, 2019 (Suppl) Sim LC 313.

in Guwahati and it would have been impossible for the petitioners who were all residents of Calcutta to defend the suit if it was tried in Guwahati. Considering the facts and circumstances of the case, the Supreme Court considered it expedient for the ends of justice to have the suit tried at Calcutta.[3454]

Since, the earlier suit was filed in Kanpur, the registered office of the company was also at Kanpur, and the income-tax return was also filed at Kanpur, it went without saying that the suit otherwise deserves to be decided by one and the same court, hence, the suit at Calcutta was ordered to be transferred to Kanpur.[3455]

Though, the reasons given by the appellant for transfer of the case from the Family Court, Pune, to the Family Court, Delhi and the apprehension entertained by the appellant were totally unjustified, since the Principal Judge, Family Court, Pune, had taken the grievances made by the appellant before the court rather seriously and had commented adversely about the same, with a view to do complete justice between the parties, the case was directed to be transferred from the file of the Principal Judge, Family Court, Pune, to the Principal Judge Family Court, Delhi.[3456]

A very interesting case relating to transfer of suits from one State to the other came up before a three-Judge Bench of the Supreme Court. Two Original Applications were pending before the Debt Recovery Tribunal, Hyderabad, one filed by a company Vinedale Distilleries Ltd and the other filed by Dena Bank. In 2006, the Supreme Court, while allowing transfer petition and transferring various suits pending between the parties before the civil court in Andhra Pradesh to the Delhi High Court, passed the following order:

> In order to avoid any future confusion, on consent of parties, any suit which may be filed in future touching upon the control and management of the Company in question, should be filed before the Hon'ble Delhi High Court, which will decide the matters.[3457]

In the matter of the two Original Applications pending between the parties before Debt Recovery Tribunal, Hyderabad, the Supreme Court, taking note of its earlier order in 2006, observed that though suits and the present proceedings before the tribunal are different, considering the intent and purport of its earlier order, the proceedings before the Debt Recovery Tribunal, Hyderabad be transferred to Debt Recovery Tribunal at Delhi.[3458]

[s 25.8] Transfer Application Disallowed Instances

No party is entitled to get a case transferred from one bench to another, unless the bench is biased or there are some reasonable grounds for the same. No right to get a case transferred to any other bench can legitimately be claimed, merely because the judge expresses opinion on the merits of the case on the conclusion of hearing. On the conclusion of the oral hearing, the Supreme Court expressed its opinion in the open court, that it was inclined to allow the appeal and set aside the order of the high court and dismiss the writ petition. However, taking a sympathetic view, it requested the counsel appearing for the party to obtain certain instructions; but such opportunity granted to the party was misused by the party by raising mischievous and frivolous objections for the transfer of the case from one bench to another, instead of filing written submissions. The prayer for transfer was rejected by the Supreme

---

3454. Beni Shanker Sharma v Surayakant Sharma, (1981) 3 SCC 627.
3455. Murray & Co Pvt Ltd v Madan Lal Poddar, (1994) Supp 3SCC 696.
3456. Payal Ashok Kumar Jindal v Capt Ashok Kumar Jindal, (1992) 3 SCC 116.
3457. Vinedale Distilleries Ltd v Dena Bank, AIR 2010 SC 695 : (2010) 3 SCC 466.
3458. Vinedale Distilleries Ltd v Dena Bank, AIR 2010 SC 695 : (2010) 3 SCC 466.

Court in the circumstances. It was more so, since oral hearing had already been completed, and, despite several adjournments, the party had failed to appear before the court or to file the written submission.[3459]

A petition was filed seeking transfer of writ appeal filed in the Telegana High Court pertains to land acquisition proceedings to the Hon'ble Delhi High Court. The Hon'ble Supreme Court dismisses the transfer petition that delay in disposal of the case cannot be considered as a sole ground to transfer the case as every court has its own limitations.[3460]

Where the petitioner was employed in a transferable job, the Supreme Court declined the transfer of the case as it may lead to fresh applications for transfer.[3461]

In view of the respondent undertaking to meet the travel expenses of the petitioner, it was held by the Supreme Court that there was no justification in transferring the case from Sultanpur to Valsad.[3462]

[s 25.9] Effect of rejection of earlier transfer application in other matter

On an earlier occasion, the respondent made an application for transfer of the Dibrugarh case to Delhi, which was rejected by the Supreme Court. In these circumstances, it was deemed proper to transfer the guardianship case filed by the respondent at Delhi to Dibrugarh, where another application was already pending. Although, it may have caused the respondent some trouble of undertaking the journey to Dibrugarh but, for that reason in the facts of the present case, it could not be presumed that the respondent would be prejudiced in prosecuting his case. Since, the respondent was not in any financial difficulty, he could make an appropriate arrangement for his representation at Dibrugarh.[3463]

[s 25.10] Sections 24, 25 and Letter Patent clause (13) Court

See notes to section 24.

[s 25.11] Sections 10 and 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908

See notes to section 10.

[s 25.12] Return of Plaint Distinct from Transfer of Suit

See notes to section 24.

[s 25.13] Effect of Allowing of Earlier Transfer Application in Other Matter

Where, suit sought to be transferred was associated with two matters already ordered to be transferred by Supreme Court, in the light of the said fact, the suit in question was also directed to be transferred to the same high court. However, since the already over-burdened high court had another case added to its pendency, the Supreme Court observed that the judge

---

3459. Gujarat Electricity Board v Atmaram Suncomal, AIR 1989 SC 1433.
3460. Motilal (Died) as per LRS v District Collector, Transfer Petition(s)(Civil) No(s) 280/2020, decided on 11 September 2020 (SC).
3461. Nidhi Jachin v Jachin Krishna, (2013) 14 SCC 607.
3462. Shiv Kumari Devenndra Ojha v Rammajor Sheetlaprasad Ojha, (1997) 2 SCC 452.
3463. Shakuntala Modi v Om Prakash Bharuka, (1991) 2 SCC 706.

of the concerned high court excepting for such witnesses who are very material and who the learned judge of the high court, in his discretion of any witnesses may need to be watched and so on.[3464]

[s 25.14] Transfer of Subsequent Suit to the Court dealing with Earlier Suit

In a particular case there was contract for supply of jute bags between the plaintiff company and the defendant company and the goods supplied were found to be defective and therefore returned. Suits were filed by both companies against each other for recovery of amount before different courts, the cause of action alleged in the two plaints referred to same period and same transactions. The issues arising were common and almost the same set of oral and documentary evidence were required to be adduced. The possibility of conflicting decrees by two courts could not be ruled out. Therefore, the suit instituted at a later point was directed by the Supreme Court to be transferred to the court where earlier suit was filed.[3465]

Institution of suits

[S 26] Institution of suits.—[3466][(1)] Every suit shall be instituted by the presentation of a plaint or in such other manner as may be prescribed.

[3467][(2) In every plaint, facts shall be proved by affidavit].[3468]

AMENDMENT FOR COMMERCIAL DISPUTE OF A SPECIFIED VALUE

Amendment of section 26.—In section 26 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (5 of 1908) (hereafter referred to as the Code), in sub-section (2), the following proviso shall be inserted, namely:—

"Provided that such an affidavit shall be in the form and manner as prescribed under Order VI of rule 15A.".

SYNOPSIS

[s 26.1]	Introduction	578	[s 26.4]	Purpose of Amendment	581
[s 26.2]	Suit	580	[s 26.5]	"Facts shall be proved by affidavit"	581
[s 26.3]	Changes Introduced by the Section	581

[s 26.1] Introduction

The Amending Act of 1999 has inserted a new sub-section (2) in section 26. The old section 26 has been re-numbered as sub-section (1). The Amending Act came into effect from 1 July 2002. It shall not apply to or affect any suit pending immediately before the commencement of amending provisions and every such suit shall be tried as if the amending provision had not come into force.

3464. Mohit Kumar v Dato Mohan Swami, AIR 2004 SC 3682 : (2004) 4 SCC 145 : (2004) 3 Scalse 544.
3465. Chitivalasa Jute Mills v Jaypee Rewa Cement, AIR 2004 SC 1687 : (2004) 3 SCC 85 : JT 2004 (2) SC 535.
3466. Section 26 re-numbered as sub-section (1) thereof by Act 46 of 1999, section 2 (w.e.f. 1-7-2002).
3467. Section 26 re-numbered as sub-section (1) and sub-section (2) inserted by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999), section 2 (wef 1 July 2002) vide Notfication. SO 603(E), dated 6 June 2002.
3468. See Amendment for Commercial Dispute of a Specified Value vide the Commercial Courts, Commercial Division and Commercial Appellate Division of High Courts Act, 2015 (4 of 2016), section 16 and the Schedule (wref 23-10-2015).

The amended section 26 requires that in every plaint, facts shall be proved by an affidavit. The requirement of affidavit is not limited only to plaint but extends to the written statement as well, as it appears from the insertion of sub-rule (3) of rule 15 of O VI. The said rule provides that person verifying the pleading shall also furnish an affidavit in support of his pleadings.

The Law Commission in its 163rd report strongly proposed the amendment to section 26 in its present format. It was thought that the amendment was salutary and may, at least to some extent, check the tendency to make false averments in the pleadings.

The Hon'ble Supreme Court[3469] has held:

> ...The swearing of false affidavits in judicial proceedings not only has the tendency of causing obstruction in the due course of judicial proceedings but has also the tendency to impede, obstruct and interfere with the administration of justice...The due process of law cannot be permitted to be slighted not the majesty of law be made a mockery by such acts or conduct on the part of the parties to the litigation or even while appearing as witnesses. Anyone who makes an attempt to impede or undermine or obstruct the free flow of the unsoiled stream of justice by resorting to the filing of false evidence commits criminal contempt of the Court and renders himself liable to be dealt with in accordance with the Act. Filing of false affidavits or making false statement on oath in Courts aims at striking a blow at the Rule of Law and no Court can ignore such conduct which has the tendency to shake public confidence in the judicial institutions because the very structure of an ordered life is put at stake. It would be a great public disaster if the foundation of justice were allowed to be poisoned by anyone resorting to filing of false affidavits or giving of false statements and fabricating false evidence in a court of law. The stream of justice has to be kept clean and pure and anyone soiling its purity must be dealt with sternly so that the message percolates loud and clear that no one can be permitted to undermine the dignity of the court and interfere with the due course of judicial proceedings or the administration of justice.....

Further the Hon'ble Supreme Court in Mohan Singh v Late Amar Singh,[3470] stressed the consequences of filing false affidavits in courts, by holding as under:

> Tampering with the record of judicial proceedings and filing of false affidavit, in a court of law has the tendency of causing obstruction in the due course of justice. It undermines and obstructs free flow of unsoiled stream of justice and aims at striking a blow at the rule of law. The stream of justice has to be kept clear and pure and no one can be permitted to take liberties with it by soiling its purity. Since, we are prima facie satisfied that the tenant has filed false affidavits and tampered with judicial record, with a view to eradicate the evil of perjury, we consider it appropriate to direct the Registrar of this Court to file a complaint before the appropriate court and set the criminal law in motion...

The party in an affidavit contemplated under the amended section, should swear to the correctness of only the fact stated in the pleading and not to the questions or propositions of law, if any stated thereon. It should also be open to the party to say in his affidavit which of the facts are true to his knowledge and which of the facts he believes to be true based on information received by him.

In the opinion of the authors, such a provision would only add to delays in disposal of suits. There are enough provisions in the existing laws to deal with false and malicious averments in the pleadings and this additional requirement would not make any difference. It must be considered that similar requirements in support of fact stated in the writ petition and counter and other affidavits filed in the writ proceedings, have, in no manner, operated as a check upon the tendency to make false statement. The Law Commission, it seems, was conscious of these

---

3469. Dhanajay Sharma v State of Haryana (1995) 3 SCC 757.
3470. Mohan Singh v Late Amar Singh, (1998) 5 Scale 115.

difficulties and have observed that these measures may be tried out on an experimental basis and if it is found to cause further delays, the same could be reviewed.

[s 26.2] Suit

The section[3471] in terms states that a suit can be instituted by the presentation of a plaint or in such other manner as may be prescribed.[3472] O IV, rule 1 provides that every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the court or such officer appointed in that behalf.[3473] The word "suit" means and apart from some context, must be taken to mean a civil proceeding instituted by means of a plaint.[3474] A proceeding which does not commence with a plaint is not a suit.[3475] Judicial opinion differs on the question whether a suit could be said to have been instituted when a petition to sue in forma pauperis is presented. One view is that until permission is granted, there is no suit and consequently, no order of attachment before judgment under O XXXVIII or for an injunction under O XXXIX could be made on a petition to sue in forma pauperis, as such an order can only be passed in a suit.[3476] The other view is that under this section a suit may be instituted not merely by presentation of a plaint, but also in such manner, as may be prescribed. Having regard to the provision in O XXXIII, rule 1 as to institution of suit by a pauper, the presentation of the petition would itself amount to institution of a suit. Accordingly, the court has the power, pending an application to sue in forma pauperis, to grant an injunction or appoint a commissioner under O XXXIX.[3477] The submission is that the latter view is the better view. An application under section 20 of the Arbitration Act, 1940, can well be described as a suit.[3478] A third party notice taken out by a defendant in a suit is not a plaint for the purposes of the Court Fees Act, 1870.[3479] The High Court of Orissa takes the view that though probate proceedings, when they become contentious, assume the form of a suit, they are not in reality in the nature of a regular suit under the Code. And since there cannot be a decree except in a suit provided by the Code, an order made in such probate proceedings is not a decree.[3480] In Balaram Singh v Dudnath,[3481] a proceeding started on an application made under the UP Agriculturists Relief Act was treated as a suit. It is submitted that the decision overlooks the word "prescribed" in the section which means prescribed by rules under the Code. Rights of parties are determined as on date of filing of suit.[3482]

3471. Now sub-section (1).
3472. Kanji v Manglaben, AIR 1969 Guj 308 : 10 Guj LR 1011.
3473. ST Corp of India v Iron-side Ltd, AIR 1966 Bom 126 : (1966) ILR Bom 307 : (1966) 67 Bom LR 644.
3474. Hansraj v Official Liquidator, AIR 1933 PC 63 : (1933) ILR 54 All 1067 : 60 IA 13.
3475. Venkata v Venkatarama, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 256; Upadhya v Persidh Singh, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 723; Ram Kirpal v Ram Kuari, (1884) ILR 6 All 269, p 274 : 11 IA 37; Babulal v Kotumal, AIR 1940 All 737; Usman Ali Khan v Sagarmal, 1965 AIR SC 1798 : (1965) 3 SCR 201.
3476. Janandan v Anand Mahadeo, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 373; Poorna Chandra v Tara Prasad, AIR 1917 Cal 852 : (1917) 21 Cal WN 870 : (1917) 25 CLJ 159; Timmayya v Sadasivappa, AIR 1952 Mys 354.
3477. Chidambaram v Nataraja, AIR 1939 Mad 80 : (1938) ILR Mad 1060; Totaram Ichcharan v Dattamangu, AIR 1943 Pat 143 : (1934) ILR Bom 138; Channu Lal v Shama, AIR 1955 Ngp 259 : (1955) ILR Nag 922; Matuki v Kamakha Prasad, AIR 1958 Pat 264 : (1958) ILR 37 Pat 331; Namga Devi v Rajni, (1961) 21 Cut LT 250; Shripati Kuer v Malti Devi, AIR 1967 Pat 320.
3478. SPC Engineering Co v UOI, AIR 1966 Cal 259.
3479. ST Corp of India v Iron-side Ltd, supra.
3480. Puinbasi Majhiani v Shiba Bhue, AIR 1967 Ori 41 : (1966) ILR Cut 213.
3481. Balaram Singh v Dudnath, AIR 1949 All 100 : (1948) ILR All 363.
3482. Nand Kishore Marwah v Samundri Devi, (1987) 3 SCC 382.

[s 26.3] Changes Introduced by the Section

The words "or in such other manner as may be prescribed" were added in 1908. No other manner of instituting suits has hitherto been prescribed.

By the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 vide section 2 wef 1 July 2002, the existing section 26 was numbered as sub-section (1) of this section and sub-section (2) was inserted in it.

[s 26.4] Purpose of Amendment

The intention of the legislature in bringing about the various amendments in the CPC with effect from 1-7-2002 were aimed at eliminating the procedural delays in the disposal of civil matters. The amendments effected to section 26, O IV and O VI rule 15, are also geared to achieve such object, but being procedural in nature, they are directory in nature and non-compliance thereof would not automatically render the plaint non-est, as has been held by the Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court.[3483]

[s 26.5] "Facts shall be proved by affidavit"

Prior to insertion of sub-section (2) in section 26 there was no requirement of filing affidavit with the pleadings. These provisions now require the plaint to be accompanied by an affidavit as provided in section 26(2) and the person verifying the pleadings to furnish an affidavit in support of the pleading (O VI, rule 15(4)). The affidavit required to be filed under amended section 26(2) and O VI, rule 15(4) of the CPC has the effect of fixing additional responsibility on the deponent as to the truth of the facts stated in the pleadings. It is, however, made clear that such an affidavit would not be evidence for the purpose of the trial. Further, on amendment of the pleadings, a fresh affidavit shall have to be filed in consonance thereof.[3484]

Summons and Discovery

[S 27] Summons to defendants.—Where a suit has been duly instituted, a summons may be issued to the defendant to appear and answer the claim and may be served in manner prescribed [3485][on such day not beyond thirty days from date of the institution of the suit].

SYNOPSIS

[s 27.1]	Alterations in the Section	582	[s 27.4]	"On such day not beyond thirty days from the date of institution of the suit"	583
[s 27.2]	Issue and Service of Summons	582
[s 27.3]	Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Acts of 1999 (46 of 1999) and 2002 (22 of 2002) Constitutional Validity	583

3483. Vidyawati Gupta v Bhakti Hari Nayak, AIR 2006 SC 1194 : (2006) 2 SCC 777.
3484. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344 : JT 2005 (6) SC 468.
3485. Inserted by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999), section 3 (wef 1 -7-2002) vide Notfication SO 603(E), dated 6 June 2002.

[s 27.1] Alterations in the Section

By Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999) vide section 3, with effect from 1-7-2002, the words "on such day not beyond thirty days from the date of institution of the suit" were inserted in section 27. The amendment in this section was enforced from 1-7-2002. However, it shall not apply or affect any suit pending immediately before the commencement of the amendment and every such suit shall be tried as if the amendment had not come into force.

The intention of legislature in amending section 27 was to cut down time in effecting the service of summons to the defendant. The amended section 27 requires that the defendant be served within 30 days from the date of institution of suit. To facilitate the implementation of section 27, rule 9 of O VII has also been substituted, wherein it is provided where the court orders that the summons be served on the defendants, it will direct the plaintiff to present as many copies of the plaint as there are defendants within seven days from the date of such order along with the requisite fee. The summons can be served upon the defendant within 30 days only if process fee is deposited within seven days. Further, the plaint can be rejected under newly inserted clause (f) in rule 11 of O VII, if the provisions of rule 9 of O VII have not been complied with.

In the opinion of the authors, the amended section, though well intended, may not serve the purpose for which it is intended, as it only covers the service of defendant for the first time after the institution of suit. The language of the amended section counts the period of 30 days from the date of the institution of suit. It is unlikely in most of the cases, except, where immediate interim relief is prayed for, that the defendant may be required to be served again for other occasions within 30 days of institution of suit. It would have been appropriate if the legislature had taken care of subsequent orders directing service of summons and had not limited the time frame only from the date of institution of suit. The legislature has substituted rule 5 of O IX of the Code, wherein a period of Seven days is prescribed for taking steps for issue of a fresh summons in subsequent hearings. The intention of legislature would be served if the defendants were also required to be served within 30 days of each subsequent hearing, if the defendant's or any of the defendant is not served with the summons on previous hearings.

In Karnataka Industrial Corp v State of Karnataka,[3486] the plaintiff has preferred an appeal against the judgment of trial court dismissing the suit on the ground that it is not maintainable because the plaint does not disclose the cause of action. The court remanded back the matter to the trial court for fresh consideration. It was further held that if the trial court is satisfied that the suit is not maintainable, the court have to issue notice to the defendants to adduced its reply and till such time, the court will refuse to pass ex-parte interim relief. It would be a salutary practice that principle of natural justice should be followed even the case does not have any substance.

[s 27.2] Issue and Service of Summons

Rules 142–148A of the City Civil Court, Ahmedabad and O XXXVII, rules 1 and 2 as amended by the High Court of Bombay providing summary procedure are not inconsistent with this section and are therefore not ultra vires section 122 of the Code.[3487]

3486. Karnataka Industrial Corp v State of Karnataka, Regular First Appeal No.14 of 2019, decided on 22 January 2020 (Karnataka High Court).

3487. Keshavlal Prabhudas v Manubhai, AIR 1968 Guj 223 : (1968) 9 Guj LR 177. See O v below.

[s 27.3] Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Acts of 1999 (46 of 1999) and 2002 (22 of 2002) Constitutional Validity

The amendments to sections 27, 89, 100A, O VII, rule 11; O XVIII, rule 4 and O XL, rule 9 made by Act 46 of 1999 and Act 22 of 2002 are not ultra vires the Constitution of India. The amendments made were within the legislative competence and are not violative of any of the provisions of the Constitution and there is no constitutional infirmity in the same.[3488]

[s 27.4] "On such day not beyond thirty days from the date of institution of the suit"

The words "on such day not beyond thirty days from the date of the institution of the suit" do not mean that the summons must be served within thirty days of the date of the institution of the suit. The words added by amendment, fix outer time frame, by providing that steps must be taken within 30 days from the date of the institution of the suit, to issue summons. In other words, if the suit is instituted, for example, on 1 January 2002 then the correct addresses of the defendants and the process fee must be filed in the court within 30 days so that summons be issued by the court not beyond thirty days from the date of the institution of the suit. The object is to avoid long delay in issue of summons for want of steps by the plaintiff. It is quite evident that if all that is required to be done by a party, has been performed within the period of thirty days, then no fault can be attributed to the party. If for any reason, the court is not in a position or is unable to or does not issue summons within thirty days, there will, compliance with the provisions of section 27 once within thirty days the party concerned has taken steps to file the process fee along with completing the other formalities which are required to enable the court to issue the summons.[3489]

[S 28] Service of summons where defendant resides in another [3490][State].—(1) A summons may be sent for service in another [36]State to such Court and in such manner as may be prescribed by rules in force in that [36]State.

(2) The Court to which such summons is sent shall, upon receipt thereof, proceed as if it had been issued by such Court and shall then return the summons to the Court of issue together with the record (if any) of its proceedings with regard thereto.

[3491][(3) Where the language of the summons sent for service in another State is different from the language of the record referred to in sub-section (2), a translation of the record—

(a) in Hindi, where the language of the Court issuing the summons is Hindi, or

(b) in Hindi or English, where the language of such record is other than Hindi, or English shall also be sent together with the record sent under that sub-section.]

3488. Salem Advocate Bar Association, Tamil Nadu v UOI, AIR 2003 SC 189.
3489. Salem Advocate Bar Association, Tamil Nadu v UOI, AIR 2003 SC 189.
3490. Substituted for "Province" by AO 1950.
3491. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 12 (wef 1 -5-1977).

Sub-section 3 is added to avoid the difficulty that the court issuing the summons might feel where the language of the court issuing the summons is different from the language of the court to which the summons is sent for service (see note to O V, rule 23).

[3492][S 29] Service of foreign summonses.—Summonses and other processes issued by—

(a) any Civil or Revenue Court established in any part of India to which the provisions of this Code do not extend, or

(b) any Civil or Revenue Court established or continued by the authority of the Central Government outside India, or

(c) any other Civil or Revenue Court outside India to which the Central Government has, by notification in the Official Gazette, declared the provisions of this section to apply, may be sent to the courts in the territories to which this Code extends and served as if they were summonses issued by such courts.]

By notification.—For notifications issued under the corresponding section, see general statutory rules and orders.

[S 30] Power to order discovery and the like.—Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the Court may, at any time, either of its own motion or on the application of any party,—

(a) make such orders as may be necessary or reasonable in all matters relating to the delivery and answering of interrogatories, the admission of documents and facts, and the discovery, inspection, production, impounding and return of documents or other material objects producible as evidence;

(b) issue summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents or such other objects as aforesaid;

(c) order any fact to be proved by affidavit.

SYNOPSIS

[s 30.1]	High Court Amendment	584	[s 30.6]	Summonses to Persons to Give Evidence	585
[s 30.2]	Delivery and Answering of Interrogatories	585	[s 30.7]	Proof of Facts by Affidavits	585
[s 30.3]	Admission of Documents and Facts	585	[s 30.8]	Section 30 and O IX read with O XXXIX	585
[s 30.4]	Discovery and Inspection	585	[s 30.9]	Section 30(b) and O XVI	585
[s 30.5]	Production, Impounding and Return of Documents	585

[s 30.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—In clause (a) omit the words "delivery and answering of interrogatories, the admission of documents and facts, and the discovery" after the words "matters relating to" and before the word "inspection" vide Cal. Gaz. Pt. I, dated 20 April 1967.

3492. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951, section 6, for section 29 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

[s 30.2] Delivery and Answering of Interrogatories

See O XI below.

[s 30.3] Admission of Documents and Facts

See O XII below.

[s 30.4] Discovery and Inspection

See O XI below.

[s 30.5] Production, Impounding and Return of Documents

See O XIII below.

[s 30.6] Summonses to Persons to Give Evidence

See O XVI below.

[s 30.7] Proof of Facts by Affidavits

See O XIX below.

[s 30.8] Section 30 and O IX read with O XXXIX

Provisions of O XIX, rules 1 and 2 apply to an application for grant of temporary injunction, in view of section 30. Apart from principles of natural justice, it is clear, having regard to the statutory provisions contained in section 30 and O XIX, rules 1 and 2 read with O XXXIX, rule 1, that the court possesses the power to call the deponent for cross-examination, when an affidavit has been filed in support of an application for temporary injunction.[3493]

[s 30.9] Section 30(b) and O XVI

Where, a suit for recovery of amount was filed against a bank and its officer, alleging fraud to have been committed by officer and money unauthorisedly taken out from account of plaintiff, the application to issue witness summons to the Metropolitan Magistrate's Court to produce list of documents filed before it in criminal complaint against officer of bank was filed under section 30(b) and O XVI where under the court has such power and jurisdiction to issue a summon to person whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents, the application was filed before the suit had to go for trial and therefore was within limitation and filed on behalf of applicant firm supported by affidavit of one of partners of firms, the application read with plaint providing particulars of the said criminal case was entitled to be allowed.[3494]

3493. Ram Swaroop v Bholu Ram, AIR 1991 Raj 56 (DB).
3494. Naren Advertising & Marketing v State Bank of Saurashtra, AIR 2001 Guj 222; See also the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, section 19.

[S 31] Summons to witness.—The provisions in sections 27, 28 and 29 shall apply to summonses to give evidence or to produce documents or other material objects.

[s 31.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Omit figure "27"—vide Cal Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[S 32] Penalty for default.—The Court may compel the attendance of any person to whom a summon has been issued under section 30 and for that purpose may—

(a) issue a warrant for his arrest;

(b) attach and sell his property;

(c) impose a fine upon him [3495][not exceeding five thousand rupees];

(d) order him to furnish security for his appearance and in default commit him to the civil prison.

SYNOPSIS

[s 32.1] Alterations in the Section 586
[s 32.2] "To whom a Summon has been Issued" 587

[s 32.1] Alterations in the Section

By Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999) vide section 4; wef 1 July 2002, the words "not exceeding five hundred rupees" are substituted with the words "not exceeding five thousand rupees" in section 32. The Amending Act allows greater discretion upon the court to impose a fine by enhancing the limit of the fine from Rs 500 under the pre-amended section to Rs 5000, to compel the attendance of any person to whom a summon has been issued under section 30 of the Code.

The summons, under this section may be issued either to the party to the cause, witnesses in the matter or any other person, whose presence may be necessary or reasonable, in all matters relating to the delivery and answering of interrogatories, the admission of document and facts and the discovery, inspection, production, impounding and return of document or other material objects producible as evidence. Further, summons may also be issued to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents or such other objects as aforesaid.

Further, the power of assessing authority, which is a quasi-judicial authority, is clothed with the powers of the civil court. Therefore, section 32 of CPC would apply and this section gives immense power to the assessing authority to compel attendance/appearance of any person.[3496]

The legislature while amending section 32 did not amend rule 12 of O XVI. Though the amount of fine is increased from Rs 500 to Rs 5,000 in section 32, the amount of fine in rule 12 of O XVI remains Rs 500. In the opinion of authors, the legislature should accordingly amend O XVI to bring it in harmony with section 32, otherwise precious time of the courts would be spent in clearing the clouds over this controversy.

3495. Substituted for "not exceeding five hundred rupees" by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999), section 4 (wef 1-7-2002) vide Notification SO 603(E), dated 6 June 2002.

3496. Maulikkumar Vinodkumar Patel. v TRO, (2019) 417 ITR 590.

[s 32.2] "To whom a Summon has been Issued"

This section applies only if a summons has been issued. It does not apply where a person is merely ordered to produce a document.[3497]

Judgment and Decree

[S 33] Judgment and decree.—The Court after the case has been heard, shall, pronounce judgment, and on such judgment a decree shall follow.

SYNOPSIS

[s 33.1]	On Such Judgment: A Decree Shall Follow	587	[s 33.3]	Non-payment of Court fee Decree Cannot be Withheld	588
[s 33.2]	Judicial Discipline	588

[s 33.1] On Such Judgment: A Decree Shall Follow

A mere order deciding the matter in dispute not supported by reasons is no judgment.[3498] Under the section, it is imperative that a decree must follow the judgment. Since it is the duty of the court to comply with the provisions of the law, its failure to draw up a decree ought not to deprive a party of his right of appeal. Order XLI, rule 1, no doubt, provides that every appeal shall be accompanied by a decree. The validity of an appeal presented without a copy of the decree where the court had failed to draft one has been the subject of consideration in several cases. In some decisions, effect has been given to the mandatory words of O XLI, rule 11, without reference to the question whether the party could be prejudiced by reason of the failure of the court to draw up a decree.[3499] In other decisions, it has been held that a litigant should not suffer for the default of the court and that the hearing of an appeal filed without a decree should be adjourned to enable the party to obtain a decree.[3500] The question was considered by the Supreme Court in Jagadish v Jawarlal.[3501] There, an appeal presented without a certified copy of the decree, was admitted and a certified copy of the decree which was subsequently drawn up by the trial court, was obtained and produced. The Supreme Court held that though the production of the certified copy of the decree was mandatory under O XLI, rule 11, as there was failure on the part of the court to draw up a decree, the appellate court could pass such orders, as were appropriate for the production of the decree in the appeal presented without it. Where a decree was passed by the trial court prior to coming into force of Punjab Pre-emption (Repeal) Act, 1973 but was challenged in appeal after the act was passed and affirmed on appeal, that would fall within the meaning of section 3 of Punjab Pre-emption (Repeal) Act, 1973, while the case is pending in the High Court.[3502] It has also been held that an execution application presented after the judgment is pronounced but without a copy of 3497. Ramdeo Prasad v State, AIR 1951 All 415; Kumar Rameshwar v Rani Riknath, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 550. See the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, O XVI, rules 10–13, rule 17, and rule 21.

---

3498. Swaran Lal v Harendra Kumar, AIR 1969 Cal 1167 : (1969) 1 SCC 709 : (1969) 3 SCR 976; Jaswant Singh v Punjab Government, AIR 1994 P&H 116.
3499. Jilaram v Gangaram, AIR 1920 Lah 395 : 1 Lah 223.
3500. Sriramamurthi v Sriramamurthy, AIR 1941 Mad 929; Mandharlal v Nanak Chand, AIR 1919 Lah 53; Debendranath v Hrishi Pada, AIR 1956 Assam 120.
3501. Jagadish v Jawarlal, AIR 1961 SC 832 : (1961) 2 SCR 918.
3502. Sadhu Singh v Dharm Dev, (1981) 1 SCC 510.

the decree as required by O XXI, rule 10, was valid where no decree had been drawn up by the court.[3503]

In a suit filed for relief of permanent injunction, but courts below, though granting relief of injunction, proceedings on the premise that the suit was for declaration of title and decided the same recording a finding of title in favour of the plaintiff. Such a decision was held to be contrary to the pleadings and the settled legal position and hence, judgment and decrees passed in suit set aside.[3504]

Where, respondents fraudulently obtained mutation of immovable property in their favour on the basis of revoked gift showing deceased donor as present and witnessing mutation, and the deceased owner in fact had expired long before that, the mutation obtained by fraudulent means is non est, just as a decree obtained by fraud is a nullity.[3505] This section does not apply so far as decrees under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 are concerned.[3506]

[s 33.2] Judicial Discipline

Writ appeal against application was dismissed for default by a single judge of the high court. The writ court, condoned the delay and directed the single judge "to take up the application and pass appropriate orders". The single judge was of the view that the language used does not belong to judicial pronouncements (paras 6, 7, 8, 11), judges of the high court who happen to sit single, and hear the matters assigned to them by the Chief Justice are not subordinate to the members of the division benches.

In the circumstances, the Single Judge recused himself from the matter and directed the registry to place the papers before the Chief Justice for appropriate orders.[3507]

[s 33.3] Non-payment of Court fee Decree Cannot be Withheld

In view of the provisions of section 33 and O II, rule 6, there is no manner of doubt that once a judgment is delivered and signed, there is no option left with the court except to draw decree in terms of the judgment. Drawing up of a decree cannot be postponed. Dismissal of suit on account of non-payment of the court-fee for drawing up of decree is not in consonance with the law. Decree shall be drawn in terms of the judgment of the court and in view of section 11 of Court-Fees Act, 1870, the decree will bear an endorsement that the same shall not be executed till difference in court fee is paid.[3508]

Interest

[S 34] Interest.—(1) Where and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may, in the decree, order interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, in addition to any interest adjudged on such principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, [3509][with further interest at such rate not exceeding six per

---

3503. Rajeswar Rao v Shankar Rao, AIR 1962 Pat 398.
3504. Jharkhand State Housing Board v Anirudh Kumar Sahu, (2018) 18 SCC 330: (2004) 4 JCR 697 Jhr
3505. N Khosla v Rajlakshmi, AIR 2006 SC 1249 : (2006) 3 SCC 605.
3506. Dalit Singh v Shamsher Kaur, AIR 1969 P&H 69 : (1969) ILR 1 Punj 393. See O XX, rule 1.
3507. Govt of Andhra Pradesh v Official Liquidator, M&CE India Ltd, AIR 2002 AP 220.
3508. GC Kumar v Ashok Kumar, AIR 2001 Del 338 (DB).
3509. Substituted for "with further interest at such rate as the court deems reasonable on the aggregate sum so adjudged" by CPC (Amendment) Act, 66 of 1956, section 2, (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).

cent per annum as the Court deems reasonable on such principal sum], from the date of the decree to the date of payment, or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit:

[3510][Provided that where the liability in relation to the sum so adjudged had arisen out of a commercial transaction, the rate of such further interest may exceed six per cent. per annum, but shall not exceed the contractual rate of interest or where there is no contractual rate, the rate at which moneys are lent or advanced by nationalised banks in relation to commercial transactions.

Explanation I.—In this sub-section "nationalised bank" means a corresponding new bank as defined in the Banking Companies (Acquisition and Transfer of Undertakings) Act, 1970 (5 of 1970).

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section, a transaction is a commercial transaction, if it is connected with the industry, trade or business of the party incurring the liability.]

(2) Where such a decree is silent with respect to the payment of further interest [3511][on such principal sum] from the date of the decree to the date of payment or other earlier date, the Court shall be deemed to have refused such interest, and a separate suit therefor shall not lie.

SYNOPSIS

[s 34.1] Alterations in the Section 590
[s 34.2] Scope of the Section 590
[s 34.3] Act of Court 593
[s 34.4] "On such Principal Sum" and "the Principal sum adjudged" 593
[s 34.5] Comparison of Rate of Interest in Two Suits of Plaintiff Relevancy 595
[s 34.6] Vague Remark by Court Regarding Concession of Party as to Interest Effect 596
[s 34.7] Term of Invoice Pertaining to Interest 596
[s 34.8] Moneylender 597
[s 34.9] Inflation 597
[s 34.10] The Three Divisions of Interest 597
[s 34.10.1] Interest Prior to the Date of Suit 598
[s 34.10.2] Interest from Date of Suit to Date of Decree ... 603
[s 34.10.3] Interest from Date of Decree to Date of Payment 606
[s 34.11] Interest in Mortgage Suits 607
[s 34.12] This Section and the Interest Act, 1978 608
[s 34.13] This Section and Gratuity Act, 1972 610
[s 34.14] Consumer Protection Cases 610
[s 34.15] Lok Adalat 611
[s 34.16] This Section and Motor Vehicles Act ... 612
[s 34.17] This Section and Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 612
[s 34.18] Rule of damdupat 613
[s 34.19] Penal Interest 613
[s 34.20] Enhanced Interest 614
[s 34.21] No Interest 614
[s 34.22] Equitable Interest 614
[s 34.23] Compound Interest 616
[s 34.24] Interest on mesne Profits/Damages 617
[s 34.25] Negotiable Instruments 618
[s 34.26] Award of Interest by Arbitrator 619
[s 34.27] Proviso to Sub-section (1): Rate of Interest in Commercial Transactions 622
[s 34.28] Commercial Transaction 623
[s 34.29] Five Propositions 624
[s 34.30] Judicial and Reasonable Exercise of Discretion 625
[s 34.31] Bank Rate of Interest — Reduction of Interest 625
[s 34.32] Suit by Bank 626
[s 34.33] Sub-section (2): Recourse When Decree Silent on Interest 627

3510. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 13 (wef 1 July 1977).
3511. Substituted for "on such aggregate sum as aforesaid" by CPC (Amendment) Act 66 of 1956, section 2 (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).

[s 34.1] Alterations in the Section

By the Civil Procedure Code (Amendment) Act LXVI of 1956, for the words "on such sum with further interest at such rate as the court deems reasonable on the correct sum so adjudged" in sub-clause (1), the words with further interest at such rate not exceeding six per cent pa as the court deems reasonable on such principal sum' were substituted.

In clause (2), instead of the words "on such aggregate sum as aforesaid", the words "on such sum" were substituted.

The Amendment Act, 1976, has now added a proviso and two explanations. The proviso enables the court to award interest at a rate higher than six per cent but not exceeding a contractual rate or where such contractual rate is not provided at the rates charged by nationalised banks on loans or advances in relation to commercial transactions. Explanation I defines a nationalised bank and Explanation II defines a commercial transaction for the purpose of this section. The proviso does not apply to an adjudged amount arising out of a transaction which is not a commercial transaction. In such cases, the rate prescribed under sub-section (1) would apply. A suit filed before the amendment of section 34 by section 13 of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 shall not be governed by the amended section 34 by virtue of section 97(e) of the Amendment Act.[3512]

[s 34.2] Scope of the Section

It may be noticed that before the amendment of 1976, the maximum interest which the court could award was six percent pa. However, in appropriate cases, the court had the discretion to award interest at a lesser rate but in no case exceeding six percent. Now, the courts are empowered to increase post-decretal interest in relation to a liability arising out of a commercial transaction, on the principal sum adjudged.[3513]

Under section 34 of the CPC, the court has a very wide discretion in ordering interest on the principal sum adjudged and may order interest at such rate it deems reasonable to be paid on the said principal sum adjudged from the date of the suit till the date of payment. It is the discretion of the court to award interest.[3514]

Payment of interest is discretionary under the provisions of section 60 of Sale of Goods Act, 1930 and section 3 of Interest Act, 1978. It was observed by HL Dattu J in the following words[3515]:

> 38. The court has the discretion to award interest along with the principal amount and the same is clear from the use of the word "may" in all the three provisions cited above. Section 34 CPC is the main provision under which interest could be awarded by the court and Section 61 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1930 is an offshoot of Section 34 CPC. Section 3 of the Interest Act, 1978 also makes the Interest Act subject to the provision of Section 34 CPC. Hence, we can safely deduce that the interest awarded is a discretion exercised by the court, on the principal amount claimed, in case of a suit for recovery of payment by the supplier if such payment is delayed by the buyer.

It is therefore clear that interest pendente lite would be awarded at the rate which the court considers reasonable. Future interest from the date of suit till payment would ordinarily not exceed the rate of six percent pa, but in case of commercial transaction, rate of such interest

---

3512. Shri Bharat-Laxmi Wool Store Panipat v Punjab National Bank, (1992) 3 SCC 204.
3513. Madan Mohan v HPMC, AIR 2006 HP 105; See also Charu Bhainagar v HPMC, AIR 2006 HP 119.
3514. State of Bihar v Mijaj International, AIR 2004 Jhar 29.
3515. Purbanchal Cables & Conductors (Pvt) Ltd v Assam SEB, (2012) 7 SCC 462.

could exceed the rate of six percent pa, but shall not exceed the contractual rate or where there is no contractual rate of interest then the rates at which money is lent or advanced by nationalised banks in relation to commercial transaction. However, the provision as above does not mean and imply that the court is obliged and should mandatorily grant interest at the contractual rate, either from the date of suit till the date of decree or from the date of decree till payment thereof.[3516]

In a case relating to refund of instalments paid by the intending purchaser for purchase of flat, it was held by the Supreme Court that since the interest was not granted to the party along with the principal amount, he would also be entitled, in addition to the 12% pa interest on the principal amount, but also interest at the same rate which was earlier denied to him. It was observed that it was being so ordered because interest is not penalty or punishment, but it is normal accretion on capital.[3517]

In a case where injunction was sought against forcible dispossession by Development Authority and the said Authority gave undertaking to pay compensation to landowners within two months, the Supreme Court directed payment of interest at the rate of 18% pa when the undertaking was not complied with. It was observed that the landowners have been denied beneficial use of money.[3518]

Payment of interest on a sum claimed by the plaintiff or a sum, which has been adjudged by the court as payable, is an issue, which has to be pleaded and decided by the court in the suit itself. If the court has not adjudged any interest to be payable on the principal sum even though it is pleaded or it refused to grant the interest, then, in execution proceedings, the Executing Court cannot go beyond the decree and award interest.[3519]

In a suit for specific performance of agreement for sale, the purchaser did not pay the balance sale consideration on the pretext that the vendor has not paid the transfer charges. It was held by the high court that transfer charges is a contingency which has to take place only after the said amount is calculated and demanded. As such the purchaser is liable to pay interest on the balance sale consideration.[3520]

This section applies only where the decree is for the payment of "money". The expression "decree for the payment of money" as used in this section includes a claim to unliquidated damages.[3521] This section does not apply where the decree is for the enforcement of a mortgage or charges.[3522] (see notes below under the head "Interest in suits for enforcement of mortgage"). There is no analogy between interest awarded under this section and mesne profits.[3523] In a suit by a principal against his agent, the accounts contained several controversial items which had to be adjudicated based on an elaborate report of the commissioner. Such a decree being one for the payment of money, the court awarded interest from the date of the decree until realisation on the principal amount so adjudicated.[3524] Section 34 contemplates interest payable—

3516. Union Bank of India v Chhatarpur Siliment Sales Corp, AIR 2002 MP 145.
3517. Alok Shanker Pandey v UOI, AIR 2007 SC 1198 : (2007) 3 SCC 545.
3518. Rakesh Kumar Jain v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 917 : (2007) 2 SCC 461.
3519. O Sreenivasulu v P Santhi, AIR 2007 AP 115 : (2007) 2 Andh LD 175 : (2007) 2 Andh LT 673.
3520. Amol Kishore Mule v Vishwanath Rajaram Shahande, AIR 2007 Bom 55 : 2006 (6) All MR 254 (Aurangabad Bench).
3521. Bhagwant Genuji v Gangabisan Ramgopal, (1940) 42 Bom LR 750, AIR 1940 Bom 369.
3522. See notes below, under the head, "Interests in suit for enforcement of mortgage".
3523. Dwarkanath v Debendra, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 1232.
3524. N Bhaironbut & Co v Kashi Ram, AIR 1973 Raj 271.

(i) from the date of the institution of the suit to the date of decree; and

(ii) date of decree to the date of realisation.[3525]

An illiterate lady sued and got a decree for cancellation of a sale deed on the ground of fraud. It was held that the defendant cannot claim interest on the money advanced.[3526]

In a suit filed by an indigent person, the court passed a money decree. A question arose whether interest is payable from the date when the petition to sue as pauper was filed or from the date when the petition was converted into a suit. A Division Bench of Kerala High Court held that conversion of petition and assignment of number are routine steps, since formalities required to be followed necessarily are to be completed. Therefore, the suit shall be deemed to have been instituted on the date on which application to sue as indigent person is filed and as such interest is payable from that date.[3527]

The Interest Act, 1978 does not apply to Jammu and Kashmir. However, the jurisdiction of the court to award interest from the date of a decree passed in terms of the award of an arbitrator is not taken away.[3528]

Interest cannot be allowed by way of damages for breach of contract.[3529]

Though section 34 of Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (Code of Civil Procedure) provides that the rate of current interest and future interest, are within the discretion of the court, the provisions of section 34 indicate the guideline for exercise of such discretion. It shows that grant of interest at contract rate should be the normal rule, the use of discretion to refuse interest or reduce the contract rate being the exception. To reduce or deny interest would amount to penalising the creditor for approaching the court and encouraging the debtor to deliberately and unjustly prolong the litigation. If the court wants to reduce the rate of interest, either current or future, such reduction should be supported by reason.[3530] In view of this fact, the petitioner, a public corporation, was willing to refund the amount to individual applicants from whom it has received the amount and there was no delay on its part in either making the said offer or in depositing the amount in court when directed to do so. The Supreme Court held that the facts of the case do not warrant burdening the petitioner with any interest on the amount of question.[3531] A decree awarded interest to the bank at 16.5%. However, the plaintiff succeeded in proving interest at the rate of 25.5% communicated to the borrower from time-to-time. The Karnataka High Court held that merely because the defendant chose to deny his liability, the court cannot refuse to award higher rate of interest which the law entitles the bank to charge.[3532]

Section 34 lays that in addition to pendente lite and future interest, additional interest adjudged on such principal sum for the period prior to the institution of the suit can also be granted by the court. This interest adjudged for the period prior to the institution of the suit also has to be on such "principal sum" and this also has reference to earlier expression "principal sum adjudged".[3533] The transport subsidy which was payable to the industrial unit by the Union of India under transport subsidy scheme, was wrongfully detained by the authorities

---

3525. Government of Andhra Pradesh v Gammon India Ltd Bombay, AIR 1984 AP 230.
3526. Siya Ram v Lilawati, (1990) ILR All 75.
3527. KSEB v Karthiyayani, AIR 2007 Ker 102 : (2006) 4 Ker LT 1006 (DB).
3528. Managing Director, J&K Handicrafts v Goodluck Carpets, AIR 1990 SC 864 : (1990) 4 SCC 740 : (1990) 1 All LR 367.
3529. Andard Mount (London) Ltd v Creswell (India) Ltd, AIR 1985 Del 45.
3530. Vijaya Bank v S Bhathija, AIR 1994 Kant 123; State Bank of India v Ghulam Nabi, AIR 1998 J&K 46.
3531. South Eastern Coal Field Ltd v Subhash Kumar Gupta, (1994) Supp 3 SCC 334.
3532. Canara Bank v Millan Medicals, AIR 1996 Kant 24.
3533. Punjab National Bank v Surinder Singh Mandyal, AIR 1996 HP 1.

and subsequently the authorities were directed to release such subsidy. The interest however, was not granted, since neither there was any provision for payment of such interest in the scheme nor could the petitioner bring to the notice of the court, any provision entitling him to any interest.[3534] Earnest money cannot be retained after the withdrawal of the tender and interest is payable on the amount of earnest money unreasonably retained.[3535] In the absence of pleading and proof, the bank is not entitled to charge interest on service, or incidental charges.[3536] It is the primary duty of the housing board to hand over the possession if the formalities before handing over the possession have been completed; and if by any reason whatsoever, not attributable to the allottee, the possession is delayed by the housing board, it cannot and shall not put such allottee in loss by demanding interest for the period when the housing board itself was in error or ask for the enhanced price payable at the year or time when actual handing over of the possession is made by the housing board to the allottee.[3537] Heirs of bailer would be entitled to the price of market value of gold ornaments, at the time of the institution of the suit alongwith interest at the rate of 12% pa, more so, when the custody of the box containing gold jewellery and ornaments was entrusted to the bank and the custody always remained with the bank.[3538] Section 34 mandates that reasonable and proper interest may be awarded on the principal sum from the date of the suit till the date of the decree and further interest can also be awarded, not exceeding six per cent pa from the date of the decree to the date of the payment. There may be a substance that nowadays banks are giving higher rate of interest than six per cent pa hence, the reasoning of the legislature in fixing six per cent pa as further interest, does not hold good, but till the section is un-amended, the higher limit of interest is six per cent pa and the court as such could not award any interest for the period from the date of the suit till the date of decree or till the date of payment at the rate of six per cent pa in non–commercial transactions.[3539]

It is submitted that in the absence of any words indicating that the proviso is to apply to matters pending at the date the Amending Act, 1976 came into force, the proviso is prospective though contained in a procedural statute since it would affect substantive rights of parties in pending matters.

[s 34.3] Act of Court

On the principle that act of court will prejudice no one, the court can award interest where payment of dues was stayed even though no such condition was imposed in the said order.[3540]

[s 34.4] "On such Principal Sum" and "the Principal sum adjudged"

Section 34 lays that in addition to pendente lite and future interest, additional interest adjudged on such principal sum for the period prior to the institution of the suit can also be granted by the court. This interest adjudged for the period prior to the institution of the suit

---

3534. Associated Cement Co Ltd v UOI, AIR 1997 HP 1 (DB).
3535. Aditya Mass Communications Pvt Ltd v AP State Road Transport Corp, Hyderabad, AIR 1998 AP 125.
3536. Kolli Venkatta Apparao v State Bank of India, AIR 1998 AP 2.
3537. Jhabarmal v Rajasthan Housing Board, AIR 1998 Raj 254.
3538. Jagdish Chand Trikha v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1998 Del 266.
3539. Meenakashi Pharma Distributors v State of Karnataka, AIR 1999 Kant 192.
3540. LML Ltd, Kanpur v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2001 All 321 (DB); See also Raj Kumar Dey v Tara Pade Dey, AIR 1987 SC 2195 : (1987) 4 SCC 398 : JT (1987) 3 SC 555; Sohan Lal & Co v Lt Governor, AIR 1991 SC 1592 : (1991) Supp 2 SCC 295 : (1991) 2 SCR 295; Gursharan Singh v MIDC, AIR 1996 SC 1175 : (1996) 2 SCC 459.

also has to be on such "principal sum" and this also has reference to earlier expression "principal sum adjudged".[3541]

The bank which had advanced a loan, computed interests at quarterly rests and, after every quarter, added interest to the last balance, treating that balance as the principal sum for the next quarter for computing interest. It was held that in such a case, the "principal sum" for the purpose of section 34, would be the sum so arrived at, that is to say, the sum total of the original advance and the unpaid interest.[3542]

A commercial loan was advanced by bank. The loanee was to pay interest from the date of loan till the date of payment in full with quarterly rest. Interest accrued and added to principal amount on date of suit is "principal amount" for purposes of the interest and not the amount of loan originally advanced.[3543]

Submission that expression "on such principal sum" as occurring twice in the latter part of section 34(1), which refers to interest pendente lite and post-decree, should be interpreted to mean principal sum arrived at by excluding the interest even if it has stood capitalised, cannot be accepted. This is because, first, the interest once capitalised, ceases to be interest and becomes a part of principal sum or capital. That being so, the interest forming amalgam with the principal, in view of having been capitalised, is the principal sum and, therefore, the question of awarding interest on interest does not arise at all. Secondly, well-settled principles of interpretation of statutes would frown upon such a plea being entertained. A construction which leads to repugnancy or inconsistency has to be avoided. Ordinarily, a word or expression used at several places in one enactment should be assigned the same meaning so as to avoid "a head-on clash" between two meanings assigned to the same word or expression occurring at two places in the same enactment. It should not be lightly assumed that "Parliament had given with one hand what it took away with the other". That construction is to be rejected which will introduce uncertainty, friction or confusion into the working of the system. While embarking upon interpretation of words and expressions used in a statute it is possible to find a situation when the same word or expression may have somewhat different meaning at different places depending on the subject or context. This is however, an exception which can be resorted to only in the event of repugnancy in the subject or context being spelled out.[3544]

The award of interest can only be on the principal sum adjudged and not on the principal and interest as on the date of the decree. The court has also no discretion to award interest beyond the rate of 6%. But the court has still a discretion to award or not to award any interest and in awarding interest, to determine at what rate it should be awarded.[3545]

The meaning assigned to the expression "the principal sum adjudged" should continue to be assigned to "principal sum" at such other places in section 34(1) where the expression has been used qualified by the adjective "such", that is to say, as "such principal sum". Recognition of the method of capitalisation of interest so as to make it a part of the principal consistently with the contract between the parties or established banking practice does not offend the sense of reason, justice and equity. Such a system has a long established practice and a serious of judicial precedents upholding the same. Secondly, the underlying principle is that when interest is debited to the account of the borrower on periodical rests, it is debited because of

---

3541. Punjab National Bank v Surinder Singh Mandyal, AIR 1996 HP 1.
3542. Syndicate Bank v West Bengal Cement Ltd, AIR 1989 Del 107.
3543. Indian Bank v Kamalaya Cloth Store, AIR 1991 Ori 44.
3544. Central Bank of India v Ravindra, AIR 2001 SC 3095 : (2002) 1 SCC 367.
3545. KC Pradhan v Arun Kumar Dutta, AIR 2008 Ori 109 : 2007 (Supp) Ori LR 641.

its having fallen due on that day. Nothing prevents the borrower from paying the amount of interest on the date it falls due. If the amount of interest is paid there will be no occasion for capitalising the amount of interest and converting it into principal. If the interest is not paid on the date due, from that date the creditor is deprived of such use of the money which it would have made if the debtor had paid the amount of interest on the date due. The creditor needs to be compensated for deprivation.[3546]

The 1956 Amendment serves a twofold purpose. First, it prevents award of interest on the amount of interest so adjudged on the date of suit. Secondly, it brings the last clause of section 34, by narrowing down its ambit, in conformity with the scope of the first clause in so far as the expression "the principal sum adjudged" occurring in the first part of section 34 is concerned which has been left untouched by amendment. The meaning to be assigned to this expression in the first part remains the same as it was even before the amendment. However, in the third part of section 34, the words used were "on the aggregate sum so adjudged".[3547]

Therefore, subject to a binding stipulation contained in a voluntary contract between the parties and/or an established practice or usage interest on loans and advances may be charged on periodical rests and also capitalised on remaining unpaid amount. The principal sum actually advanced, coupled with the interest on periodical rests so capitalised, is capable of being adjudged as principal sum on the date of the suit. The principal sum so adjudged is "such principal sum" within the meaning of section 34 of the CPC, on which interest pendente lite and future interest, ie, post-decree interest, at such rate and for such period which the court may deem fit, may be awarded by the court.[3548]

Once the principal amount awarded is known, in relation to compensation for the time taken for the said payment to reach the decree holder, the only entitlement can be to interest at the rate granted by the court, but always with the base figure remaining as the cumulative amount of the award, and not the amount inclusive of interest as on the date of the decree.[3549]

The principal sum would mean and constitute outstanding loan as capitalised on the date of suit including the balance of loan amount remaining unpaid as well as the interest accrued thereon at the contractual rate, till the date of suit. Interest pendente lite from the date of suit as also future interest, shall, therefore, be payable on such capitalised sum which would constitute "principal sum adjudged" within the meaning of the said term under section 34(1) of the CPC, and not only on the balance amount outstanding towards the principal sum loaned.[3550]

[s 34.5] Comparison of Rate of Interest in Two Suits of Plaintiff Relevancy

Where special court decreed suit filed by Standard Chartered Bank (SCB) against Citibank with interest at the rate of 20% pa, and another suit filed back to back by Citibank against Canbank Financial Services Ltd (CANFINA) was decreed with interest at the rate of nine percent pa, in the appeals against both suits and allowed by Supreme Court — Citibank was held entitled to restitution/refund of total amount it had paid to SCB with interest at the rate of 12%pa and CANFINA was held entitled to refund with interest at the rate of 9% pa. Clarification of order was sought by SCB on ground of different rates of interest awarded in two suits of restitution of monies — variation of rate of interest ordered in two appeals

---

3546. KC Pradhan v Arun Kumar Dutta, AIR 2008 Ori 109 : 2007 (Supp) Ori LR 641.
3547. KC Pradhan v Arun Kumar Dutta, AIR 2008 Ori 109 : 2007 (Supp) Ori LR 641
3548. Central Bank of India v Ravindra, AIR 2001 SC 3095 : (2002) 1 SCC 367.
3549. Sanyukt Nirmata v Delhi Development Authority, AIR 2003 Del 68.
3550. Union Bank of India v Chhatarpur Siliment Sales Corp, AIR 2002 MP 145.

was keeping in view rate at which interest was allowed by special courts in two suits—the contention of SCB that Citibank was unjustly enriched by payment of interest at higher rate of three percent pa was found misplaced, comparison of rate of interest in two suits is wholly irrelevant.[3551]

[s 34.6] Vague Remark by Court Regarding Concession of Party as to Interest Effect

It is true that a concession made by a party and an observation made to that effect in the judgment, cannot be allowed to be denied. Only the court which recorded the statement itself was competent to rectify the error if the court recording the statement was approached to consider the matter without delay. However, in certain cases where a stray remark or observation is made by the court, which is not very clear and vague, a different picture emerges from the other part of the judgment. In such a case, it may be open for Supreme Court to ascertain the correct position based on totality of the observations made in the judgment itself. The question in the instant case was whether rate of interest awarded on compensation amount was not disputed before the high court. The high court judgment observed that the rate was not disputed. However, the high court in its judgment has nowhere indicated that the counsel appearing for the insurance company had made any statement conceding the rate of interest nor it is indicated how the concession was made. Then, the observation that the "rate of interest was not in dispute before the Court" may only lead to an inference that the rate of interest was not disputed before the court in the arguments advanced on behalf of the party concerned. On the other hand, it was found that on behalf of the insurance company its learned counsel had cited the decisions to indicate that the lower rate of interest was awarded in certain decisions and the decisions were referred to in the judgment. This is enough to indicate that the rate of interest was actually disputed before high court.[3552]

Where, in a suit for recovery of loan by a bank, the claim for enhanced rate of interest was made as per terms of agreement between parties, the observations by the trial court, that there was no record to show that defendants had agreed to pay higher rate of interest was found running contrary to terms of agreement, and subsequent acknowledgments made by defendants also indicating that they acknowledged their liability of amount due and amount was calculated on basis of enhanced rate of interest, there was no question of taking separate consent of defendant, as rate was increased as per terms of agreement, there was no violation of principles of natural justice for want of notice to defendants, therefore, claim for enhanced rate of interest cannot be rejected.[3553]

[s 34.7] Term of Invoice Pertaining to Interest

In the case of sale of goods, the terms and conditions on invoices showing that interest at the rate of 24% pa is payable, constitutes the agreed rate of interest.[3554]

3551. Citibank NA v Standard Chartered Bank, AIR 2005 SC 94 : (2004) 8 SCC 348 : (2004) 9 Scale 74.
3552. United India Insurance Co Ltd v Patricia Jean Mahajan, AIR 2002 SC 2607 : AIR 2002 SCW 2920 : (2002) 6 SCC 281 : (2002) 5 JT SC 74.
3553. Syndicate Bank v R Veeramma, AIR 2003 SC 2122, p 2123 : (2003) 2 SCC 15 : (2002) 9 Scale 734.
3554. Dura-Line India Pvt Ltd v BPL Broadband Network Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Del 186.

[s 34.8] Moneylender

One need not possess money lending licence if he or she intends to give money as hand loan. Merely because the petitioner is not a money-lender, it does not mean that the petitioner is not entitled to claim any interest which is agreed to be paid by the respondent.[3555]

[s 34.9] Inflation

There is a discernible tendency in some judicial pronouncements that the hazards of inflation of the future should be mitigated by a generous rate of interest. But there is no reason why this class of holders of funds, should alone receive separate treatment. Inflation is an economic and financial condition of general application. Inflation is a phenomena of which the court can take judicial notice. The court has to strike a balance between the competing equities.[3556] Its impact on any particular plaintiff has been neither more nor less as compared to everybody else; there is nothing special about it. Effects of inflation have to be neutralised — at least partially — by wiser investments. Interest is not awarded as damages; it is awarded to the plaintiff, only for his being kept out of the money which ought to have been paid to him. It takes care of the period between date of the claim and the date of realisation. It has nothing to do with the erosion that the fund suffers thereafter, owing to future inflation.[3557] It cannot be laid down as a rule of law, that interest above a particular rate is per se penal or excessive. Whether penal or excessive, is always a question to be decided on the facts and circumstances of a given case.[3558]

[s 34.10] The Three Divisions of Interest

Interest that may be awarded to a plaintiff in a suit for money may be divided into three heads, according to the period for which it is allowed, namely—

(a) interest accrued prior to the institution of the suit on the principal sum adjudged (as distinguished from the principal sum claimed);

(b) additional interest on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, "at such rate as the court deems reasonable";

(c) further interest on the principal sum adjudged from the date of the decree to the date of the payment or to such earlier date as the court thinks fit, at a rate not exceeding six percent pa.

The award of interest can only be on the principal sum adjudged and not on the principal and interest as on the date of the decree. Also, the court has no discretion to award interest beyond the rate of six percent. But the court has still a discretion to award or not award any interest and in awarding interest, to determine at what rate it should be awarded, subject to the maximum of six per cent.[3559]

Interest up to date of suit is a matter of substantive law and the section does not refer to payment of interest under the first head.[3560] It applies only to the second and third heads. It

---

3555. C. Madhu v BVS Murthy, AIR 2003 Kant 113.
3556. UOI v Prince Muffakam Jah, AIR 1995 SC 227 : (1995) 1 SCC 702 : (1994) 4 SCR 582.
3557. Managing Director, Karnataka Power Corp Ltd v Geetha, AIR 1989 Kant 104 (DB).
3558. Chilamkuri Gowisankar Rao v Bhrugumalla Venkatappaya Sons and Co, AIR 1973 AP 310 (DB).
3559. BR & Sons v CPVK Chetty & Co, AIR 1962 Mad 310. See also RC Datta v Rajiv Anand, AIR 2003 Del 199; UOI v Parasuram, AIR 2003 Kant 333.
3560. Crewdson v Ganesh, (1920) 32 Cal LJ 239, p 253; Joseph v UOI, AIR 1957 Ker 3.

has been held the right to interest prior to the suit is a substantive one where as pendente lite, it is one of procedure within the discretion of the court.[3561]

[s 34.10.1] Interest Prior to the Date of Suit

Under section 34 of the Code, no rate of interest has been fixed in respect of the interest payable prior to the institution of the suit on the principal sum adjudged and the interest payable on the principal sum adjudged from the date of the suit to the date of the decree. It is only in regard to further interest payable on the principal sum adjudged from the date of the decree to the payment, six percent interest has been fixed.[3562]

Interest can be awarded either under the statute or under an agreement between the parties or as per the usage and custom. If the claim of the interest does not fall on either of these categories, the plaintiff shall not be entitled to recover it from the defendant.[3563]

Pre-suit interest is referable to substantive law and can be subdivided into two sub-heads: (i) where there is a stipulation for the payment of interest at a fixed rate and (ii) where there is no such stipulation. If there is a stipulation for the rate of interest, the court must allow the rate upon the date of the suit, subject to three exceptions:

(i) any provision of law applicable to money lending transactions, or usury laws or any other debt law governing the parties and having an overriding effect on any stipulation for payment of interest voluntarily entered into between the parties;

(ii) if the rate is penal, the court must award at such rate as it deems reasonable; and

(iii) even if the rate is not penal, the court may reduce it if the interest is excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair.

If there is no express stipulation for payment of interest, the plaintiff is not entitled to interest except on proof of mercantile usage, statutory right to interest or an implied agreement.[3564]

Interest antecedent to suit is not a matter of procedure but a brief note on the subject will not be out of place. The law on the subject may be considered under the following two heads:

(i) where there is a stipulation for the payment of interest at a fixed rate;

(ii) where there is no stipulation at all for the payment of interest.

[s 34.10.1.1] Stipulation to Pay Interest

If there is a stipulation for the rate of interest, the court must allow that rate up to the date of the suit, however high it may be, subject to the two following exceptions:

(a) if the rate is penal, the court may award interest at such rate as it deems reasonable: and

(b) even if the rate is not penal, the court may reduce it if the interest is excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair.

3561. Basant Kumar Misra v Roshanalal Shrivastava, AIR 1954 Ngp 300 : (1954) ILR Nag 435.
3562. APSRT C v B Vijaya, AIR 2002 AP 441 (FB).
3563. New India Assurance Ltd v Chinar Goods Carrier, AIR 1998 Del 392.
3564. Ravi Fabrics v Shaherbon Traders, AIR 2003 Mad 192.

For the period prior to institution of suit, contractual rate of interest is mandatory. Court has no discretion in the matter.[3565] In a Bombay case, the defendant did not specifically deny the plaintiffs averment, that the defendant had agreed to pay interest at the rate of 12% pa. It was held that the award of interest at the rate of 12% (for the pre-suit period), was justified.[3566] In a Gujarat case, the bank sued for the recovery of a loan amount with interest. Defendants admitted the claim and prayed for instalments and reduction of interest rates. A "compromise" decree was passed by the trial court, despite the objections of the plaintiff. It was held that such a decree was not tenable. A decree which is not in conformity with the judgment, is liable to be revised and set aside.[3567] If the parties agree that in respect of amounts advanced for agricultural purpose certain rate of interest would be paid, it may not be proper for the court to interfere and reduce the amount of interest agreed to be paid by the parties. The court must always give utmost respect and sanctity to the contract entered into between the parties. Section 21A of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, specifically states that the transaction should not be reopened by the court on account of excessive interest, it may not be proper on the part of the court to re-write the contract and hold that one of the parties is entitled to avoid the contract in the matter of payment of interest.[3568]

The Himachal Pradesh High Court has held that where fluctuating rate of interest was agreed to be charged, but the minimum rate of interest was agreed to be 19% pa with six monthly rests, the plea that the interest was not agreed to be paid at the said rate cannot be accepted.[3569]

[s 34.10.1.2] No Stipulation to Pay Interest

If there is no express stipulation for payment of interest, the plaintiff is not entitled to interest except in the following cases:

Mercantile usages.—Where it is allowed by mercantile usage;[3570] but such usage must be pleaded and proved.[3571] There was no contract between the parties of interest. The bills of the plaintiff were to some extent inflated and to some extent there was mistake, besides the incorrect measurements. The plaintiff had committed a breach of contract by not completing the building and had almost abandoned the work before its completion. In these circumstances, the Bombay High Court had held that the plaintiff cannot be granted interest prior to the date of institution of the suit.[3572]

3565. State of India v B Gupta (Tea) Ltd, AIR 1987 Cal 64 (DB); Bank of Baroda v Shri Subhash Chander Dutta, AIR 1995 J&K 99.
3566. Oriental Coal Co Ltd v Mohanlal Kishanlal, AIR 1984 Bom 174 (DB).
3567. Union Bank of India, Bhavnagar v Narendra Plastics, AIR 1991 Guj 67 (DB).
3568. K Pushpangadan v Federal Bank Ltd, AIR 1999 Ker 421 (DB).
3569. HP State Industrial Dev Corp Ltd, Shimla v Gobind Pharm Chem Pvt Ltd, AIR 2007 HP 3 : (2006) 2 Shim LC 300.
3570. Rayalamma v Butchirammya, AIR 1942 Mad 429 : (1942) ILR Mad 464; Doolubdas v Ramalall, (1850) 5 Moo Ind App 109, p 136 (Bombay); Juggomohun v Manichand, (1859) 7 Moo Ind App 263 (Cal); Juggomohun v Kaisreechand, (1862) 9 Moo Ind App 260 (Cal); BN Railway Co Ltd v Ruttanji, AIR 1938 PC 67 : (1938) ILR 2 Cal 72 : (1938) 65 IA 66.
3571. Hirabai Gendalal v Bhagirath Ramchandra & Co, (1945) ILR Bom 819 : AIR 1946 Bom 174 : 47 BLR 808; Mahamad Abdul Hasim v Srimat Jagatram, (1941) ILR All 777 : AIR 1942 All 96; Dinanath v Divanchand, (1930) 32 Bom LR 404 : AIR 1930 Bom 444.
3572. Dinshaw and Dinshaw (M/s) v Indoswe Engineers Pvt Ltd, AIR 1995 Bom 180.

[s 34.10.1.3] Statutory right to interest

Interest is payable where a right to it, or an authority for its allowance or payment, is conferred by statute.[3573] In the case of sale of goods, even if there is no stipulation in the contract to pay interest, the vendor is entitled to interest from the date of payment of the price till the date of the suit under section 61(2)(a) of the Sale of Goods Act, 1930.[3574] Section 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 provides that when no rate of interest is specified in a promissory note or bill of exchange, the court shall, notwithstanding any agreement relating to interest between the parties, award interest at the rate of six percent pa from the date on which the amount claimed became due and payable. Similarly, the Interest Act 32 of 1839 (now replaced by Interest Act, 1978) enacts that where there is no stipulation to pay interest, but the amount claimed is a sum certain (as distinguished from unascertained damages), and is payable at a certain time by virtue of some "written instrument", the court,[3575] may allow interest at a rate not exceeding the current rate of interest from the date on which the amount became payable. If no time is fixed for the payment of the amount, the court may award interest at the rate aforesaid from the time the creditor demands payment in writing intimating to the debtor that interest will be claimed from the date of such demand up to the date of payment.[3576] The provisions of the Interest Act 32 of 1839 (now replaced by Interest Act, 1978) are in the main a reproduction of the provisions of Lord Tenterden's Act [3 and 4 Wm 4, c 42, section 48]. The House of Lords in London, Chathan and Dover Railway Co v South Eastern Railway Co,[3577] the modern leading case on interest, held that the "sum certain" within the meaning of that Act must be a certain sum which is one absolutely and in all events due and not a mere provisional payment to be made by one party to the other. Interest Act of 1839, section 1 contains a proviso that "interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law." This proviso applies to cases in which the Court of Equity exercises jurisdiction to allow interest.[3578] But to invoke the rule of equity the existence of circumstances attracting equity jurisdiction has to be established.[3579] In such cases, it has been held that interest could be awarded by way of damages.[3580] It is settled law that interest can be allowed only if it is supported by law of contract. There is no case that as per the terms of the contract, plaintiff are entitled to get interest. Interest on the suit claim can be granted under section 34 of the CPC only from the date of the suit. As for the interregnum, the only law which could be applicable is the Interest Act, 1978.[3581] To deny post litigation interest would amount to depriving the claimant of compensation for delay in obtaining relief for no fault of his. We hold that even though section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure, has not been expressly made applicable to the proceedings before the Claims Commissioner under the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (now replaced by Interest Act, 1978), there is no reason to hold that the principles of section 34 would be inapplicable.[3582] There exists no specific bar to the applicability of 3573. UOI v Watkins Mayor & Co, AIR 1966 SC 275.

---

3574. State v Ajit Kumar, AIR 1977 Cal 273 : 81 Cal WN 36.
3575. This does not apply to an executing court; Hogarth Shipping Co Ltd v Mitsui Bussan Kaisha Ltd, (1926) 53 Cal 735, (1926) AC 1119; Vithal Dass v Rupchand, AIR 1967 SC 188 : (1966) Supp SCR 164; Deonandan v Ramdayal, AIR 1971 AP 102; Mahavir Prasad v Durga Datt, AIR 1961 SC 990 : (1961) 3 SCR 639.
3576. Bajranglal v Anandilal Ram Chandra, (1944) Nag 101 : (1944) AN 124.
3577. London, Chathan and Dover Railway Co v South Eastern Railway Co, (1893) AC 429.
3578. Raja Kamakshya Narain Singh v Bhurmull, ('46) AP 154. Section 65 IA 66, supra; Maine and New Brunswick & Co v Hart, (1929) AC 631 relied on.
3579. State v New India Sugar Mills, 1977 AP 95.
3580. Joseph v UOI, (1957) A Ker 3; Hindustan Commercial Bank v Jagtar Singh, 1974 AIR P&H 208.
3581. CT Xavier v P.V Joseph, AIR 1995 Ker 140 (DB).
3582. UOI v Laxmi Pati, AIR 1995 MP 90 (DB).

the CPC in section 18 of the Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987. Rather it unshackles the tribunal from the procedural laws mandated in the Code while at the same time maintaining the requirement of compliance of natural justice. Thus, section 34 of the Code continues to be vested in the authority of the Railway Claims Tribunal and it has power to award interest pendente lite on compensation paid by Railways.[3583]

In Trojan Co Ltd v Nagappa Chettiar,[3584] interest was allowed on money obtained by a stock-broker while acting on behalf of a constituent, as he stood in a fiduciary relationship to him. But apart from rules of equity, interest is not payable on damages prior to suit, while after suit, it is in the discretion of the court.[3585] In a writ petition, the Supreme Court directed the bank, to deposit certain amount in the cash credit account of petitioner. The bank deposited the said sum accordingly in cash credit account. It was held that petitioners would not be entitled to any interest on the said sum. Cash credit account is in the nature of a current account and no interest is payable in this account.[3586] Where, in a suit for rent, the lease was found to be invalid, and a decree was granted for damages for use and occupation, it was held that no interest could be awarded thereon prior to suit.[3587] Interest on compensation under the Railway Accident and Untoward Incidents (Compensation) Rules 1990 is payable from the date of filing of the petition before the tribunal.[3588]

The Kerala High Court has held in the undernoted case that when no rate of interest is specified in the loan instrument, the creditor can claim interest as provided under section 80 of the Negotiable Instrument Act only up to the date of filing of the suit and the interest pendente lite is subject to discretion of the court as provided under section 34 of the Code.[3589] However, a Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court has held that liability to pay interest is not provided in the Railways Act, 1989 (section 124-A). It is discretionary on the part of the tribunal to grant interest while determining compensation. But liability towards interest can be fastened only on the date of determination of the compensation, and not from the date of filing application in the tribunal.[3590]

Tribunals under the Railway Claims Tribunal Act, 1987 are bound by the principles of natural justice. Since grant of interest on decretal amount under section 34 of the Code is also based on the principles of natural justice, it was held by a Division Bench of Calcutta High Court that Railway Tribunal should award interest on determined sum from the date of application till date of deposit as the rate given by a National Bank for term deposit of one year or more.[3591]

An important area towards which the attention of the Supreme Court was direct is the amount of compensation payable under the Railway Accident (Compensation and Untoward Incidents) Rules, 1960. It is common knowledge that amount payable as compensation is revised from time to time. If a victim or claimant is paid compensation as was prescribed on

---

3583. Prasant Kumar Choudhury v UOI, AIR 2007 Ori 33 : 2008 ACJ 685.
3584. Trojan Co Ltd v Nagappa Chettiar, AIR 1953 SC 235 : (1953) SCR 789 : (1953) SCJ 345.
3585. Mahavir Prasad v Durga Dutto, AIR 1961 SC 990 : (1961) 3 SCR 639 : (1961) 1 SCJ 569; UOI v Khandelwal Bros, AIR 1975 Mad 389; VA Thevar v Madurai Municipality, AIR 1975 Mad 77 : (1975) 1 Mad LJ 97.
3586. Raneagunj Coal Association Ltd v UOI, AIR 1990 SC 1879.
3587. Jai Narain v Bisewar Prasad, AIR 1954 Pat 304.
3588. UOI v M Thankaraj, AIR 2000 Ker 91 (DB).
3589. Thankachan v Catholic Syrian Bank Ltd, AIR 2007 (Digest of Cases) 6 (Ker) : 2006 (3) Banker's Journal 212 : 2006 3 Ker LT 53.
3590. UOI v Konduru Venkata Reddy, AIR 2008 AP 211 : (2008) 5 Andh LT 172.
3591. Mainura Bibi v UOI, AIR 2009 Cal 214 : 2009 (81) All Ind case 606 (DB).

the date of accident, the amount he will receive after settlement of his claim over a long period of litigation before Tribunal, would be a mere pittance. In the case of Rathi Menon,[3592] the Supreme Court held that compensation to be paid by Railway Administration must be fixed as per what the rules prescribed at the time of making the order and not in terms of the money value which prevailed on the date of the accident. The observations of KT Thomas J in the above case is an example of humanitarian approach to interpretation:

> 28. The unjust consequence resulting from the interpretation which the Division Bench placed can be demonstrated in another plane also. If a person who sustained injury in a railway accident or in an untoward incident was disabled from making an application immediately and he makes the application a few years hence, is he to get the compensation in terms of the money value which is prevailed on the date of the accident? Suppose a Tribunal wrongly dismissed a claim after a few years of filing the application and the claimant approaches the High Court in appeals. As it happens quite often now, some High Courts could take up such an appeal only after the lapse of many years and if the appeal is decided in favour of the claimant after so many years, what a pity if the amount awarded is only in terms of the figure indicated on the date of the accident.
>
> 29. From all these, we are of the definite opinion that the Claims Tribunal must consider what the rules prescribed at the time of making the order for payment of the compensation.

Relying on the above decision, the Supreme Court reaffirmed the view in a subsequent decision.[3593]

Implied agreement.—An agreement to pay interest can be implied from the course of dealing between the parties.[3594] For cases in which courts of equity allow interest, see Bengal Nagpur Railway Co v Rattanji Ramji.[3595]

The law was thus summed up by the Supreme Court in Mahavir Prasad v Durga Dutto:[3596]

> Interest for a period prior to the commencement of the suit is claimable either under an agreement or usage of trade or under a statutory provision or under the Interest Act, for a sum certain where notice is given. Interest is also awarded in some cases by Courts of equity.

It has accordingly been held that interest is not payable on tax which has not been paid unless the statute provides for it.[3597] The tribunal, under the MP Town Improvement Trust Act, 1961, assessing compensation in respect of compulsory acquisition of land, though having the characteristics of a civil court, has been held not justified in awarding interest from the date of delivery of possession till the determination of the compensation. This is so because neither this section nor the MP Act authorises award of such interest.[3598] In an Andhra Pradesh case, the petitioner — an advocate—accepted the full amount payable to him by the state government as his legal remuneration, without protest for the non-payment of interest at the rate of 12% pa on the allegedly delayed payment. The payment was made by the state government without following the elaborate procedure otherwise prescribed for the sanction of individual bills and for the scrutiny of certificates, etc. It was held that the petitioner cannot subsequently claim such interest at the rate of 12%pa. It was all the more so, when in the government 3592. Rathi Menon v UOI, AIR 2001 SC 1333 : (2001) 3 SCC 714.

---

3593. N Parmeswaran Pillai v UOI, AIR 2002 SC 1834 : (2002) 4 SCC 306.
3594. Wiollmot v Gardner, [1901] 2 Ch 548; Re Dunchan, [1905] 1 Ch 307.
3595. Bengal Nagpur Railway Co v Rattanji Ramji, 65 IA 66 ; (1938) 2 Cal 73 : 42 Cal WN 985.
3596. Mahavir Prasad v Durga Dutto, AIR 1961 SC 990 : (1961) 3 SCR 639 : (1961) 1 SCJ 569; Suganchand v Balchand, AIR 1952 Pat 489; UOI v Khetra Mohan, AIR 1960 Cal 190; Rajendra Prasad v Gaya Prasad, AIR 1975 Pat 312.
3597. Mattancheri Municipality v Saheed Oil Mills, (1957) ILR Ker 368.
3598. Laxmichand v Indore Improvement Trust, AIR 1975 SC 1303 : (1975) 1 SCC 565.

orders prescribing the scale of fees, there was no provision under which he could be said to be entitled to the payment of interest on delayed payment.[3599] In another Andhra Pradesh case, the plaintiff, owner of certain theatres, lent money to get a motion picture released from the producer for exhibition in the plaintiff's theatres. The condition was that the defendants (exhibitors) would deliver all prints for exhibition in the theatres of the plaintiffs and sister concerns. It was held that plaintiffs could not claim interest. In the first place, the agreement did not provide for interest. Secondly, such evidence as was led by plaintiff did not show that there was any such usage.[3600] In another case the Andhra Pradesh High Court held that where there was no agreement between parties for payment of interest pendente lite, the order of the trial judge denying interest for the relevant period was held to be proper.[3601]

In the London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company's case, the House of Lords held that interest cannot be given by way of damages for detention of a debt. The same view has been taken by the Privy Council in Bengal Nagpur Railway Co v Ratanji Ramji.[3602]

[s 34.10.2] Interest from Date of Suit to Date of Decree

The rate of interest from the date of the suit to the date of the decree is in the discretion of the court,[3603] and this discretion is not excluded even if a fixed rate is mentioned in the contract as payable up to realisation.[3604] But though the rate of interest for the aforesaid period is discretionary, the court should, in the exercise of that discretion, award interest at the contract rate, unless it would be inequitable to do so.[3605] A debt advanced against a negotiable instrument is governed by the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 till its nature is converted into a decretal debt. That being so, interest for the period between the date of the suit and decree would be governed by section 79 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 and not by this section.[3606] As to compound interest, (see note under the heading "Compound Interest") and the under mentioned cases.[3607] The court may, under this head, award interest in a suit for money, although interest is not specifically asked for in the plaint.[3608]

3599. P Ram Reddy v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1990 AP76.
3600. Premjit Theatres, Secunderabad v Rashi Mehata & Co, AIR 1990 AP 272 (DB).
3601. Kusa Lingaiah v Pandiri Laxmaiah, AIR 2006 AP 121 : (2006) 2 Andh LT 228.
3602. JH Pattinson v Bindhya Debi, (1933) ILR 12 Pat 2161; UOI v WP Factories, AIR 1966 SC 394 : (1966) 1 SCR 580; Shamlal v State, AIR 1968 All 139 : (1967) ILR 2 All 129; Mangalji v State, AIR 1971 Raj 167; ST Thimniappa v SL Prasad, AIR 1978 Kant 251.
3603. Hakim Rai v Ganga Ram, AIR 1942 PC 61 : (1942) 47 Cal WN 113; Gajadhar Marwari v Baidynath Mundal, AIR 1950 Pat 379l : (1950) 29 Pat 545; Anandram Mangturam v Bholaram Taunmal, AIR 1946 Bom 1 : 47 Bom LR 719; Panna Lal v Nihal Chand, AIR 1922 PC 46 (PC) : (1922) 26 Cal WN 737; Binapani v Rabindranath, AIR 1959 Cal 213.
3604. Magniram v Dhowat Roy, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 569; Carvalho v Nurbibi, (1879) ILR 3 Bom 202; Umes Chaunder v Fatima, (1891) ILR 18 Cal 164 : 17 IA 201. The decision to the contrary in Ramachandra v Devu, (1889) ILR 12 Mad 485, is no longer law.
3605. Orde v Skinner, (1880) ILR 3 All 91, pp 106–07 : 7 IA 196; Bhagwanti v Atma Singh, AIR 1934 Lah 32.
3606. Utsav Lal Gupta v Mohan Bross, AIR 1975 Raj 236.
3607. M.V Mahalinga Aiyar v Union Bank Ltd, Kumbakonam, AIR 1930 Mad 216; Kaluram v Chimniram, AIR 1934 Bom 86 : (1934) 16 Bom LR 68.
3608. Yadaorao Ganpatro Kadu v Ramrao Balashabe Dhote, AIR 1943 Ngp 240 : (1943) ILR Nag 555; Rup Ram v Harphu, AIR 1921 Lah 125 : (1921) 2 Lah 256; Lala Chhajmal Das v Brijbhukan Lal, 22 IA 199; Chatrabhuj v Ambar Singh, AIR 1931 Bom 549 : (1931) ILR 55 Bom 657; Parashram v Secretary of State, AIR 1932 Bom 319 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 129.

It is well-established that no interest can be allowed on damages for any period prior to the suit,[3609] but there is a conflict of decisions whether interest can be allowed under this section on damages from the date of the suit, it being held in some cases that it can be allowed,[3610] and in some that it cannot be allowed.[3611]

Where the high court has refused to exercise its discretionary power to allow interest from date of suit, the judicial committee as a rule will not interfere.[3612] An application under section 31(1) of the State Financial Corporations Act, 1951 is something akin to an application for post-decree attachment. In the matter of future interest, the corporation could not have been put to more disadvantageous position than an ordinary creditor, in whose case the court could have awarded future interest from the date of the filing of the suit until realisation under section 34 of the CPC.[3613] A bank advanced a loan for the purchase of a truck. The minimum rate of interest was fixed at 13.5%. Defendant failed to pay the amount in terms of the agreement of loan. A suit was filed and the hypothecated property (namely, the truck) was attached by the order of the court. The defendant, in order to be released the attached vehicle, admitted his liability and offered to pay the full amount. On such admission, the suit was decreed without costs and without interest. It was held that there could not be any justification for relieving the defendant from liability to pay interest on the outstanding amount from the date of filing the suit until the date of payment of the amount which he was bound to pay even in terms of the agreement. Refusal to award interest affects the right of the claimant.[3614] The court has no discretion to grant different rate of interest than the contractual rate of interest from the date it is due and payable from the date it is actually paid. In case of commercial loans of the banks, section 34 is to be applied in the context of circulars/directions issued by the Reserve Bank of India. Also, it cannot be disputed that when a bank advanced loan or interest with quarterly rests, the interest is worked at the close of every quarter and added towards the outstanding balance for the purpose of computation of interest after deducting the amount paid by the customer, if any. In a case decided by the Supreme Court, the appellant was entitled to refund of the amount paid as excise duty on the price of packing material used for packing superfine cement which (according to the appellant), was paid under protest. It was held that the letter was in the nature of a protest. Therefore, the question of limitation did not arise for refund of the duty. The appeal court directed a refund of the amount. The appellant was directed to pay interest at the rate of six per cent from the date of refusal of refund, with costs of the appeal.[3615] According to the High Court of Andhra Pradesh, even as to interest pendente lite, the court cannot grant a higher rate of interest than what was contracted between the parties. The area is covered either by contract, or by statute. Section 34(1) of the CPC regulates the grey area. By implication, it is either the contractual rate or less, but not a rate in excess thereof. But, as no appeal or cross-objections were filed by the respondent, interference by the high court was not called for.[3616] If a plaintiff, suing for specific performance of an agreement

---

3609. Framji v Commr of Customs, (1870) 7 Bom HCR 89; Rutnessur v Hurrish Chunder, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 221, p 225; Dominion of India v Raj Bahadur Seth Bikhraj, AIR 1957 Pat 586; Hiranandani v BBC&D Mfg. Co, AIR 1969 Bom 373; Gujarat Electricity Board v SA Jais & Co, AIR 1972 Guj 192; Mangalji v State, AIR 1971 Raj 167; Vishnu Sugar Mills v Rameshwar Jute Mills, AIR 1970 Pat 323.
3610. Pannalal v Mukhram, AIR 1924 Cal 637 : (1924) 39 Cal LJ 77, pp 84–85; Ramalinga v Gokuldas, AIR 1926 Mad 1021 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 243.
3611. Crewdson v Ganesh, (1920) 32 Cal LJ 239.
3612. Sourendra Mohan v Hari Prasad, AIR 1925 PC 280 : (1926) ILR 5 Pat 13 : 52 IA 418.
3613. Himachal Pradesh Financial Corp, Simla v Tourist Hotel and Restaurant, AIR 1990 HP 27 (FB).
3614. United Commercial Bank, Silchar v Satish Chandra Ghosh, AIR 1991 Gau 19.
3615. India Cements Ltd v Collector of Central Excise, AIR 1989 SC 1496 : (1989) 2 SCC 676 : (1989) 2 SCR 715 : (1989) 1 Scale 1058 : JT 1989 Suppl SC 137.
3616. Union Bank of India v P Krishnaiah, AIR 1989 AP 211.

of sale, cannot be awarded specific performance, he should at least be awarded interest against the defendant, who has himself enjoyed use of the earnest money deposited by the plaintiff.[3617]

Minimum rate of interest in case of compensation for accidents is 12% pa from the date of application for compensation "as filed in the tribunal".[3618] The principal sum on which interest can be awarded, is the principal sum as adjudged by the court and not the principal sum stated to have been advanced. Interest accrues on the amount which the court determines, after adjudging the rights of the parties.[3619] Ordinarily, interest pendente lite should be granted under section 34 of the CPCunless there are cogent reasons for depriving the plaintiff of the interest during trial.[3620] Court is not bound to award interest in every case. If interest at very heavy rate has been charged on the initial amount of the loan, and for the subsequent period, court taking that into account, awards interest at only three percent, the order cannot be said to be unreasonable.[3621] Where proceedings for the acquisition of land are withdrawn, then compensation becomes payable under section 48 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 which shall be determined by the collector "for the damage suffered by the owner in consequence of the notice (of acquisition) or of any proceedings thereunder". Section 48 is silent as to interest on the amount of compensation. The Gujarat High Court has held that interest from the date of application for the damages can be awarded on equitable grounds, but section 34 of the CPCis not applicable.[3622]

A court sale which was defective for mistake of the court, was set aside. It was held that the auction purchaser (at whose instance the sale was set aside for gross irregularity, by overstating the upset price) was entitled to interest, not from the date of suit, but from the date of the order of the trial court to the date of realisation.[3623]

Suit was filed for the recovery of money by a bank against the widow and daughter of a debtor, who were guarantors for the debt. No attitude was shown by the widow or daughter to disown the loan. No sufficient financial resources were available to them, other than selling off the mortgaged house. Discretionary order of the court declining interest pendente lite and post-decree interest was held to be sustainable. Pendente lite as well as post-decree interest is in the nature of compensation or damages, which the court may award to the plaintiff for being kept out of the money due to him. Whether one looks to the general provisions of section 34 of the CPC or to those of O XXXIII, rule 11 (which are specially applicable to mortgage suits), the relevant provisions are patently governed and controlled by the expression "may" and, therefore, it can be concluded from these provisions, that the award of such interest is not obligatory, but only discretionary and the court may, or may not, award such interests.[3624] Where a pro-note is silent as to the rate of interest, the plaintiff is entitled to interest only from the date of suit till the date of decree and till realisation at the rate of six percent. Acceptance of the defendant, of calculation of interest at 18%, does not necessarily imply acceptance of that rate by him.[3625] Pendente lite interest should not exceed the contractual rate. Subject to that, it is in the discretion

---

3617. H Paramsivam v FCI, AIR 1989 AP 124.
3618. Jagbir Singh v General Manager, Punjab Roadways, AIR 1987 SC 70; State v Ashadevi, AIR 1989 AP 97.
3619. Kalyanpur Coal Storage v Sohanlal Bajpai, AIR 1990 All 218 (DB); Bank of India v Harish Chandra Srivastava, AIR 1998 MP 243 (DB).
3620. Satish Solvent Extractions Pvt Ltd v New India Assurance Co Ltd, AIR 1996 Bom 293 (DB).
3621. Kalyanpur Coal Storage v Sohanlal Bajpai, AIR 1990 All 218 (DB).
3622. Chinubahai Nanalal v Addl Special Land Acquisition Officer, AIR 1989 Guj 123.
3623. P Janikamma v Bulleyya, AIR 1985 AP 234.
3624. United Bank of India v Rashayan Udyog, AIR 1990 Cal 146.
3625. Syndicate Bank v NC Kalyani Raghavan, AIR 1983 Mad 254.

of the court. It need not be awarded at the contractual rate.[3626] Pendente lite rate of interest is in the court's discretion. Court need not record reasons. The question whether discretion has been judiciously exercised or not, will have to be determined on the facts of each case.[3627] The rate of interest pendente lite should be at the contract rate, unless there are circumstances which would disentitle the plaintiff to have the same. The burden is on the defendant to show such circumstances.[3628] The court must grant some interest pendente lite when it passes a decree for the payment of money. It is only the rate of interest which is in the discretion of the court.[3629] In a Calcutta case, the suit was instituted in 1959. It was decreed in 1969. An appeal preferred in 1970 remained pending for 17 years. The trial court had not awarded interest pendente lite. The high court directed payment of interest at five per cent for 15 years.[3630]

[s 34.10.3] Interest from Date of Decree to Date of Payment

The rate of interest from the date of the decree to the date of payment is also in the discretion of the court. The plaintiff getting the security of a decree has his interest reduced in the generality of cases.[3631] If in a non-commercial transaction the interest awarded is 18% pa by the court below, the higher court can reduce it to six per cent pa.[3632] Where the rate of interest charged and decreed was 24%, the Lahore High Court refused to allow interest after decree.[3633] If the court awards interest from the date of the decree but no rate is specified, the decree-holder will be entitled to interest at the court rate, which is usually six percent.[3634] Although the court rate of interest is usually six percent if the court were to postpone the payment of decretal amount or grant instalments for such payment under O XX, rules 11 (1) and (2), this section would cease to apply and interest can be awarded at higher rate.[3635] But if no such interest is awarded by the decree, it will be deemed to have been refused;[3636] even though the omission happens to be accidental;[3637] see sub-section (2). A provision for future interest in a decree though the judgment is silent about it, it is valid and cannot be challenged on the ground that the decree is at variance with the judgment.[3638] The amounts sought to be realised by the bank from the defendants were stated from time-to-time in the notices issued by it. It was held that "the principal amount" found due, not only meant the principal as such, but also the amount due on interest which had become part of the principal amount as per the calculation of the bank.[3639] The decree which was put to execution, did not contain any order or direction for the payment of any interest on the amount which was payable to the decree-holder, consequent on the declaration made by the court decreeing the government servant's suit. It was held that in the absence of pleadings and directions in the judgment or decree, 3626. West Bengal Financial Corpn v Bertram Scott (Ltd), AIR 1983 Cal 381; State Bank of India v B Gupta (Tea) Ltd, AIR 1987 Cal 64 (DB).

---

3627. State Bank of India v B Gupta (Tea) Ltd, AIR 1987 Cal 64 (DB).
3628. K Appa Rao v VL Varadaraj, AIR 1981 Mad 94.
3629. West Bengal Financial Corp v Bertram Scott (L) Ltd, AIR 1983 Cal 387 (DB).
3630. LIC of India v Kumar Purnandu Nath, AIR 1988 Cal 311.
3631. Umesh Chunder v Fatima, (1891) ILR 18 Cal 164, 180 : 17 IA 201.
3632. Rajni Kumar v Suresh Kumar Malhotra, AIR 2003 SC 1322.
3633. Bulaki v Pesricha, AIR 1928 Lah 811.
3634. Rani Lalun v Behari, (1871) 7 Beng LR App 30; LIC v NC Borl, AIR 1974 Cal 339.
3635. Gordhandas v V Khetsi, AIR 1967 Guj 276.
3636. Ambi v Srideri, AIR 1924 Mad 102 : (1923) 45 Mad LJ 687 (decree silent as to interest on costs, see section 35(3)); State of Uttar Pradesh v Reishma Devi, AIR 1974 All 257.
3637. Thirugnanavalli v Venugopala, AIR 1940 Mad 29.
3638. UOI v A. Venkataiah, AIR 1975 Mad 29.
3639. Jagdamba Rice Mills v Oriental Bank of Commerce Karnal, AIR 1990 P&H 60; PNB v Vidya Harbery, AIR 1999 HP 24 (DB).

the executing court cannot award interest. The right of the decree-holder to obtain relief is determined in accordance with the terms of the decree.[3640] The bank which had advanced a loan, computed interests at quarterly rests and, after every quarter, added interest to the last balance, treating that balance as the principal sum for the next quarter for computing interest. It was held that in such a case, the "principal sum" for the purpose of section 34, would be the sum so arrived at, that is to say, the sum total of the original advance and the unpaid interest.[3641] According to the Calcutta High Court, interest pendente lite and interest for the post decretal period—

(a) are in the nature of compensation to the plaintiff, for being kept out of the money due to him; and

(b) are discretionary as indicated by the word "may".[3642]

Award of interest at 1.5% per month from date of filing of the suit till date of actual realisation of amount, is null and void. The provisions of section 34 are not procedural in nature and, in fact, deal with the jurisdiction of the court to direct payment of interest. To the extent the provision has been ignored, the decree is rendered null and void.[3643] With regard to the rate of interest awarded from the date of decree to till realisation, because the first appellate court had no discretion to award interest exceeding the rate of six percent pa from the date of decree as, admittedly, the amount adjudged as payable by the appellant was not of a commercial transaction as is clear from the case set up by the parties and as such, that requires to be restricted to 6% pa only. To hold so, no detail discussion is necessary.[3644] The Patna High Court has held that where interest from the date of the decree till payment is refused, reasons for such refusal should be given.[3645] But this would create an anomaly for, if the refusal is explicit, reasons would have to be given; while if it is implicit, no reasons would have to be given since silence is presumed to be refusal.

In a case decided by the Privy Council in 1878 it was held that when the decree is silent about future interest it cannot be recovered in execution proceedings but the decree-holder may by suit recover damages for the detention of the decretal amount.[3646] That was a case under the Code of 1859. Section 193 of that Code which relates to interest did not contain any such provision as is contained in sub-section (2) of the present section. This provision was first introduced by Act 7 of 1888. However, in cases decided under the present Code the Calcutta High Court allows interest by way of damages for wrongful detention of money due, irrespective of the provisions of the Interest Act.[3647]

[s 34.11] Interest in Mortgage Suits

The question is, if the suit was filed as a mortgage suit and a decree is made on that basis, while awarding interest, whether the court was required to apply the provisions of section 34 or O XXXIV, rule 11, of the CPC.[3648]

3640. State of Punjab v Krishna Dayal Sharma, AIR 1990 SC 2177 : (2011) 11 SCC 212; Mehar Chand v Tulsi Ram, AIR 1996 P&H 195.
3641. Syndicate Bank v West Bengal Cement Ltd, AIR 1989 Del 107.
3642. United Bank of India v Rashyan Udyog, AIR 1990 Cal 146 (DB).
3643. Taria v Amar Singh, AIR 1991 P&H 187.
3644. UOI v Parasuram, AIR 2003 Kant 333.
3645. R Shahi v Bala Prasad Motani, AIR 1978 Pat 91.
3646. Seth Gokul Das v Murli and Zalim, (1878) 3 Cal 602 : 5 IA 78.
3647. Khetra Mohan v Nishi Kumar, (1918) 22 Cal WN 488; Naresh v Krishna, (1926) 53 Cal 42 : (1926) AC 505; Kumar Chandra v Narendra Nath, (1930) 57 Cal 953 : (1930) AC 357.
3648. Canara Bank v Chikkaswamy, AIR 2002 Kant 100 (DB).

The law on the subject is now codified in O XXXIV, rule 11. The rate of interest in mortgage suits is determined by O XXXIV and not by this section,[3649] but a personal decree under O XXXIV, rule 6, is a money decree and so is governed by this section.[3650] In a dispute under section 90 of the Tamil Nadu Co-operative Societies Act, 1983, the Arbitration Tribunal awarded interest at the rate of 18%, but the Co-operative Tribunal exercising powers under section 152 of the Act reduced the interest rate to 6% pa, the Madras High Court held that the discretion exercised by the Co-operative Tribunal was proper.[3651] In a suit on mortgage, the court is bound to decree interest, pendente lite, on the mortgage debt, though it has got a discretion as to the rate at which it should be allowed.[3652] Interest payable in mortgage suits is governed not by section 34, but by O XXXIV, rule 11, of the CPC.[3653] The liability to pay interest under a decree is wholly different from the liability to pay interest on the contract on which the decree is based. It has, accordingly, been held that the judgment-debtor is not absolved from liability to pay interest under the decree, though, no interest was payable on the debt under the provisions of the Burma Accrual of Interest Act, 1947.[3654] In case of mortgage suits, the court has a discretion under O XXXIV, rule 11 of the CPC for not granting contractual rate of interest, for the period after the suit.[3655]

[s 34.12] This Section and the Interest Act, 1978

The general statutory provisions in regard to the award of interest by a court are contained in the Interest Act, 1978 and the CPC. Both the Interest Act, of 1839 and the Interest Act of 1978 provide for the award of the interest up to the date of institution of the proceedings. Neither the Interest Act, 1839 nor the Interest Act, 1978 provides for the award of pendente lite interest. The law relating to the award of interest pendente lite is provided in section 34 of the CPC. Section 34, however, applies to arbitrators in suits for the simple reason that where a matter is referred to arbitrator in a suit, the arbitrator will have all the powers of court in deciding the dispute.

In the absence of any contract regarding payment of interest the plaintiff would be entitled to interest "at the current rate" as defined in section 2(6) of the Interest Act, 1978.[3656]

The provisions of Interest Act, 1978 debar award interest upon interest.[3657]

Where the earnest money was refunded to a party after an inordinate delay of 10 years, the Patna High Court held that the condition in the contract that no interest would be payable

---

3649. Jagannath v Surajmal, 54 IA 1 : AIR 1927 PC 1; Chhote Lal v Raja Mohammad, (1933) ILR 8 Luck 315 : AIR 1933 Oudh 128; KV Satyanarayana v State Bank, AIR 1975 AP 113; NM Veerappa v Canara Bank, (1998) 2 SCC 317.
3650. Firm Daulat Ram Vaidya Prakash v Sodhi Gurbaksh Singh, AIR 1949 EP 213; Narasimhamurthy v Jagannaikulu, AIR 1959 AP 619.
3651. Nasiyanur Co-op Housing Society Ltd v V Kolandayammal, AIR 2010 Mad 104 : (2010) 1 Mad LJ 295.
3652. Nilmani v Baidyanath, AIR 1957 Cal 140.
3653. Executive Engineer (Irrigation) Galimela v Abhadula Jena, (1988) 1 SCC 418; Everest Industrial Corpn v Gujarat State Financial Corp, (1987) 3 SCC 597; Nand Lal Bijariya v United Commercial Bank, 2007 (4) Civil Court Cases 354 (Raj).
3654. Raman Chettair v Raman Chettair, AIR 1957 Mad 680 : (1957) ILR Mad 75 : (1957) 2 Mad LJ 103 : 70 LW 634.
3655. State Bank of Mysore v GP Thulasi Bai, ILR 1985 Kar 2976; See also Canara Bank v Chikkasamy, AIR 2002 Kant 100 (DB).
3656. Yogesh Kant Bhageria v Deepak Jain, AIR 2000 Del 42 (DB).
3657. State of Bihar v Mijaj International, AIR 2004 Jhar 29.

on earnest money cannot be invoked by the State. That would give arbitrary advantage to the State causing undue loss to the other party and unjust enrichment to state.[3658]

The Calcutta High Court has held that clause in general conditions of contract prohibits arbitrator from entertaining any claim of interest, but this will not debar a party from claiming interest for pre-reference period and post-award interest.[3659] It was observed in the case that once a reference commences, the delay thereafter is not within the control of the party making a claim for interest. The disputes are frozen at the time immediately prior to reference and the arbitrator proceeds to adjudicate upon the claim and find the principal sum due. Such principal sum would be deemed to have become payable at the time the disputes were frozen. The time taken for the reference to be concluded and the further time taken for the award-debtor to make payment on the basis of the adjudication should not be held against the award-holder and he should be compensated for receiving the money not on the date that he is found to have been entitled to the sum but on a much later date. This is the principle that is recognised in section 34 of the Code.

In a case under the Railways Act, 1989 and Railways Accident and Untoward Incidents (Compensation) Rules, 1990, the Gujarat High Court held that there is no specific provision in the Railways Act for grant of interest, but the principles of section 34 of the Code and Section 3 of the Interest Act, 1978 could be invoked to award interest from the date of award till realisation thereof.[3660]

Reaffirming its views expressed in two earlier decisions,[3661] the Supreme Court held the order of the Railway Claims Tribunal directing payment of interest in default of payment within 45 days as unsustainable and observed that for grant of interest on any amount due, the court and even tribunals have been held to be entitled to award interest in their discretion under the provisions of section 3 of the Interest Act, 1978 and section 34 of the Code.[3662]

Where death occurred in an untoward incident in 2001 and the Railway Claims Tribunal passed award in 2007, the Karnataka High Court held that due to delay of 6 years the claimant had to suffer hardship and financial distress. Therefore, interest may be awarded from the date of institution of the case at the discretion of the tribunal.[3663]

A Division Bench of the Kerala High Court has made the matter more explicit by the following observation:

> There is no dispute regarding the amount to be computed in railway accident claims as amount of compensation for death and other injuries is prescribed by the schedule. Whatever be the income, age etc., the same amount is payable if a person is injured in an untoward accident while travelling in train with ticket. So it cannot be stated that the amount is determined only at the time of final adjudication of the award and interest can be directed to be paid only from the date of award...[3664]

The Orissa High Court has held that from the definition of "Court" as defined in section 2(a) of the Interest Act, 1978 read with section 34 of the Code it is clear that a Court

---

3658. Ram Barai Singh v State of Bihar, 2007 (1) Pat LJR 249.
3659. UOI v Ambica Construction, 2007 (3) Cal LT 587.
3660. UOI v Ashokbhai Gobindbhai Patni, AIR 2009 Guj 149.
3661. Jagdish Rai & Brothers v UOI, AIR 1999 SC 1258 : (1999) 3 SCC 257; Hindustan Construction Co Ltd v State of Jammu & Kashmir, AIR 1992 SC 2192 : (1992) 4 SCC 217.
3662. Tahazhathe Purayil Sarabi v UOI, JT 2009 (8) 515 : AIR 2009 SC 3098 : (2009) 7 SCC 372.
3663. Smt S Devamma v UOI, AIR 2009 Kar 96 : (2009) 2 Kant LJ 683.
3664. UOI v Smt Brigeet Chacko, AIR 2007 Ker 268 : 2008 ACJ 348 (DB), Koshy J (as he then was) speaking for the Bench.

can grant interest. Since the Railway Tribunal comes under the definition of Court, it can award interest on compensation payable to a claimant.[3665]

[s 34.13] This Section and Gratuity Act, 1972

In suits for money lent, however, this section has to be applied, subject to the provisions regarding interest made in Acts regulating money lending in different states. The controlling authority under the Payment of Gratuity Act, 1972 is not a court for the purpose of section 34 of CPC.[3666]

[s 34.14] Consumer Protection Cases

Interest cannot be claimed under section 34 of the CPC in proceedings under Consumer Protection Act, 1986, as the provisions of CPC have not been specifically made applicable to the proceedings under the Act. However, the general provision of section 34 being based upon justice, equity and good conscience would authorise the redressal forum and commission to also grant interest appropriately under the circumstances of each case.[3667]

The power and duty to award compensation does not mean that irrespective of facts of the case interest can be awarded in all matters at a uniform rate of 18% pa. What is being awarded is compensation, i.e., a recompense for the loss or injury. It, therefore, necessarily, has to be based on a finding of loss or injury and has to correlate with the amount of loss or injury. Thus the forum or the commission must determine that there has been deficiency in service and/or misfeasance in public office, i.e., by the development authority which has resulted in loss or injury. No hard and fast rule can be laid down, however, a few examples would be where an allotment is made, price is received/paid but possession is not given within the period set out in the brochure. The commission/forum would then need to determine the loss. Loss could be determined on basis of loss of rent which could have been earned if possession was given and the premises let out or if the consumer has had to stay in rented premises then on basis of rent actually paid by him. Along with recompensing the loss the commission/forum may also compensate for harassment/injury both mental and physical. Similarly, compensation can be given if after allotment is made and there has been cancellation of scheme without any justifiable cause. Compensation cannot be the same in all cases irrespective of the type of loss or injury suffered by the consumer. The National Forum has been awarding interest at a flat rate of 18% pa irrespective of the facts of each case which, is unsustainable. What is being awarded is compensation, i.e., a recompense for the loss or injury. It therefore necessarily has to be based on a finding of loss or injury and has to correlate with the amount of loss or injury. Thus the forum or commission must determine that there has been deficiency in service and/or misfeasance in public office that is by development authority which has resulted in loss or injury. No hard and fast rule can be laid down, however, a few examples would be wherein allotment is made, price is received/paid, but possession is not given within the period set out in the brochure. The commission/forum would then need to determine the loss. Loss could be determined on the basis of loss of rent which could have been earned if possession was given and the premises let out or if the consumer has had to stay in rented premises, than on basis

---

3665. UOI v Smt Nalini Parida, AIR 2009 Ori 56; UOI v Trilochan Nayak, AIR 2009 Orissa 91 : 2008 (2) Orissa LR 615. (Held, that right of compensation under section 124 of Railways Act, 1989 being a statutory right, Tribunal can grant interest on compensation amount even from date of application.)
3666. Charan Singh v Birla Textiles, (1988) 4 SCC 212.
3667. Sovintorg (India) Ltd v State Bank of India, (1999) 4 LRI 259.

of rent actually paid by him. Along with recompensing the loss, the commission/forum may also compensate for harassment/injury, both mental and physical. Similarly, compensation can be given if after allotment is made, and there has been cancellation of scheme, without any justifiable cause. Compensation cannot be the same in all cases irrespective of the type of loss or injury suffered by the consumer. The national forum has been awarding interest at a flat rate of 18% pa irrespective of the facts of each case, which is unsustainable. Award of compensation must be under different heads and must vary from case to case depending on the facts of each case. It is clear that in all these cases, interest is being awarded as and by way of compensation/damages. Whilst awarding compensation/damages, it must be shown that there is relationship between the amount awarded and the default/unjustifiable delay/harassment. It is thus necessary that there be separate awards under each such head with reasons why such award is justified. However, the principle that interest must be granted at the current rate of interest is only applicable where the proceeding are for recovery of debt or damages. They apply where a refund of amount is being claimed and the direction is to refund amounts with interest. The principles which govern grant of interest do not apply to grant of compensation. For this reason also, it becomes necessary to consider facts and award damage/compensation under various heads. Normally, in cases of refund, interest will be payable from the date the monies were deposited with the body till they are returned either by payment to that party or deposited in court. In cases where compensation is directed to be paid, the commission/forum must direct payment within a particular period and further direct that if payment is not made within that time the authority will also pay interest. Such interest must be based on the current rate of interest.[3668]

Where allotment of plot was made long ago, i.e., about 17 years back and its possession given the, allottee suffered mental agony and harassment, hence, interest at the rate of 12% awarded by the district forum was held proper and taken as compensation for mental agony and harassment. However, in spite of clarification given in Ghaziabad Development Authority v Balbir Singh,[3669] amounts were paid late, hence, for the said period from 17 March 2004, i.e., date of clarification to 28 July 2004, i.e., date of actual payment; interest at the rate of 15% was awarded by the Supreme Court.[3670]

[s 34.15] Lok Adalat

Lok Adalats are not meant for pressurising people and bringing pressure on public officials. A suit filed by a bank for the recovery of loan amount with interest had not become ripe for hearing, but it was hustled through the Lok Adalat. In the Lok Adalat, the defendants admitted the claim of the bank, but prayed for instalments and of rate of interest. The court, being obsessed with the idea of certain number of disposals in Lok Adalat, passed a compromise decree, asking the plaintiff bank to adopt a flexible and pragmatic approach and granted instalments despite the objections raised by the plaintiff bank to the decree being passed as suggested by the defendants. It was held that the judgment and decree passed by the trial court

---

3668. Ghaziabad Development Authority v Balbir Singh, AIR 2004 SC 2141 : (2004) 5 SCC 65 : 2004 (3) Scale 671 : 2004 (3) SCR 68 : JT 2004 (5) SC 17.
3669. Ghaziabad Development Authority v Balbir Singh, AIR 2004 SC 2141.
3670. Haryana Urban Development Authority v Rekha Sharma, AIR 2004 SC 4143 : (2005) 9 SCC 457. See also Haryana Urban Development Authority v RS Banga, AIR 2004 SC 4429 : 2004 AIR SCW 4582 : (2005) 9 SCC 460; G.S. Sharma v HUDA, AIR 2003 P&H 128 (DB); Seven Seas Educational Soc v HUDA, AIR 2002 P&H 83.

were not legally tenable. The high court, in appeal, remanded the matter to the trial court, for proceeding further in accordance with law.[3671]

[s 34.16] This Section and Motor Vehicles Act

There cannot be any hard and fast rule in awarding interest, and the award of interest is solely at the discretion of the tribunal or the high court, as the case may be and on the facts and circumstances of each case. The discretion conferred by statute must be exercised judicially on the basis of the facts and circumstances of a particular case. When a specific provision has been made under the statute, such provision has to govern the field. When the statute has not fixed any rate of interest to be awarded on the award of compensation amount, it is not open for the court to read into the provision and fix certain rate of interest. Section 171 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988, in unequivocal terms, conferred discretion on the tribunal to grant interest on the amount of compensation awarded at such rate as it may specify in that behalf. Therefore, the court has to take all the relevant factors into consideration while awarding the rate of interest on the compensation. Such factors may include inflation, change of economy, policies being adopted by the Reserve Bank of India from time to time, how long the case has been pending for determination of compensation, permanent injuries suffered by the victim, enormity of the suffering, loss of future income, loss of enjoyment of life. If any rate of interest is imported into the section by the court, it would be contrary to the intent of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988. The legislature, in its wisdom, thought it fit to confer such discretion only on the tribunal or the court with the object that the tribunal or the court, while awarding the rate of interest, will take into account the facts and circumstances of each case and other relevant guiding factors prevalent at the time of awarding compensation. In the nature of the provision made under section 171 giving discretion to the tribunal to award interest at such rate as it may specific in that behalf, no principle could be deduced or any interest can be fixed to have a general application in all motor accident claim cases arising under the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988.[3672]

[s 34.17] This Section and Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923

Interest of 12% provided under section 4A(3) of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 may not be a guiding factor for awarding the interest at 12% pa or at such higher rate not exceeding the maximum of the lending rates of any scheduled bank as may be specified by the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, in a case arising under the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988.[3673]

While granting interest on the compensation amount awarded, the tribunal or the court shall award the rate of interest, which is just and reasonable, on an analysis of the facts and circumstances obtaining in the case. Thus, the rate of interest on the compensation amount shall be awarded by the tribunal or the court depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case and the above said relevant guiding factors if the compensation amount is enhanced. interest can be awarded at the discretion of the bench either from the date of the petition or from the date of the award, as the case may be.[3674]

3671. Union Bank of India, Bhavnagar v Narendra Plastics, AIR 1991 Guj 67 (DB).
3672. APSRTC v B. Vijaya, AIR 2002 AP 441 (FB).
3673. Union Bank of India, Bhavnagar v Narendra Plastics, AIR 1991 Guj 67.
3674. Union Bank of India, Bhavnagar v Narendra Plastics, AIR 1991 Guj 67.

[s 34.18] Rule of damdupat

This is a rule of Hindu law, according to which, interest exceeding the amount of the principal sum cannot be recovered at any one time. This rule is in force in the Bombay State,[3675] Sind,[3676] and in Berar,[3677] and in the presidency-town of Calcutta,[3678] but it is not recognised outside that town.[3679] It is also not recognised in the Madras State.[3680] The meaning of the rule is that interest must not exceed the principal; so if a Hindu lends Rs 500 to another Hindu, and the loan is not repaid till the interest amounts to Rs 600, the lender is not entitled to recover more than Rs 500 for principal and Rs 500 for interest. But the court may, under this section, award further interest to the lender from the date of the suit, though the aggregate interest may thereby exceed Rs 500. The reason is that the rule of damdupat ceases to operate from the date of the suit.[3681] But this is entirely in the discretion of the court.[3682] It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the rule of damdupat does not apply where interest is claimed under a mortgage governed by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.[3683] A different view has been taken by the High Court of Bombay[3684] and Calcutta.[3685] The decision of the Privy Council in Kusum Kumari v Debi Prasad,[3686] seems to lend support to the Calcutta and Bombay view. This case has further held that the rule of damdupat is only during the contractual relation of debtor and creditor. The rule of damdupat does not apply where the mortgagee has been placed in possession, and is accountable for the rents and profits received by him as against the interest due.[3687]

[s 34.19] Penal Interest

Charging of additional interest for the period of default in terms of contract of guarantee does not amount to charging of penal interest.[3688]

In a case relating to work contract where the plaintiff-appellant failed to complete the computerisation work entrusted to them, it was held by the Patna High Court that the defendant-respondent was justified in withholding payment of the bill. It was further held that the plaintiff-appellant would not be entitled to claim penal interest under the Interest on Delayed Payment to Small Scale and Ancillary Industries Undertakings Act, 1993, over and above the interest awarded by the trial court.[3689]

3675. Ali Saheb v Shabji, (1897) ILR 21 Bom 85.
3676. Karamchand v Balchand, (1908) 2 SLR 10.
3677. Bapurao v Anant Kashinath, AIR 1946 Ngp 210 : (1946) ILR Nag 407; Ramchandra v Radha, (1914) 10 NLR 91.
3678. Nobin Chunder v Romes Chunder, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 781.
3679. Het Narain v Ramdeni, (1883) 12 CLR 590.
3680. Annaji v Raghubhai, (1871) 6 Mad HCR 400.
3681. Dhondshet v Ravji, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 86; Re Hari Lall Mullick, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 1269; Nagin Singh v Gagan Nath, AIR 1944 Lah 422; Ishwar Nath v Surrender Singh, AIR 1969 Del 289.
3682. Hiralal v Narsilal, 40 IA 68 : 37 Bom 326 (PC)—(no interest given); Achyut v Ramchandra, AIR 1925 Bom 362 : (1925) 27 Bom LR 492 (interest allowed at six percent only), both these were suits for redemption.
3683. Modhwa v Venkata, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 662.
3684. Jeewanbai v Manorada, (1911) ILR 35 Bom 199.
3685. Kunja Lal v Narsamba, (1915) ILR 42 Cal 826.
3686. Kusum Kumari v Debi Prasad, 63 IA 114 : 15 Pat 210 : 40 Cal WN 329.
3687. Sundarabai v Jayavant, (1990) ILR 24 Bom 114.
3688. Mukesh Gupta v SICOM Ltd, Mumbai, AIR 2004 Bom 104 (DB).
3689. Computeronix Bihar Pvt Ltd v Bihar State Madarsa Education Board, AIR 2007 Pat 75 : 2007 (1) Pat LJR 183.

[s 34.20] Enhanced Interest

If the value of suit claim is not ascertainable, the plaintiff cannot claim enhanced rate of interest as a matter of right.[3690]

[s 34.21] No Interest

In a case, where the petition regarding denial of encashment of Indira Vikas Patra remained pending for several years, the respondent post office could not be saddled with the liability to pay interest, especially when technically they were justified in withholding the payment. Therefore, the claim of interest at the rate of 15% pa as made by the petitioner was held not justifiable and liable to be rejected.[3691]

Where in the plaint, the plaintiff, after referring value of claim, had not specifically pleaded for interest anywhere, the trial court decreed his suit claim but no interest was granted. No independent appeal claiming interest was filed by the plaintiff nor was cross-objection filed in appeal filed by defendants. The relief of interest cannot be granted to plaintiff.[3692]

[s 34.22] Equitable Interest

The court must balance the equities between the claim of the petitioners and the liability of the respondents to pay interest. Award of such interest is not based upon the principle of enrichment of a kind of compensation which is awarded to the petitioners against the state functionaries for their delayed action, particularly unsupported by any plausible cause.[3693]

The trial court can award interest even in the absence of a contract, if the same is equitable. Obviously, even if the money received by the first defendant had been kept in a fixed deposit, that would have earned interest for it. If the money had been invested by defendant in its business, the return would have been more. In such a situation, when the trial court has awarded interest at the rate of six percent pa in its discretion, it cannot be said that the court has acted illegally or has exercised its discretion in an arbitrary or unreasonable manner.[3694]

In a case relating to delayed payment for supply made by a Small Scale Industrial Undertaking to Government of Bihar, it was held by the Patna High Court that it is not the date of agreement or the date on which payment became due, which is material in determining whether the provisions of the Interest on Delayed Payment to Small Scale and Ancillary Industrial Undertakings Act, 1993 would be attracted. The crucial date is the date of supply order. Therefore, when order for supply was placed prior to the coming into force of the Act, interest in terms of the Act cannot be allowed, rather interest at the rate of 9% pa in terms of section 34 of the Code was allowed.[3695]

3690. Punjab & Sind Bank v Ramji Dass Khanna, AIR 2002 Del 305 (DB). State of Maharashtra v Mishrilal Tarachand Lodha, AIR 1964 SC 457.
3691. Narendrabhai S Joshi v Post Master General, Gujarat Circle, AIR 2002 Guj 180.
3692. Union Govt of India v Rajmohan, AIR 2001 Mad 172.
3693. ASJS Rice Mills Owners v State of Punjab, AIR 2004 P&H 320 (DB).
3694. Mahanadi Multipurpose Industries v State of Orissa, AIR 2002 Ori 150 (DB).
3695. State of Bihar v Shakti Tubes Ltd, AIR 2006 Pat 177 : (2006) 1 BLJR 700. The Supreme Court dismissed appeal against the same in Shakti Tubes v State of Bihar; (2009) 7 SCC 673 and held that the supply order having been placed herein prior to the coming into force of the Act, any supply made pursuant to the said supply orders would be governed not by the provisions of the Act but by the provisions of section 34 of the CPC.

In a case relating to Interest on Delayed Payment to Small Scale and Ancillary Industrial Undertakings Act, 1993, a Bench of Supreme Court held as follows:

> We, therefore, are of the opinion that in relation to the transactions made prior to coming into force of the said Act, simple interest at the rate of 9% pa, which was the bank rate at the relevant time, shall be payable both prior to date of filing of the suit and pendente lite and as future interest in terms of section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Interest, however, will be payable in terms of the provisions of the 1993 Act……[3696]

In a suit between a sugar factory owned by a Co-operative Society and a private engineering company, the dispute over an interim order was taken to the high court. The high court directed that in the event a party succeeds, 12 % interest be granted on the awarded amount. However, when the sugar factory went in appeal before the high court against the dismissal of the suit, the high court, construing the indemnity given by the Bank to be a Bank Guarantee, decreed the suit and directed the Bank to pay the amount with interest at the rate of 14% pa It was held in the case by Supreme Court that the approach of the high court was erroneous.[3697]

A Division Bench of the Delhi High Court held that where Bank was directed to keep specified amounts in fixed deposits pursuant to order of high court and the Bank enjoyed the benefits of the amount, it was liable to pay interest for utilisation of the said amount.[3698] The Bench relied on the decision of the Supreme Court in Secretary, Irrigation Department, Government of Orissa v GC Roy,[3699] wherein it has been observed: "a person deprived of the use of money to which he is legitimately entitled has a right to be compensated for the deprivation, call it by any name. It may be called interest, compensation or damages". The observation of the Division Bench is very revealing:

> The records of this case reveal that the said amounts have been lying with the appellant-bank since 9.10.1993 and the bank has been consistently absolving itself of its responsibility to pay interest for thirteen years by invoking unjustifiable grounds leading to this avoidable litigation. This is in spite of an order of this Court dated 8-4-1999 and subsequent directions on 6.5.1999 to deposit the said amounts with interest. The appellant-bank has with impunity chosen to disregard this order on the basis of a belated review petition which was not taken up for years.[3700]

It has been held by the Rajasthan High Court even where two parties agree for not charging interest, but when one party without lawful authority, retains other's money, then he could do so at least with a liability to pay interest.[3701]

In a decree passed against the State, the high court directed to deposit the amount in court within a specified time and further directed the State to pay 15% interest from the date of order until actual deposit in case of default. On appeal, the Supreme Court modified the rate of interest to 10%.[3702]

Once the principal sum was allowed by the arbitrator under the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, he was entitled to award interest. But the interest awarded by the arbitrator at the 3696. Assam Small Scale Ind. Dev Corp Ltd v JD Pharmaceuticals, AIR 2006 SC 131 : (2005) 13 SCC 19 (SB Sinha J speaking for the Bench).

---

3697. State Bank of India v Mula Sahakari Sakhar Karkhana Ltd, AIR 2007 SC 2361 : (2006) 6 SCC 293.
3698. Standard Chartered Bank v Pure Drinks Ltd, AIR 2007 Del 93 : (2006) 135 DLT 651 (DB).
3699. Secretary, Irrigation Department, Government of Orissa v GC Roy, AIR 1992 SC 732 : (1992) 1 SCC 508.
3700. Secretary, Irrigation Department, Government of Orissa v GC Roy, AIR 1992 SC 732, p 97 : (1992) 1 SCC 508, (Mudgal J speaking for the Bench).
3701. Shah Chunni Lal Shanti Lal Jain v Gopal Industries, (2007) 4 Civil CC 327 (Raj) : 2007 (3) Raj LW 2238.
3702. State of Karnataka v Gopal Ramachandra Nagagauda, AIR 2010 SC 1438 : (2010) 2 SCC 327.

rate of 18.5% and that too compounded on quarterly basis, rest was modified by Division Bench of Calcutta High Court to simple interest at the rate of 18%.[3703]

Interest in equity has been awarded on money paid under a contract to convey, of which specific performance could not be decreed,[3704] and on money paid under a mistake of fact, and wrongfully retained.[3705] For partnership cases, see the under mentioned decisions.[3706] An applicant for compensation for land acquisition can be granted interest on equitable principles, even if recourse cannot be had to section 34 of the CPC.[3707]

[s 34.23] Compound Interest

It is in the power of the court to allow compound interest from the date of the institution of the suit. Where compound interest was charged during the course of the dealings between the parties, the Bombay High Court awarded compound interest from the date of suit.[3708] On the perusal of the draft lease agreement exchanged between the parties and other correspondence, it is crystal clear that there is no stipulation whatsoever, at in any contingency for the charging of compound interest on the loan advances or in default of any instalment thereof. It, therefore, follows that under no circumstances compound interest could be recovered.[3709] In a contract to supply gas, price of which was increased by ONGC, the purchaser requested for reduction of supply and claims were made by purchaser based on force majeure, the purchasers were drug-manufacturing companies and the prices of drugs were controlled by the government. On these facts it was held that the interest payable would be simple and not compound.[3710]

In a case, where the Bank had refused to encash demand draft presented by firm on account of certain dues, the Allahabad High Court held that grant of 12% compound interest was improper. It was held that although the firm suffered loss for a considerable long period due to withholding of draft amount which the Bank could not do legally, since the bank was ready to pay interest at the rate of 12%, simple interest would be proper, as it was not a commercial transaction.[3711]

The Supreme Court has held that the power to levy compound interest can be exercised only if there is specific contract or authority under the statute. Courts and tribunals do not have general discretion to award interest on interest.[3712] Speaking for the Bench, Raveendran J in the above case relating to an award by tribunal under the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, observed as follows:

> 14. Section 31(7) makes no reference to payment of compound interest or payment of interest upon interest. Nor does it require the interest which accrues till the date of award, to be treated as part of the principal from the date of award for calculating the post-award

---

3703. Bhilai Wires Ltd v Bharat Sanchar Nigam Ltd, AIR 2010 Cal 172 : (2011) 1 Arb LR 74 (DB).
3704. Sat Pradash v Bodh Raj, AIR 1958 P&H 111; RA Patil v Janaki Bai, AIR 1959 Bom 468; differing from Dwarka Prasad v Kathleen Florence Burns, AIR 1955 Ngp 38 : (1955) ILR Nag 538.
3705. Joseph v UOI, AIR 1957 Ker 3.
3706. Suleman v Abdul Latif, (1930) 57 IA 245 : 58 Cal 208 : 59 Mad LJ 121 (PC); Lala Hakm Rai v Lala Ganga Ram, (1943) 1 Mad LJ 16; Thulsi Ammal v Ramachandra Naidu, AIR 1955 Mad 171; Mohanasundaram v Neelambal, AIR 1955 Mad 442 : (1955) ILR Mad 1191; Jubedabi v Jainabi, AIR 1975 Kant 7 : (1974) Kant 1473.
3707. Chinubhai Nanalal v Addl Special Land Acquisition Officer, AIR 1989 Guj 122 (DB).
3708. Kaluram v Chimniram, AIR 1934 Bom 86 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 68 (78).
3709. HP Fruit Growers Co-op Mark Processing Society Ltd v Himachal Pradesh Housing Board, AIR 1996 HP 94.
3710. ONGC Ltd v Assn of Natural Gas Consuming Industries, AIR 2001 SC 2797 : (2001) 6 SCC 627.
3711. State Bank of India, Deoria v Firm Jamuna Prasad & Sons, (2008) 6 All LJ 697.
3712. State of Haryana v SL Arora & Co, AIR 2010 SC 1511 : (2010) 3 SCC 690.

> interest. The use of the words 'where and in so far as an arbitral award is for the payment of money' and the use of the words 'the arbitral tribunal may include in the sum for which the award is made, interest……on the whole or any part of the money' in clause (a) and the use of the words 'a sum directed to be paid by an arbitral shall carry interest' in clause (b) of sub-section (7) of section 31 clearly indicate that the section contemplates award of only simple interest and not compound interest or interest upon interest.[3713]

The Supreme Court quoted with approval its earlier judgment in Renusagar case,[3714] wherein it has been observed as follows:

> Merely because in Section 3(3)(c) of the Interest Act, 1978, the court is precluded from awarding interest on interest does not mean that it is not permissible to award such interest under a contract or usage or under the statute. It is common knowledge that provision is made for the payment of compound interest in contracts for loans advanced by banks and financial institutions and the said contracts are enforced by courts. Hence it cannot be said that award of interest on interest, i.e., compound interest, is against public policy of India.

In Central Bank of India v Ravindra,[3715] a Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court observed as follows:

> The English decisions and the decisions of this Court and almost all the High Courts of the country have noticed and approved long established banking practice of charging interest at reasonable rates on periodical rests and capitalising the same on remaining unpaid. Such a practice is prevalent and also recognised in non-banking money lending transactions. Legislature has stepped in from time to time to relieve the debtors from hardship whenever it has found the practice of charging compound interest and its capitalisation to be oppressive and hence needing to be curbed. The practice is permissible, legal and judicially upheld excepting when superseded by legislation. There is nothing wrong in the parties voluntarily entering into transactions, evidenced by deeds incorporating covenant or stipulation for payment of compound interest at reasonable rates……

A Division Bench of the Guwahati High Court held that tea plantation or tea production is agriculture or agricultural production and compound interest is not permissible on agricultural loan.[3716]

The executing court has no jurisdiction to go behind decree. The executing court has no right to vary terms of the decree, however erroneous it may be in execution proceedings. Thus, where the trial court passed decree for payment of principal amount with simple interest only, the executing court cannot grant compound interest thereby varying terms of decree. The order passed by executing court construing simple interest as compound interest. The revision against such order is therefore maintainable.[3717]

[s 34.24] Interest on mesne Profits/Damages

Mesne profits as defined in section 2, sub-clause (12), includes interest on profits which have been actually received or might, with ordinary diligence, have been received. This is a substantive provision and has reference to the rights of the parties prior to suit. Interest on mesne profits, pendente lite, is a matter of procedure and is within the discretion of the court.[3718] It is for the court passing a decree, to decide whether interest should be allowed on mesne profits

---

3713. State of Haryana v SL Arora & Co, AIR 2010 SC 1511, p 1516 : (2010) 3 SCC 690
3714. Renusagar Power Co Ltd v General Electric Co, AIR 1994 SC 860 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 644.
3715. Central Bank of India v Ravindra, AIR 2001 SC 3095 : (2002) 1 SCC 367.
3716. Tezalpatty Tea Pvt Ltd v Eastern Tea Brokers Ltd, AIR 2008 (NOC) 2865 (Gau—DB).
3717. State of Bihar v Mijaj International, AIR 2004 Jhar 29.
3718. Narayan Dossjee v Board of Trustees, AIR 1959 AP 64 : (1958) 1 Andh WR 427; Mahant Narayana Dasjee v Board of Trustees, Tirupathi Devasthanam, AIR 1965 SC 1231.

and not for the execution court, unless it is reserved for decision by the latter. Accordingly, where the decree awards a lump sum as mesne profits, it is not open to the execution court to award interest thereon.[3719]

Where the interest on mesne profit was claimed at the rate of six percent and the preliminary decree was passed against which appeal was filed, in which the plaintiff sought amendment claiming interest at the rate of 13%, the appellate court, allowed amendment and also passed order on the preliminary decree on the same day granting interest at the rate charged by nationalised banks on commercial transaction, i.e., exceeding 13%. No opportunity of being heard was given to the defendant against proposed amendment, and the procedure followed was found illegal and unsustainable as the suit for account was filed prior to the 1997 Amendment and the plaintiff was not entitled to interest exceeding six percent on the basis of amended section 34 coming into force due to pendency of litigation.[3720]

The plaintiff can claim, and the court has power to grant interest on damages from the date of filing of the suit until the realisation of the amount.[3721]

[s 34.25] Negotiable Instruments

Section 79 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 does not prevail over section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. Both are Central Acts covering the same field, viz, the power of discretion given to the court to fix a date for payment of interest pendente lite. In addition, section 34 of the CPC gives power to fix rates of interest also. A reading of section 34 clearly indicates that the court is given discretion to award rate of interest in certain circumstances. Section 34(1) engrafts language, taking within its ambit not only the money due on a negotiable instrument but also any claim for payment of money. The Negotiable Instruments Act is of 1881, whereas the Code of Civil Procedure is of 1908. Further, the CPC was amended from time-to-time up to the Act of 1976. The legislature is aware of the existence of section 79 of the Act, but no exception has been engrafted in section 34(1) of the CPC, with regard to the rate of interest in respect of the claims based on negotiable instruments. Therefore, the later Act (Code) prevails over the earlier Act. Section 34 prescribes not only the period, but also the interest. Accordingly, section 34 applies to the claims based on negotiable instruments as well. No exception by judicial interpretation could be engrafted.[3722] The High Court of Andhra Pradesh has, accordingly, held that the provisions of section 34 of the CPC override those of section 79 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. It has further held that since section 34 gives a discretion regarding the rate of interest, it cannot be laid down that the court ought to grant interest at the contractual rate.[3723] The high court dissented from the Rajasthan ruling in Usav Lal v Mohan Brothers,[3724] to the effect that section 79 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, prevails over section 34 of the CPC. It further held that the court cannot, under section 34, grant interest pendente lite, at a rate higher than the contractual rate, dissenting on this point from Lehru Narain v Kanhaialal.[3725] Suit for recovery of money, after Hundi was

---

3719. Ouseph Ouseph v Thomman, AIR 1954 TC 473.
3720. RV Madhvani v TP Madhvani, AIR 2004 SC 1084 : (2004) 1 SCC 497 : JT 2004 (6) SC 144.
3721. Kishan Lal Kalra v NDMC, AIR 2001 Del 402; Mahabir Prasad Rungta v Durga Datta, AIR 1961 SC 990; Mahant Narayana Dasjee Varu v Board of Trustees, The Tirumalai Tirupathi Devasthanam, AIR 1965 SC 1231; Bhagwant Gennji v Gangabisan Ramgopal, AIR 1940 Bom 369; VP Ganesan v The Tamil Nadu Civil Supplies Corp Ltd, Salem, AIR 2006 Mad 4 : (2006) 1 CTC 277.
3722. United Bank of India v P Krishnaiah, AIR 1989 AP 211 (K Ramaswamy J).
3723. United Bank of India v P Krishnaiah, AIR 1989 AP 211.
3724. Usav Lal v Mohan Brothers, AIR 1975 Raj 236.
3725. Lehru Narain v Kanhaialal, AIR 1973 Raj 316.

dishonoured, was filed in the absence of a stipulation in the Hundi. As regards payment of interest, in such cases, specified sum of money only is payable. However, since the defendant failed to pay the amount due on the Hundis, it was liable to pay interest thereon from the date of the suit and future interest at the rate of six percent pa under section 34 of the CPC.[3726]

[s 34.26] Award of Interest by Arbitrator

The general statutory provisions in regard to the award of interest by a court are contained in the Interest Act, 1978 and the CPC. Both the Interest Act of 1839 and the Interest Act of 1978 provide for the award of the interest up to the date of institution of the proceedings. Neither the Interest Act, 1839 nor the Interest Act, 1978 provides for the award of pendente lite interest. The law relating to the award of interest pendente lite is provided in section 34 of the CPC. Section 34, however, applies to arbitrators in suits for the simple reason that where a matter is referred to arbitrator in a suit, the arbitrator will have all the powers of court in deciding the dispute. Section 34 does not, otherwise, apply to arbitrations as arbitrators are not court within the meaning of section 34 of the CPC. While under the Interest Act, 1978, the expression, "court" was defined to include an arbitrator, under the Interest Act of 1839 it was not so defined. The result is that while in cases arising after the commencement of the Interest Act, 1978 an arbitrator has the same power as the court to award interest up to the date of institution of the proceedings, in cases which arose prior to the commencement of the Interest Act, 1978.

Since the arbitrator is required to conduct himself and make the award in accordance with law, court must look to the substantive law for the power of the arbitrator to award interest before the commencement of the proceedings. If the agreement between the party entitles the arbitrator to award interest, no further question arises and the arbitrator may award interest. Similarly, if there is a usage of trade having the force of law, the arbitrator may award interest. Again, the arbitrator may award interest if there are any other provisions of the substantive law enabling the award of interest, eg, section 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, or section 61(2) of the Sale of Goods Act, 1930. There may also be a case where one of the parties is forced to pay interest to a third party, say, on an overdraft, consequent on the failure of the other party to the contract not fulfilling the obligation of paying the amount due to them. In such a case also, equity may compel the payment of interest. Loss of interest in the place of the right to remain in possession may be rightfully claimed in equity by the owner of a property who has been dispossessed from it.[3727] The arbitrator is competent to award interest for the period commencing with the date of award to the date of decree or date of realisation, whichever is earlier. This is also quite logical for, while award of interest for the period prior to an arbitrator entering upon the reference is a matter of substantive law, the grant of interest for the post-award period is a matter of procedure. Section 34 of the CPC provides both for awarding of interest pendente lite as well as for the post-decree period and the principle of section 34 has been held applicable to proceedings before the arbitrator, though the section as such may not apply.[3728] The arbitrator has jurisdiction to award interest under both old and new Arbitration Act on the sum found due and payable for pre-reference period, in the absence of any specific stipulation or prohibition in contract to claim or grant any such interest.[3729]

3726. Canara Bank, New Delhi v Sanjeev Enterprises, AIR 1988 Del 372.
3727. Executive Engineer (Irrigation) Balimela v Abhadula Jaina, (1988) 1 SCC 418; SK Samanta & Co v Central Coalfields Ltd, AIR 2000 Pat 36.
3728. Hindustan Construction Co Ltd v State of Jammu & Kashmir, (1992) 4 SCC 217.
3729. Executive Engineer, DMI, Divn, Orissa v NC Budharaj, AIR 2001 SC 626 : (2001) 2 SCC 721.

Future interest becomes payable on amount of claim upheld and also on interest awarded. While passing a decree in terms of the award, not only the amount of claim upheld by the arbitrator or the court but the pre-suit and pendente lite interest awarded in favour of the decree-holder crystallises into the decretal amount and the future interest becomes payable on the entire amount comprised of the claims as well as the pre-suit and pendente lite interest. Therefore, from the date of the passing of the decree, the future interest is not to be calculated merely on the amount of the claims upheld by the arbitrator/court but also on the amount of the interest awarded by the arbitrator or the court, more so when the amount of interest up to the date of the passing of the award or passing of the decree is much higher than the principal amount.[3730] The power to award interest pendente lite has to be inferred on the analogy of section 34 of the CPC for doing complete justice between the parties. Whether interest should be awarded pendente lite or not is a matter of discretion for the court or the arbitrator. When parties go before an arbitrator, they expect that the disputes will be decided in accordance with law, as they would have been decided, had the decision been of a court of law.[3731] The arbitrator is entitled to award interest pendente lite and future interest at the rate not exceeding the current rate of interest. Under section 34 of the CPC interest at a rate higher than six percent be awarded where the liability in relation to the sum so adjudged had arisen out of a commercial transaction.[3732]

The Supreme Court has held in the undernoted case[3733] that section 34 of the CPC has no application to arbitration proceedings since the arbitrator cannot be said to be a "court" within the meaning of the Code. But an arbitrator has power and jurisdiction to grant interest for all the three stages provided the rate of interest is reasonable.

In another case, where the award of interest at the rate of 12% pa by arbitrator all throughout was not found illegal by the civil court but the high court reduced the post award interest to 6% pa, the Supreme Court held that the order of the high court who not justified.[3734] It was observed in the case as follows:

> 13. As far as arbitration proceedings are concerned, it is well established that an arbitrator, in absence of any prohibition in an arbitration agreement, has power to award interest. Though it is not a 'court' within the meaning of Section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, an arbitrator has power to grant reasonable rate of interest at all the three stages; i.e. pre-reference, pendente lite and post-award period.[3735]

Section 34 does not, in terms, apply to arbitrators. But the arbitrator has been held to have power to award interest for the period of pendency of arbitration.[3736] Contrary decisions are no longer good law.[3737] The interest for the future period from the date of the arbitration award till payment can be granted by the court. The original award was dated 21 June 1971 and was filed in court on 7 November 1977, for making it rule of the court. Interest from the date of the award would, therefore, be calculated from 21 June 1977 and not the date when the 3730. Saraswati Construction Co v Delhi Development Authority, AIR 2004 Del 412.

---

3731. Ram Nath International Construction Pvt Ltd v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1997) 11 SCC 645.
3732. State of Jammu and Kashmir v Dev Dutt Pandit, AIR 2000 Pat 36 : (1999) 4 LRI 646.
3733. Bhagwati Oxygen Ltd v Hindustan Copper Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 2071 : (2005) 6 SCC 462.
3734. Manalal Prabhudayal v Oriental Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 3026 : 2006 Supp (4) SCR 666 : (2009) 17 SCC 296 : (2006) 8 Scale 129 : JT 2006 (7) SC 464.
3735. Manalal Prabhudayal v Oriental Insurance Co Ltd, AIR 2006 SC 3026, p 3028 : 2006 Supp (4) SCR 666 : (2009) 17 SCC 296 : (2006) 8 Scale 129 : JT 2006 (7) SC 464, at. (CK Thakker J speaking for the Bench).
3736. Re Secretary, Irrigation Department, Government of Orissa, (1992) 1 SCC 508.
3737. Executive Engineer v Abdulla Jena, AIR 1988 SC 1530; State of Orissa v Concrete Jodia, AIR 1988 SC 1530.

arbitrator submitted his decision after reconsideration under section 16 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (now replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996).[3738] An arbitrator has power to award interest pendente lite. Though section 34 does not, in terms, apply, the arbitrator has the same power as the court has. The court can award pendente lite interest at such rate as the court deems reasonable. If the arbitrator's award of interest is reasonable, the law forbids the court to interfere with it.[3739] Keeping in view the facts and circumstances of the case and to sub serve the interest of justice, the respondent can be directed to pay pre-reference and pendente lite interest at the appropriate rates.[3740] If all disputes between the parties or the dispute regarding interest is referred to arbitration, the arbitrator has power to award interest on a principle analogous to the one embodied in section 34 of the CPC. Also, all disputes are referred for arbitration, the arbitrator has power to award interest pendente lite, ie, interest during the pendency of arbitration proceedings. Moreover, future interest or future mesne profits are incidental matters and may be awarded, even though not specifically claimed, if the same are not inconsistent with the other relief claimed.[3741] The power to order interest on an award from the date of the decree to date of payment is regulated by section 29 of the Arbitration Act, 1996 and not by section 34 of the CPC.[3742] Neither the Interest Act of 1839 nor the Interest Act of 1978 applies to the State of Jammu and Kashmir. Hence, the arbitrator cannot award interest thereunder. But the court's jurisdiction to allow interest from the date on which the award was made a rule of court, is not taken away.[3743] An arbitrator also has a jurisdiction to award interest after the date of the award until a decree is passed in terms of the award, if the reference is with regard to all disputes between the parties which would include a dispute or difference as to interest which the court trying such suit could have awarded.[3744] Where there is express reference, the arbitrator can award interest for the period anterior to his entering upon the reference, provided such interest is claimable either under the agreement between the parties or under the Interest Act, 1978.[3745] The main part of sub-section (1) of section 34 of the CPC laying down that during the period the suit was pending in court, interest is to be awarded at a reasonable rate and for the period subsequent to passing of the decree, interest is to be awarded at the rate of 6% pa and future interest at a higher rate can be awarded if the proviso is attracted.[3746] The opening words of section 41 of Arbitration Act, 1940 themselves make it clear that the provision of the Code of Civil Procedure shall apply to all proceedings before the court, subject to the provision of Arbitration Act, 1940 (now replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996) and of rules made thereunder. When specific provision has been made under section 29 of the Act regarding the permissibility of payment of interest from the date of the decree such specific provision has to govern the field and provisions of section 34 of the CPC must give way to section 29 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (now replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996). If the court intends to grant interest in a case where interest has not been awarded by the arbitrator it can do so under section 29 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 Procedure must give 3738. UOI v Swadeshi Karyalaya, AIR 1991 Del 53 (DP Wadhwa J).

---

3739. Krishna Kumar Madhok v UOI, AIR 1982 Del 332 (DB).
3740. BLGC (P) Ltd v Bharat Co-op Group Hsg Society Ltd, AIR 2004 SC 319 : (2004) 1 SCC 110.
3741. Gujarat WS&S Board v Unique Electors (Guj) Pvt Ltd, AIR 1988 Guj 233.
3742. Krishna Kumar Madhok v UOI, AIR 1982 Del 332 (DB).
3743. Managing Director, J&K Handicrafts, Jammu v Goodluck Carpet, AIR 1990 SC 864 : (1990) 4 SCC 740 : (1990) 1 ALR 367.
3744. UOI v Bungo Steel Furniture Pvt Ltd, AIR 1967 SC 1032; see also RB Somappa v Mysore Co-op Appellate Tribunal, AIR 1973 Mys 37.
3745. Varkey v Pacific Procon Ltd, AIR 1977 Ker 24 : (1976) ILR 2 Ker 168.
3746. Mahesh Chander Bansel v Krishna Swaroop Singhal, (1997) 10 SCC 681.

way to section 29 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (now replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996) and not under section 34 of CPC.[3747]

[s 34.27] Proviso to Sub-section (1): Rate of Interest in Commercial Transactions

The operative portion of the proviso as contained in sub-section 1 and sub-section 2 of section 34 of the CPC clearly goes to indicate that the discretion in the court vested under the said proviso is not only with regard to the rate of interest but it also considers whether the interest should be awarded or not.[3748]

The Delhi High Court has held that in commercial transactions (after the amendment of 1976), the grant of interest at the contractual rate ought to be the rule and the grant of interest at reduced rate, "a rare exception". The defaulting borrower cannot be given the benefit of reduced rate of interest as a matter of rule, only because the bank had to resort to legal recourse on account of non-payment by borrower except, of course, in exceptional circumstances.[3749]

The court is not bound to grant interest at the contractual rate, even in a commercial transaction, according to the Kerala High Court.[3750]

In an Orissa case, the claim was in respect of the value of goods. The supplier was guilty of serious lapses in the matter of supply. It was held that he cannot claim interest at rate higher than six percent, by relying on the proviso to section 34 in the circumstances.[3751]

The executing court cannot interfere with the interest awarded by the arbitrator.[3752] The plaintiff in a Patna case claimed a specific sum from the insurers, which was found due and decreed. It was held that he was entitled to interest at the rate of six per cent pa.[3753]

A cold storage concern being an industrial concern, is liable to pay interest on loan at the rate in accordance with the terms of agreement executed by them. The plea that the loan being given to cold storage which was for agricultural purposes, no compound interest could be charged to debtor agriculturist would not be tenable.[3754]

Where the government's health department purchased medicines to supply the same to various government hospitals for the benefit of citizens and to be provided to common persons subjected to various ailments, it cannot be said to be commercial transaction as it cannot be said to be connected with any industry, trade or business of the party who has incurred the liability and therefore, the proviso of section 34 will not be applicable to the said transaction.[3755]

Where, in a government contract, the bidder withdrew the tender but the amount of earnest money was unjustifiably retained by the corporation and the corporation had driven the contractor to series of litigation, it was held that in such a case it is the duty of court to see that the party is adequately compensated, and the award of interest of 12% by trial court was

---

3747. State of Orissa v United Commercial Co, Engineers and Builders, AIR 1996 Ori 217.
3748. Associated Construction and Engineering Co v Dhan Laxmiben, AIR 1997 Guj 39.
3749. Syndicate Bank v WB Cements Ltd, AIR 1989 Del 107.
3750. Union Bank of India v K Kumaranunni Nair, AIR 1991 Ker 118.
3751. Jain Mills and Electrical Stores v State of Orissa, AIR 1991 Ori 117.
3752. K Sambandam v Srikati Co-op Urban Bank, AIR 1983 Mad 36.
3753. LIC v OP Bhalla, AIR 1989 Pat 269.
3754. Nafees Ahamad v Tehsildar/Magistrate, Tehsil Patiyale Heta, AIR 1998 All 78 (DB).
3755. Meenakashi Pharma Distributors v State of Karnataka, AIR 1999 Kant 192.

found proper.[3756] Where, the plaintiff had not been able to avail fruits of decree for last many years, the parties had not produced any evidence to establish any statutory rate of interest, the case pertained to a business transaction, the award of interest at the rate of nine percent pa was found proper.[3757] When, corporate loan contract provided for payment of interest at the rate of 30% on expiry of 90 days, contractual rate of interest admittedly ran beyond a period of 90 days, the plea of borrower that loan will carry no interest beyond period of 90 days was found opposed to all principles of justice and equity as the period of 90 days in fact protected the borrower from any action on the ground that he had agreed to pay the interest at 30 % during that period.[3758] If the plaintiff is deprived of money for long in a commercial transaction, the award of interest at 18% pa on the principle amount is not improper.[3759]

[s 34.28] Commercial Transaction

Explanation II—For the purposes of this section, a transaction is a commercial transaction, if it is connected with the industry, trade or business of the party incurring the liability.

Loan by a bank for the development of coffee estate, is not loan for "commercial transaction". It is a loan for agricultural or horticultural operation.[3760] Development of coffee estate is not a commercial purpose, it is agricultural.[3761] In commercial transactions, for the period after the passing of the decree, contractual rate ought to be the rule and a reduced rate should be an exception.[3762] The share of a partner on his retirement is in the nature of a pure debt, with effect from the date on which he ceases to be a partner and the relevant date for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the share is the date on which he ceases to be a partner. Since, the partnership was a commercial transaction, the retiring partner would be entitled to interest at the rate at which the monies are lent or advance by nationalised banks in relation to commercial transactions.[3763]

Explanation II to section 34 clearly says that a transaction would be commercial only if it is connected with trade or business of the party incurring liability. Thus, where "Culled Apple" was supplied to the Corporation, it cannot be said that it was by way of a commercial transaction, as the said purchase was made under a Support Price Scheme introduced to save the farmers from financial crisis. The "Culled Apple" was not marketable and therefore, support price scheme was introduced that year. There is nothing on the record to suggest even remotely that the support price scheme was introduced to earn profits or as a commercial venture. It was held that the supplier was entitled to interest at the rate of 6% pa from the date of decree as the title of the owner of fruit orchard was under cloud.[3764]

The Bombay High Court has held that hand loan between relatives is not a commercial transaction and as such rate of future interest must be restricted 6% pa from the date of the

---

3756. Aditya Mass Communications (Pvt) Ltd v APSRTC, AIR 2003 SC 3411 : (2003) 11 SCC 17 : JT 2003 2 SC 363 : (2004) 136 Punj LR 461 : (2003) 8 Scale 37. See also Ajeet International v HPHPM & P Corp Ltd, AIR 2002 HP 159.
3757. Dwarika Prasad Bajaj v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2004 All 368.
3758. Shaw Wallace & Co Ltd v Ghoom Investment Co Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Cal 126 (DB).
3759. Minerals & Metals Trading Co Ltd v Dimple Overseas Ltd, AIR 2001 Del 427 (DB).
3760. CS Shyamala v SC Srikantiah, AIR 1990 Kant 145.
3761. Canara Bank v KS Kushalapa, supra.
3762. Syndicate Bank v West Bengal Cements Ltd, AIR 1989 Del 107; State Bank of Travancore v K Vinayachandran, AIR 1989 Ker 302.
3763. Chillakuru Chandrasekhakra Reddy v Pamuru Vishnu Vinodh Reddy, AIR 1995 AP 49.
3764. Charu Bhatnagar v HPMC, AIR 2006 HP 119 : (2006) 1 Shim LC 465.

decree. It has been further held that in absence of agreement to pay interest on the said amount, assessment of interest on the principal amount prior to decree would also be a "nullity."[3765]

In a case relating to supply of goods there was no stipulation with regard to interest payable in the case of default on the part of the defendant. It was a commercial transaction between the parties and as such keeping in view the existing bank rate of interest, the Himachal Pradesh High Court allowed simple interest at the rate of 12% pa.[3766]

Construction of bridges, roads, and highways on reckoning can be said to be "industry" or "trade". Such activity is for the benefit of people at large without any profit even in the remotest possibilities. The court was required to make these observations, as there was no definition of trade or industry in the CPC.[3767] Contract for supply of goods is a commercial transaction under the proviso to section 34(1) of the CPC; future interest could be more than 6%.[3768]

The Himachal Pradesh High Court has held that the court is empowered to increase post-decretal interest in relation to liability arising out of a commercial transaction as clarified in Explanation II to section 34 of the Code. However, where the Corporation had purchased fruit under the Support Price Scheme which was designed to help the farmers from financial crisis, the same cannot be said to be a commercial transaction.[3769]

In cases where the liability had arisen out of a commercial transaction, the rate of such interest may exceed pa 6% pa but shall not exceed the contractual rate of interest or where there is no contractual rate, the rate at which monies are lent or advanced by nationalised banks in relation to commercial transactions.[3770] It may be noticed that before the Amendment of 1976, the maximum interest which the court could award was six percent pa. However, in appropriate cases, the court had the discretion to award interest at a lesser rate but in no case exceeding six percent. Now the courts are empowered to increase post decretal interest in relation to a liability arising out of a commercial transaction on the principal sum adjudged.

[s 34.29] Five Propositions

As regards interest for the post decretal period, an Andhra Pradesh case lays down the following five propositions:

(i) Where loan is a commercial transaction, even if there is no contract for payment of interest, interest can be allowed for the post-decretal period.

(ii) In such a transaction, the proviso to section 34 enables the court to award interest at the rate currently allowed by nationalised banks on deposits.

(iii) But the claimant must adduce acceptable evidence as to the current rate so allowable by banks.

(iv) In the absence of such evidence, the court can allow reasonable rate of interest.

(v) In the particular case, award (by the trial court) of interest at the rate of 12% pa for the post-decretal period was held not to be wrong or incorrect.[3771]

3765. Manesh Rajkumar Kanhed v Ramesh Bhagwansa Walale, AIR 2007 Bom 86 : 2007 (3) All MR 84 (Aurangabad Bench).
3766. Rakesh Kumar Dinesh Kumar v UG Hotels and Resorts Ltd, AIR 2006 HP 135 : (2006) 2 Shim LC 384.
3767. State of Maharashtra v Saifuddin Mujjaffarali Saife, AIR 1994 Bom 48 (DB).
3768. Nagesh Sales Corp v Kerala Soaps and Oils Ltd, AIR 1994 Ker 150; Satish Solvent Extraction Pvt Ltd v New India Assurance Co Ltd, AIR 1996 Bom 293 (DB).
3769. Madan Mohan v HPMC, 2007 (4) Civil Court Cases 313 (HP).
3770. APSRTC v B Vijaya, AIR 2002 AP 441 (FB).
3771. Sir Srinivas Co v Firm VDHA Sethi, AIR 1985 AP 21.

[s 34.30] Judicial and Reasonable Exercise of Discretion

Section 34 of the CPC leaves it to the discretion to the court as to what interest is to be decreed by way of pendente lite interest. So far as future interest or further interest is concerned, that too is left entirely to the discretion to the court but subject to a limit of six percent. However, the edit provision would remove the limit to the future interest in a case arising out of a commercial transaction. But, the proviso does not take away the discretion left to the court, nor does it limit the scope of exercise of such discretion. The judicial discretion in this regard must depend upon consideration of all the attending facts and circumstances including the circumstances that the amount decreed was in respect of a liability arising out of a commercial transaction. The exercise of such discretion shall necessarily be judicial and reasonable.[3772]

[s 34.31] Bank Rate of Interest — Reduction of Interest

As the relationship between the plaintiff and defendant was found to be not merely of a lender and borrower, but there was an agreement similar to cash credit arrangement with the bank and as the bank rate of interest at the relevant time was 12% pa, the Supreme Court reduced the future interest from 18%–12%.[3773]

Where the high court directed payment of 18% interest but the rate of interest which was prevailing at the relevant time was 18%. However, the bank rate of interest has since gone down drastically. Grant of interest pendente lite and for future is a discretionary remedy. The court of appeal can, therefore, exercise the same power while finally disposing the lis as that of the high court keeping in view the principle engrafted in section 34 of the CPC. The rate of interest may have to be fixed having regard to the principle of restitution. In the facts and circumstances of this case it was held that grant of nine percent interest shall meet the ends of justice.[3774]

In a case relating to recovery of dues of overdraft facility given by Bank to contractor, where interest pendente lite was granted at the rate of 25% pa and interest till realisation was allowed at 19% pa, the Supreme Court held that levy of interest has to be at reasonable rate. Even though the power is discretionary, the principle of section 34 of the Code would apply. The interest was modified by the Supreme Court at 9% pa.[3775] It was observed by the court as follows:

> 8. The quantum and rate of interest which the appellant in the present case is entitled to would be in accordance with the provisions of Section 34 of the Code. According to the provisions of Section 34 of the Code interest is to be awarded at a reasonable rate and on the principal amount. It is needless to point out that although the amount of interest from the date of filing of the suit till the date of the decree and thereafter till realisation is in the discretion of the court as is confirmed by the use of the word 'may' but such discretion has to be exercised by the court properly, reasonably and on sound legal principles and not arbitrarily and while doing so the court is also to consider the parameter, scope and ambit of Section 34 of the Code.[3776]

3772. Bangalore Water Supply and Sewerage Board v Sugesan & Co Pvt Ltd, Madras, AIR 1999 Mad 49(DB).
3773. Mahinder Singh Jaggi v Dataram Jagnnath, (1998) 9 SCC 28.
3774. DDA v Joginder S Monga, AIR 2004 SC 3291.
3775. CK Sasankan v Dhanalakshmi Bank Ltd, AIR 2009 SC 3171 : (2009) 11 SCC 60.
3776. CK Sasankan v Dhanalakshmi Bank Ltd, AIR 2009 SC 3171 : (2009) 11 SCC 60, (Dr M Sharma J speaking for the Bench).

[s 34.32] Suit by Bank

(i) In the case of a suit by a bank against a person who has executed a promissory note in favour of a bank, the rate of interest in the pro-note was to be taken and should be allowed pendente lite unless there are compellable and inescapable reasons to the contrary[3777] (the judgment contains observations that for the purpose of calculating the agreed rate, RBI circulars would be needed).

(ii) The Calcutta view as to pre-suit interest is, that if a claim for interest at the agreed rate is made by a banking company, the court has no discretion to ignore the same, in view of section 21A of the Banking Regulation Act, 1949.[3778]

(iii) The Kerala High Court, while awarding 12% pa rate of interest in a money suit (not based on mortgage), filed by a bank, has noted that banking business can be carried forward only when recoveries of advances are effected.[3779]

(iv) The Karnataka High Court, in a suit for recovery of money borrowed on credit card and service charges was of the view that the trial court was very liberal in granting interest at the rate of 12% despite the contract rate of 2.5% per month which works out 30 % pa. The bank appeared to be satisfied with the judgment and decree and had not preferred any appeal against the rejection of the contract rate of interest. The grant of interest by the trial court was found quite reasonable.[3780]

(v) Section 21 of Banking Regulation Act, 1949 enables the Reserve Bank of India to take note of public interest to regulate the charging of interest on loan advanced from time to time. It is in exercise of that power that Reserve Bank of India circulars fixing rate of interest. Any breach of those directives is liable to be penalised under section 47 of the Banking Regulation Act. Therefore, it was stated that the court was not justified in denying interest at the rate of 17 % pa on the principal sum adjudged in a suit substituted by bank for recovery of loan amount together with interest that is, Rs 11,21,333.45. The judgment was accordingly modified and decreed that the appellant-bank was entitled to get interest at the rate of 17%pa on the amount of Rs 11,21,333.45, the principal sum adjudged from the date of the suit till realisation of the whole amount. All other directions of the trial court would stand.[3781]

(vi) The plaintiff bank has not given evidence as to what is the rate of interest as prescribed by the nationalised bank during the pendency of the suit. It is not shown how the interest at the rate of 16.5% was arrived at. Further, when it is a case where defaulted interests are added to the principal amount, a uniform rate of interest of 9% from the date of suit until date of realisation will be reasonable.[3782]

(vii) In another case, the plaintiff bank asked for interest at the rate of 21 percent pa on the amount due by the defendants. It was an admitted position that the defendants 1 to 3 had availed the said loan for the purpose of business of the first defendant

---

3777. Indian Bank v Textile Inland Agencies, AIR 1992 Cal 296.
3778. Vijaya Bank v Art Trend Export, AIR 1992 Cal 12.
3779. Catholic Syrian Bank Ltd v NV Varkey, (1982) 2 KL 789 (DB); noted in Bank of India v Mary George, AIR 1992.Ker 125.
3780. B Dhanraj v Central Bank of India, AIR 2004 Kant 416.
3781. Indian Bank, Mattancherry v MR Prabhu & Sons, AIR 2002 Ker 44 (DB).
3782. Veluswamy Gounder v State Bank of India, AIR 2001 Ker 366. See also Appana Pullam Raju v Central Bank of India, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1413 (AP) : (2006) 1 SCC 262.

firm. Considering the transaction between the parties, the court was of the view that the interest claimed by the plaintiff at 21 percent pa was neither excessive nor unreasonable. Therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to interest at 21% pa.[3783]

(viii) In a suit for recovery of money advanced by Bank based on promissory note, the defendant admitted the execution of the promissory note, which did not contain any stipulation regarding rate of interest. The Karnataka High Court held the grant of interest by way of damages at the rate of 15 % as not proper and reduced the same at the rate of 6% pendente lite and future interest on principal amount.[3784]

(ix) The Punjab and Haryana High Court has held that interest can be recovered by Bank on suit amount which included principal amount as well as interest and the order of Executing Court that the Bank was entitled to further interest on original loan amount only was liable to be rejected.[3785]

[s 34.33] Sub-section (2): Recourse When Decree Silent on Interest

All statutory notifications which are legislative in nature, amount to "law". Notification was issued bringing proviso to section 34 into force. Court is bound to take judicial notice of it under section 57 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. Mistake in judgment in not taking such notice is obviously a patent mistake. Petition for review of judgment is maintainable. Discretion under the proviso to section 34 must be exercised on sound judicial principles. Future interest at contractual rate should not be refused, except for sufficient reasons. Refusal to award future interest at the contractual rate is only the exception and not the rule. Review of judgment on this ground must be allowed.[3786] General rule is that interest should be allowed at the contractual rate. If the trial court has refused to allow future interest at the contractual rate and an application is made for review, refusal to review the judgment cannot be sustained.[3787]

In a Bombay case, the court was concerned with a situation in which the transaction was admittedly not a commercial one. Nevertheless, the circumstances were such that in the interest of justice, a high rate of interest was considered prima facie desirable. The decree was for Rs 16,200 and the amount was in the nature of a claim against the railway administration. In the circumstances of the case, a rate of 15% pa as interest was just and proper, for the period from the date of the suit until the date of the decree. The court took note of the fact that the stand taken by the railway administration was "unbecoming". Besides this, the amount actually awarded to the plaintiff did not amount to even half the amount of the real claim at the present rupee value. It was for this reason that the rate of 15% pa from the date of suit up to the date of decree was considered proper.[3788]

In the absence of rate of interest specified in the decree, the executing court is not empowered to award interest at 12%.[3789]

3783. Lakshmi Vilas Bank Ltd v Shreechakra Enterprises, AIR 2003 Mad 1.
3784. MA Parthasarathy v Bank of Baroda, 2007 (1) Civil Court Cases 692 : 2007 (1) Kant LJ 200.
3785. New Bank of India v Suba Singh, AIR 2006 P&H 84 : (2006) 142 PLR 255.
3786. State Bank of Travancore v K Vinayachandran, AIR 1989 Ker 302.
3787. State Bank of Travancore v K Vinayachandran, AIR 1989 Ker 302.
3788. Amrutlal v Vishwasrao, AIR 1989 Bom 410.
3789. Triyamvak Venkatesh Hebsur v Dharmarddi Fakiraddi Khyadad, AIR 1996 Kant 92.

A commercial loan was advanced by bank. The loanee was to pay interest from the date of loan till the date of payment in full with quarterly rest. Interest accrued and added to principal amount on date of suit is "principal amount" for purposes of the interest and not the amount of loan originally advanced.[3790]

Costs

[3791][S 35] Costs.—(1) Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, and to the provisions of any law for the time being in force, the costs of and incident to all suits shall be in the discretion of the Court, and the Court shall have full power to determine by whom or out of what property and to what extent such costs are to be paid and to give all necessary directions for the purposes aforesaid. The fact that the Court has no jurisdiction to try the suit shall be no bar to the exercise of such powers.

(2) Where the Court directs that any costs shall not follow the event, the Court shall state its reasons in writing.

[3792][(3) * * *]

AMENDMENT FOR COMMERCIAL DISPUTE OF A SPECIFIED VALUE

Substitution of new section for section 35.—For section 35 of the Code, the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

35. Costs.—(1) In relation to any commercial dispute, the Court, notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force or Rule, has the discretion to determine:

(a) whether costs are payable by one party to another;

(b) the quantum of those costs; and

(c) when they are to be paid.

Explanation.—For the purpose of clause (a), the expression "costs" shall mean reasonable costs relating to—

(i) the fees and expenses of the witnesses incurred;

(ii) legal fees and expenses incurred;

(iii) any other expenses incurred in connection with the proceedings.

(2) If the Court decides to make an order for payment of costs, the general rule is that the unsuccessful party shall be ordered to pay the costs of the successful party:

Provided that the Court may make an order deviating from the general rule for reasons to be recorded in writing.

3790. Indian Bank v Kamalaya Cloth Store, AIR 1991 Ori 44.

3791. See Amendment for Commercial Dispute of a Specified Value vide the Commercial Courts, Commercial Division and Commercial Appellate Division of High Courts Act, 2015 (4 of 2016), section 16 and the Schedule (wref 23 October 2015).

3792. Sub-section (3) omitted by CPC (Amendment) Act 66 of 1956, section 3 (w.e.f. 1-1-1957). Before omission it stood as under:—

"(3) The Court may give interest on costs at any rate not exceeding six per cent per annum, and such interest shall be added to the costs and shall be recoverable as such".

SYNOPSIS

[s 35.1] High Court Amendment 629
[s 35.2] Object 629
[s 35.3] Subject to Such Conditions and Limitations As May Be Prescribed 629
[s 35.4] "The provisions of any law" 630
[s 35.5] Costs as Penalty 630
[s 35.6] "Costs of" and "incident to suit" 633
[s 35.7] Costs of this Suit 633
[s 35.8] Agreement of Costs 634
[s 35.9] Offer of Compromise — Effect on Costs 634
[s 35.10] Proportionate Costs 635
[s 35.11] Costs by Appellate Court Interpretation 636
[s 35.12] Costs: A Discretion of the Court 637
[s 35.12.1] Costs Shall Follow the Event 638
[s 35.12.2] Costs in a Partition Suit 642
[s 35.12.3] Costs in an Administration Suit 642
[s 35.12.4] Costs in Company Matters 642
[s 35.12.5] Costs in a Partnership Suit 643
[s 35.12.6] Costs of Mortgagee 643
[s 35.12.7] Costs of Trustee 643
[s 35.12.8] Costs in Pre-emption Suits 643
[s 35.12.9] Costs under Lease and Rent Control Acts ... 643
[s 35.12.10] Costs of Suits Referred to Referee 643
[s 35.12.11] November 1984 Riot Affected Borrowers 643
[s 35.13] Co-plaintiffs 644
[s 35.14] Co-defendants 644
[s 35.15] Cost Upon Advocate 645
[s 35.16] Forma pauperis 646
[s 35.17] Nominal/No Cost 646
[s 35.18] Discretion not to be Delegated 647
[s 35.19] Costs Against Person not a Party to Suit 647
[s 35.20] Court Having no Jurisdiction to Try the Suit 648
[s 35.21] Out of What Property 648
[s 35.22] Costs Where Relief is Claimed Against Defendants in the Alternative 648
[s 35.23] No Separate Suit for Costs 648
[s 35.24] Sub-section (2): Reasons in Writing 649
[s 35.25] Costs Disallowed When Delay Arises in Appeals to the Privy Council: Supreme Court 649
[s 35.26] Sub-section (3): Omitted 649
[s 35.27] Appeal for Costs Only 649
[s 35.27.1] When the Appeal is Against Decrees 649
[s 35.27.2] When the Appeal is Against an Appealable Order 651
[s 35.27.3] When the Appeal is Against an Non-appealable Order 651
[s 35.28] Letters Patent Appeal 651
[s 35.29] Costs against Government 651
[s 35.30] Matrimonial Causes 652
[s 35.31] Suit for Contribution Towards Costs 653
[s 35.32] Review of Taxation 653
[s 35.33] Public Interest Litigation 654
[s 35.34] Delay in Deposit of Cost — Condonation of 655
[s 35.35] Failure to Deposit Cost and Absence of Party — Effect 655

[s 35.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Omit sub-section (2) vide Cal. Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 35.2] Object

The object of awarding cost is to indemnify a party against the expense of successfully indicating his rights in court.[3793]

[s 35.3] Subject to Such Conditions and Limitations As May Be Prescribed

"Prescribed" means by rules contained in, or made under the Act; see section 2 (16) and (18). These include rules framed under sections 122 and 125 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 3793. Mahindra v Aswini, (1920) ILR 48 Cal 427; Anandji Haridas & Co v State, AIR 1977 Guj 140, 18 Guj LR 271.

1908.[3794] The following rules contain express provision as to costs: O XI, rule 3 (costs of interrogatories); O XII, rule 2 (proof of documents); O XXI, rule 72 (3) (application to set aside a sale), O XXIII, rule 1(3) (withdrawal of suit); O XXIV, rule 4 (cost on payment into court); O XXXII, rules 4 and 5 (next friends and guardians); O XXXIII, rules 10, 11 and 16 (pauper suits); O XXXV, rule 3 (inter-pleader suits); O XXXIV (mortgage suits). But nothing in the rules as to pauper suits limits the discretion of the court under section 35 to apportion costs. Under Sch II, para 13, the court could make an order as to costs of the arbitration where a suit was referred to such arbitration and the award made no provision as to costs and also an order as to the costs of the proceedings in court, with reference to the arbitration. But the court could not pass an order as to the costs of the suit prior to the reference.[3795] Sch II has, however, been repealed.

[s 35.4] "The provisions of any law"

The discretion to award costs is limited by certain enactments, eg the Presidency Small Causes Courts Act, 1882, section 22;[3796] the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, section 27.[3797]

[s 35.5] Costs as Penalty

Costs cannot be imposed as a penalty beyond the costs of suit.[3798] "It is not according to law to give to a party, by way of damages, the costs as between attorney and client of the litigation in which the damages are recovered."[3799] Where a review application was misconceived but both the parties were at fault, exemplary costs were not awarded, but normal costs were awarded.[3800] The assessors of Delhi Municipal Corporation determined the rental value and the rateable value of the property situated in Delhi and also determined the taxes payable thereon. Thereafter, the owner filed a suit in the court in the State of Uttar Pradesh for declaration that the assessment order passed by the assessor of Delhi Municipal Corporation was illegal, invalid and void ab initio and for prohibitory injunction against the attachment of the owners property. The decree for prohibitory injunction restraining Municipal Corporation from attachment of owners property was passed ex parte.

The fact that the appeal against the assessment order was pending, was deliberately suppressed. Such practices of gross abuse of the processes of the court ought to be put down with a stern hand so that similarly-minded others may desist from indulging in similar acts. Exemplary cost, in a sum of Rs 50,000 was awarded against the legal representative of the deceased owner.[3801]

3794. Nandlal v Jayadev, AIR 1962 Pat 36.
3795. Hira v Gaya, AIR 1932 All 183 : (1932) 54 All 122.
3796. Manmatha v Abu Zafer, AIR 1929 Cal 560 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 484.
3797. Assistant Collector, Salsette v Damodardas, AIR 1929 Bom 63 : (1929) ILR 53 Bom 178.
3798. Willmott v Barber, (1881) 17 CD 772.
3799. Cockburn v Edwards, (1881) 18 CD 449; RK Karanjia v Thackersey, AIR 1970 Bom 424 : 72 Bom LR 94 106.
3800. Harsh Wood Products v State, AIR 1989 MP 112.
3801. Municipal Corp of Delhi v Kamla Devi, AIR 1996 SC 1733 : (1996) 8 SCC 285 : 1996 (3) Scale 403 : (1996) 3 SCR 1192. See also Mahendra Baburao Mahadik v Subhash Krishna Kanitkar, AIR 2005 SC 1794 : (2005) 4 SCC 99 : 2005 (3) Scale 235; Karnataka Slum Clearance Board, Bangalore v HT Annaji, AIR 2006 Kant 241; Shibu Chandra Dhar v Pasupati Nath Auddya, AIR 2002 SC 1252 : (2002) 3 SCC 617 : 2002(2) SCR 249 : 2002 (3) JT 94 : 2002 (2) Scale 468.

In the case of admission of a student in Medical College, she was allotted a seat in the Dental Course. However, she was again called for centralised counselling and was selected for the MBBS course. She left the BDS course and took admission in the MBBS course. But due to lackadaisical action of authorities and for no laches on her part, she was made to run from pillar to post and eventually she lost one valuable year of her academic and professional career. The Orissa High Court directed that she should be admitted to MBBS course in next Academic Session 2008-2009 in any Government Medical College of the State and further directed the authorities and State to pay costs to meet the ends of justice.[3802]

In the case of frivolous proceedings, the Bombay High Court held that time is required to be spent by Court for adjudicating upon such matters. Therefore, considering the status of the plaintiff and nature of transaction, cost of Rs 30,000 was imposed to be payable to the state.[3803]

Since the university had forced the respondent to come to the court, and be dragged up to the Supreme Court, ordinarily the court would have directed the cost to be paid to the respondent, however, as an interim order was passed directing the appellant to pay to the respondent all his dues without requiring the respondent to work. In the circumstances, while dismissing the appeal, the Supreme Court left the parties to bear their own cost.[3804] Arbitrary allotment of petrol pumps by Minister of State for Petroleum and Natural Gas was challenged by way of public interest litigation. In view of the able assistance to the court, by the petitioner, the Supreme Court imposed a cost of Rs 50,000 and directed the same to be paid by the minister personally.[3805] In a case, the Supreme Court imposed cost, by way of penalty against a party, who launched the unnecessary litigation by filing writ petition in the high court. The Punjab National Bank, which further complicated the litigation and which was held responsible for dereliction of statutory duty, was made responsible for payment of cost.[3806] The distribution of surplus land by the revenue authority was done with unjust and undue haste. The action performed on the part of the authority was found to be mala fide against the petitioner, hence a cost of Rs 5000 was imposed against the revenue authority.[3807] When the adopted son was not given his due share in joint family property and so was compelled to litigate in civil court for nearly 35 years, the case was found fit for awarding exemplary costs and a sum of Rs 5,000 was awarded as cost.[3808] If the plaintiffs have unnecessarily been dragged into litigation, it is a fit case where exemplary costs should be awarded to the plaintiffs and accordingly a cost of Rs 1,500 was awarded to the plaintiff.[3809] The plaintiff, a young man of 21 years, was struck with deadly disease like cancer. The plaintiff was treated by renowned doctors and was indeed inflicted by various ailments. The plaintiff was genuinely labouring under a belief that all the ailments were because of second course of radiation and that the doctors treating him were negligent in administrating the same to him. The plaintiff had his own reasons to arrive at this conclusion. The conclusion arrived by him may be scientifically wrong, but he cannot be prevented for that reason to take recourse to any legal remedy which is available 3802. Medical Council of India, New Delhi v Sonali Singh, 2008 (106) Cut LT 477 : 2008 (2) Orissa LR 467.

---

3803. Ramesh Bhodhraj Nagpal (HUF) v Smt. Prakash Kaur Sardar, 2009 (4) AIR Bom R 191 : 2009 (4) All MR 370.
3804. Madurai Kamraj University v K Rajayan, (1988) Supp SCC 97.
3805. Common Cause, a (Registered Society) v UOI, AIR 1996 SC 3538 : (1996) 6 SCC 530 : 1996 (8) JT SC 613 : 1996 (7) Scale 156.
3806. Life Insurance Corporation of India v Escorts Ltd, (1986) 1 SCC 264.
3807. Akhileshwar Mishra v State of Bihar, AIR 1995 Pat 10 (DB). See also Stella Silks Ltd v State of Karnataka, AIR 2001 Kant 219.
3808. Heera Lal v Board of Revenue, AIR 2001 Raj 318 (DB).
3809. Hindustan Metals v Vishal Goods Transport Co, AIR 2002 Raj 248.

to him. The plaintiff is no doubt a layman, but he is not an illiterate person. The plaintiff approached the court, when he thought that there was wrong committed by the respondents and that he should approach the court for redressal of this wrong. In such circumstances, the plaintiff cannot be saddled with the cost of litigation much less the exemplary cost.[3810] During the period counting was stopped due to breakdown of electricity, some additional ballot papers not issued by the presiding officers were found to have been mixed up with the bundle belonging to respondent number 4, which is a serious malpractice and the respondent number 4 was made to pay a cost of Rs 10,000.[3811] In admission to MBBS course, a seat was reserved for sportsman. A candidate, in his application, stated that his father was an IAS officer. The member secretary of the Sports Development Authority made a special recommendation in favour of the said candidate and addressed a letter to the selection committee to do the needful. The selection committee introduced the rules of reservation despite the rules in the prospectus. The selection committee was held vitiated by gross nepotism. It being a clear case of mala fide in the eyes of law, the candidate, the member secretary and the other authorities were made liable to pay the cost out of their personal funds.[3812] Since petition after petitions have been filed without disclosing the same, in subsequent petition in separation, therefore, all the petitions were dismissed with cost and the same shall be recoverable from the petitioners as arrears of land revenue if not deposited voluntarily within two months.[3813]

In a suit filed by the plaintiff for possession, mesne profits and permanent injunction in respect of a tenanted premises, the defendant took the plea of section 22 of the Sick Industrial Companies (Special Provisions) Act, 1986 and suspension of legal proceedings thereunder, when the trial Court dismissed the plea, the defendant challenged the order before high court under Article 227 the Constitution. Dismissing the petition of the defendant, the high court held that the petition is most bogus and frivolous one and been filed just to squander public money and to harass a common man who committed blunder by giving his property on rent to the very public undertaking." With these observations the court imposed exemplary cost of Rs 50,000[3814]. The further observations of the court may serve as a deterrent for unscrupulous litigants and as such worth taking not of:

> 19. Public Sector undertakings spent more money on contesting cases than the amount they might have to pay with regard to the premises which have been taken on rent by them. In addition there to, precious time, effort and other resources go down the drain in vain. Public Sector undertakings are possibly an apt example of being penny wise, pound foolish. Rise in frivolous litigation is also due to the fact that Public Sector undertakings though having large number of legal personnel under their employment, do not examine the cases properly and force poor litigants to approach the court.
>
> 20. Frivolous litigation clogs the wheels of justice making it difficult for courts to provide easy and speedy justice to the genuine litigants. Public Sector undertakings should not indulge in mindless litigation and unnecessarily waste the time and public exchequer's money. A strong message is required to be sent to those litigants (whether Government or Private) who are in the habit of challenging each and every order of the trial court even if the same is based on sound reasoning and also to those litigants who go on filing frivolous applications one after another.[3815]

3810. Venketesh Iyer v Bombay Hospital Trust, AIR 1998 Bom 373.
3811. Ambika Prasad Dubey v District Magistrate, Allahabad, (1991) Supp 1 SCC 255.
3812. Midhuna Nathan v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1996 Mad 178 (DB).
3813. Brij Mohan Rice Mill v Regional Manager, UPFC, AIR 1997 All 291 (DB). Regarding compensatory costs in cases of false or vexatious claims or defences, see section 35A below.
3814. National Textile Corp Ltd v Kunj Bahari Lal, AIR 2010 Del 199.
3815. National Textile Corporation Ltd v Kunj Bahari Lal, AIR 2010 Del 199, p 202–203.

[s 35.6] "Costs of" and "incident to suit"

This expression includes not only costs of suits, but costs of applications in suits also. If there has been an invalid reference to arbitration out of court, the court cannot make an order for costs incurred before the arbitrator as they are not costs of the suit.[3816] As to cost of applications, the court may make an order directing either party to pay the costs of the other, or it may make no order as to costs, or it may reserve costs or make costs, as costs in the cause. Where an official receiver was appointed pending a suit for partition but he had no power to bring suits of a certain nature without the leave of court, it was held that costs incurred for obtaining such leave were incidental to the suit of the nature contemplated,[3817] so also costs of an application under section 476 of the CPC.[3818] The expression, "costs of any proceeding or costs incidental to any proceeding" means costs of any proceedings such as may be determined at the conclusion of the hearing and does not include costs payable in advance or to be incurred in future by a party. An order, therefore, directing the party to a proceeding to pay the travelling and halting allowances of another party irrespective of the final decision is not warranted by law.[3819] Every objection or counter affidavit or application of mind involves some amount of cost and waste of energy. That should be suitably compensated in cost. That is how, even assuming that an order has put the other side to inconvenience, it cannot be irreparable as it can be compensated by mulcting the other side with cost.[3820]

[s 35.7] Costs of this Suit

The expression "costs of this suit" means all costs incurred in the suit. Therefore, if one of the defendants is ordered to pay plaintiff's "costs of the suit" and no qualifying words are added, the costs include costs which the plaintiff has incurred by impleading another defendant against whom the suit has been dismissed with costs.[3821] Thus the word "cost" includes costs incidental to the suit.[3822]

The general order for costs of' the suit does not displace a specific order for costs made on an application.[3823] If it is intended to supersede previous interlocutory orders for costs, that fact should be stated in the final decree.[3824] The practice of the Calcutta High Court is that orders for costs made by the court of appeal during the progress of the suit are taxed forthwith and execution levied therefore, but interlocutory orders in the original court await taxation at the final termination of the suit.[3825] In a consent decree, if the order as to costs is intended to supersede previous interlocutory orders as to costs, that fact should be stated specifically, as one of the terms of the agreement that the parties have agreed to abandon the rights which had already accrued to them under the previous orders of the court.[3826] If the order is "costs reserved", those costs remain to be dealt with at the hearing. If the order is "costs in the cause", the Bombay High Court at one time held that the court had a discretion to deal with those 3816. Arunachala v Louis Dreyfus, AIR 1928 Mad 370 : (1928) 54 Mad LJ 580.

---

3817. Rai Bahadur Sermal Dalmia v Manindra Lal, (1935) 40 Cal WN 762.
3818. Surya Narain Prasad v Surya Manjha, AIR 1947 Pat 106.
3819. Punjab National Bank v Sri Ram Kunwar, AIR 1957 SC 276 : (1957) SCR 220 : (1957) SCJ 225 : (1957) SCA 598.
3820. Kancherla Sardha Devi v Saripella Sivaramaraju, AIR 1995 AP 291.
3821. Ramgopal v Secretary of State, AIR 1933 Bom 106 : (1933) ILR 57 Bom 589.
3822. TS Radhakrishnan v State Bank of India, AIR 1978 Mad 163.
3823. Radha Persshad v Ram Permeswar, (1882) ILR 9 Cal 797 : 10 IA 113.
3824. Kedarnath v Johormull, AIR 1930 Cal 465 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 469.
3825. Kedarnath v Johormull, AIR 1930 Cal 465 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 469.
3826. Kedarnath v Johormull, AIR 1930 Cal 465 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 469.

costs in "any manner it thought fit.[3827] In other words, "costs in the cause" stood on the same footing as costs reserved except that in the case of "costs in the cause" if nothing was said about those costs in the final judgment, they were taken to be included in the costs of the suit.[3828] But these decisions are no longer law, and it has now been held that where the costs of an application are made costs in the cause, the party to whom the costs of the suit are awarded is entitled as a matter of course to the costs of the application.[3829] If the order is "costs to abide the result" the court has a discretion to apportion costs at the hearing, but if the order is "costs to follow the event" or "costs to abide and follow the result" the court has no discretion and the successful party is entitled to his costs.[3830]

[s 35.8] Agreement of Costs

The discretion of the court in awarding costs cannot be taken away or controlled by agreement of parties as to how it has to be borne.[3831] Where a party entered into an agreement with his agent for payment of a specified amount as costs, he is not entitled to recover more than that amount as costs from the opponent as costs are in the nature of indemnity and not penalty.

[s 35.9] Offer of Compromise — Effect on Costs

When an offer of compromise is made which the court considers proper for acceptance but is refused, the court, as a general rule, relieves the party making the offer from payment of costs incurred after the date of the offer; but an offer which the court considers insufficient is no bar to a plaintiff's right to costs.[3832]

A three-Judge bench of the Supreme Court has rendered a decision of far-reaching consequence. In a case relating to section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, the court felt that the tendency of litigants to go for compounding of offence of dishonour of cheque as a last resort, is putting unnecessary strain on the judicial system and contributing to the increase in number of pending cases. It was also felt that unlike section 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, (CrPC), section 147 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 does not carry any guidance on has to proceed with compounding of offences.[3833]

Pursuant to the above view, the Bench proceeded to frame guidelines evolving a graded system of costs for compounding of offences with the following observations:

> 15. With regard to the progression of litigation in cheque bouncing cases, the learned Attorney General has urged this Court to frame guidelines for a graded scheme of imposing costs on parties who unduly delay compounding of the offence. It was submitted that the requirement of deposit of the costs will act as a deterrent for delayed composition, since at present, free and easy compounding of offences at any stage, however belated, gives an incentive to the cheque to delay settling the cases for years. An application for compounding made after several years not only results in the system being burdened but the complainant is also deprived of effective justice. In view of this submission, we direct that the following guidelines be followed:—

3827. Templeton v Laurie, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 230.
3828. Jivabai v Teja, AIR 1924 Bom 398 : (1924) 26 Bom LR 282.
3829. American Trading Co v Bird & Co, AIR 1926 Bom 596 : (1926) ILR 50 Bom 430.
3830. Godavarthi v Godavarthi, (1915) ILR 39 Mad 476.
3831. Dawood Bhai v Sheik, AIR 1953 Bom 445 : (1954) ILR Bom 29 : 58 Bom LR 618.
3832. Fennessy v Day and Martin, (1886) 55 LT 161.
3833. Damodar S Prabhu v Sayed Baba Lal H, AIR 2010 SC 1907 : (2010) 5 SCC 663.

THE GUIDELINES

(i) In the circumstances, it is proposed as follows:

(a) That directions can be given that the writ of summons be suitably modified making it clear to the accused that he could make an application for compounding of the offences at the first or second hearing of the case and that if such an application is made, compounding may be allowed by the court without imposing any cost on the accused.

(b) If the accused does not make an application for compounding as aforesaid, than if an application for compounding is made before the Magistrate at a subsequent stage, compounding can be allowed subject to the condition that the accused will be required to pay 10% of the cheque amount to be deposited as a condition for compounding with the Legal Services Authority, or such authority as the Court deems fit.

(c) Similarly, if the application for compounding is made before the sessions Court or a High Court in revision or appeal, such compounding may be allowed on the condition that the accused pays 15% of the cheque amount by way of costs.

(d) Finally, if the application for compounding is made before the Supreme Court, the figure would increase to 20% of the cheque amount.

Let it also be clarified that any cost imposed in accordance with these guidelines should be deposited with the Legal Services Authority operating at the level of the court before which compounding takes place. For instance, in case of compounding before a Magistrate's Court or a Court of Sessions, such costs should be deposited with the District Legal Services Authority. Likewise, costs imposed in connection with composition before the High Court should be deposited with the State Legal Services Authority and those imposed in connection with composition before the Supreme Court should be deposited with the National Legal Services Authority.[3834]

The further observation of the Supreme Court is worth noticing:

> We are also conscious of the view that the judicial endorsement of the above quoted guidelines could be seen as an act of judicial law-making and therefore an intrusion into the legislative domain. It must be kept in mind that section 147 of the Act does not carry any guidance on how to proceed with the compounding of offences under the Act. We have already explained that the scheme contemplated under section 320 of the CrPC cannot be followed in the strict sense. In view of the legislative vacuum we see no hurdle to the endorsement of some suggestions which have been designed to discourage litigants from unduly delaying the composition of the offence in cases involving section 138 of the Act. The graded scheme for imposing costs is a means to encourage compounding at an early stage of litigation. In the status quo, valuable time of the Court is spent on the trial of these cases and the parties are not liable to pay any Court fee since the proceedings are governed by the Code of Criminal Procedure, even though the impact of the offence is largely confined to the private parties. Even though the imposition of costs by the competent court is a matter of discretion, the scale of costs has been suggested in the interest of uniformity.[3835]

[s 35.10] Proportionate Costs

If a plaintiff recovers less, but not a trifling less, amount than he claimed in the plaint, his costs should be apportioned according to the amount recovered and not according to the sum

---

3834. Damodar S Prabhu v Sayed Baba Lal H, AIR 2010 SC 1907, pp 1913–1914.
3835. Damodar S Prabhu v Sayed Baba Lal H, AIR 2010 SC 1907, pp 1914–1915.

claimed.[3836] As to the rule in the Privy Council, see the undernoted case.[3837] The proper mode of apportionment is to calculate the amount of the costs of the suit as laid, and then divide the entire sum between the parties according as they have respectively succeeded or failed.[3838]

In a case, the trial court awarded costs of the suit. In appeal, the appellate court did not reverse, vary or modify the direction passed by the trial court to pay cost to plaintiff and did not direct the parties to bear their own costs. It was held by Kerala High Court that in the matter of realisation of cost the plaintiff cannot be denied proportionate cost awarded by the trial court by the application of doctrine of merger as doctrine of merger is not doctrine of universal or unlimited application.[3839]

[s 35.11] Costs by Appellate Court Interpretation

For realisation of costs, the specific order of the court, passed in exercise of the discretion conferred by section 35 of CPC, shall be the guiding factor. If the court of appeal passes an order that the parties shall bear their respective or own costs, such a direction is confined to the costs of the appeal alone. If, on the other hand, the direction is to the effect that the parties shall bear their respective or own costs throughout, the parties shall bear their respective costs, both in the court of appeal and in the trial court. If, in appeal, a direction is given to the effect that any of the parties shall bear the costs of the appeal or suit, such party shall bear the costs accordingly. Where the appellate court directed that the parties "shall bear their respective costs" and the trial court had decreed the suit with costs to be paid by the defendants, the costs of the suit would be recoverable by the plaintiffs, despite the direction of appellate court that the parties shall bear their respective costs.[3840] It is well-settled proposition of law, imposition of costs follows results and the exercise discretion of the any court in awarding cost shall not ordinarily be interfered with by the superior court.[3841] The opportunity of adjournment is granted to the appellant on payment of cost in the circumstances of the case.[3842] The conduct of the appellant shows that they had willfully flouted the undertaking given to the court after taking the advantage of the allotment order, though court has the power to extract obedience of the undertaking given to the court. However, in the circumstances of the case and the antecedent history of the litigation, the Supreme Court gave an opportunity to the appellants to purge themselves of the conduct of the court by vacating the premises within the specified date.[3843] It is clear from section 28(1) of the Specific Relief Act, 1963 that the court does not lose its jurisdiction after the grant of the decree of the specific performance nor it becomes functus officio. The court has the power to increase the time in favour of the judgment-debtor to pay the amount or to perform the conditions mentioned in the decree of specific performance. The court shall also be justified in awarding the cost to compensate the petitioner for loss of enjoyment of money in case of delay of payment of money in terms of decree of specific performance.[3844] Three claim petitions were filed against a truck driver, truck owner and the 3836. Madhun Mohun v Gokul Doss, (1866) 10 Moo Ind App 563; Velu v Ghose (1894) ILR 17 Mad 293, p 296; Abdulkadar v Kashinath, AIR 1968 Bom 267 : 69 Bom LR 848, p 854; Anandji Haridas & Co v State, AIR 1977 Guj 140 : 18 Guj LR 271.

---

3837. Grish Chunder v Soshi Shikhareswar, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 951 : 27 IA 110.
3838. Leckie v Joy Gobindo, (1881) 7 CIR 114.
3839. KC Thomas v Thomas, (2006) 4 Ker LT 739 : (2005) 1 Andh LD (Cri) 35.
3840. Dambarudhar Bhunya v Muralidhar Bhunya, AIR 1986 Ori 15.
3841. Bhagyashree Combines v District Magistrate, Bellary, AIR 1998 Kant 238 (DB).
3842. K Patel Chemo Pharma Pvt Ltd v Laxmi Bai Ram Chandra Iyer, (1993) Supp 2 SCC 174.
3843. Kanta Dutta v Eighth Additional District Judge, Meerut, 1991 Supp (1) SCC 219.
3844. Sardar Mohar Singh v Mangi Lal, (1997) 9 SCC 217.

appellant company which had entered into a hire purchase agreement with the truck owner. The true relationship between the truck owner and hire purchase company was suppressed by withholding the real documents executed between them, hence, the appellant was directed to pay the cost of Rs 10,000 to each claimant.[3845]

[s 35.12] Costs: A Discretion of the Court

Since, under sub-section (1) the question of costs is in the discretion of the court, ordinarily the appellate court would decline to interfere with the order as to costs passed by the lower court.[3846] A perusal of O LXXXII, rule 2 of the Rules of Supreme Court of England also does not indicate that costs can be awarded only as a matter of right and not by way of discretion.[3847] Such discretion must be a judicial discretion to be exercised on legal principles, not by chance, medley, nor by caprice nor in temper.[3848] In the exercise of this discretion the court is not confined to the consideration of the conduct of the parties in the actual litigation itself, but may also take into consideration matters which led up to, and were the occasion of that litigation.[3849] The discretion conferred upon the court by this section is very wide.[3850] Thus, the court may order the costs to be paid by the parties in definite proportions, or it may order one party to pay to the other, a fixed sum, in lieu of taxed costs.[3851] Similarly, it may disallow costs to a successful plaintiff, as where the rate of interest claimed by the plaintiff, and allowed to him, under the Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1855, is usurious;[3852] or where the successful appellant was not sufficiently careful in giving the valuation in his Special Leave Petition[3853] or it may make a successful plaintiff pay the whole costs of the other side.[3854] It may also allow the expenses of witness, though not summoned through the court.[3855] It may disallow costs of either parties on the ground that neither of them had come with clean hands.[3856] It may also disallow the costs of a party on the ground that there was unnecessary cross-examination.[3857] Where the suit is dismissed, it may disallow the costs of a pro forma defendant.[3858] But though the discretion conferred upon the courts by this section is wide, it is a judicial discretion, and must be exercised on fixed principles, i.e., according to the rules of 3845. Mohan Benefit Pvt Ltd v Kachraji Raymalji, (1977) 9 SCC 103.

---

3846. Chaturbhuj Pande v Collector, AIR 1969 SC 255; Krishneshwari v Rameshchandra, AIR 1965 All 228; Om Sarup v Gur Narain, AIR 1965 P&H 367 : 67 Punj LR 634; Kaushalya v Ramlal, AIR 1972 Del 126.
3847. Janardhan Mohandas Rajan Pillai v Madhubhai Patel, AIR 2003 Bom 490.
3848. Maharajadhiraj Sir Kameshwar Singh v Nabilal Mistri, AIR 1945 Pat 184 : (1944) ILR 23 Pat 929; Ralliram Dingra v Governor-General of India in Council, AIR 1946 Cal 249 : (1944) ILR 2 Cal 487 : (1944) 48 Cal WN 554; Huxley v West London Ex Ry., (1886) 17 QBD 373, p 376; Justain Hull v Paull, (1919) 24 Cal WN 352, p. 357; Bacha Rowther v Alagappan, AIR 1959 Mad 12 : (1958) 2 Mad LJ 157; Rangappa v Marappa, AIR 1951 Mad 575.
3849. Bhagwanji Morarji Gokuldas v Alembic Chemical Works Co Ltd, AIR 1944 Bom 205 : 46 Beng LR 265; Bhugobati v Mahomed, AIR 1925 Cal 569 : (1902) 7 Cal WN 297, p 299; Naramme v Kotamme, AIR 1966 AP 28; A Yousuf v Souramma, AIR 1971 Ker 261 : (1971) ILR 1 Ker 154.
3850. As to discretion of taxing-master, Sadasukh v Baijnath, AIR 1921 Bom 87; Jivanlal v Bai Manchha, AIR 1925 Bom 355 : (1925) 27 Bom LR 532; FCI v Willianson Magor & Co, AIR 1999 Cal 219.
3851. Hakim Rai v Gangaram, AIR 1942 PC 61 : (1942) 47 Cal WN 113; Willmott v Barber (1881) 17 Ch D 772, p 774.
3852. Carvalho v Nurbibi, (1879) ILR 3 Bom 202.
3853. Shanker v Ghisuji, AIR 1971 SC 281 : (1970) 2 SCC 84.
3854. Harris v Petherick, (1879) 4 QBD 611; Fane v Fane (1979) 13 Ch D 288; Deviah v Nagappa, AIR 1965 Mys 102.
3855. Ganga Bishan v Muree Brewery Co, AIR 1928 Lah 800 : (1928) 10 Lah LJ 401.
3856. Gulabchand v Manikchand, AIR 1960 MP 263.
3857. United Bank of India v Nederlandsche Standard Bank, AIR 1962 Cal 325.
3858. Ramaswami v Lakshmi, AIR 1962 Ker 313.

reason and justice, not according to private opinion, or benevolence,[3859] or even sympathy,[3860] nor arbitrarily and capriciously.[3861] Where there are no materials before the court on which it can exercise its discretion, it is not justified in depriving a successful party of his costs.[3862] The following are the leading rules on the subject.

[s 35.12.1] Costs Shall Follow the Event

The normal rule is that costs must follow the event unless the court, for good reasons, otherwise orders.[3863] Such reasons must be in writing.[3864] This means that the successful party is entitled to costs unless he is guilty of misconduct or there is some other good cause for not awarding costs to him;[3865] and this rule applies even to proceedings in writ jurisdiction.[3866]

However, where the judgment is silent about the incidence of cost, it shall be presumed that the court did not intend to determine the cost aspect and it intended their parties should be left to bear their own costs.[3867] In case of breach of contract, actual cost and not nominal cost should be imposed.[3868]

It has been held by the House of Lords that the expression "the costs shall follow the event" means that the party, who, on the whole, succeeds in the action gets the general costs of the action, but where the action involves separate issues, whether arising under different causes of action or under one cause of action, the word "event" should be read distributively and the costs of any particular issue should go to the party who succeeds upon it. An issue, in this sense, need not go to the whole cause of action, but includes any issue which has a direct and definite event in defeating the claim to judgment, in whole, or in part. A sued B for 164*l* for the price of 34 bags of goat's hair sold to B. B, by his defence, pleaded:

(i) that the goods were not according to sample and were consequently worth 24*l* less;

(ii) that there was an overcharge on the bags for 2*l*; and

(iii) payment into court of the balance.

B succeeded on the first issue, but failed on the second. The court of first instance gave judgment for A for 2*l* beyond the amount paid into court with costs. On appeal, it was held by the House of Lords, reversing the decision of the court of appeal, that the issue as to quality (first issue) was an "event" within the meaning of the expression "the cost shall follow the event", and that B was entitled to the costs of that issue.[3869]

3859. Kierson v Joseph L. Thompson & Sons Ltd, (1913) 1 KB 587.
3860. Bevington v Perks, (1925) 2 KB 229, p 231.
3861. Bacha Rowther v Alagappan, AIR 1959 Mad 12 : (1958) 2 Mad LJ 157.
3862. Civil Service Co-operation Society v General St Nav Co, (1903) 2 KB 756 (CA).
3863. Jugraj Singh v Jaswant Singh, AIR 1971 SC 761 : (1970) 2 SCC 386; Nandlal v Ramchandiram, AIR 1968 Bom 208 : 69 Bom LR 364; Parvati Devi v Tibbia College Board, AIR 1965 P&H 379.
3864. Shankar v Parwatibai, AIR 1976 Bom 241 : 78 Bom LR 186.
3865. Ghansham v Moroba, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 474; Kuppuswami v Zamindar of Kalahasti, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 341; Cooper v Whittingham, (1880) 15 Ch D 501; Roadeshwar v Manroop, 13 IA 20, p 31 (successful plaintiff); Monohur v Ramanauth, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 484; Bhubaneswari v Nilcoomul, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 18 24 : 12 IA 137 (successful defendant); Forster v Farguhar, (1893) 1 QB 564; Huxley v West London Extension Rly. Co, (1889) 14 App Cas 26, 32.
3866. Board of Education v Ramakrishna, AIR 1959 All 226.
3867. Omveer Singh v District Judge, Haridwar, AIR 2009 Uttr 55 : 2009 (1) UC 572.
3868. Thyseen Krupp werkstoffe GMBH v Steel Authority of India, (2010) 168 DLT 250.
3869. Reid, Hewitt & Co v Joseph, AIR 1918 Cal 71; Myres v Defries, (1880) 5 Ex D 180; Ellis v De Selva (1881) 6 QBD 521; Abbot v Andrews, (1882) QBD 648; Jones v Curling, (1884) 13 QBD 262.

The court fails to exercise its discretion properly where a defendant denies from the very start that he is a partner, is ultimately held not to be a partner and yet is denied his costs.[3870] The court may not only consider the conduct of the party in the actual litigation, but the matters which led up to the litigation.[3871] A refusal to go to arbitration is no ground for refusing costs;[3872] nor is the fact that the plaintiff brought his action without previous notice to the defendant;[3873] nor the fact that the plaintiff-mortgagee waited to file the suit for a long time with the result that the mortgagor had to pay a large amount of interest.[3874]

In an account suit, costs generally follow the result of the account unless the defendant has falsely denied his liability to account.[3875] But if the right to claim partition is wrongly disputed, the disputing party will be made liable for costs unnecessarily incurred.[3876] An assignee of a decree made respondent without his consent but who actively supports the decree under appeal will be made liable for costs of the appeal but not of the lower court.[3877] A successful party is not to be deprived of his costs merely because the suit proceeds ex parte;[3878] nor also because the parties are related.[3879] Where the respondent official receiver intimated the registrar that he was not defending the appeal for want of funds and that no order for costs should be made against him, it was held by the Supreme Court that this was not a sufficient ground for depriving the successful appellant of his costs.[3880] A successful defendant cannot be deprived of his costs merely because he refused before the filing of the suit, to disclose the evidence by which he proposed to substantiate his defence.[3881] It has been held to be a good reason for depriving a successful respondent of his costs that the appeal was filed on the strength of a decision which was overruled after the filing of the appeal[3882] or it failed by reason of a law enacted during the pendency of the appeal.[3883] Unreasonable conduct of the successful defendant was held to be sufficient ground for depriving him of costs,[3884] and even for directing him to pay the costs of the plaintiff.[3885] In Keshavlal v Lalbhai,[3886] it was held by the Supreme Court that it was a good ground for depriving the respondents of their costs that they succeeded on a ground taken for

---

3870. Ghasiram v Mahadevamma, AIR 1975 Kant 158 : (1975) ILR Kant 691.
3871. Ramsevak Bhurelal v Hiralal Swamiprosad, AIR 1943 Ngp 273 : (1943) ILR Nag 462; Bostock v Ramsey Urban District Council, (1900) 1 QB 357, 360; affd (1900) 2 QB 616; Sukumari v Gopi Mohan, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 190; Walter v Chief Secretary, AIR 1953 TC 286; United Industries v The Agriculture Income-Tax and CIT, AIR 1953 Tr & Coch 531.
3872. Beckett v Stiles, (1888) 5 Times Law Rep 88.
3873. Allah Diya v Sana Devi, (1942) 25 Ch D 182; Wittman v Oppenheim, (1884) 27 Ch D 260; the remarks of North J, in Walter v Steinkopff, (1892) 3 Ch D 489.
3874. Rajagopalswamy v Karaikudi Bank, AIR 1965 Mad 537 : (1965) 2 Mad LJ 233.
3875. Mani Devi v Anupurna Dai, AIR 1943 Pat 218 : (1942) ILR 22 Pat 114; Harinath v Krishna, (1888) ILR 14 Cal 147 : 13 IA 123; Hyam v Bengal Stone Co, (1916) 20 Cal WN 368.
3876. Bepin Behari v Promotho Nath, AIR 1930 Pat 336, (1930) ILR 9 Pat 773; Satya Kumar Kirpal, (1910) 10 Cal LJ 503.
3877. Ramji v Ellis, (1898) ILR 20 Bom 167; contra Thimappa v Thangavelu, AIR 1941 Mad 76.
3878. Maharajadhiraj Sir Kameshwar Prasad Singh v Nebilal Mistri, AIR 1945 Pat 184 : (1944) ILR 23 Pat 929; Upendra v Bisweswar, (1924) 29 Cal WN 267 : AIR 1925 Cal 596.
3879. Haribux Gouri Sankar v Subhakaron Tulsiram, AIR 1965 Ori 211.
3880. Swaminatha v Official Receiver, (1957) SCR 775 : AIR 1957 SC 557 : (1957) SCJ 501 : (1957) SCA 962.
3881. Moos v Gulamali, AIR 1930 Bom 152 : (1930) 32 Bom LR 200.
3882. Ramasami Naiken v Venkatasami, (1919) 43 Mad LJ 61; distinguished in ALSPPL Sub-ramania Chettiar v Moniam P Narayanaswami Gounder, AIR 1951 Mad 48 (FB).
3883. Krishnan v Hindustan Commercial Bank, AIR 1957 Punj 310 : (1957) ILR Punj 656.
3884. Margarent v Spain, AIR 1953 Mad 313.
3885. State of Uttar Pradesh v Shamsundar, AIR 1961 All 418.
3886. Keshavlal v Lalbhai, AIR 1958 SC 512; Seethamma v Life Insurance Co, AIR 1954 Mys 134; Nagachari v Subbamma, AIR 1955 AP 114; Nana Saheb v Appa, AIR 1957 Bom 138 : 59 Bom LR 303.

the first time in appeal. It is not a ground for depriving a successful plaintiff of his costs that he was in breach of the government order when the defendant was also in breach thereof.[3887]

The power of court to award costs to a successful party is discretionary. This discretion extends to directing the successful party to pay litigation expenses to an unsuccessful party including court-fee payable. But the court case exercise such discretion only if the conduct of the successful party towards the unsuccessful party before, at the time or after the institution of the proceeding in relation to matter in issue is perverse and obstinate. Thus, where no such reprehensible conduct on the part of the successful party was describe, the mere fact that the unsuccessful party hailed from poor strata, cannot itself be a circumstance to direct the successful party to meet the cost of unsuccessful party.[3888]

Where a party successfully enforces a legal right and in no way misconducts himself, he is entitled to costs as of right.[3889] But if he acts oppressively or if there be lapses on his part,[3890] he may be deprived of his costs, though successful.[3891]

But where a successful defendant had set up a false case, he was deprived of his costs of the suit.[3892]

If a plaintiff substantially succeeds, he is entitled to his costs, though he may not have got the precise form of relief he wanted,[3893] and even though the damages awarded to him have been reduced.[3894]

Where a plaintiff succeeds on part of his claim, but fails on the most important and expensive heads of controversy, he may be made to pay the whole cost of the suit to the defendant.[3895]

Everything which increases the litigation and the costs, and which places on the defendant, a burden which he ought not to bear in the litigation, is a perfectly good cause for depriving the plaintiff of costs,[3896] or even directing him to pay part of the costs to the other side.[3897] A successful party will be deprived of the costs of issues which he has unnecessarily raised.[3898]

A successful party ought not to be deprived of part of his costs because some of his witnesses were guilty of exaggeration.[3899]

A person, wrongfully made a party, should get his costs.[3900] When, in a suit for possession, due to accidental error on the part of plaintiffs in describing survey number in plaint,

---

3887. Baboolal v Mangilal Balkishan, AIR 1957 MP 90 : 1957 Jab LJ 83.
3888. NSS. Medical Mission Hospital v Sulbeth Beevi, 2009 (4) AIR Bom R 765 : (2009) 2 Ker LT 779.
3889. Cooper v Whittingham, (1880) 15 CD 501; Upmann v Forester, (1883) 24 CD 231; Civil Service Co-op Society v General St Nav Co, (1903) 2 KB 756 (CA); Luximibai v Radhabai, (1918) 42 Bom 327.
3890. Kailash Chandra v Nand Kumar, AIR 1944 Cal 385.
3891. Khetro Swami v Sri Sri Padmanabha Singh Deo, AIR 1943 Pat 403; Parkinson v College of Ambulance, (1925) 2 KB 1, p 17.
3892. Sukul Bros v Kavarana, AIR 1958 Cal 730.
3893. Ghansham v Moroba, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 474.
3894. Ademma v Varadareddi, AIR 1949 Mad 31 : (1948) ILR Mad 803; Englishman v Lajput Rai, (1909) 14 Cal WN 713.
3895. Forster v Farquhar, (1893) 1 QB 564.
3896. Justain Hull v Paull, (1919) 24 Cal WN 352, p 359; Huxley v West London Extension Rly, (1889) 14 AC 26, 32.
3897. UOI v KK Goswami, AIR 1974 Cal 231 : (1973) ILR 1 Cal 421 : 78 Cal WN 154.
3898. Esmail v Abdulla, AIR 1931 Bom 118 : (1931) ILR 55 Bom 525.
3899. Lipman v Pulman, (1904) WN 139 : 91 LT 132.
3900. Bishen Dayal v Bank of Upper India, (1891) ILR 13 All 290, p. 295.

the defendants were dragged to one more litigation, the cost of Rs 2,500 was awarded to defendants.[3901]

Where both the parties advanced pleas far in excess of their legal rights, each party will he made to bear his own costs.[3902]

Where there is a misconceived review application and both the parties are at fault, then:

(a) the applicant for review cannot he burdened with exemplary costs;

(b) but he can be ordered to pay nominal costs.[3903]

Where the decree of the lower court is confirmed by the appellate court, the mere fact that the grounds upon which the confirmation proceeds are not the same is the ratio decidendi of the court below, is no ground for departing from the rule that the costs shall follow the event.[3904]

In a case from Karnataka, the plaintiffs, a multi-national corporation of USA, filed a suit for injunction for infringement of their trade mark BIG MAC, McDonald's and corporate Logo "M" in India. The defendant was using trade mark Sterlings Mac Fast Food or Mac Fast Food for its restaurants. The defendants had been carrying on with its business since 1983 while the plaintiffs got registered in India in the year 1993 only. It was held by the Karnataka High Court that except for the word "MAC" which was common in both other words were altogether different. Therefore the plaintiffs cannot claim exclusive trade mark right on word "MAC". Moreover, there was delay of five years in filing the suit. It was observed that the suit was imaginary and vexatious and held the dismissal of the suit with costs as proper.[3905]

In a case, where an application was moved for waiving the costs imposed by the court, the Delhi High Court held that seeking adjournment repeatedly one or the other ground was not permissible and as such held the dismissal of the application as proper. The high court further depricated the tendency to drag proceedings by filing frivolous applications and/or seeking adjournments as also misusing the courtesy extended to counsels by courts for passing-over matters when called out.[3906]

In a suit for partition and rendition of account which was dismissed for default the Delhi High Court held that where plaintiffs prosecuted the case with diligence and no mala fide was reflected on their part, the delay in filing restoration petition can be condoned subject to payment of costs to defendants for putting them to inconvenience.[3907]

In case relating to Municipal Council elections, a petitioner filed a delayed petition challenging the election of Municipal Councillor, although he was aware that the petition was hopelessly barred by limitation. Thereafter, he filed a writ petition in the high court and managed to secure an interim order from the writ court halting the election process on the ground of pendency of the election petition. The fact that the election petition was filed just two days before the filing the writ petition, come to the notice of the court. The writ petition was dismissed with costs of Rs 50,000.[3908]

3901. Narhari Balku Kavade v Hanmanta Timma Pujari, AIR 2004 Bom 342.
3902. Ramkumar v Kalikumar, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 99 p 108 : 13 IA 116; Lachmeshwar v Manow, (1892) ILR 19 Cal 256 : 19 IA 48.
3903. Harsh Wood Products Pvt Ltd Gwalior v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1989 MP 111.
3904. Peek v Gurney, (1873) LR 6 HL 377; Fischer v Kamala Naicker, (1860) 8 Moo Ind App 170.
3905. McDonald's Corp v Sterling's Mac Fast Food, AIR (2007) 5 Kant 318 : (2007) 5 Kar LJ 638.
3906. Uttar Pradesh State Bridge Corp v Overseas Water Proofing Corp, AIR 2006 Del 211 : 2006 (130) DLT 182.
3907. Smt Santosh v Tek Chand, (2006) 134 DLT 332.
3908. Rajendra Dhanji Sakhala v State Election Commission, 2008 (1) Mah LJ 398 : 2008 AIHC 1322 (DB).

Where unwarranted litigation had been brought before the high court and proceedings were initiated with lack of bona fide and were misconceived, the high court dismissed the reference application under section 113 of the Code with costs.[3909]

Where a party entered into an agreement with his agent for payment of a specified amount as costs, he is not entitled to recover more than that amount as costs from the opponent, as costs are in the nature of indemnity and not penalty.[3910]

[s 35.12.2] Costs in a Partition Suit

It is a general rule that up to the passing of a preliminary decree in a partition suit, each party will bear his own costs, unless there are exceptional circumstances, such as unnecessary costs incurred by a frivolous defence.[3911] The court may also direct that the costs of all the parties should come out of the properties which are to be partitioned.[3912] It may also direct a party setting up an exclusive title in himself to pay the costs.[3913]

In a partition suit, where application was filed for recalling an ex parte order to allow the defendant to file written statement and the trial court condoned the defendant's delayed appearance, the Jharkhand High Court held that having done so, the defendant's prayer for filing written statement should have been considered by the trial Court bearing in mind the interest of justice. The high court allowed time to file written statement subject to payment of cost.[3914]

Court fees paid during execution proceedings as mesne profits ascertained in final partition decree is recoverable as costs implied, though not specifically mentioned in the decree.[3915]

[s 35.12.3] Costs in an Administration Suit

As expounded in Williams on Executors;[3916] Ingpen on Executors;[3917] Danniell's Chancery Practice,[3918] and the undermentioned cases.[3919]

[s 35.12.4] Costs in Company Matters

On a petition under section 395 of the Companies Act, 1956, costs should, in normal course, follow the event.[3920]

In a case relating to winding up of Company, the Bombay High Court held that interest to Workmen on amount due after the date of winding up can be awarded by Court only if there

---

3909. State of Gujarat v Dadabhai Hathibahi Chitrasani, (2008) 1 Guj LR 441 : 2008 (1) Guj LH 1.
3910. Peddanna v KVSS Sons, AIR 1954 SC 26.
3911. Dildar Ali Khan v Bhawani Sahai Singh, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 878; Satya Kumar v Satya Kirpal, (1909) 10 Cal LJ 503; Ambika Prasad v Perdip, (1915) ILR 42 Cal 451; Bipin Behari v Rai Promotho Nath, AIR 1930 Pat 336 : (1930) ILR 9 Pat 773.
3912. Melappa v Guramma, AIR 1956 Bom 129.
3913. Makkanalal v Sushama Rani, AIR 1953 Cal 164.
3914. Mosstt. Gyanu Sharma v Hari Ram Sharma, 2009 (2) AIR Jhar R 468.
3915. Kolluri Subha Rao v Kolluri Subha Rao, AIR 1943 Mad 689.
3916. Williams on Executors, 12th Edn, vol 2, p 1304, et seq.
3917. Ingpen on Executors, 2nd Edn, p 352, et seq.
3918. Danniell's Chancery Practice, 8th Edn, p 1075.
3919. National Insurance Co Ltd v Nissim, AIR 1929 Cal 477 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 447, p 452; Ismail v Hari Ibrahim, AIR 1935 Bom 178.
3920. See Government Telephones Board v Hormusji M. Seervai, AIR 1943 Bom 325 : 45 Bom LR 633, p 656 : (1943) ILR Bom 581.

is surplus fund. The court is empowered to award interest strict by in accordance with the provisions of rule 179 of the Companies (Court) Rules 1959.[3921]

[s 35.12.5] Costs in a Partnership Suit

In suits for dissolution of partnership, the costs are ordinarily ordered to come out of partnership assets unless there is some good reason to the contrary. But where the action is really instituted to try some disputed right, the unsuccessful litigant will be ordered to pay the costs. The cost of taking the accounts directed at the hearing are, although disputed, usually defrayed out of the partnership assets, and if necessary, by contribution between the partners.[3922]

[s 35.12.6] Costs of Mortgagee[3923]

The court would be justified in refusing costs to the mortgagee in a redemption suit where he wrongly denies the mortgagor-plaintiff's right to redeem and unreasonably exaggerates the mortgage amount due to him.[3924]

[s 35.12.7] Costs of Trustee

A decree for costs against a trustee, without any further directions, makes him personally liable to pay to the party, in whose favour the order is passed.[3925] Whether he would be entitled to recoup himself from the trust estate, is, however, a different question.

[s 35.12.8] Costs in Pre-emption Suits

See Bajirao v Abdul Gaffar.[3926]

[s 35.12.9] Costs under Lease and Rent Control Acts

It is not proper to mulct a landlord who is refused an order of eviction under the provisions of the Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, with costs of the other side.[3927]

[s 35.12.10] Costs of Suits Referred to Referee

Where a suit is referred to a referee for ascertainment of the amount due to a plaintiff, the practice of the Calcutta High Court is to award costs in the suits only on a consideration of the report received.[3928]

[s 35.12.11] November 1984 Riot Affected Borrowers

A debt relief scheme for November 1984 riot affected borrowers had been framed by Government of India, Ministry of Finance, which scheme was thereafter revised by the Reserve

---

3921. Pravin S Shah v Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, 2009 (2) AIR Bom R 107.
3922. See also Lindley on the Law of Partnership, 12th Edn, p 545.
3923. See Halsbury's Laws of England, 3rd Edn, vol 27, p 400, para 12, et seq.
3924. Mannunthi Beary v Neelamma, AIR 1976 Kant 21.
3925. Vasa Panshakshari v Manem Venkataratnam, 58 Mad 160.
3926. Bajirao v Abdul Gaffar, AIR 1953 Ngp 376.
3927. Natesan v Surya, (1957) 2 Mad LJ 586.
3928. UOI v Khetra Mohan, AIR 1960 Cal 191.

Bank of India called "Central Interest Subsidy Scheme (Revised) for November 1984 Riot Affected Borrowers". The Central Subsidy Scheme was self-contained and took care of loans advanced to borrowers, who were riot affected, before or after the November 1984 riots. In such cases, benefit of "complete write off" or interest thereon, as the case may be, was to be given. There is no scope for the bank to have misunderstood the import of the scheme framed by the Reserve Bank of India to rehabilitate the riot victims of 1984. Having treated the appellants as riot victim borrowers under a rehabilitation scheme, there was no justification of not treating the appellants' case as one covered under the Central Interest Subsidy Scheme and demanding of them, interest at a rate greater than permissible under the Central Scheme. The suit filed was an attempt to cover up the plaintiff-bank's own defaults of not having claimed the subsidy in accordance with the scheme. In any event of the matter, whether the plaintiff-bank claims the subsidy or not is its internal matter and has got nothing to do with its claim against the appellants-defendants. This is a case where the effort of the government to ameliorate the miserable lot of the riot victims of 1984 has been deliberately subverted by the bank. The profound agony of the appellants magnified and prolonged for nearly 18 years.

The judgment and decree dated 25 August 1999 passed in suit No 600/1986 was set aside. Since the appellants have been deprived of benefits of the Central Interest Subsidy Scheme for nearly 18 years, the high court imposed costs quantified at Rs 25,000 payable to respondents No 1 and 2 equally.[3929]

The Supreme Court has held that imposition of cost is in the discretion of the court. Therefore, when the court, in the light of the facts before it, is satisfied that the defendant wanted to delay the proceeding. It would not be appropriate for the appellate court to interfere with the order imposing costs.[3930] For award of costs the value of the claim involved and the financial capacity of the parties are also to be taken into account.[3931]

[s 35.13] Co-plaintiffs

Where two plaintiffs join in one action, claiming for separate and distinct causes of action, and judgment is entered in favour of one plaintiff and against the other, the successful plaintiff is entitled to recover, from the defendant, the whole of his general costs of the action, and the defendant is entitled to recover from the unsuccessful plaintiff, the costs occasioned by his joinder as plaintiff.[3932]

[s 35.14] Co-defendants

The court may order one defendant to pay the costs of another defendant.[3933] In a suit against a partnership of several partners, some of whom admitted and some of whom denied the partnership, those who denied were ordered to pay the costs of those who admitted.[3934] Where the claim of the plaintiff is in the alternative against different defendants and it is not unreasonable, the unsuccessful defendant might be asked to pay the costs of the successful defendant in addition to the costs payable to the plaintiff.[3935] Where, in an action for damages

---

3929. Swarn Kaur v Union Bank of India, AIR 2003 Del 359 (DB).
3930. Laxman Prasad v Prodigy Electronics Ltd, AIR 2008 SC 685 : (2008) 1 SCC 618.
3931. Oriental Insurance Co Ltd v Avira Foods (India) Ltd, 2010 (166) DLT 27.
3932. Viscount Gort v Rowney, (1886) 17 QBD 625.
3933. Sree Sree Sridhar Jiu v Kanta Mohan Mullick, AIR 1941 Cal 213 : (1945) 50 Cal WN 14 : 81 Cal LJ 167; Tayabji v South British Insurance Co, (1917) 11 SLR 1.
3934. Juggat Chunder v Roochand, (1881) ILR 6 Cal 811.
3935. Wasudev v National Saving Bank, AIR 1953 Bom 209.

under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1855, an insurance company was impleaded as additional defendant at the instance of the original defendant, it was held that the original defendant can be asked to pay the costs of both — the plaintiff and the defendant company.[3936]

Separate costs should not be allowed to defendants if the defence is common to all, or their interests are the same.[3937] But if their interests are diverse, they are entitled to appear by separate counsel and to costs so incurred.[3938] When a suit is laid against several defendants in possession of different items of properties, costs should be awarded to or against each defendant in proportion to the plaintiff's claim falling or succeeding against him.[3939]

Where two defendants join in defending an action, and judgment is entered for one and against the other, the successful defendant is prima facie entitled to receive from the plaintiff, half the cost incurred in the joint defence.[3940]

[s 35.15] Cost Upon Advocate

The section does not confer any disciplinary jurisdiction, and a legal practitioner cannot be ordered personally to pay the costs of an application which is an abuse of the process of the court.[3941] But a solicitor who purports to act for a non-existent party is personally liable to pay costs.[3942]

Where an advocate filed a petition which was not maintainable and it appeared that the parties concerned were not consulted, the Supreme Court ordered him to pay the costs personally.[3943] The court has a discretion to award costs against a legal practitioner who has been found guilty of professional misconduct.[3944] Where an advocate appears as amicus curiae, an order should be made for payment of his costs.[3945] Where an application for probate failed by reason of the mistake of the counsel, it was held that the court had a discretion to refuse costs to the successful defendant.[3946]

Where suit was decreed ex parte in consequence of non-appearance of counsel on date fixed for hearing on the premise of strike call given by advocates, and an application for setting aside ex parte order was made by appellant-company stating that appellant-company, being situated in another city it was not possible for it to make arrangements for appearance in court at short notice of strike call and from such a long distance, in special circumstances of case, non-appearance of appellant-company is attributable entirely to his counsel, ex parte order can be set aside subject to payment of cost. The advocate can be mulcted with cost of setting aside of ex parte decree. Since the court is adopting such a measure for the first time and the 3936. Krishna Goundan v Narasingan Pillai, AIR 1962 Mad 309.

---

3937. Girija Prasana Deb v NM Khan, AIR 1942 Cal 257 : (1941) ILR 2 Cal 556; Kashinath Balkrishna v Anant Murlidhar, AIR 1942 Bom 284 : 44 Bom LR 629; Francisco v Dos Angos, (1872) 17 WR 188 (common defence); Kossella Beharee (1869) 12 WR 70 (separate interest); Shah Makhan Lall v Shree Kishen, (1868) 12 Moo Ind App 157.
3938. Trimbak Yeshwant v Abdulla Ahmed, AIR 1942 Bom 81 : (1942) ILR Bom 163 : 44 Bom LR 105; Kashinath Balkrishna v Anant Murlidhar, AIR 1942 Bom 284 : 44 Bom LR 629; Manilal v Bharat Spinning and Weaving Co Ltd, AIR 1936 Bom 242 : (1936) ILR 60 Bom 659.
3939. Udmiram v Balarama Doss, AIR 1956 Ngp 76.
3940. Beaumont v Senior, (1903) 1 KB 282.
3941. Shantanand v Basudevanand, AIR 1963 All 225 : (1930) ILR 52 All 619.
3942. Narsingirji v Payne & Co, AIR 1933 Bom 317 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 554.
3943. Vidya Verma v Shiv Narain, AIR 1956 SC 108 : (1955) 2 SCR 983 : 1956 SCJ 121.
3944. Krishna Rao v State of Orissa, AIR 1955 Ori 65 : (1954) ILR Cut 623.
3945. Hirjibhoy v State of Bombay, AIR 1953 Bom 228, (1953) ILR Bom 748.
3946. Srimathi Umrao v Bakshi Gopal, AIR 1957 Raj 180.

counsel would not have been conscious of such a consequence befalling them, the court may direct the party to realise half of the amount of cost from the firm of the advocate or any one of its partners.[3947]

[s 35.16] Forma pauperis

When a suit instituted in forma pauperis is partly successful, the court has power to make such order for costs as it considers, in its discretion, proper not under O XXXIII, rules 10 and 11, but under this section;[3948] and the words "costs of and incidental to all suits" would include costs of the pauper application[3949] and the court fee payable on the plaint.[3950]

[s 35.17] Nominal/No Cost

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact that many unscrupulous parties take advantage of the fact that either the costs are not awarded or nominal costs are awarded on the unsuccessful party. Unfortunately, it has become a practice to direct parties to bear their own costs. In a large number of cases, such an order is passed despite the fact that section 35(2) of the Code. Such a practice also encourages filing of frivolous suits, or taking up of frivolous defences. Further wherever costs are awarded ordinarily the same are not realistic and are nominal. Section 35(2) provides for cost to follow the event. It is implicit that the costs have to be those which are reasonably incurred by a successful party except in those cases where the court, in its discretion, may direct otherwise by recording reasons thereof. The costs have to be actual reasonable costs, including the cost of the time spent by the successful party, the transportation and lodging, if any, or any other incidental cost besides the payment of the court-fee, lawyer's fee, typing and other costs in relation to the litigation. It is for the high courts to examine these aspects and wherever necessary, make requisite rules, regulations or practice direction so as to provide appropriate guidelines for the subordinate courts to follow.[3951]

The court may direct parties to bear their own costs where the law is settled for the first time,[3952] or where the litigation arose because of ambiguity in the statute,[3953] or where the court itself was in error,[3954] or where the appellant does not press part of his claim,[3955] or where the case involves important questions of law for decision,[3956] or where it is a test case and the unsuccessful respondent had to bear the brunt of the fight,[3957] or when the question related to interpretation of a recent statute,[3958] or where the court clarifies a confused juridical situation.[3959]

Where a suit for specific performance was dismissed and the defendant was found entitled to costs throughout, however, in view of pecuniary position of plaintiff, it was held that the

---

3947. Ramon Services Pvt Ltd v Subhash Kapoor, AIR 2001 SC 207 : (2001) 1 SCC 118 : JT 2000 (2) SC 546.
3948. State v Chandradass, AIR 1977 Ker 30 : (1976) ILR 2 Ker 56.
3949. Ram Sarna v State of Bihar, AIR 1959 Pat 384.
3950. Parasmal v Jayalakshmamma, AIR 1962 Mys 201.
3951. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344.
3952. Ranganatha v Kumaraswami, AIR 1959 Mad 253 : (1959) ILR Mad 298.
3953. Santokchand v Bhusaval Borough Municipality, AIR 1966 SC 1358 : (1966) 1 SCR 695.
3954. Trinkari Sen v Dulal Chandra, AIR 1967 Cal 518.
3955. Viswanatha v Shanmugham, AIR 1969 SC 493 : (1969) 1 SCC 182.
3956. Khimiji Poonja & Co v Ramlal & Co, AIR 1960 Bom 532 : 62 Bom LR 277.
3957. Dominion of India v Shrinbai, (1955) 1 SCR 206 : (1954) SCJ 813.
3958. Makkanlal v Chatterjee, 58 Cal WN 617.
3959. CIT, Madras v RMC Pillai, AIR 1977 SC 489 : (1977) 1 SCC 431 : (1977) 2 SCR 111.

parties shall bear their own costs.[3960] Where the second appeal was dismissed, but since the respondent had not appeared and contested the appeal, no order as to cost was passed.[3961] In the suit for recovery of money and for specific performance of agreement of sale, there was close relationship between parties, ie, they were real brothers, parties were directed to bear their own costs.[3962] Although the applicant practiced fraud and suppressed the material facts before the tribunal under the Forest (Conservation) Act, 1980 as well as before high court, and so was liable to pay heavy costs to the state, but, since in the earlier part of the proceedings, forest officials then in-charge as well as the counsel engaged at that time were not properly conducting the case, the cost was declined.[3963] The plaintiffs suit for specific performance of agreement to sell immovable property was decreed. But the lower court, after considering the facts and circumstances of the case, exercised its discretion in not allowing costs to the plaintiff-respondent. After careful consideration of the facts and circumstances of the case and the evidence on record and also the arguments advanced by the counsel for the respondent, the high court found no ground to interfere with the discretion exercised by the lower court in disallowing costs to the respondent in the suit and also found it appropriate in this appeal also to direct both sides to suffer their costs.[3964]

[s 35.18] Discretion not to be Delegated

The discretion given to the court under this section cannot be delegated to the taxing officer.[3965]

[s 35.19] Costs Against Person not a Party to Suit

Under the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, it was held that an order for costs cannot be made against a person who is not a party to the suit.[3966] The decision, however, turned upon the phrase "party to the suit which it omitted in the present section". A Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has observed that the omission is significant and that the present section has a wider scope.[3967] But costs should not be awarded against a stranger without giving him an opportunity to be heard on the point.[3968] But, apart from cases where a next friend has been made liable for costs, there is no reported decision except the under-mentioned cases[3969] in which an order has been made for costs against a person not a party to the suit, but a decree for costs against a minor plaintiff would not be interpreted to be a decree for costs against his next friend.[3970] Court may award costs against a litigant appearing in person, where 3960. Mehdi Hussain Khan v Nusrat Hasan, AIR 2004 AP 123 (DB).

---

3961. Kulsome Bibi v Abdul Mannan, AIR 2002 Cal 1.
3962. KR Janardhane Gupta v DV Usha Vijaya Kumar, AIR 2006 Kant 243.
3963. Niyamavedi v UOI, AIR 2004 Ker 81 (DB).
3964. Kumaresan v MP Seshadri, AIR 2002 Ker 198 (DB).
3965. Lambton v Parkinson, (1886) 35 WR 545.
3966. James Bevis v Turner, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 486.
3967. Sripal Singh v Maharaj Singh, AIR 1942 Oudh 279; Shantanand v Basudevnand, AIR 1930 All 225 : (1930) ILR 52 All 619.
3968. Chandra Sekhar v Monoharlal, AIR 1942 All 233.
3969. Sridhar Jiu v Manindra Kumar Mitra, AIR 1941 Cal 273 : (1940) ILR 2 Cal 285; Marutitao v Secretary, Municipal Committee, Balaghat, AIR 1934 Ngp 250; Kanta Gupta v Eighth Addl. District Judge, Meerut, (1991) Supp 1 SCC 219.
3970. Vinayak Pandurangrao v Shavanappa, AIR 1944 Bom 100 : (1944) ILR Bom 12 : 45 Beng LR 1029; Satyanarayana v Rama Lakshmamma, AIR 1959 AP 662; Shyam Sunder v Shani Devi, AIR 1961 All 563.

his behaviour has been reproachable.[3971] The Rajasthan High Court, in one case, directed payment of "exemplary" costs of Rs 1000, in an appeal against the decision of a claims tribunal under the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988. The costs were awarded, because of the baseless defence put forth by the state road transport corporation. Order was made to recover the amount from the functionaries, who had given the advice to the corporation to contest the claim.[3972] Persons interested on whose behalf a suit is brought under O I, rule 8, cannot be ordered to pay costs.[3973] As regards an action for costs against a third person on the ground that he was the mover of, and had an interest, in the suit, it has been held by the Privy Council that such an action cannot be maintained in the absence of malice and want of probable cause.[3974]

Where a third party with no sufficient reason appears and defends an action separately, he must bear the costs of so doing, even though the plaintiff is unsuccessful in the action.[3975] This is also so in the case of a formal defendant, against whom no relief is claimed.[3976]

[s 35.20] Court Having no Jurisdiction to Try the Suit

Court returning the plaint for presentation to the proper court, can grant costs against the plaintiff, but cannot make the payment a condition precedent to the presentation of the plaint in the proper court.[3977]

[s 35.21] Out of What Property

The court is not bound to order costs to be paid out of the estate. Such an order is generally made in favour of trustees, and in probate suits when the difficulty of construction is caused by the testator.[3978] Where, in a suit under section 92 of the CPC, the surviving appellant is not solvent enough to pay the costs of the successful respondent, it is competent to a court to make an order for costs against the estate of the deceased appellant.[3979]

[s 35.22] Costs Where Relief is Claimed Against Defendants in the Alternative

See note under the same head to O I, rule 3.

[s 35.23] No Separate Suit for Costs

Where a court has jurisdiction to deal with the question of costs, no separate suit will lie to recover costs, but where it has no jurisdiction to order costs, and costs are incurred, they may be made the subject of consideration as to damages in a subsequent suit.[3980] A suit was filed for permanent injunction for restraining the defendant from asserting any right, title or interest in the motorcycle of the plaintiff. The defendant filed a miscellaneous application for an order directing the plaintiff to hand over the motorcycle to him. The hearing was adjourned

---

3971. B Varadha Rao v State of Karnataka, AIR 1987 SC 287.
3972. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp v Jhani, AIR 1987 Raj 68.
3973. Sajedar Raj v Baidyu Nath, (1986) 1 Cal WN 65.
3974. Ram Coomar Coonmar Coondoo v Chunder Kanto Mookerji, (1878) ILR 2 Cal 233 : 4 IA 23.
3975. Sourendra Mohun v Murarilal, (1920) 24 Cal WN 888; Megh Raj v Allah Rakhia, AIR 1942 FC 27 : (1942) Lah 622 : (1942) Cal WN 61 (FC).
3976. Rangalal v URPC and P Society, AIR 1975 Ori 137 : (1975) ILR Cut 386.
3977. Kesavalu v Venkatarama, AIR 1945 Mad 35 : (1942) ILR Mad 35.
3978. Indar Kunwar v Jaipal, (1889) ILR 15 Cal 725 : 15 IA 127; Re Taramoni Dasi, (1900) ILR 25 Cal 553
3979. Ram Ghulam v Shyam Sarup, AIR 1934 All 1 : (1934) ILR 55 All 687.
3980. Chandra Shekar v Manohar Lal, AIR 1942 All 233; Maharam Das v Ajudhia, (1986) ILR 8 All 452. p 461.

on failure of the plaintiff to file his reply, subject to payment of costs. On the adjourned date, the plaintiff failed to appear. Held, that the suit cannot be dismissed for non-payment of costs. Only the defendant's application can be disposed of.[3981]

[s 35.24] Sub-section (2): Reasons in Writing

If the court does not abide by the rule that costs should follow the event, it should record its reasons.[3982]

[s 35.25] Costs Disallowed When Delay Arises in Appeals to the Privy Council: Supreme Court

The Privy Council has said that litigants should use all speed to bring their cases to trial and make this injunction effectual by disallowing costs in case of delay in appeals to the Privy Council.[3983] These observations would also be applicable to the Supreme Court, which can deprive a successful litigant of his costs on the ground of unreasonable delay in prosecuting the appeal.

[s 35.26] Sub-section (3): Omitted

The deletion of sub-section 3[3984] of the Code in 1956 does not affect the right of the party to claim interest by way of restitution. Section 144 of the Code expressly provides that the court may order refund of costs and payment of interest, damages, compensation, which are properly consequential on such variation or reversal.[3985]

[s 35.27] Appeal for Costs Only

Decisions of a court of law fall into three classes, namely:

(i) decrees (every decree is appealable (section 96));

(ii) appealable orders (section 104);

(iii) non-appealable orders (section 105).

[s 35.27.1] When the Appeal is Against Decrees

It is settled that an appeal lies for costs only when the costs are awarded by a "decree" if the order as to costs involves a question of principle, but it is not settled whether such an appeal lies if no question of principle is involved. A decree contains:

(i) a decision on the rights of parties, hereinafter called item no 1; and

(ii) a direction as to costs, hereinafter called item no 2.

3981. Raj Kumar v Girdharilal, AIR 1989 P&H 45.
3982. Rajabapayya v Basavayya, AIR 1942 Mad 713; Ramprasad v Shrinivas, AIR 1925 Bom 527 : (1925) 17 Bom LR 1122; Salem Advocates Bar Assocn v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353.
3983. Virabhadrauna v Mahalakshmamma (1930) 34 Cal WN 512 : AIR 1930 PC 42; see also Bangachandra v Jagat Kishore, (1916) 43 IA 249; Dreyfus v Arunachala, AIR 1931 PC 289 : 52 IA 381 : 35 Cal WN 1287.
3984. Sub-section (3) omitted by CPC (Amendment) Act 66 of 1956, section 3.
3985. UOI v Ummer Sait, AIR 1969 Mad 212.

A party, while appealing from item No 1 or any part thereof, may appeal also from item no 2. He may, at the hearing, abandon the appeal from item no 1 and may proceed with the appeal from item no 2.[3986] But can he appeal from item no 2 only, without appealing from item no 1? In other words, does an appeal lie on a matter of costs only? All the high courts are agreed that such an appeal does lie:

(i) where the order as to costs involves a matter of principle,[3987] as where a formal party to a suit against whom no relief is claimed is made to pay the costs of the suit;[3988] or

(ii) where there has been no real exercise of discretion in making the order as to costs. This may happen when a successful party is deprived of his costs[3989] or is made to pay the costs of the losing party.[3990] If the discretion was exercised in fact, the appellate court would not interfere merely because it would itself have exercised the discretion differently;[3991]

(iii) where the order as to costs proceeds upon a misapprehension of fact or law.[3992]

For brevity's sake, one may describe all the three cases as cases where a question of "principle" is involved. Therefore, one may say that it is settled law that an appeal lies for costs only where the order as to costs involves a question of principle. But it is not settled whether an appeal lies for costs only, where no question of principle is involved. It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that no appeal lies on a question of costs unless there is a question of principle involved.[3993] On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that an appeal will lie for costs only, whether the order as to costs involves a question of principle or not.[3994] The ground of the Bombay decisions is that every decree being appealable, any part of it is appealable, though it be the part relating to costs, whether there is a matter of principle involved or not. But even according to the Bombay decisions, though an appeal may lie for costs only, the appellate court will not, as a rule, vary or set aside the order of the lower court as to costs unless there is a principle involved and the principle has been violated.

Does a second appeal lie on a matter of costs only? It has been held that it does, provided there is a question of law or principle involved.[3995]

3986. Vasudev v Bhavan, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 241.
3987. Girdharilal v Sunder Bibi, (1866) Beng LR Supp vol 496; Secretary of State v Marjum, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 359; Dildar Ali Khan v Bhawani Sahil Singh, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 878; Aga Mahomed v Syed Mahomed, (1916) 21 Cal WN 339; Ahmedbhai v Petit (1911) 13 Bom LR 1061; Bipin Behari v Rai Promotho Nath, AIR 1930 Pat 336 : (1930) ILR 9 Pat 773.
3988. Bunwari Lall v Drup Nath, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 179.
3989. Civil Service Co-op Society v General Steam Navigation Co, (1903) 2 KB 756; Westgate v Crown, (1908) 1 KB 24; Lalman v Chintamani, (1919) ILR 41 All 254; Assistant Collector, Salsette v Damodardas, AIR 1929 Bom 63 : (1929) ILR 53 Bom 178; Lalta Prasad v Misri Lal, AIR 1931 Oudh 9 : (1931) ILR 6 Luck 378; Modgil Krishna v Modgil Krishna Dai, AIR 1994 AP 16 (DB).
3990. Moshingan v Mozari, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 271; Radhey Shiam v Bihari Lal, (1918) ILR 40 All 558.
3991. Parshram v Dorabji, (1900) 2 Bom LR 254.
3992. Ranchordas v Bai Kasi, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 676; Justain Hull v Paull, (1919) 24 Cal WN 352; Aspee (India) Ltd v Dahanukar, AIR 1954 Bom 35 : (1954) ILR Bom 21.
3993. Umesh Chandra v Bibhuti, (1920) ILR 47 Cal 67; Bunwari Lall v Drup Nath, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 179; Amirul Hossain v Khairunnessa, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 567.
3994. Ranchordas v Bai Kasi, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 676; Khushal v Punamchand, (1898) ILR 22 Bom 164.
3995. Bunwari Lall v Drup Nath, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 179; Daulat Ram v Durga Prasad, (1893) ILR 15 All 333; Daulat Ram v Durga Prasad, (1893) ILR 15 All 333; Desaji v Bhavanidas, (1871) 8 BHC (AC) 100; Futeek v Hohender, (1876) ILR 1 Cal 385; Karman Kaur v Kirpa Singh, (1920) 2 Lah LJ 310.

[s 35.27.2] When the Appeal is Against an Appealable Order

In case of an appeal from a direction as to costs contained in an appealable order: the law as to appeal from a decision as to costs contained in an order (as distinguished from a decree) is that if the order is itself appealable, an appeal will lie from that part of the order which relates to costs.[3996] But no second appeal lies on a matter of costs awarded by an appealable order, for no second appeal lies from any order passed in appeal under section 104.[3997]

[s 35.27.3] When the Appeal is Against an Non-appealable Order

In case of an appeal from a direction as to costs contained in a non-appealable order, since no appeal lies from a non-appealable order, no appeal can lie from a direction as to costs contained in such order. Thus, if an order is made adjourning the hearing of a suit, and one of the parties is directed to pay the costs occasioned by the application for adjournment, he cannot appeal from the direction as to costs, for an order adjourning the hearing of a suit is not an appealable order, it not being in section 104(1) below.[3998] But an order for costs which is not appealable is open to revision under section 115.[3999]

[s 35.28] Letters Patent Appeal

An order for costs is a judgment under clause 15 of the Letters Patent Appeal and an appeal lies against it. The maintainability of the appeal has nothing to do with the question as to under what circumstances the appellate court could interfere with the discretion of the trial court.[4000]

[s 35.29] Costs against Government

The government, in an unsuccessful litigation, is liable to pay costs like any other unsuccessful party.[4001] Irreversible damage had occurred to the eyes of a patient, operated upon in an eye camp. Social organisation espoused the cause of unfortunate victims and prosecuted it with diligence. State government was saddled with costs of the organisation, in the circumstances.[4002] The distribution of surplus land by the revenue authority were done with unjust and undue haste. The action performed on the part of was found to be mala fide against the petitioner hence a cost of Rs 5000 was against the revenue authority.[4003] While the state cannot be treated differently from any other litigant in the matter of condonation of delay, the court is "bound" to take into consideration the following factors:

(a) red-tapism in government;

(b) delays in correspondence;

3996. Balkissen v Luchmeetput, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 91, p 94, Vasudev v Bhavan, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 241; Shib Kumar v Sheo, (1833) ILR 8 Cal 91.
3997. See the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, section 104(2).
3998. Balkissen v Luchmeeput, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 91.
3999. Rikhiram Bhagwandas vv Ramlal, AIR 1961 MP 169. But see the amended section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908.
4000. Aspee (India) Ltd v Dahunukar, AIR 1954 Bom 35 : (1954) ILR Bom 21; Kulasekara Naicker v Jagadambal, (1919) ILR 42 Mad 352 (FB); overruling Saravana Mudaliar v Rajagopala Chetty, (1907) 17 Mad LJ 569.
4001. Secretary of State v Lown Karan, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 321, 327.
4002. AS Mittal v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1989 SC 1570 : (1989) 3 SCC 223.
4003. Akhileshwar Mishra v State of Bihar, AIR 1995 Pat 10 (DB).

(c) habitual indifference of government officials or governments pleaders as distinct from the usual diligence of ordinary litigant or lawyers for private parties;

(d) collusion or negligence by government officers or government pleaders or fraud;

(e) damage to public interest or to public funds or interests of the state;

(f) institutional or bureaucratic procedure as well as delays arising thereon; and

(g) need to render substantial justice on merits.

In the circumstances, an application for condonation of delay under section 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963 was allowed subject to cost of Rs 5,000 to be paid to the Legal Aid Board by the government initially and later fix the reasonability of delay on the concerned officers/ employees and recover the same from them.[4004] The petitioner has lost the best period of his life due to the callous and unjust attitude of the Calcutta University, hence, he should be adequately compensated. The case was pending for a period of seven years and on a number of occasion the case had to be adjourned, therefore, a cost of Rs 10,000 was imposed against the university.[4005] The building of the petitioner company was unauthorisedly demolished by Regional Development Authority, hence, a cost of Rs 50,000 was awarded by the court against the Regional Development Authority.[4006] The telephone connection of the petitioner, a doctor, was arbitrarily disconnected on account of non-payment of bill. In the facts and circumstance of the case, a cost of Rs 20,000 was awarded in favour of the petitioner.[4007] In the interest of parties, all cases shall be heard together by same court.[4008]

[s 35.30] Matrimonial Causes

It is customary in the divorce division of the Calcutta High Court to direct a respondent husband to secure the costs of the petitioner-wife. But if the parties are members of the Jewish community and the cause is tried in the original civil jurisdiction of the high court and neither clause 35 of the Letters Patent Appeal nor the Indian Divorce Act, 1869 applies, then section 25 of the CPC will not justify such an order.[4009] In a divorce petition, the husband alleged ground of adultery against the wife. The character of wife was assassinated without any reason. The husband falsely implicated the dependant and obedient servant of the family; besides, false witnesses were brought to ruin the entire family. In the circumstances, a cost of Rs 10,000 was imposed against the husband which the wife was entitled to recover from the assets of the husband.[4010] In a matrimonial petition, the wife's appeal was dismissed by the Supreme Court, however, the cost was awarded in favour of the wife as the court cannot ignore the social reality of a divorced wife in Indian society.[4011]

4004. UOI v RP Builders, AIR 1995 Del 57 (DB).
4005. Rasaraj Debnath v Calcutta University, AIR 1998 Gau 112.
4006. Hindustan Petroleum Corpn v State of Bihar, AIR 1996 Pat 163; BM Habibullah v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1994 Mad 222; K Sai Reddy v Deputy Executive Engineer, Irrigation and Command Area Development, AIR 1995 AP 208.
4007. Azeemur Rehman Siddiqui v UOI, AIR 1995 All 317 (DB); K Sajan Singh v AP Electricity Board, AIR 1997 AP 279 (DB).
4008. Manjula Singh Chouhan v Vishal Singh Chouhan, (2019) 13 SCC 660 : Civil Appeal No. 11412 of 2018, decided on, 27 November 2018 (SC).
4009. Samuel v Samuel, (1930) ILR 57 Cal 1089.
4010. Rajee v Babu Rao, AIR 1996 Mad 262.
4011. Saroj Rani v Sudshran Kumar Chadda, (1984) 4 SCC 90.

[s 35.31] Suit for Contribution Towards Costs

A defendant is not entitled, as against a co-defendant to contribution in respect of costs to which both are liable unless there be some equity existing between him and the co-defendant.[4012]

This view has however not been accepted in Kulada Prasad Mitra v Giribala Debya,[4013] where all the important cases on the point are considered.

[s 35.32] Review of Taxation

The court will always interfere and entertain a review of taxation where a question of principle is involved, but the court is generally unwilling to interfere where it is a question whether the master exercised his discretion properly, or if it is only a question of the amount to be allowed.[4014] But the discretion of the master is not final even on a question of quantum, for, he is not at liberty to lay down a scale for discretionary charges which are out of all proportion to the work done.[4015] If any point of principle is to be taken upon a review of taxation, the point of principle must have been properly raised in writing delivered to the other party and carried in to the taxing master; and this is a condition precedent to the right to apply for review to the judge in chambers.[4016]

In taxation between two parties, only those costs are allowed which are strictly necessary for the purpose of the prosecution of the litigation, while in taxation between attorney and client, a party is allowed as many of the charges which he would have been compelled to pay to his own solicitor, as being costs of the suit which fair justice to the other party would permit. In VV Ruia v S Dalmia,[4017] the High Court of Bombay allowed costs as between attorney and client, although the stock exchange, not a party to the suit, had appeared in response to a notice by the court to answer the contention that it was not a legal institution and that its rules were not valid. The high court justified its order on the ground that the exchange appeared and incurred costs not only to defend the validity of the institution but in protection of a large section of the public which dealt with or through it. If a solicitor incurs unusual or extraordinary expenses in excess of what would be allowed in taxation between party and party, without express authority from his client, such costs may be disallowed in taxation between attorney and client. In taxation between attorney and client, separate counsel for two sets of defendants will be disallowed, if the defences were not diverse, or if there was no reasonable probability of there being a substantial difference between the defences.[4018] Rule 546 (now 562) of the Bombay High Court Rules which disallows costs not necessary or proper for the attainment of justice or defending the rights of the party refers to party and party costs.[4019] Rule 559 (now 576) of the same rules provides that in case the solicitor's bill is reduced in taxation by a sixth, the solicitor shall pay all costs regarding the taxation. This is a penalty

---

4012. Mulla Singh v Jagannath, (1910) ILR 32 All 585; Bhawani Prasad v Ram Prasad, AIR 1937 All 227.
4013. Kulada Prasad Mitra v Giribala Debya, 40 Cal WN 1089.
4014. Langley v D'Arcy, (1930) ILR 54 Bom 62 : AIR 1930 Bom 24; Hill v Peel (1870) 5 CP 172; Mahindra v Chandar Singh, AIR 1957 Pat 79.
4015. D Parashuram v Tata Industrial Bank, AIR 1926 Bom 18 : (1925) ILR 50 Bom 69.
4016. Arnavaz v Hormusji, AIR 1930 Bom 536 : (1930) 32 Bom LR 1079.
4017. VV Ruia v S Dalmia, AIR 1970 Bom 424 : 72 Bom LR 64, p 106.
4018. Gorakhram v Pirozshaw, AIR 1930 Bom 92 : (1933) ILR 57 Bom 570.
4019. Parshuram Shamdasani v Tata Industrial Bank, AIR 1923 Bom 18 : (1925) ILR 50 Bom 69 : (1933) ILR 57 Bom 570.

for an exaggerated bill of costs, but the court has a discretion in exceptional cases to make a different order.[4020]

A solicitor, who purports to act for a non-existing person, is personally liable for costs.[4021]

A solicitor is not bound by the bill of costs which he once delivers to his client. He is at liberty to present another and revised bill for taxation.[4022] An attorney instructing an advocate (OS) to appear on the appellate side of the high court is entitled to have the costs taxed by analogy on the scale in Appendix E to the Rules on the Appellate Side.[4023]

A solicitor can recover by summary proceedings, his taxed costs from the deposit made in court under O XLV, rule 7.[4024] Discussing the rights of a solicitor with respect to his costs, the High Court of Bombay has stated in Jamaithram v Custodian of Evacuee Property:[4025]

(i) that he can obtain an order in chamber for payment of his costs and execute it against his client as a decree;

(ii) that he has got a lien over any property recovered or proceeds of any judgment obtained by his exertion; and

(iii) that he can obtain a charging order.

[s 35.33] Public Interest Litigation

A petition was filed requesting that the police force camping in the college premises to check unruly elements be removed. The petitioners were neither student nor parents of any student, hence, they had no locus standi to move the high court and consequently, the petitioner was saddled with the cost of Rs 5,000.[4026] On a petition by an environmentalist organisation bringing to light pollution hazards caused by chemical industries in Bichhri village, the polluting industries were directed to pay cost of Rs 50,000 to the petitioner organisation.[4027]

Arbitrary allotment of petrol pumps by Minister of State for Petroleum and Natural Gas was challenged by way of public interest litigation. Able assistance to the court, by the petitioner, held petitioner entitled to a cost of Rs 50,000, which was directed to be paid by the minister of state concerned personally.[4028]

It is necessary to discourage people from bringing the petition which are motivated by merely personal interest in the name of public interest, for which they have no locus standi. Abuse of the process of the court, in the garb of public, adds to the court's already heavy docket. This, at times, also results in manifest in justice to a public cause, because of interim orders. A cost of Rs 10,000 was imposed upon the petitioner for bringing frivolous litigation.[4029]

In a case, the petitioner claiming himself to be a public spirited person filed a writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution seeking action against officials responsible for wasteful expenditure of public funds in elections in Patna. The Delhi High Court found the petition to

---

4020. Gorakhram v Pirozshaw, AIR 1930 Bom 92 : (1933) ILR 57 Bom 570.
4021. Narsingirji v Payne & Co, AIR 1933 Bom 317 : (1934) ILR 58 Bom 1.
4022. Rege v Vijaykar, AIR 1935 Bom 150 : (1935) ILR 59 Bom 443.
4023. Doosabhoy v Edulji (1941) 43 Bom LR 336.
4024. Wilson & Co v Hari, AIR 1939 Bom 250 : (1839) ILR Bom 307.
4025. Jamaithram v Custodian of Evacuee Property, AIR 1959 Bom 162 : 60 Bom LR 999; Shamdasani v Central Bank of India Ltd, (1941) 43 Bom LR 655.
4026. President, Mahavidyalaya Shiksha Sudhar Sangharsh Samiti v State of Bihar, AIR 1995 Pat 7 (DB).
4027. Indian Council for Enviro-Legal Action v UOI, AIR 1996 SC 1446 : (1996) 3 SCC 212.
4028. Common Cause (A Registered society) v UOI, AIR 1996 SC 3538 : (1996) 6 SCC 530.
4029. Prayag Vyapar Mandal v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1997 All 1 (DB).

be vague and also found that material facts relating to earlier petitions filed in Patna and Ranchi had been withheld. It was held that the petitioner was interest in filing frivolous petitions and dismissed the same with cost of Rs 25,000.[4030]

[s 35.34] Delay in Deposit of Cost — Condonation of

Where the writ petition was directed against an order whereby the application of the petitioner for deposit of cost; which ought to have been deposited within 15 days, failing which the order setting aside the ex parte order was to revive; has been filed after a lapse of six months and only explanation that has been given was that there was advocates' strike it was held that such strike cannot be a ground for the condonation of delay because even if the advocates were on strike, the petitioner could have deposited the money in person.[4031]

[s 35.35] Failure to Deposit Cost and Absence of Party — Effect

On failure of petitioner to appear on a particular date and his non-payment of costs, he could be proceeded with ex-parte, order striking off his defence is not proper.[4032]

[4033][S 35A] Compensatory costs in respect of false or vexatious claims or defences.—(1) If in any suit or other proceedings, [4034][including an execution proceeding but [4035][excluding an appeal or a revision]], any party objects to the claim or defence on the ground that the claim or defence or any part of it is, as against the objector, false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party by whom it has been put forward, and if thereafter, as against the objector, such claim or defence is disallowed, abandoned or withdrawn in whole or in part, the Court, [4036][if it so thinks fit], may, after recording its reasons for holding such claim or defence to be false or vexatious, make an order for the payment to the objector, by the party by whom such claim or defence has been put forward, of costs by way of compensation.

4037 No Court shall make any such order for the payment of an amount exceeding [4038][three thousand rupees] or exceeding the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction, whichever amount is less:

Provided that where the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of any Court exercising the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes under the Provincial Small Cause Courts

---

4030. National Problem Solution Suggestion Board v UOI, 2007 (138) DLT 627 (DB).
4031. Mohd Hanif v Niyat Adhikari, Laghoovad Nyayadhish, AIR 2002 All 288.
4032. Black Diamond Glassware Pvt Ltd v Kusumlata Gupta, AIR 2004 Del 88.
4033. Section 35A was inserted by Act 9 of 1922, section 2, which, under section 1(2) thereof may be brought into force in any State by the State Government on any specified date. It has been so brought into force in Bombay, Bengal, U.P., Punjab, Bihar, C.P., Assam, Orissa and Tamil Nadu.
4034. Substituted by Act 66 of 1956, section 4, for "not being an appeal" (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).
4035. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 14, for "excluding an appeal" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
4036. Substituted by Act 66 of 1956, section 4 for "if the objection has been taken at the earliest opportunity and if it is satisfied of the justice thereof".
4037. See Amendment for Commercial Dispute of a Specified Value vide the Commercial Courts, Commercial Division and Commercial Appellate Division of High Courts Act, 2015 (4 of 2016), section 16 and the Schedule -III (w.r.e.f. 23-10-2015).
4038. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 14 (wef 1 -2-1977) for "one thousand rupees".

Act, 1887 (9 of 1887), [4039][or under a corresponding law in force in [4040][any part of India to which the said Act does not extend]], and not being a Court constituted [4041][under such Act or law], are less than two hundred and fifty rupees, the High Court may empower such Court to award as costs under this section any amount not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees and not exceeding those limits by more than one hundred rupees:

Provided further, that the High Court may limit the amount which any Court or class of Courts is empowered to award as costs under this section.

(3) No person against whom an order has been made under this section shall, by reason thereof, be exempted from any criminal liability in respect of any claim or defence made by him.

(4) The amount of any compensation awarded under this section in respect of a false or vexatious claim or defence shall be taken into account in any subsequent suit for damages or compensation in respect of such claim or defence.]

SPECIAL AMENDMENT

Commercial dispute of a Specified Value.—In its application to any suit in respect of a commercial dispute of a Specified Value, in section 35A, omit sub-section (2).

[Vide Act 4 of 2016, Sec. 16 and Sch.—3 (w.r.e.f. 23-10-2015).]

SYNOPSIS

[s 35A.1] State Amendment	656	[s 35A.4] Party	660
[s 35A.2] History of the Section	657	[s 35A.5] Sections 35-A and 35-B	660
[s 35A.3] Scope	657	[s 35A.6] Appeal	661

[s 35A.1] State Amendment

Uttar Pradesh.—The following amendments were made by Uttar Pradesh Act No. 24 of 1954 section 2 and Schedule, Item 5, Entry 1 (wef 30 November 1954).

(a) In Section 35A, for the existing sub-section (1) substituted as below:—

(1) if in any suit or other proceeding, including proceedings in execution, but not being an appeal or revision, the court finds that the claim or defence or any part thereof is false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party by whom it has been put forward and if such claim or defence or such part is disallowed, abandoned or withdrawn in whole or in part, the court may, after recording its reasons for holding such claim or defence to be false or vexatious, make an order for the payment to the successful party of costs by way of compensation irrespective of the decision on other issues in the case.

(b) Sub-section (1A) has been inserted by Act 57 of 1976:—

(1A) The provisions of sub-section (1) shall mutatis mutandis apply to an appeal where the Appellate court confirms the decision of the trial court and the trial court has not awarded, or has awarded insufficient, compensatory cost under that sub-section.

4039. Inserted by Act 2 of 1951, section 7 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
4040. Substituted by the Adaptation of Laws (No. 2) Order, 1956, for "a Part B State".
4041. Substituted by Act 2 of 1951, section 7, for "under that Act" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

[s 35A.2] History of the Section

This section was added into the Code by Act 9 of 1922, and by section 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951, in the first proviso to sub-section (2) the words and letter—"or under a corresponding law in force in a Part B State" were inserted after the figures "1887" and the words 'under such Acts or law' were substituted for the words "under that Act". The section did not come into operation until the local government, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, by notification in the local Official Gazette, directed that the Act shall come into force in the province on such date as may be specified in the notification. But, now, by section 19 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951, this section, together with other amendments made by the said Act IX of 1922, has been extended to the whole of India except a few states specified in section 1, sub-section (3) of the Code. By the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act, 1956, in sub-clause (1) the words "including an execution proceeding but excluding" were substituted for the words not being and the words "if it so thinks fit' were substituted for the words "if the objection has been taken at the earliest opportunity and if it is satisfied of the justice thereof". In sub-clause (2) the words "in any part of India to which the said Act does not extend' were substituted for "a Part B State" by the Adaptation of Laws O II of 1956. The Amendment Act, 1976, has further amended sub-section 1 to exclude from its operation revision proceedings. By substituting for the words "one thousand rupees" the words "three thousand rupees" the legislature has as a deterrent to false or vexatious claims and defences, authorised the courts to award a higher amount by way of compensation.[4042]

The Law Commission of India, in its 240th Report has recommended that section 35A (Compensatory costs for false or vexatious claim/defence) should be recast to have a better check against false and frivolous litigation. The thrust of the proposed amendment is to raise the ceiling from rupees three thousand to rupees one lakh and creation of Judicial Infrastructure Fund into which part of the costs shall be ordered to be deposited.

[s 35A.3] Scope

The award of costs under this section is in the discretion of the court.[4043] This section is intended to deal with exceptional cases in which costs under section 35 would not afford sufficient compensation. Therefore, before awarding costs under this section, the court should satisfy itself that the claim was false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party who put it forward and that the interests of justice require the award of such costs and that further, a claim therefore had been made by the party at the earliest opportunity.[4044]

The court while exercising powers for award of compensatory costs under section 35-A should exercise discretion. Discretion means judicial discretion, not whim, caprice or fancy of a judge. Thus, where an examinee had challenged the evaluation of his answer-scripts by the Higher Education Council, it was held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that the court directing pre-trial deposit for production of answer-sheets before Court, is to decide how the amount deposited has to be appropriated and to what extent costs are to be paid.[4045]

4042. But see, Sri Krishnapur Mutt vv Gopalakrishnayya, (1965) 2 Mys LJ 93.
4043. Vittal vv Parasuram, AIR 1954 Ngp 192.
4044. Pedda Rangasamy vv State of Madras, AIR 1953 Mad 583 : (1953) ILR Mad 721 : (1953) 1 Mad LJ 552 : 66 LW 208, 1953 Mad WN 109; Sriramamurthy vv Andhra University, AIR 1966 AP 179.
4045. Secretary, West Bengal Council for Higher Education v Soumyadeep Banerjee, AIR 2010 Cal 161 (FB).

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact that many unscrupulous parties take advantage of the fact that either the costs are not awarded or nominal costs as awarded on the unsuccessful party. Unfortunately, it has become a practice to direct parties to bear their own costs. In large number of cases, such an order is passed despite section 35(2) of the CPC. Such a practice also encourages filing of frivolous suits. It also leads to taking up of frivolous defences. Further, wherever costs are awarded, ordinarily, the same are not realistic and are nominal. When section 35(2) of the Code provides for cost to follow the event, it is implicit that the costs have to be those which are reasonably incurred by a successful party except in those cases where the court, in its discretion, may direct otherwise by recording reasons thereof. The costs have to be actual reasonable costs including the cost of the time spent by the successful party, the transportation and lodging, if any, or any other incidental cost besides the payment of the court fee lawyer's fee, typing and other cost in relation to the litigation. It is for the high courts to examine these aspects and wherever necessary make requisite rules regulations or practice direction so as to provide appropriate guidelines for the subordinate courts to follow.[4046]

It has been held that a bare perusal of section 35A shows that the bar operates on the Indian courts with regard to the imposition of costs in respect of false or vexatious claims or defences. The bar was not found to be attracted in Alcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Celem, SA of FOS 34320 Roujan, as the court that had ordered the costs was the High Court of Justice in England, which was not governed by the provisions of the CPC and that the respondent merely approached the Indian courts for the satisfaction of a foreign decree. Moreover, the nature of compensatory costs prescribed in section 35A is different from "costs" dealt with in section 35 as the former is limited to the claims of defences of a party which are frivolous or vexatious. It is settled that before awarding costs under section 35A, the court should satisfy itself that the claim was false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party who put it forward and that the interests of justice require the award of such compensatory costs. In the instant case, no claim had been advanced by the appellant that the claim filed by the respondents was false or vexatious; therefore, the bar in section 35A was not applicable.[4047]

It cannot be said of a claim that it is frivolous when it involves complicated questions calling for elaborate consideration.[4048] Where a suit was filed for damages for breach of a contract and it was found that the contract was forged, compensatory costs were awarded under this section.[4049] The Supreme Court has, in a recent case, exhorted the trial courts to exercise power under this section once they are satisfied that the litigation was inspired by vexatious motives and was altogether groundless.[4050] Costs under this section have been awarded in writ petitions.[4051] Extraordinary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution should not be allowed to be misused. Where the high court comes to the conclusion that the petitioner has approached the court with unclean hands, or has filed a writ petition stating facts which are false, the petitioner must be penalised with penal consequences. If the high court finds either that a false statement has been made by the petitioner, or that he has come with unclean hands, the court should suitably penalise such a person.[4052] Section 35(1) of the Code itself

---

4046. Salem Advocate Bar Assn v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344.
4047. Alcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Celem, SA of FOS 34320 Roujan, AIR 2017 SC 1 : (2016) 12 Scale 645 : (2017) 2 SCC 253.
4048. Kotturusami v Viravva, AIR 1952 Mad 609.
4049. Venkatasamy v Lakshmi Narayan, AIR 1959 AP 204.
4050. T Arivandandam v TV Satyapal, AIR 1977 SC 2421 : (1977) 4 SCC 467.
4051. Thulsi Das v Alleppy Chamber of Commerce, AIR 1953 Tr & Coch 26 : (1951) TC 667; Board of High Court v Ramakrishna, AIR 1959 All 226.
4052. Suraj Kumari v District Judge, Mirzapur, AIR 1991 All 75 (RB Mahrotra J).

excludes appeals and revisions from its scope. Compensatory costs under section 35A cannot be awarded by the appellate court even if the claim or defence raised by the parties is false, vexatious or frivolous.[4053]

A lady litigant appeared in the Supreme Court in person but refused to argue on merits of the case, the points raised by the counsel for the opposite party. She also used foul language for some of the counsels associated with the proceedings in spite of being cautioned by the court. The lady was well aware with the conduct of judicial process and there were no extenuating factors for her behaviour. Under these circumstances the court imposed exemplary cost of Rs 5 lacs.[4054] Bedi J speaking for the Division Bench of Supreme Court observed as follows:

> A resume of the facts clearly reveal the incorrigible and recalcitrant attitude of the respondent. We could perhaps condone her errant conduct if she was merely a highly strong and impetuous lady oversensitive to her case and unaware of the nuances of the law and the decorum to be maintained in court but we are satisfied that no ignorance nor mental imbalance is discernible which can be pleaded in extenuation of her behaviour. The record reveals that she is well aware of the conduct of judicial process and the law and facts relating to her case, but she has evolved a strategy which has thus far kept her in good stead as it has been designed to filibuster the proceedings in case she finds that they are not taking the direction that she has chalked out and that despite her conviction for contempt of court on two occasions and numerous admonitions and warnings notwithstanding, she has remained unfazed and has in a most unbecoming manner relentlessly and ruthlessly pursued the litigation.[4055]

In a suit for eviction, where the tenants had deliberately prolonged harassment of the landlord in lingering on frivolous litigation, the high court directed to pay cost of Rs 10,000, apart from the arrears rent.[4056]

In a case relating to fire insurance, the Branch Manager as well as the Divisional Manager of the Insurance Company had recommended specifically that the claim of the insured should be paid. But the company still rejected the claim without giving specific reasons. The Himachal Pradesh High Court held that Insurance Company is a public body and is accountable to the public; it cannot waste time and money on frivolous and vexations litigation. With this observation the high court imposed exemplary cost of Rs 10,000/- on the insurance company.[4057]

In execution proceedings of an eviction decree, the judgment-debtor avoided the execution of the decree for a year and a half and subjected the decree-holder to litigation costs before different forums, the high court imposed a cost of Rs 1 lac to be paid to the decree-holder. It was observed that cost imposed should be actual and reasonable including the cost of time spent by the successful party in pursuing the litigation.[4058]

The Supreme Court has held that power to levy exemplary cost should be exercised sparingly to advance justice. It should not be used as a threatening and oppressive tool. It was observed that exemplary costs should be levied only when the claim is found to be false or the party is guilty of fraud, misrepresentation etc. Thus, in a writ petition against eviction order passed against a Government servant from Government quarter, it was held that imposition of 4053. Manak Lal v Mahindra Singh, AIR 1987 Raj 14 : 15–16, para 7 (SS Byal J).

---

4054. Ila Vipin Pandya v Smita Ambalal Patel, AIR 2007 SC 2404 : (2007) 6 SCC 750.
4055. Ila Vipin Pandya v Smita Ambalal Patel, AIR 2007 SC 2404, p 2414 : (2007) 6 SCC 750.
4056. Smt Sadhna Agarwal v Smt Malti Devi, (2007) 2 All LJ 46 : (2007) 66 All LR 702.
4057. National Insurance Co Ltd v Lehnu Mal ram Krishna, AIR 2007 HP 41 : (2007) 1 Shim LC 428 (DB).
4058. KL Diwan v Mohan Malhotra, (2009) 158 DLT 442.

exemplary cost was improper as the Government servant had retained the quarter for 10 years on the basis of an interim stay order granted by the Appellate Court.[4059]

The petitioner making reckless and wanton allegations against respondent, especially in the matter of his personal and private life. The petitioner pursued the allegations despite stout denial by the respondent in his counter affidavit. The main charge of mala fide against the respondent not proved, hence, a cost of Rs 5000 imposed against the petitioner.[4060] The only question is whether the judgment-debtors need be arrested as ordered by the court in execution of a decree. The Kerala High Court observed that the judgment-debtors must be given an opportunity to avert the order for their arrest by compensating the plaintiff in a reasonable manner for their act of violation. A compensatory cost of Rs 5000 was imposed against the judgment-debtors to avert the arrest as per the order of the lower court. [4061] In a suit for possession of a church building, the defendant, a priest, is unnecèssarily involving himself into litigation arising out of the objection as to valuation of suit the suit was filed in the year 1986. However, written statement was not filed for almost 10 years, hence, an exemplary cost imposed upon the priest. [4062] The officers of the electric board filed false or incorrect statement in the counter affidavit; it was held that in the circumstances, exemplary cost and the cost of the petition were directed to be paid to the petitioner board by way of adjustment towards future bills. The electricity board was also permitted to recover the said cost from the officers who issued the impugned bill.[4063] The Supreme Court[4064] has approved the imposition of costs to the tune of Rs 10 lakhs for filing a false or misleading affidavit in the court. The court also took a strong view against such filing and held that it should be strongly discouraged.

[s 35A.4] Party

The section introduces the word "party" which has been omitted in section 35. But an order for compensatory costs has been made against a next friend.[4065] Compensatory costs can be awarded against a defendant who instigated the plaintiff to bring the unsuccessful suit.[4066] The court has no power to award compensatory costs without giving reasons and unless the point is raised.[4067]

[s 35A.5] Sections 35-A and 35-B

Section 35B, which is narrower than section 35A, concerns itself with the "hearing of a suit or for taking any step therein". In contrast, section 35A uses the words "any suit or other proceedings". Section 35B(1) would not, ordinarily, apply to the type of proceedings such as notice of motion, taken out for restoration of the suit itself.[4068]

4059. Satyapal Singh v UOI, AIR 2010 SC 1138 : (2010) 12 SCC 70.
4060. P Ramchandaran Nair v State of Kerala, AIR 1997 Ker 322.
4061. Rajappan v Sankaran Sudhakaran, AIR 1997 Ker 315 (DB).
4062. Rev Theodore Ekka v Evangenlical Church of India, AIR 1996 MP 77.
4063. K Sajjan Singh v AP Electricity Board, AIR 1997 AP 279 (DB).
4064. Sciemed Overseas Inc. v Boc India Ltd, AIR 2016 SC 345 : (2016) 3 SCC 70 : (2016) 1 Scale 264.
4065. Meenakshi v Ayamperumal Udayan, AIR 1944 Mad 81; Rajkumar v Mangal, AIR 1930 All 577 : (1930) ILR 52 All 907.
4066. Chittam Subbaya v Muthyala Ram Chandrappa, AIR 1945 Mad 84 : (1945) ILR Mad 407.
4067. V Swarnam Iyer v Veeragu Ammal, AIR 1943 Mad 286.
4068. Venekar Industries v Starit Eng Co, AIR 1985 Bom 253.

[s 35A.6] Appeal

An order awarding compensation under this section is appealable under section 104(ff). But an Appellate Court cannot make an order when the original court has omitted or refused to do so.[4069] See proviso to O XLI, rule 33.

In a case where there was utter lack of legal authority for deprivation of the respondent's property by the appellants who were state authorities, the appeal was dismissed with exemplary costs of Rs 25,000.[4070] When the entire history of litigation showed cussedness and lack of bona fides on part of tenant, apart from his tenacity and determination to prevent landlord from enjoying the fruits of the decree, exemplary costs of Rs 20,000 were imposed on the tenant-respondent.[4071]

The appeal which was bereft of any merit is liable to be dismissed. The Supreme Court was at pains to note that by his acts of omission and commission, the said secretary had consistently and persistently deprived the respondent no 1 of the duty to assume and discharge his duties as member and president of the municipal council, despite his election from 2 January 1998 till date. The term of the office of the municipality was a fixed term out of which three years of the respondent no 1 had been wasted in uncalled for and forced litigation upon him. No law can compensate the loss of opportunity provided to the respondent no 1 for serving the people after his election as member and president of the municipality. The Supreme Court found it a fit case to award exemplary costs and was of the firm view that such costs should not be burdened upon the state exchequer. The said secretary who was responsible for the violation of the statutory provisions and weakening the concept of rule of law, was therefore personally liable to pay the costs from his own pocket. While dismissing this appeal, the Supreme Court directed the said secretary to personally pay the costs of Rs 25,000 to the respondent no 1 within a period of two months.[4072]

[4073][S 35B] Costs for causing delay.—(1) If, on any date fixed for the hearing of a suit or for taking any step therein, a party, to the suit—

(a) fails to take the step which he was required by or under this Code to take on that date, or

(b) obtains an adjournment for taking such step or for producing evidence or on any other ground, the Court may, for reasons to be recorded, make an order requiring such party to pay to the other party such costs as would, in the opinion of the Court, be reasonably sufficient to reimburse the other party in respect of the expenses incurred by him in attending the Court on that date, and payment of such costs, on the date next following the date of such order, shall be a condition precedent to the further prosecution of—

(a) the suit by the plaintiff, where the plaintiff was ordered to pay such costs,

(b) the defence by the defendant, where the defendant was ordered to pay such costs.

4069. See Code of Civil Procedure 1908, proviso to O XLI, rule 33.
4070. State of Uttar Pradesh v Manohar, AIR 2005 SC 488, 2004 : (2005) 2 SCC 126 : AIR SCW 7176.
4071. Gayatri Devi v Shashi Pal Singh, AIR 2005 SC 2342 : (2005) 5 SCC 527.
4072. State of Punjab v Bhajan Singh, AIR 2001 SC 1098 : (2001) 3 SCC 565.
4073. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 15 (wef 1-2-1977).

Explanation.—Where separate defences have been raised by the defendants or groups of defendants, payment of such costs shall be a condition precedent to the further prosecution of the defence by such defendants or groups of defendants as have been ordered by the Court to pay such costs.

(2) The costs, ordered to be paid under sub-section (1), shall not, if paid, be included in the costs awarded in the decree passed in the suit; but, if such costs are not paid, a separate order shall be drawn up indicating the amount of such costs and the names and addresses of the persons by whom such costs are payable and the order so drawn up shall be executable against such persons.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 35B.1] Scope	662	[s 35B.5] Condonation of Delay	665
[s 35B.2] Sections 35-A and 35-B	663	[s 35B.6] Cost Should Be Reasonable	666
[s 35B.3] Judicial Notice	663	[s 35B.7] Repeated Applications	666
[s 35B.4] "Directory"	663	[s 35B.8] Waiver of Right	666

[s 35B.1] Scope

The section has been added to discourage parties to litigation from causing undue or unnecessary delay in the prosecution of the suit at any of its stages. To that end, it empowers the court to order compensatory costs, which are irrespective of the ultimate result of such suit. The section further makes payment of such costs a condition precedent to the further prosecution of the suit or the defence, as the case may be, by the concerned plaintiff or the defendant.

The explanation clarifies that in the case of different groups of defendants who have raised different defences, the group that fails to comply with the order of costs will be deprived of the right to defend but not the other group or groups.[4074]

The facts of the case showed that litigants and his successors-in-interest tried all possible methods to outwit the law and, in the process, stifled the justified cause for a period of 36 years. They changed their stand, depending upon their convenience from time to time and were undeterred even in concealing the proceedings instituted in one court to another where they shifted their stand. Their natural anxiety to save the land within the frame work of law is understandable but then in such a pursuit, if they were to go against law and base their defence totally on false and frivolous grounds, they would certainly earn the wrath of the court and would be asked to pay compensatory costs. The high court was thinking of burdening them with one lakh rupees as costs but the fact that they, in this long drawn litigation, were able to get one order in their favour also from the learned single judge of high court, where proper facts could not be projected, the high court reduced the costs to Rs 50,000.[4075]

In an eviction suit, the judgment-debtor was able to avoid execution of the decree by involving the landlord in a series of frivolous litigations and even after 39 years the landlord was unable to reap the fruits of decree. It was held by the Allahabad High Court that it was a fit case where instead of directing the Executing Court to conclude the execution proceedings.

4074. Hakmi v Pitambar, AIR 1987 P&H 145.
4075. Jawan v Mewa Singh, AIR 2001 P&H 344 (DB).

direction should be issued to judgment-debtor to hand over vacant possession. The court further imposed a fine of Rs 50,000.[4076]

In Jhau Lal,[4077] the trial court had dismissed the suit by invoking its powers under section 35-B for non-payment of costs. Being aggrieved by the said order, the appellant-plaintiffs had filed civil revision petitions. While disposing of the said civil revision petitions, the high court observed that the suit filed by the plaintiffs/appellants was not maintainable, based on the claim made that they are the owners of the property on the basis of adverse possession. The Supreme Court held that while deciding the civil revision petitions, the high court should have concentrated primarily on the ground on which the trial court had dismissed the suit of the plaintiffs/appellants. There was no reason for the high court to have observed in its order that the suit itself was not maintainable before the trial court and remanded the matters to the high court for fresh disposal in accordance with law.

[s 35B.2] Sections 35-A and 35-B

See notes under section 35-A.

[s 35B.3] Judicial Notice

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact that many unscrupulous parties take advantage of the fact that either the costs are not awarded or nominal costs as awarded on the unsuccessful party. Unfortunately, it has become a practice to direct parties to bear their own costs. In large number of cases, such an order is passed despite section 35(2) of the CPC. Such a practice also encourages filing of frivolous suits. It also leads to taking up of frivolous defences. Further wherever costs as awarded, ordinarily the same are not realistic and are nominal. When Section 35(2) provides for cost to follow the event, it is implicit that the costs have to be those which are reasonably incurred by a successful party except in those cases where the court in its discretion, may direct otherwise by recording reasons thereof. The costs have to be actual reasonable costs including the cost of the time spent by the successful party, the transportation and lodging if any or any other incidental cost besides the payment of the court fee lawyers fee, typing and other cost in relation to the litigation. It is for the high courts to examine these aspects and wherever necessary to make requisite rules, regulations or practice direction so as to provide appropriate guidelines for the subordinate country to follow.[4078]

[s 35B.4] "Directory"

The provision in section 35B is "directory", according to the Patna High Court,[4079] dissenting from the High Court of Punjab and Haryana.[4080]

The reasoning of the Patna High Court is as under:

> It will be noticed that in Section 35B, there are two parts—one providing for dismissing of suit or striking out the defence, as the case may be, and the other for realisation of the test by execution. If the first part of the section is mandatory, then not only the suit is dismissed when the defaulter is the plaintiff or the defence is struck off if the defaulter is 4076. Jugdish Saran v IXth Addl District Judge, Moradabad, 2008 (4) All LJ 493 : 2008 (72) All WR 568.

---

4077. Jhau Lal v Mohan Lal, (2013) 9 SCC 446.
4078. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344.
4079. Raj Kishore Gupta v Shanti Devi, AIR 1989 Pat 21.
4080. Anand Parkash v Bharat Bhushan Rai, AIR 1981 P&H 269 (FB).

> the defendant, but also he cannot escape in paying the cost. The party, thus, suffers twice. This could not be the intention of the Legislature.

The Himachal Pradesh High Court has held that the provisions of section 35-B for imposition of costs for causing delay is directory and not mandatory. The court may not stop further prosecution of the suit by plaintiff for non-payment of costs. It has been further held that an order dismissing the suit for non-payment of costs in essentially an order dismissing the suit for non-prosecution and would not amount to a decree. The remedy available to an aggrieved party is to apply to the court under section 151 of the code for recalling that order and provisions of O IX, rule 9 of the Code are not applicable.[4081]

Final word on this point has been pronounced by the Supreme. It has been held that the words further prosecution of suit' mean further participation, but non-payment of cost does not entail dismissal of suit.[4082]

Raveendran J speaking for the Supreme Court Bench, has explained the point in the following words:

> Section 35B provides that if costs are levied on the plaintiff for causing delay, payment of such costs on the next hearing date, shall be condition precedent to the further prosecution of the suit by the plaintiff. Similarly, if costs are levied on the defendant for causing delay, payment of such costs on the next date of hearing, shall be a condition precedent to the further prosecution of the defence of the suit by the defendant. This takes us to the meaning of the words 'further prosecution of the suit' and 'further prosecution of the defence'. If the legislature intended that the suit should be dismissed in the event of non-payment of costs by plaintiff, or that the defence should be struck off and suit should be decreed in the event of non-payment of costs by the defendant, the legislature would have said so. On the other hand, legislature stated in the rule that payment of costs on the next date shall be a condition precedent to the further prosecution of the suit by plaintiff (where the plaintiff was ordered to pay such costs), and a condition precedent to the further prosecution of the defence by the defendant (where the defendant was ordered to pay such costs). This would mean that if the costs levied were not paid by the party on whom it is levied, such defaulting party is prohibited from any further participation in the suit. In other words, he ceases to have any further right to participate in the suit and he will not be permitted to let in any further evidence or address arguments. The other party of course be permitted to place his evidence and address arguments, and the court will then decide the matter in accordance with law. We therefore reject the contention of the respondents that section 35-B contemplates or requires dismissal of the suit as an automatic consequence of non-payment of costs by plaintiff.[4083]

Where an application for the dismissal of the suit for non-payment of costs for adjournment is filed one year after the date fixed for the payment of costs, section 35 is not attracted. Such dismissal by the trial court is illegal and can be revised.[4084] Though the language employed in section 35B is pre-emptory, the word "shall" does not necessarily indicate that a court which was seized of the case had no discretion in the matter. Further, no injustice had been caused in the instant case, as the rights of the parties were duly safeguarded. Hence, the high court would not interfere under section 115.[4085] A suit cannot be dismissed merely because plaintiff fails to pay costs ordered by the court to be paid by the plaintiff, being costs occasioned by an adjournment granted at the plaintiffs request on condition of payment of costs.[4086]

4081. Piaro Devi v Anant Ram, AIR 2008 HP 107.
4082. Manohar Singh v DS Sharma, AIR 2010 SC 508 : (2010) 1 SCC 53.
4083. Manohar'Singh v DS Sharma, AIR 2010 SC 508, p 510 : (2010) 1 SCC 53.
4084. Assa Nand v Harish Kumar, AIR 1983 P&H 23.
4085. Manjit Singh v State Bank of India, AIR 1980 P&H 317.
4086. Surendra Mohan v Khetrinath, AIR 1988 Gau 74; Hakm v Pitamber, AIR 1978 P&H 145.

Where, for the non-payment of costs, a provision prohibited further prosecution of the suit or defence, the provision is directory. It does not mean that the party against whom costs are awarded, should be given a long rope to keep the proceedings deferred until it is pleased to deposit the costs. The enlargement of time in this connection, by exercising power under section 148 of CPC has to be granted, only in cases where the court is satisfied that the default is not willful or the conduct of the party is not contumacious. The party ordered to pay costs cannot be allowed to defeat the very purpose of section 35B, by acting negligently or contumaciously. Section 35B does not apply to rent control proceedings. But the rent controller can adopt its principle.[4087] Plaintiff was allowed to file certain documents on payment of costs to the defendant. The plaintiff failed to pay costs, on the date next following the date of order. It was held that the plaintiff cannot, under section 35B, be debarred from prosecuting the case. Section 35B is an extreme penalty and it should not be imposed unless the case squarely falls within the four corners of the section. Being a penal section, it is to be construed very strictly.[4088] Plaintiff was allowed time to file replication on payment of costs. Costs were not paid along with the replication. Court permitted payment of costs on subsequent date. The order is neither invalid nor did it cause injustice to defendant. Interference in revision is not warranted. Hence, the high court would not interfere under section 115.[4089]

Section 35B does not debar the defendant from prosecuting the case for ever if he fails to pay the costs ordered by the court under section 35B. The court can order that unless the defendant pays the costs, he will not be allowed to enter upon his defence. Where no date is fixed in the order for the payment of costs, such a condition cannot be read into the order.[4090]

Section 35B is mandatory. If a party fails to pay the costs on the next date, the court is bound to disallow prosecution of the suit or defence (as the case may be). In the event of the party failing to pay the costs on the date next following the date of the order imposing the costs, it is mandatory on the court to disallow the prosecution of the suit or defence, as the case may be. No other extraneous consideration would weigh with the court in exercising its jurisdiction against the delinquent party. However, in cases where costs are not paid as a result of the circumstances beyond the control of the defaulting party, the court will be within its jurisdiction to exercise its powers under section 148 of the Code in favour of the defaulting party, if a strong case is made out for the exercise of such jurisdiction.[4091]

[s 35B.5] Condonation of Delay

Condonation of delay is in the discretion of the court. Courts should be liberal in the matter of condoning delay in the interest of justice and the party should not be penalised for the fault of his advocate and should be given opportunity to defend the suit.[4092] Defendant failed to pay costs, even on the last date, when the written statement was filed. But he offered to pay the costs on the date, when the case was taken up for hearing. It was held that the trial court should not have ordered that the defendant be debarred from prosecuting the suit.[4093]

In a case under the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1956 there was late deposit of rent amount and the court imposed costs to be paid within 30 days as a condition for giving the benefit under

---

4087. LD Arora v Sushila Devi, AIR 1982 P&H 105.
4088. Simpy Films No. 12, Jullunder v Rajasthani Films (Pvt) Ltd, AIR 1981 P&H 24.
4089. Manjit Singh v State Bank of India, AIR 1980 P&H 317.
4090. Prakash Narain v Addl District Judge, AIR 1981 All 120.
4091. Anand Prakash v Bharat Bhushan Rai, AIR 1981 P&H 269.
4092. Anand Prakash v Bharat Bhushan Rai, AIR 1981 P&H 269.
4093. UOI v Ram Niwas, AIR 1984 Raj 42.

section 14(2) of the Act. The cost was not paid ever during the extended period. It was held by the high court that the appeal was rightly dismissed by the Rent Control Tribunal.[4094]

Discretion of condonation of delay is with the court and courts should be liberal in the matter of condoning delay in the interest of justice and the party should not be penalised for the fault of his advocate and should be given opportunity to defend the suit. Where the party came to know of ex parte decree only when he received the notice of its execution though he had duly handed over written statement to his counsel and was expecting communication from him, considering bona fide that the suit was yet pending, the delay, even though inordinate, in making application to set aside ex parte decree ought to be condoned. However, the applicant was saddled with costs of Rs 1,000.[4095]

[s 35B.6] Cost Should Be Reasonable

In view of the fact that the costs occasioned by the adjournment ought to be reasonable and not by way of penalty, the award of Rs 20,000 as costs after arguments are concluded, and that also to enable learned counsel for the appellant to cite few decisions are by way of penalty. The same cannot be treated as adjournment costs to compensate the opposite party. The costs imposed in the facts and circumstances cannot be said to be reasonable one. They are punitive in nature and cannot be said to be the costs, which would be costs commensurate with the costs occasioned by the adjournment. Thus discretion in the case was not properly exercised in the matter of imposing costs.[4096]

[s 35B.7] Repeated Applications

If repeated applications calling for the records are made without good or sufficient reasons, the court will be at liberty to impose cost for wasting public time and delaying the proceeding.[4097]

[s 35B.8] Waiver of Right

According to a Full Bench of the High Court of Punjab and Haryana, where the issue as to non-payment of costs ordered under section 35B is not raised by the parties, nor taken note of by the court, then there is a waiver of the right arising under the section by the party entitled to costs, and the issue cannot be raised on subsequent dates. The court gave the following reasoning in support. The high court pointed out that an order for the payment of costs, is plainly one in favour of the individual litigant. "Now, on general principles even, it is plain that (the) person in whose favour such a right accrues, may waive the same. Obviously, it would be untenable to hold that a party must be compelled to exercise a right vested in him. Therefore, it would follow that if such a right can be waived expressly, then, equally, it may be so done impliedly, or at least deemed to be so in the eye of the law. In the context of section 35B, if, on the date next following the date of the order of the payment of costs, the issue is not raised by either of the parties or taken notice of by the court, and the case is allowed to proceed further, it would follow that the party having the right to bar the further prosecution of the suit or the 4094. Hanuman Mal Bothra v Suraj Mal Jain, (2010) 167 DLT 452.

---

4095. Sagayam Engineering Works v Srivatsa Tube Corp, AIR 1989 Mad 237.
4096. PC Ltd v Sharma Associates & Contractors, AIR 2001 Del 494 (DB).
4097. Tripura State Co-op Bank Ltd v Shambhu Paul, AIR 2004 Gau 157.

defence has waived its right. "Thereafter, it would not be possible to again exercise the ghost of the stringent provisions of section 35B at any and every subsequent date".[4098]

Placing reliance on the above mentioned Full Bench decision, the Delhi High Court held that where the party entitled to cost awarded by court fails to raise object as to non-compliance on the date fixed for such payment, it will not be open to the party to re-open the issue of their Will on subsequent date and seek barring of further prosecution or defence under section 35-B. Implied waiver of the right would arise.[4099]

4098. Prem Sagar v Phul Chand, AIR 1983 P&H 385. (FB) (Sandhwalia CJ speaking for the Bench).
4099. Milkha Singh v Parshottam Dass, (2001) 2 RCR (Civil) 649 (SC).

PART II

EXECUTION

General

[1][[S 36] Application to orders.—The provisions of this Code relating to the execution of decrees (including provisions relating to the payment under a decree) shall, so far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to the execution of orders (including payment under an order).]

SYNOPSIS

[s 36.1] High Court Amendment 669
[s 36.2] Section Prior to its Substitution 669
[s 36.3] Execution 670
[s 36.4] What Decrees may be Executed 670
[s 36.4.1] Decree of the Court of First Instance Until Appeal and After That, the Decree of the Court of Last Instance 670
[s 36.4.2] The Decree to be Executed must be a Subsisting Decree 672
[s 36.4.3] The Decree must not be Time-Barred 672
[s 36.4.4] Decree should not be a Nullity 672
[s 36.5] Execution of Orders 673
[s 36.5.1] Order 673
[s 36.5.2] Interim Injunction Order 674
[s 36.5.3] Order on Contempt 674
[s 36.6] Merger of Decree 675

[s 36.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Insert the words "and of the presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882", after the words "of this Code" and before the words "relating to"; and the words "and except as therein otherwise provided", after the words "are applicable" and before the words "be deemed to".—Calcutta Gazette, Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 36.2] Section Prior to its Substitution

The section, prior to its substitution ran as below:

> The provisions of this Code relating to the execution of decrees shall, as far as they are applicable, be deemed to apply to the execution of orders.

The only change made in the new section is that whereas the section did not expressly state that provisions relating to the execution of a decree or order include payment under a decree or order, the amended section declares this by including an express provision to that effect. The effect of the amendment is only clarificatory. The inclusive provision therefore does not make any material difference to the commentary set out below.

1. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 16, for section 36 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[s 36.3] Execution

Execution is the enforcement by the process of the court, of its own decrees. The main rules of procedure are enacted in this part of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (CPC) and minor rules are relegated to O XXI. These provisions apply to the decrees, which are capable of execution. There is no question of execution in regard to decrees that are purely declaratory.

In a case relating to a decree for specific performance of agreement to sell, where the judgment-debtor objected to execution on the ground that it was an agricultural land and Agricultural Tenancy Act was applicable, it was held by the Bombay High Court that neither the defendants nor their father were tenants and no certificate to that effect was filed and as such the provisions of the said Act would not apply.[2]

[s 36.4] What Decrees may be Executed

[s 36.4.1] Decree of the Court of First Instance Until Appeal and After That, the Decree of the Court of Last Instance

When the appellate court makes a decree, the decree of the original court is merged in that of the superior court, and it is the latter decree alone that can be executed.[3] Where, pending an appeal, the execution of the first court's decree was stayed and it was revived after the appeal from the decree was dismissed, the omission to file a new application for execution of the appellate decree was treated as a mere technical defect.[4] If the appellate court rejects the appeal under O XLI, rule 10, its order is not a decree;[5] nor if it dismisses the appeal for default of appearance;[6] or for want of prosecution;[7] nor if the appeal abates[8] or is withdrawn.[9] In all these cases, there is no decree of the appellate court, and the decree to be executed is that of the original court. This would also seem to be the case when the appeal is summarily dismissed without notice to the respondent, but the cases are conflicting.[10] But when the appeal is heard, O XLI, rule 32 requires that the judgment should confirm, vary or reverse the decree from which the appeal is preferred;[11] and the decree capable of execution is the decree of the court

---

2. Gokuldas Rama Gaude v VG Quenium, 2007 (3) AIR Bom R 353 : (2007) 4 All MR 463 : (2007) AIHC 2022.
3. Jowad Hussain v Gendan Singh, AIR 1926 PC 93 : (1925-26) 53 IA 197 : (1927) ILR 6 Pat 24, 28; affirming, Saiyid Jowad Hussain v Genda Singh, (1922) ILR 1 Pat 444; Ekram Hussain v Musammat Umatul Rasul, AIR 1931 Pat 27 : (1930) ILR 9 Pat 829; SM Hashim v JA Martin, AIR 1927 Rang 104 : (1926) ILR 4 Rang 562; Dayaram Kashiram Shimpi v Bansilal Raghunath Marwadi, AIR 1953 Bom 214 : (1953) ILR Bom 387 : (1953) 55 Bom LR 30.
4. Pateshwari Prasad Singh v Abdul Karim, AIR 1946 All 496 : (1946) ILR All 475; Baburam Lal v Debdas Lala, AIR 1959 Cal 73.
5. Lekha v Bhauna, (1896) ILR 18 All 101.
6. Rifaqat Husain v Bibi Tawaif, (1917) ILR 39 All 393; Shyam Mandal v Satinath Banarjee, (1916) ILR 44 Cal 954, p 960.
7. Batuk Nath v Munni Dei, AIR 1914 PC 65 : (1914) ILR 36 All 284 : 41 IA 104; Abdul Majid v Jawahir Lal, (1914) ILR 36 All 350 PC.
8. Kalimuddi Ahammad v Eshakuddin, AIR 1924 Cal 530 : (1924) ILR 51 Cal 715.
9. Patloji v Ganu, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 370.
10. Bapu v Vajir, (1897) ILR 21 Bom 548; Batuk Prasad Singh v Ambica Prasad Singh, AIR 1932 Pat 238 : (1932) ILR 11 Pat 409; but see Uma Sundari Devi v Bindu Bashini Chowdhrani, (1897) ILR 24 Cal 759; Munisami v Munisami, (1897) ILR 22 Mad 293; Ahmad Husain v Asma Bibi, (1908) ILR 30 All 290.
11. Kailash Chandra Bose v Girija Sundari Debi, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 925.

of appeal.[12] When the decree of the court of first instance is confirmed by the high court and the latter decree by the Privy Council, the decree capable of execution is the decree of the Privy Council.[13] The same principle would now apply in respect of decrees of the Supreme Court.

The question which decree should be executed arises in the following cases:

(i) Amendment of Decree When there has been an Appeal.—The only decree that can be amended is the decree that has to be executed. If the court of appeal confirms, varies or reverses the decree of the lower court, the decree of the appellate court is the only decree that can be amended.[14]

(ii) Limitation, When there has been an Appeal.—Time runs from the date of the decree capable of execution, and that is the decree of the appellate court superseding that of the court of first instance,[15] and it has been held that this is so even if the appellate court holds that no appeals lies.[16]

(iii) Time for Payment Fixed by Decree.—When a time is fixed for payment by the decree of the lower court, as in a decree for redemption, and the decree is affirmed on appeal, the decree capable of execution is the appellate decree. Nevertheless, the time for the performance of the condition is not extended.[17] Thus, in Ghanshyamlal v Ram Narian,[18] the suit was on a bond in which interest was stipulated at 30% and the decree of the first court said that if the defendant deposited the money within three months of the date of the decree, he would be liable only for interest at 12%. This was confirmed on appeal by the high court and the Privy Council, but the defendant was not allowed extension of time till three months after the decree of the Privy Council. On the other hand, in Noor Ali v Kopti Meah,[19] a rent decree rendered a tenant liable to ejectment if the rent was not paid within 15 days. This was confirmed on appeal and it was held that he would be protected from ejectment if he paid within 15 days of the appellate decree. In a subsequent case, Mookerjee J said that the balance of judicial opinion is in favour of the view that when time is fixed by the decree of the lower court for the payment of money, and the decree is confirmed on appeal, time runs from the date of the decree of the appellate

---

12. Veerappa v Sivagami, AIR 1942 Mad 291; Shorat Singh v Bridgman, (1882) ILR 4 All 376 (FB); Luckman v Kishun, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 218; Daulat and Jagjivan v Bhukandas Manekhand, (1886) ILR 11 Bom 172; Muhammad Sulaiman v Muhammad Yar Khan, (1889) ILR 11 All 267 (FB); Nourang Rai v Latif Chaudhri, (1891) ILR 13 All 394; Sakhalchand Rikhawdas v Velchand Gujar, (1893) ILR 18 Bom 203; Manavikraman v Unniappan, (1892) ILR 15 Mad 170; Nanchand v Vithu, (1894) ILR 19 Bom 258; Satvaji Balajirao Deshmukh v Sakharlal Atmaramshet, (1915) ILR 39 Bom 175 : (1914) 16 Bom LR 778.
13. Raja Bhup Indar Bahadur Singh v Bijai Bahadur Singh, (1901) ILR 23 All 152 : (1900) LR 27 IA 209.
14. Shorat Singh v Bridgman, (1882) ILR 4 All 376; Muhammad Sulaiman v Muhammad Yar Khan, (1889) ILR 11 All 267 (FB); Shivlal v Jumaklal, (1893) ILR 18 Bom 542; Pichuvayyangar v Seshayyangar, (1895) ILR 18 Mad 214; Abbas Khan v Nibarani Dassi, (1910) 11 Cal LJ 159; Lala Brij Narain v Kunwar Tejpal Bikram, (1910) ILR 32 All 295 : 37 IA 70 : 1910 (12) Bom LR 444.
15. Saiyid Jowad Hussain v Gendan Singh, AIR 1926 PC 93 : (1926) LR 53 IA 197 : (1927) ILR 6 Pat 24, affirming, (1922) ILR 1 Pat 444; Luchman Persad Singh v Kishun Persad Singh, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 219; Sakhalchand Rikhawdas v Velchand Gujar, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 203; Mahomed Mehdi Bella v Mohini Kanta Saha Chowdhry, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 874; Gajadhar Singh v Kishan Jiwan Lal, (1917) ILR 39 All 641.
16. Rup Narain v Sheo Prakash, AIR 1921 All 13 : (1921) ILR 43 All 405.
17. Chiranji Lal v Dharm Singh, (1896) ILR 18 All 455; Manavikraman v Unniappan, (1892) ILR 15 Mad 170; Bhola Nath v Kanti Chundra, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 311; Ramaswami v Sundra, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 28; Basanta Kumar v Radha Rani, AIR 1922 Cal 329 : (1922) 26 Cal WN 440; dissenting from Satwaji v Sakharilal, (1914) ILR 39 Bom 175; Sukhram Das v Nazar Muhammad, AIR 1925 Lah 380 : (1925) 6 Lah 316.
18. Ghanshyamlal v Ram Narian, (1909) ILR 31 All 379.
19. Noor Ali v Kopti Meah, (1886) ILR 13 Cal 13.

court.[20] It is submitted that the correct view is that the appellate decree, not being complete in itself, must be construed with reference to the decree of the lower court and that time is not extended. The appellate court can, however, by its decree, alter the time of payment, and should so frame its decree as to make it clear whether or not it intends to do so.[21] In Abdul Shaker v Abdul Rahiman,[22] a decree for specific performance of an agreement to sell was passed conditionally on the plaintiff depositing the purchase price within two months. The plaintiff failed to make the deposit. In the meantime, the defendant had appealed against the decree, granting specific performance and the question was raised whether the plaintiff had not lost, under the terms of the decree, his right to specific performance, as an affirmance of the decree would not extend time for performance. It was held that the principle that the time given in a decree does not become extended by its affirmance on appeal had no application to a decree for specific performance which is in the nature of a preliminary decree and that the time fixed could be extended both by the original and by the appellate court.

(iv) Mesne Profits.—Mesne profits can be ordered from the date of institution of the suit until the expiry of three years from the date of the decree. This means the decree is capable of execution, even if the decree is confirmed on appeal, three years run from the date of the appellate decree.[23] But though the decree to be executed is the appellate decree, yet the terms of it must be ascertained by reference to the decree of the lower court. Therefore, when the original decree gave mesne profits from the date of its decree till the date of delivery of possession and was affirmed by the Privy Council, and the plaintiff got possession subsequent to the latter decree, he was held entitled to mesne profits from the date of the original decree.[24]

[s 36.4.2] The Decree to be Executed must be a Subsisting Decree

A obtains a decree against B and C. B subsequently, sues A to set aside the decree on the ground of fraud, and the decree is set aside as against him. A cannot execute the decree as against B, for, the decree does not subsist as against B. But he may execute the decree as against C for the decree is a subsisting decree as against C.[25]

[s 36.4.3] The Decree must not be Time-Barred

See Limitation Act, 1963, Article 136.

[s 36.4.4] Decree should not be a Nullity

When an order is made for the payment of a fictitious sum without giving any opportunity to a person against whom the order is made, to show cause against the passing of such an order for the said sum, the order is a nullity. When a decree or order is a nullity, it will be deemed to have no existence at all, and any sale held in execution of such a decree or order must also be held to be null and void.[26]

---

20. Sashikanta v Sarat Chandra, AIR 1921 Cal 699 : (1921) 34 Cal LJ 415.
21. Ramaswami v Sundra, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 28.
22. Abdul Shaker v Abdul Rahiman, AIR 1923 Mad 263 : (1923) ILR 46 Mad 148 : 44 Mad LJ 107 : 17 Mad LW 216 : 1923 Mad WN 1.
23. Bhup Inder v Bijai, (1901) ILR 23 All 152 : 27 IA 209.
24. Nand Kumar v Bilas Ram, (1918) 3 Pat LJ 116.
25. Pasupati v Nando Lal, (1903) ILR 30 Cal 718; Chettiatti v Kunhi Koru, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 175.
26. Surinder Nath Kapoor v UOI, 1998 (Supp) SCC 626.

[s 36.5] Execution of Orders

[s 36.5.1] Order

The provisions relating to the execution of decrees are applicable under the section to execution of orders.[27] The term "Order" is defined in section 2 of clause 14, as the formal expression of any decision of a civil court which is not a decree. It is not limited to orders made under the CPC.[28] An order under section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, directing a guardian to pay a sum of money out of his ward's estate for the marriage expenses of a person dependent on his ward is not an "order" within the meaning of section 2, clause 14, and it cannot be enforced against the ward after he has attained majority and the guardian has been discharged.[29] But an order made after the dismissal of a partition suit directing the plaintiff to deposit in court, a certain sum of money, as remuneration for work done by the commissioners of partition, is an order within the meaning of section 2, clause 14 and it may be executed as a decree,[30] but no appeal will lie against the order passed in the execution as the matter would not come within section 47, as the commissioner is not a party to the suit.[31] Where in execution of a money-decree, the executing court grants a lease of land belonging to the judgment-debtor for a certain period and directs the lessee to pay the amount of the decretal debt by instalments, the direction of the court amounts to an order within the meaning of this section.[32]

An order passed under section 24(8) of the West Bengal Non-Agricultural Tenancy Act, 1949, is capable of execution under this section as a decree.[33] An order obtained by an attorney against his client for payment of his costs under section 48 of Chapter 38 of the Original Side Rules, Calcutta, can be executed as a decree under this section and the attorney is accordingly entitled to apply for rateable distribution under section 73.[34] An order for payment of money made by a court under the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 is executable as a decree.[35] An executable order falls within the meaning of section 36 of the CPC, and therefore the provisions in O XXI of the CPC as to execution, are equally applicable as to the execution of decrees, or in other words, an executable order is kept as a part as that of an executable decree under the provisions of section 36 of the CPC.[36] A fascicule reading of sections 36–38 points out that:

(i) execution of decree includes the execution of order;

(ii) the decree passed in exercise of appellate jurisdiction can be executed by the court of first instance; and

(iii) the decree may be executed by the court which passes it, or by the court to which it is sent for execution.[37]

---

27. Manikayala Rao v Narasimhaswami, AIR 1966 SC 470 : (1966) 1 SCR 628.
28. Kilachand Devchand v Ajudhya Prasad, AIR 1934 Bom 452 : (1934) ILR 59 Bom 10.
29. Parvathammal v Chokkalinga, (1918) ILR 41 Mad 241.
30. Chandra Kumar v Kusum Kumari, AIR 1925 Cal 57 : (1925) ILR 52 Cal 269; Ramkeshwar v Babu Girija Prasad, AIR 1957 Pat 501.
31. Dharanidhar Ghose v Phani Bhusan Mukerji, AIR 1947 Cal 18 : (1946) 50 Cal WN 837 : 82 Cal LJ 152; Ramkeshwar v Babu Girija Prasad, AIR 1957 Pat 501.
32. Punjab National Bank Ltd v Shamsher Singh, AIR 1936 Lah 696.
33. Tarapada v Hare Krishna, AIR 1957 Cal 335.
34. Moni Manjuri v Razik, AIR 1954 Cal 6.
35. Radhe Shyam v Karan Chand, AIR 1941 Lah 273.
36. Shanoor Begum v Rukh-Ul-Mulk S Abdul Wazid, AIR 1997 Kant 199.
37. N Tombi Singh v Mutum Ongbi Meipak Devi, AIR 1995 Gau 20.

[s 36.5.2] Interim Injunction Order

In a suit for declaration and injunction, both the plaintiff and defendant filed separate applications for grant of temporary injunction and application filed by plaintiff was dismissed while application by defendant was allowed under O XXXIX, rule 1, and plaintiff was restrained from interfering with possession of defendant. However, thereafter, the suit was disposed of for want of prosecution in view of pursis filed by plaintiff for grant of permission to withdraw the suit, the order allowing application of defendant would not be executable. In such a case, section 151 could not be invoked because though applications were made by parties under O XXXIX, rule 1 read with section 151, the court exercised its powers only under O XXXIX, rule 1 and not under section 151. Moreover, whenever there is a statutory provision/ remedy provided under the CPC or statute, parties to the litigation are required to exhaust those remedies, and in such situation, the court is not expected to exercise inherent powers. Further, an interlocutory order having temporary existence during pendency of the main suit and same must merge in the final order passed in the suit unless contrary is proved. Further, once having held that the said order has come to an end, it loses its force and effectiveness and same is not executable viz section 36, since the same is not in existence. In view of the facts and circumstances of the present case, the provisions of section 36 were not attracted and therefore, the application which was filed by the defendants for issuance of warrant of possession under section 36 would not be maintainable (para 22). Similarly, contingencies contemplated under O XXI, rule 32(1) are entirely different and operate in a different area altogether and cannot be equated with the issue in question and, therefore, same also cannot be said to be attracted in the present case.[38]

An order granting an interim mandatory injunction pending a suit can be executed under this section as if it were a decree.[39] Order XXI, rule 32 read with this section is intended to apply to orders granting interim injunctions under O XXXIX. These provisions deal with execution of such orders and enable parties to enforce them. But they cannot be availed of by the court acting suo motu to penalise their disobedience.[40]

[s 36.5.3] Order on Contempt

An order made on a notice of motion for contempt of court is an order to which this section applies.[41]

The court, in exercise of its contempt jurisdiction, does not decide any issue or question such less on merits. Therefore, the consent terms incorporated in the final order passed in contempt petition do not amount to a decision within the meaning of the term as used in section 2(14) of the CPC and therefore, it is not an order within the meaning of that section. Consequently, such an order cannot be said to be executable under O XXI read with section 36 of the CPC.[42]

---

38. Ramesh Akre v Mangalabai Pralhad Akre, AIR 2002 Bom 487.
39. Abdul Rajack v Abdul Lateef, AIR 1961 AP 482.
40. Hiralal v Popatlal, AIR 1969 Guj 28.
41. Kilachand v Ajodhyaprasad, AIR 1934 Bom 452 : (1934) ILR 59 Bom 10.
42. Re Siddharth Srivastava, AIR 2002 Bom 494.

[s 36.6] Merger of Decree

The doctrine that the decree of the lower court merges in that of the appellate court has been adopted by the Supreme Court in a number of decisions.[43]

[S 37] Definition of Court which passed a decree.—The expression "Court which passed a decree", or words to that effect, shall, in relation to the execution of decrees, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to include,—

(a) where the decree to be executed has been passed in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction, the Court of first instance, and

(b) where the Court of first instance has ceased to exist or to have jurisdiction to execute it, the Court which, if the suit wherein the decree was passed was instituted at the time of making the application for the execution of the decree, would have jurisdiction to try such suit.

[44][Explanation.—The Court of first instance does not cease to have jurisdiction to execute a decree merely on the ground that after the institution of the suit wherein the decree was passed or after the passing of the decree, any area has been transferred from the jurisdiction of that Court to the jurisdiction of any other Court; but, in every such case, such other Court shall also have jurisdiction to execute the decree, if at the time of making the application for execution of the decree it would have jurisdiction to try the said suit.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 37.1] Changes Introduced in the Section ... 675
[s 37.2] Court Which Passed a Decree 676
[s 37.2.1] When Decree to be Executed is a Decree of the Court of first Instance..... 677
[s 37.2.2] When Decree to be Executed is a Decree of the Court of first Appeal 677
[s 37.2.3] When the Decree to be Executed is a Decree of the High Court on Second Appeal 677
[s 37.2.4] When the Court of First Instance has Ceased to Exist 678
[s 37.2.5] When the Court of First Instance has Ceased to have Jurisdiction to Execute the Decree 679
[s 37.3] Clause (b): Ceased to Have Jurisdiction to Execute..... 681
[s 37.4] Which Decrees May Be Executed 682

[s 37.1] Changes Introduced in the Section

This section differs from the corresponding section 649 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 in that the expression "the court of first instance" in clause (a) has been substituted for

---

43. Collector of Customs v East India Commercial Co Ltd, AIR 1963 SC 1124; Election Commr of India v Sabu Venkatasubba Rao, AIR 1953 SC 210 : (1953) SCR 1114 : (1953) SCJ 293; CIT v Amritlal Bhogilal & Co, AIR 1958 SC 868 : (1959) SCR 713 : (1958) SCJ 1007; Madan Gopal v Secy. to Govt. of Orissa, AIR 1962 SC 1513; Lakshmi Achi v Kailasa Thevar, (1964) 1 SCJ 54; State of Uttar Pradesh v Muhammad Nooh, AIR 1958 SC 86 : (1958) SCR 595 : (1958) SCJ 242 : (1958) SCA 73, which is a decision on peculiar facts; Gujraj v Swaminath, (1917) ILR 39 All 13; Kedarnath v Jainarayan, AIR 1954 Pat 497; Ratan Mala v Gopal Lal, AIR 1955 Cal 14 : 58 Cal WN 994. See also notes to O IX, rule 13, "Hearing of Application after Disposal of Appeal".
44. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 17 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

the expression "the court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred". As to the effect of this alteration, see notes below.

The explanation now added to the section by the Amendment Act, 1976 solves the question which often arose, viz, where an area is transferred from the jurisdiction of the court of first instance to the jurisdiction of another court, which of the two courts would have jurisdiction to execute the decree. That question is now answered by the explanation that in such an event, the court of the first instance, by reason only of such transfer of an area, does not cease to have jurisdiction to execute the decree. It further provides that the other court to whose jurisdiction such area is transferred, would also have jurisdiction to execute such a decree provided that at the time of making the application for execution of the decree, it would have jurisdiction to try the said suit.

As per the explanation to section 37 of CPC, the court of first instance will have jurisdiction to execute a decree, and the jurisdiction of the court would not cease on the ground that after the institution of the suit or after the passing of the decree, any territory has been transferred from the jurisdiction of that court to the jurisdiction of any other court. Further, the latter court shall also have jurisdiction to execute the decree, if that court would have jurisdiction to try the said suit, at the time of making the execution petition.[45]

Moreover, the bar of section 39(4) does not apply to explanation to section 37 and is operative to section 39 only. It means that the explanation to section 37 is an exception to the bar that the execution court cannot proceed against the property, situated outside the local limits of its jurisdiction.[46]

[s 37.2] Court Which Passed a Decree

Section 38 indicates the courts by which decrees may be executed. A decree may be executed either by the court which passed it, or by the court to which it is sent for execution. It may also be executed by the court to which it is transferred under section 24 above.[47] The present section explains the meaning of the expression "court which passed a decree".

An application for the enforcement of arbitral award need not always be filed under section 36 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 before the district court, such awards can be enforced or executed by competent civil court having territorial and pecuniary jurisdiction to entertain the matter.[48] VVS Rao J, speaking for the Division Bench, explained the point as follows:

> 22. After CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999, inserting Section 89 in Part V, any Civil Court can refer the suit or proceeding before it to arbitration if there are elements of settlement acceptable to the parties. When the matter is referred to arbitration as per Section 87(2)(a) of CPC, the provisions of Arbitration Act shall apply as if the matter is referred to arbitration under the provisions of Arbitration Act. It is not only the District Court which is empowered under Section 89 of CPC to refer the disputes to arbitration but also all civil Courts in the hierarchy including High Court can refer the disputes to arbitration. In a given case, a Junior Civil Judge may refer the dispute to arbitration and after the award is passed, if the successful party has to enforce the award only before a District Court, it would violate provisions of CPC and Civil Courts Act. As seen from Sections 37 and 38 of

---

45. Sandhya MN v Binu G Pillai, (2019) 5 KHC 287 : 2019 Ker LR 967 : (2019) 4 Ker LJ 889.
46. Sandhya MN v Binu G Pillai, (2019) 5 KHC 287: (2019) Ker LR 967 : (2019) 4 Ker LJ 889.
47. Muhammad v Tikachand, AIR 1925 All 276 : (1925) ILR 47 All 57; N Tombi Singh v Mucum Ongbi Meipah Devi, AIR 1995 Guh 20.
48. Bhoomatha Para Boiled Rice and Oil Mills v Maheshwari Trading Co, AIR 2010 AP 137 : (2010) 1 Andh LD 522 (DB).

> CPC, a decree has to be executed by the Court, which passed the decree. Therefore, if an arbitral award is made pursuant to reference by a Court within its pecuniary jurisdictional limits, it is only that Court, which can execute/enforce such award and not any other Court.[49]

The expression "court which passed a decree" includes not only the court which actually passed the decree, but the courts mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the present section. The following rules are deducible from this section and section 38:

[s 37.2.1] When Decree to be Executed is a Decree of the Court of first Instance

When the decree to be executed is a decree of a court of first instance, the proper court to execute it is the court of first instance. A court of small causes which has passed a decree can execute it (subject to O XXI, rule 82). Hence, it can execute the decree by attachment and sale of movable property of the judgment-debtor.[50]

[s 37.2.2] When Decree to be Executed is a Decree of the Court of first Appeal

When the decree to be executed is a decree passed by a court of first appeal, the proper court to execute it is also the court of first instance.

[s 37.2.3] When the Decree to be Executed is a Decree of the High Court on Second Appeal

When the decree to be executed is a decree passed by the high court in second appeal, then also the proper court to execute it is the court of first instance. Thus, where a suit is instituted in the court of a subordinate judge, and an appeal from the decree is preferred to the district court, and a second appeal is preferred to the high court, the proper court to execute the decree of the high court is the court of first instance, that is, the court of the subordinate judge. The substitution of the expression "court of first instance" in clause (a) of the present section for the expression "court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred", gives legislative recognition to the practice followed by the courts when the present CPC was enacted. The expression "appellate jurisdiction" includes also revisional jurisdiction. Therefore, it is only the court of first instance that could execute a decree for costs in a revision preferred against its decree or order.[51] The plaintiffs' suit for declaration of their title to the disputed land and for restraining the principal defendants from disturbing possession was dismissed by the trial court. The plaintiffs' appeal therefrom was allowed by the subordinate judge and further the defendants' appeal from his judgment and decree was dismissed by the high court. The plaintiffs put the decree of subordinate judge (lower appellate court) to execution for the recovery of possession of the suit lands after evicting the defendants therefrom and for recovery of costs, etc. It was held that this execution petition must be taken to be an application for execution of high court's decree. There was no necessity for amending the execution petition.[52] In section 37, the expression "court which passed a decree" includes newly established court having jurisdiction over a part of the territory. The latter court can execute the decree, without transfer of the decree to it. Contrary decision of the Mysore High Court is no longer good law,

---

49. Bhoomatha Para Boiled Rice and Oil Mill v Maheshwari Trading Co, AIR 2010 AP 137, p 144 : (2010) 1 Andh LD 522 (DB).
50. Mahade v Prasad v Ram Lochan, AIR 1980 SC 416 : (1980) 4 SCC 354.
51. Bhagwan Dass v Ganga Prasad, AIR 1959 All 92; Chappan v Moideen Kutty, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 68 : 8 Mad LJ 231 (FB).
52. Lichubala Biswas v Jindar Mondal, AIR 1990 Cal 151.

after the 1976 amendment which has added the explanation.[53] The newly created court also acquires jurisdiction, besides the court which passed the decree.[54]

[s 37.2.4] When the Court of First Instance has Ceased to Exist

When the court of first instance has ceased to exist, the only court that can execute the decree is the court which, at the time of making the application for execution, would have jurisdiction to try the suit in which the decree was passed. The application for execution must be made to that court. This is as a result of clause (b) of the section giving a wider meaning to the expression "the court which passed the decree" for the purpose of executing the decree.[55] But if the application is to execute the decree by the attachment and sale of immovable property not situated within its jurisdiction, the court must nevertheless entertain the application, and then transfer the application to the court having territorial jurisdiction. Thus, in Sreenath v Priyanath,[56] a rent decree was passed by the third munsiff's court at Bhanga. That court was then abolished and became the court of the second munsiff at Gopalgunje. The rent suit fell within the pecuniary limits of the second munsiff's court at Gopalgunje and therefore the court at Gopalgunje was the court which passed the decree under section 37 (b). The application to execute the decree was, therefore, made to the Gopalgunje Court. But the application was to execute the decree by the attachment and sale of immovable property, not within the jurisdiction of the Gopalgunje court but within the jurisdiction of the first munsiff's court at Bhanga. Nevertheless, it was held that the Gopalgunje Court had jurisdiction to entertain the application, but, that it should not itself order the sale of property outside its jurisdiction but should transfer the application to the Bhanga court for making and executing the order for sale. Justice Mitter said that the Gopalgunje Court did not function merely as a sort of post office for receiving and transmitting the application but that it could determine questions as to the executability of the decree. A court vested with the powers of a court of small causes, ceases to exist as a court of small causes, when those powers are withdrawn.[57] A court does not cease to exist merely because its headquarters are removed to another place, or because the local limits,[58] or the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction[59] are altered. If a court is abolished and then revived without diminution of jurisdiction, execution of the decree passed by the abolished court can be ordered by the revived court.[60] The executing court found that the nomenclature of the court had only changed and the work of the Additional Civil Judge, Gorakhpur was being done by First Additional Civil Judge, Gorakhpur before which court the execution application was filed. The court of First Additional Civil Judge, Gorakhpur, before which the execution application has been filed, bears the impression and the identity of the courts which passed the decree, but which has now been abolished. Consequently, the said court had jurisdiction to entertain and hear the execution application as per the provision of section 37(b) of the CPC.[61]

---

53. Gopal Krishna v TG Laxman Shanbhogue, AIR 1964 Mys 34.
54. Syndicate Bank v Mahadevappa, AIR 1985 Kant 85.
55. Gulab Chand v Saraswati Devi, AIR 1975 Del 210.
56. Sreenath v Priyanath, AIR 1931 Cal 312 : (1931) ILR 58 Cal 832.
57. Zamindar of Vellur v Adinarayadu, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 445.
58. Latchman v.Maddan Mohun, (1881) ILR 6 Cal 513.
59. Iswari Prasad v Farkat Hussain, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 113.
60. Sahde v Prasad v Raja Ram, AIR 1984 All 169.
61. Lalita Devi v Kamla Devi, AIR 1995 All 21.

[s 37.2.5] When the Court of First Instance has Ceased to have Jurisdiction to Execute the Decree

This section 37 of the CPC clearly lays down that where a court which has passed a decree loses the jurisdiction to execute it (sic), then the other court, which has jurisdiction over the subject-matter that has been transferred, has an authority to execute the decree. Thus, the court to which subject-matter has been transferred can also execute the decree, and the court to which the case transferred acquires an inherent jurisdiction to execute the same.[62]

In this case the court of execution is the court which, at the time of the application, would have jurisdiction to entertain the suit in which the decree was passed. But the jurisdiction of the original court is not entirely excluded. A decree is passed by court X directing the sale of immovable property within its jurisdiction. After the decree and before the application in execution for sale, the property directed to be sold is transferred by the local government's notification from the jurisdiction of court X to the jurisdiction of court Y. Has court X the jurisdiction to entertain the application for execution and to order the sale of the property? According to the Calcutta decisions, both court X and court Y have jurisdiction to entertain the application, but if the application is made to court X, it should not, itself, make an order for the sale of the property, but transfer the application to court Y for making and executing the order for sale.[63] The Madras decisions have not been consistent. In one case, it was held that court X had jurisdiction to entertain an application for execution, but the question whether it could itself order the sale of the property was not decided.[64] In a case of 1914, it was said that court X had no jurisdiction to entertain the application,[65] but this was overruled in a full bench decision in 1919. Chief Justice (CJ) Wallis observed that the power of sending the decree to another court was sufficient to meet the case. The learned CJ construed section 150 as conferring upon court Y, jurisdiction to entertain the application for execution but was of opinion that the section could not be construed as taking away from court X, the power which it had, according to the unbroken current of authorities of entertaining the application.[66] The decision of Wallis CJ, has been followed by the Patna High Court.[67] In a case decided in 1927, it was said that court X had power to entertain the application for transmission to court Y but has no power to sell the property.[68] In 1932, a Full Bench of the Madras High Court distinguished notifications which effected a change of jurisdiction in the future from those which effected a transfer of past business; and held that section 150 only applied to the latter. If the notification only effects a change of jurisdiction for the future, the court which passed the decree has jurisdiction to entertain an application for execution of the decree though the decree-holder may, as a matter of convenience, apply for transfer of the decree for execution to court Y, but

---

62. Indra Singh v Ramcharan, AIR 2003 MP 144. See also Merla Ramanna v Nallaparaju, AIR 1956 SC 87.
63. Latchman v Maddan Mohun, (1881) ILR 6 Cal 513; Premchand v Mokhoda, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 699 (FB); Jahar v Kamini Debi, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 238; Udit Narain v Mathura Prasad, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 974; Kali Pado v Dino Nath, (1989) ILR 25 Cal 315 which is sometimes cited in this connection, is not a case of transfer of jurisdiction; there was in that case, an order merely for the distribution of businessbetween two courts, each of which had jurisdiction; Jahar v Kamini Debi, 1901 ILR 28 Cal 238 and Udit Narain Chaudhuri v Mathura Prasad, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 974; but see Masrab Khan v Debnath Mali, AIR 1942 Cal 321 : (1942) ILR 1 Cal 289; Thyagaraja v Sambasiva, AIR 1934 Mad 283 : (1934) ILR 57 Mad 795 : 66 Mad LJ 492.
64. Panduranga v Vythilinga, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 537.
65. Subbiah v Ramanathan, (1914) ILR 37 Mad 462 : 471.
66. Seeni Nadan v Muthusami, (1919) ILR 42 Mad 821; Muthukaruppa v Paiya, AIR 1924 Mad 32 : (1923) 45 Mad LJ 210.
67. Chandmal v Shib Prasad, AIR 1934 Pat 192 : (1934) ILR 13 Pat 21.
68. Sivaskandu v Raja of Jeypore, AIR 1927 Mad 627 : (1927) ILR 50 Mad 882.

court Y would not be competent to entertain the application for execution as it cannot be deemed to be included in the expression "court which passed the decree under clause (b)".[69] This question came up for consideration before the Supreme Court in Ramanna v Nallappa Raju.[70] There, it was observed that it was settled law that the court which actually passed a decree did not lose its jurisdiction to execute it by reason of the subject matter thereof being transferred subsequently to the jurisdiction of another court. And, as regards the competence of the court to whose jurisdiction the subject matter has been transferred to entertain an application for execution, their Lordships referred to the conflict of authorities on the subject and held without deciding the point that if the latter court entertained an application, it would at the worst, be an irregular assumption of jurisdiction and not a total absence of it and that if objection is not taken at the earliest opportunity, it must be held to have been waived and cannot be raised at the later stages of the proceedings. The Patna High Court has held that final decree proceeding arising out of a preliminary decree in a partition suit is akin to and exactly in nature of an execution proceeding. The original court which passed the preliminary decree and where the records of the partition suit were pending does not become functus officio for final decree proceedings merely because after passing the preliminary decree, the area where the property is situated has been transferred from the jurisdiction of that court to the jurisdiction of some other court.[71]

Objection regarding want of territorial jurisdiction of civil court does not relate to subject-matter of suit and court's inherent jurisdiction. It must, therefore, be raised before court which passed decree at earliest possible opportunity and if rejected, it must be raised before competent court in appeal. But it can be entertained by such court only where there is consequent failure of justice.[72]

In Lalithamba v Mangamma,[73] properties which had been attached in execution of a decree passed by court A were subsequently transferred to the jurisdiction of court B. Thereafter, the decree-holder presented an application for execution to court B directly. An objection having been raised by the judgment-debtor that court B was not competent to entertain the application, it was held upholding the objection that court B had no jurisdiction to entertain the application as a decree could be executed under sections 37 and 38 only by the court which passed it or by one to which it was transferred for execution.[74] The question was recently considered by a Full Bench of the Punjab High Court in Meher Singh v Kasturi Ram,[75] and it was held that where after the passing of a decree by court A, territorial jurisdiction is transferred to court B, application for execution of the decree could be presented to either court. The new explanation resolves the conflict of opinion by legislatively confirming the view consistently held by the Calcutta High Court. Where a notification regarding redistribution of territorial jurisdiction applies only to "future business", an application under section 144 of the CPC for restitution arising out of a suit pending at the time of the notification cannot be treated as

---

69. Rama Iyer v Muthukrishnan, AIR 1932 Mad 418 (FB) : (1932) ILR 55 Mad 801 : 62 Mad LJ 687; Masral Khan v Debnath Mali, AIR 1942 Cal 321 : (1942) ILR 1 Cal 289.
70. Ramanna v Nallappa Raju, AIR 1956 SC 87 : (1955) 2 SCR 938 : 1956 SCJ 101; Balkrishna v Linga Rao, AIR 1943 Mad 449 : (1943) ILR Mad 804 : (1943) 1 Mad LJ 119, which was approved therein; Raghunandan Singh v Narain Das, AIR 1960 All 730; Dasarath Prasad v Baijnath Prasad, AIR 1960 Pat 285.
71. Mansoor Alam v Nasseeruddin Khan, AIR 2009 Pat 79 : 2009 (2) Ci v LJ 925.
72. Sneh Lata Goel v Pushplata, AIR 2019 SC 824 : 2019 SCC On Line SC 45 : (2019) 3 SCC 594.
73. Lalithamba v Mangamma, AIR 1958 AP 763 : (1958) 2 Andh WR 511.
74. But see Gouramma v Lingappa, AIR 1968 Mad 99 : (1968) ILR 1 Mad 122 : (1967) 1 Mad LJ 281.
75. Meher Singh v Kasturi Ram, AIR 1962 P&H 394 : (1961) ILR 2 Punj 445.

future business.[76] But a court to which a decree is transferred for execution has no jurisdiction to order either the attachment or sale of immovable property, if at the time of the order, such court had no territorial jurisdiction over the property.[77]

[s 37.3] Clause (b): Ceased to Have Jurisdiction to Execute

The expression "where the court of first instance has ceased to exist", without doubt, envisages "the abolition or total extinguishment of the court which passed the decree". Further, to attract first part of clause (b) of section 37, what is required is the complete abolition of the court which passed the decree and not mere alteration in its pecuniary or territorial jurisdiction. The expression "where the court of first instance has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute the decree" as envisaged by second part of clause (b) of section 37, obviously refers to such a decree where the court loses jurisdiction to execute the decree according to its tenor.[78]

A court does not cease to have jurisdiction to execute its decree merely because the decree is transferred to another court for execution[79] or because it is abolished and re-established,[80] or merely because its business is transferred by the district judge under the Act constituting it to another court,[81] or because the area in which the judgment-debtor resides is transferred from its jurisdiction to that of another court.[82] If, after a court has passed a decree, the local area in which the property is situated is transferred to a different court, the decree-holder can apply for execution to the latter court. That court can directly entertain an application for execution without an order of transfer by the court which had, in fact, passed the decree. The transfer of local area, automatically gives, jurisdiction to the court, to which the area has been transferred.[83] Clause (b) of this section applies where the court which passed the decree is abolished and a new court, in its place, is established.[84] A distinction has also been made between a notification of the government, transferring jurisdiction under section 13(1) of the Bengal, Assam and Agra Civil Courts Act, 1877, and assigned jurisdiction under section 13(2) of the said Act and it has been held that a court which passed a decree does not cease to have jurisdiction within this section, if the notification issued is under section 13(2).[85] Where an order was made by the High Court of Calcutta rejecting a petition for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, and directing the petitioner to pay the respondent's costs, but the order was silent as to the court by which it was to be executed, it was held that the circumstance that the high court on its appellate side does not, in practice, execute its own decrees and orders, did not make, that court, as regards the execution of the order, a court that had "ceased to have jurisdiction to execute" its decree[86] (O XLV, rule 15). Nor

---

76. Skinner v Skinner, AIR 1937 All 515 : (1937) ILR All 670.
77. Veerappa v Ramasami, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 135.
78. Pearey Lal & Sons Pvt Ltd v Jamuna Properties Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Del 126. See also Gulab Chand Sharma v Saraswati Devi, AIR 1975 Del 210.
79. Surendranath v Harihar, AIR 1971 Ori 77 : (1970) ILR Cut 1178.
80. Khodaijatul v Harihar, AIR 1926 Pat 209 : (1925) ILR 4 Pat 688; Khairulla v Jai Ram, AIR 1953 All 201.
81. Masrab Khan v Debnath Mali, AIR 1942 Cal 321 : (1942) ILR 1 Cal 289; Kali Pado v Dino Nath, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 315; Jagannath v Sheonandan, AIR 1921 Pat 152 : (1921) 6 Pat LJ 304; Saryug Barhi v Devendra, AIR 1970 Pat 393.
82. Muthukaruppa v Paia Kavundan, AIR 1924 Mad 32 : (1923) 45 Mad LJ 210.
83. Hamir Singh v Bhawani Shankar, AIR 1980 Raj 134.
84. B Lakshminarayana v R. Rajmall, AIR 1972 Mys 342 : (1972) 1 Mys LJ 652.
85. Shibnath v Life Insurance Corporation of India, AIR 1961 Cal 170 : 65 Cal WN 766; Jahar v Kamini Devi 28 Cal 238; Udit Narain v Madura Prasad 35 Cal 974.
86. Hurro Pershad v Bhupendro, (1881) ILR 6 Cal 201.

does a court which passed a decree "cease to have jurisdiction to execute it", because after the passing of the decree, a party [eg court of wards] is added in execution who, had he been a party when the suit wherein the decree was passed was instituted, would have deprived the court to its jurisdiction.[87] In a Madras case,[88] the court said with reference to clause (b) of the section:

> In fact this portion of section 37 of the Civil Procedure Code clearly has reference to transfers of territorial jurisdiction from one Court to another.

The new explanation makes it clear that in such cases both the court from whose territorial jurisdiction an area is withdrawn but wherein the suit was instituted, and the decree was passed and the court to whose jurisdiction the area is transferred, have jurisdiction to execute such decree. But the latter court must be such that it would have, at the time of the execution, application jurisdiction to try the said suit. A court, which passed a decree, does not lose jurisdiction to execute it merely because subsequent to the decree, its pecuniary jurisdiction is curtailed. If the successor of a judge, who passed a decree, has a more limited jurisdiction so that he could not have entertained the suit, he may yet entertain the application for execution.[89] It has been held in P Mary Arul Nadar v M Nanu Pillai,[90] that a court does not cease to exist within section 37(b), when there is mere withdrawal from it, of a part of its territorial jurisdiction. In applying this section, the nature of the cause which put an end to the jurisdiction of a court is immaterial.[91] Where a court does not lack inherent jurisdiction but has irregularly assumed jurisdiction, the proceedings before it are not vitiated. In a Karnataka case, the munsiff, thinking that in view of the amended law, he was not competent to execute an eviction decree passed by him, transferred it to the court of the civil judge, without an application by the decree-holder. It was held that there was, at the highest, an irregular assumption of jurisdiction by the transferee court. There was no inherent lack of jurisdiction for the transferee court to execute the decree. Hence, proceedings in the transferee court are not vitiated.[92]

[s 37.4] Which Decrees May Be Executed

Preliminary decree is a decree within the meaning of section 2 (2) of the CPC but is not capable of execution normally till a final decree is passed. In that sense, the court dealing with a preliminary decree before passing a final decree may not be designated in law as an executed court within the meaning of section 37 of the CPC.[93]

Courts by which decrees may be executed

[S 38] Court by which decree may be executed.—A decree may be executed either by the Court which passed it, or by the Court to which it is sent for execution.

---

87. Bandoo v Narsingrao, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 662.
88. Suryanarayan Agarwalla v Maheshwar Kest, AIR 1950 Assam 115 : (1950) ILR 2 Assam 113; Venkatasami Naik v Sivanu Mudali, (1919) ILR 42 Mad 461, 464.
89. Abdus Sattar v Mohini Mohan, AIR 1933 Cal 684 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 679.
90. P Mary Arul Nadar v M Nanu Pillai, AIR 1957 TC 69 : (1956) TC 1314.
91. Gauskha v Abdul, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 162.
92. N Pariyakkal v Co-op Tourist and Transport Society Ltd, AIR 1980 Kant 75.
93. Atava Akkulamma v Gajjela Papi Reddy, AIR 1995 AP 166. See note under the same heading to section 36 above.

SYNOPSIS

[s 38.1]	Court Which Passed a Decree	683	[s 38.5]	Construction of Decree by Executing Court	690
[s 38.2]	"Court to which it is sent for execution"	683	[s 38.6]	Distinction Between Section 38 and Section 63	691
[s 38.3]	Jurisdiction of Court Executing a Decree	684	[s 38.7]	Sections 38 and 39(4) — Harmonious Reading	691
[s 38.4]	Powers of Executing Court: Court Executing a Decree Cannot go behind the Decree	686	[s 38.8]	Execution of Arbitration Award	691

[s 38.1] Court Which Passed a Decree

See notes to section 37 under the same heading. The primary court competent to execute a decree is the one which passed the decree. It remains competent to do so even though the decretal amount at the date of the execution exceeds the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction.[94]

In view of the new explanation to section 37, the court to which an area from the jurisdiction of the court which passed the decree has been transferred would also be competent to execute the decree.

The court which passed the decree can transfer it for execution to another court, even when execution proceedings are pending before it.[95]

[s 38.2] "Court to which it is sent for execution"

See under sections 39 and 40

An ex parte decree passed in 1949 by a court in Bankura in West Bengal in a personal action against a resident of Morena in the former Madhya Bharat State is valid if the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction of Bankura court and the notice of the suit was served on the defendant. Such a decree can be transferred to Morena court for execution on the CPC having been made applicable in 1951 to Madhya Bharat.[96] The Rajasthan High Court has held that the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar Council can resort to this section for the purpose of executing its order of costs.[97] The term "proceeding" in section 29 of Administrative Tribunal Act, 1985 is a very wide term to mean a prescribed course of action to enforce the legal right. It indicates the prescribed mode in which the judicial business is conducted. The execution is a step in judicial process. It seeks to enforce the final order to realise the result of the adjudication. Therefore, the tribunal constituted under the Act gets jurisdiction and power to enforce order passed by the tribunal and which attained finality.[98] On account of increase of pecuniary jurisdiction of district courts, the execution petition pending before high court, pursuant to decree passed by high court, is not liable to be transferred to district courts and should be dealt with by the high court.[99]

---

94. Gordhanlal v CP Industries, Khandwa, AIR 1971 Raj 254.
95. Gumdas Adhya v Jnanendra, (1934) 39 Cal WN 165.
96. Lalit Raja & Sons v Hansraj Nathuram, AIR 1971 SC 974 : (1971) 1 SCC 721 : 1971 (3) SCR 815; Narhari v Pannalal, AIR 1977 SC 164 : (1976) 3 SCC 203 : (1976) 3 SCR 149.
97. Sohanlal Soni v Mani Ram, AIR 1974 Raj 20.
98. PL Kantha Rao v State of Andhra Pradesh, (1995) 2 SCC 471.
99. Pearey Lal and Sons Pvt Ltd v Jamuna Properties Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Del 126.

The Kerala High Court has held that an award passed by the Joint Registrar Chits can be enforced by civil court in Kerala.[100]

[s 38.3] Jurisdiction of Court Executing a Decree

The following are the leading rules relating to the jurisdiction of courts executing decrees:

Rule I.—No court can execute a decree in which the subject matter of the suit or of the application for execution is property situated "entirely" outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. Territorial jurisdiction, in other words, is a condition, precedent to a court executing a decree.[101] Security bond was furnished to the court under O XXXVII, rule 3. Property covered by the bond was situated outside the jurisdiction of the court. Sale of property in execution of the decree was sought. It was held that the court which passes the decree has no jurisdiction for property outside the local limits. Decree-holder must obtain transfer certificate. As a general rule, territorial jurisdiction is a condition precedent to a court executing a decree. Merely because a security bond had been furnished to the court which passed the decree, that court could not order sale of property which is not situated in its jurisdiction. The decree-holder must obtain transfer of the decree.[102]

Exception I.—The court which passed a decree for the "enforcement of a mortgage of immovable property" has power in execution of its decree to order the sale of such property, though it may be situated "beyond" the local limits of its jurisdiction. A sues B in a court in district X on a mortgage of two properties, one situated in district X and the other in district Y. A decree is passed for the sale of both the properties. The court in district X having jurisdiction to entertain the suit in respect of the property situated in district Y (section 17), has also jurisdiction to sell that property in execution of its decree, though the property is situated beyond its jurisdiction. It is not bound to send the decree for execution as regards the property in district Y to the court of that district under section 39 (c) but it may do so.[103] In the latter case, the decree as regards the property in district Y may be executed by the court of district Y.[104]

Exception II.—Where "after the passing of a decree" in a "suit for the enforcement of a mortgage" the whole of the immovable property included therein falls by transfer of jurisdiction, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of another court, the application for execution of the decree according to the Calcutta rulings may be made either to the court which passed the decree (though the properly is no longer within its jurisdiction) or to the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction, the immovable property falls by such transfer but where the application is made to the former court it

---

100. Saraswathi v Matheran Pillai, 2008 (1) Ker LT 84.
101. Prem Chand v Mokhoda Devi, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 699, p 703; Begg Dunlop & Co v Jagannath, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 104; Ambika v Manikganj Loan Office, AIR 1929 Cal 818 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 67; Sreenath v Priyanath, AIR 1931 Cal 312 : (1931) ILR 58 Cal 832; Veerappa Chetiar v Ramasami Chettiar, AIR 1920 Mad 505 : ILR 43 Mad 135 : 37 Mad LJ 442; Sri Raja Sethucherla Sivaskanda v Raja of Jaipore, AIR 1927 Mad 627 : 52 Mad LJ 605; Bank of Bengal v Sarath Chandra Mitra, AIR 1918 Pat 126 : 4 Pat LJ 141; Maharaj Kishore v Rajaram Singh, AIR 1954 Pat 164; Bajpai v Hanuman Das, AIR 1958 All 425.
102. Citibank, NA, New Delhi v Indo-American Electricals Ltd, AIR 1981 Del 27.
103. Maseyk v Steel, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 661; Kaeritcki Nath v Tilukdhari, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 667; Gopi Mohan v Doybaki, (1892) ILR 19 Cal 13; Tincouri v Shib Chandra, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 639; Jagernath v Dip Rani, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 871; Srimanthu v Venkatappiah, AIR 1947 Mad 347 : (1948) ILR Mad 18.
104. Aziz Baksh v Sultan Singh, (1918) PR No 43, p 152; Jagernath v Dip Rani, (1895) ILR 22 Cal 871. Sakti Nath v RJC Bank Ltd, (1939) ILR 1 Cal 493 : 43 Cal WN 453 where all the important cases are considered. See also notes to section 17.

should not itself order the properly to be sold, but should transfer it to the latter court for passing and executing the order for sale.[105]

It is submitted that the view of the Calcutta High Court still holds good, even after the insertion of the new explanation to section 37, since that explanation does not say that the court from whose jurisdiction the immovable property is transferred to another court can direct the sale of such property.[106]

Exception III.—The salary of public officer or of a servant of a railway company or local authority may be attached by a court, though the disbursing officer may not be within the local limits of the court's jurisdiction.[107]

Exception IV.—The executing court can appoint a receiver for properties situated outside its territorial jurisdiction and order their sale.[108]

Exception V.—It is competent to the court executing a decree to order execution against property in the custody of any court of public officer, though such court or officer is not within the territorial jurisdiction.[109]

Rule II.—Where a decree has been passed for the payment of money, and the decree-holder applies for attachment and sale of immovable property (belonging to the judgment-debtor) which forms one estate apart whereof is situated within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court executing the decree and part beyond such limits.

The court executing the decree has the power to attach and sell the whole estate including the portion situated beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction.[110]

Rule III.—Does a court to which a decree has been sent for execution under section 39 have the jurisdiction to execute the decree, if the amount of the decree exceeds the limits of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court? There is a conflict of decision as to whether the court of execution is restricted to the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction. To put the question in a concrete form, if a decree for Rs 7,000 is sent for execution to a court whose pecuniary jurisdiction does not exceed Rs 5,000, can the latter court execute the decree? "Yes" according to Madras[111] and Allahabad.[112] "No", according to the High Courts of Calcutta,[113] Bombay,[114] Patna[115] and Orissa.[116] This conflict has now been resolved by the new sub-section 3 to section 39 added by the Amendment Act, 1976, which provides that a court shall be deemed to be a court of competent jurisdiction if at the time of application for transfer to it, it would have jurisdiction to try to suit in which such decree was passed.

---

105. Latchman v Maddan, (1881) ILR 6 Cal 513; Jahar v Kamini Debi, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 238; Seeni Nandan v Muthusami, (1919) ILR 42 Mad 821; Jugul Kishore v Pankajini, AIR 1961 Cal 183.
106. See note to section 37 "Court which passed a decree", rule 5.
107. See CPC, O XXI, rule 48, and notes thereto.
108. Prema Nath v HV Low & Co, AIR 1930 Cal 502; Bhagwati Prasad v Jainarain, AIR 1958 All 425; Benares Ice Factory v Shuklal, AIR 1961 Cal 422.
109. Bhagwati Prasad v Jainarain, AIR 1958 All 425; but see Gyarsilal v Shankarlal, AIR 1950 Ngp 46 : (1950) ILR Nag 18; Gayour Ahmad v Hazarimal, AIR 1965 Raj 41 : (1964) ILR 14 Raj 1122.
110. See CPC, O XXI, rule 3, and notes thereto.
111. Narasayya v Venkata, (1884) ILR 7 Mad 397; Shanmuga v Ramanathan, (1894) ILR 17 Mad 309.
112. Shanti Lal v Mt Jammi Kuer, AIR 1940 All 331 : (1940) ILR All 318.
113. Durga v Umatara, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 465; Gokul v Aukhil, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 457; Shamsundar v Anath Bandhu, (1910) ILR 37 Cal 574; Ganeshdas Badrunarayana v Amulak Chand, AIR 1940 Cal 161.
114. Sideshwar v Harihar, (1888) ILR 12 Bom 155.
115. Amrit Lal v Murlidhar, AIR 1922 Pat 188 : (1922) ILR 1 Pat 651.
116. Matrumal v Madanlal, AIR 1957 Ori 177.

In a suit for recovery of loan filed by a bank, the decree passed by the civil court was less than 10 lacs. But when the bank applied for execution, the outstanding decretal dues including interest had grown to nearly 50 lacs. Relying on the decision of the Supreme Court in Punjab National Bank v Chajju Rao,[117] a Division Bench of the Orissa High Court held that since the amount due has become were than 10 lacs, it can be recovered by the Debt Recovery Tribunal only and not by civil court, notwithstanding the fact that the decree was for less than 10 lacs at the initial stage.[118]

Rule IV.—Where the decree sought to be executed is passed by a competent court, the court will not be deemed to be incompetent to execute the decree merely because by reason of the amount of interest or mesne profits ascertained for a period subsequent to the institution of the suit, the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of such court are exceeded — A obtains a decree against B for Rs 4,000 and interest in a court of which the pecuniary jurisdiction is limited to Rs 5,000. A then applies to the court for execution. At the date of the application for execution, the total amount of the decree by reason of accumulation of interest exceeds Rs 5,000. The court has jurisdiction to execute the decree. All the courts are agreed on the point,[119] for, if the court had jurisdiction at the time of the institution of the suit, incidental causes such as the accumulation of profits or interest or a rise in price will not affect its jurisdiction.[120]

Rule V.—A court to which execution of a decree is transferred has no jurisdiction to order either the attachment or sale of immovable property in execution, if at the time of the order such court had no territorial jurisdiction over the property.[121]

[s 38.4] Powers of Executing Court: Court Executing a Decree Cannot go behind the Decree

A court executing a decree cannot go behind the decree. It must take the decree as it stands.[122] It cannot entertain any objection that the decree is incorrect in law or on facts. That is because until the decree is set aside by an appropriate proceeding in appeal or in revision, a decree, even if it is erroneous, is binding between the parties.[123] Hence, it is not open to an executing court to say that a part of the decree is violative of section 23 of the Bombay Money

---

117. Punjab National Bank v Chajju Rao, AIR 2000 SC 2671.
118. Krishan Kumar Pareek v State Bank of India, AIR 2009 Ori 100 : 2009 (107) Cut LT 362 (DB).
119. Bidyadhar v Munindra Nath, AIR 1925 Cal 1076 (FB) : (1925) ILR 53 Cal 14; overruling in effect Bhupendra v Puma, (1910) ILR 43 Cal 650; and Bai Kunta v Mohananda, (1919) 24 Cal WN 342; Sudarshan Das v Ram, (1911) ILR 33 All 97; Arogya v Appachi, (1902) ILR 25 Mad 543; Kannayya v Venkata, (1917) ILR 40 Mad 1; Sheikh Mohammad v Mahtab, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 394; Dinanath v Mayawati, AIR 1921 Pat 118 : (1921) 6 Pat LJ 54; Shamrav v Niloji, (1886) ILR 10 Bom 200; Rameshwar v Dilu, (1894) ILR 21 Cal 550; Panchuram v Kinoo, (1913) ILR 40 Cal 56.
120. See notes to section 6.
121. Vasireddi Srimanthu v Venkatappayya, AIR 1947 Mad 347 (FB) : (1948) ILR Mad 18; Veerappa v Ramasami, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 135; Khirod Chandra v Panchu, AIR 1939 Pat 532.
122. Bank of Bihar v Sarangdhai Singh, AIR 1949 PC 8 : 75 IA 300 : 51 Beng LR 936; Ramaswami v Kailasa, AIR 1951 SC 189 : (1951) SCR 292; Venkata Subba Rao v Venkataramanayya, AIR 1948 Mad 397; Ramphal v Ram Baran, (1883) ILR 5 All 53; Muttia v Virammal, (1887) ILR 10 Mad 283; Sheik Budan v Ramchandra, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 537; Venkatachala Reddi v Venkatarama Reddi, (1901) ILR 24 Mad 665; Mataur v Abdul, AIR 1926 Cal 109 : (1925) 30 Cal WN 86; Appa Rao v Krishna, (1902) ILR 25 Mad 537; Shankar v Rikhavdas, AIR 1932 Bom 843 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 941; Ganesh Das v Haridwar, AIR 1936 Lah 704 : (1936) 17 Lah 187; Krishnayya v Meghraj, AIR 1940 Bom 10 : (1939) 41 Bom LR 1170; Abdul Ahmad v Brij Narain, AIR 1935 All 269; Palai Central Bank v Ramasami Nadar, AIR 1959 Ker 194.
123. VD Modi v RA Rehman, AIR 1970 SC 1475 : (1970) 1 SCC 670 : (1971) SCR (1) 66.

Lenders Act, 1947 and therefore should not be executed.[124] Likewise, a judgment-debtor cannot object in execution proceedings that the decree passed in terms of an award was illegal since the award was not registered.[125] This rule holds good only between parties to the decree and their representatives.[126] It has no power to entertain any objection as to the validity of the decree[127] or that it was obtained by fraud[128] or as to the legality or correctness of the decree,[129] eg, an objection that the decree sought to be executed was passed against a wrong person,[130] or that it was passed against a lunatic or a minor not properly represented.[131] The reason is that a decree, though it may not be according to law, is binding and conclusive between the parties until it is set aside either in appeal or revision.[132] A decree against a Hindu Joint Family firm can be executed against all the persons who have been personally served though the suit arose out of a claim of misappropriation by the karta as immunity of the members from liability therefore was a question which should have been raised and determined in the suit.[133] For the same reason the court executing a decree cannot alter, vary or add to the terms of the decree,[134] even by consent of parties.[135] As to enforceability of a compromise entered in the course of execution proceedings.[136] Where a decree was passed against an unregistered firm in violation of section 69(2) of the Indian Partnership Act, 1932, the case is one of error in the exercise of jurisdiction and not want of it, and the decree cannot be treated as a nullity.[137] The grievance of the objectors to the execution of the decree of the subordinate judge as passed in appeal against dismissal of the title suit was that the interest of one minor plaintiff who attained majority during pendency of suit could not be represented by the holder of the power of attorney on behalf of all the plaintiffs. This point, though raised in the trial court, was not considered by it. The high court, in second appeal, did not enter into the question as it was one of fact. The executing court cannot go into it.[138] A decree passed in terms of an award before the period prescribed for filing an application to set it aside had expired, is not void and the objection is not one which could be taken in execution proceedings.[139] A decree however passed in a

---

124. Yusufbhai v Manilal, AIR 1965 Guj 282.
125. Chhutan Lal v PN Bank Ltd, AIR 1972 Raj 159; Moolchand v Maganlal, AIR 1965 MP 75.
126. M&SM Railway v Rupchand Jitagi, AIR 1950 Bom 155 : (1950) ILR Bom 185.
127. Jatru Paban v Ambikajit Prasad, AIR 1946 Pat 214 : (1945) ILR 24 Pat 741; Gomathan v Komandur, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 118; Rangasamy v Thirupati, (1905) ILR 28 Mad 26; Kumaretta v Sabapathy, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 26; Liladhar v Chaturbhuj, (1899) ILR 21 All 277.
128. Suddinadra v Budan, (1886) ILR 9 Mad 80; Dhani Ram v Luchmeswar, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 639.
129. Chhoti v Rameshwar, (1902) 6 Cal WN 796; Girish Chunder v Soshi Shikareshwar, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 951 : 27 IA 110; Jai Gobind v Patesri Partap, (1907) 1 All WN 286; Sheo Shanker v Sangram Singh, AIR 1938 All 259.
130. Kudratulla v Upendra, AIR 1925 Cal 203 : (1924) 40 Cal LJ 254.
131. Kalipada v Hari, (1917) ILR 44 Cal 627; Lahore Bank v Ghulam, AIR 1924 Lah 448 : (1924) 5 Lah 54; Kalicharan v Bibhuti, AIR 1933 Cal 85 : (1932) ILR 60 Cal 191; Umar v Mahabirlal, AIR 1940 Pat 59.
132. Papamma v Vira Pratapa, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 249 : 23 IA 32; Abdul Alam v Amirunnissa, AIR 1954 Hyd 219.
133. Sheonath v Balaswami, AIR 1959 Pat 484.
134. Udwani v Tokhan Singh, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 353 : 28 IA 57; Forester v Secretary of State, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 161 : 4 IA 137; Hurro v Surut, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 332 : 9 IA 1; Ishwargar v Chudasama, (1889) ILR 13 Bom 106; Subhana v Krishna, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 644; Ranmalsangji v Kundankwar, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 707; Dambar Singh v Kaliansingh, AIR 1922 All 27 : (1922) ILR 44 All 350; Chettyar v Narayanan, AIR 1934 Rang 165 : (1934) 12 Rang 320; Gaya Singh v Ram Piari, AIR 1955 All 622 in which a decree was amended by an execution court.
135. Kanhya Lal v Court of Wards, (1871) 16 WR 275; Debi Rai v Gokal Prasad, (1881) ILR 3 All 585; Re Chidambaram Chettiar, (1958) 1 Mad LJ 314.
136. See Md Hasan v Motilal, AIR 1961 All 1 (FB); see notes to section 47.
137. Kuldip v Sheo Mangal, AIR 1957 Pat 4.
138. Lichubala Biswas v Jindar Mondal, AIR 1990 Cal 151.
139. Madhav v Rajaram, AIR 1958 AP 417.

suit based on an award is a nullity in view of section 32 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (now replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996) and the execution court can refuse to execute it.[140] It is not open to the executing court to go into the validity of an order amending a decree which is sought to be executed.[141] Broadly speaking, the distinction is one between a plea that the decree sought to be executed is a nullity and a plea that it is invalid, improper or erroneous.[142] It has also generally been held that a court executing a decree has no power to entertain an objection that the court which passed the decree had no jurisdiction to pass it.[143] A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has held that when a decree is made by a court which "apparently" had no jurisdiction to make it, the executing court is entitled to refuse to execute it.[144] The word "apparently" means that the decree appears, on the face of it, to have been passed by a court which had no jurisdiction.[145] An executing court, therefore, cannot refuse to execute a decree where its illegality is not patent but has to be established after an investigation. Most often, such illegality would be one relating to jurisdiction.[146] Accordingly, when a court passed a decree in terms of an award under the Arbitration Act, 1899, the Calcutta High Court held that the court of execution was entitled to refuse to execute it; but as such awards are under section 15 of that Act, enforceable as decrees, the high court directed the application to be treated as an application to execute the award.[147]

A Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court has expressed emphatic dissent from the Calcutta decision and holds that it is against public policy and good sense that the validity of the decree should be questioned by the executing court.[148] This case has been followed in a later decision of the same high court;[149] but the point seems to be concluded by the pronouncement of the Privy Council in Jnanendra Mohan v Rabindra Nath,[150] that, if the court which passed the decree has no inherent jurisdiction, the decree is incapable of execution.

Dealing with this question, the Supreme Court observed in Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan,[151] that a decree passed by a court without jurisdiction was a nullity and that its invalidity could be set up whenever and wherever it was sought to be enforced or relied upon and even at the stage of its execution or even in collateral proceedings but where the defect in jurisdiction was of a kind which falls within the saving of section 21 of the Code of Civil Procedure or section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887, it could not be raised except in the manner and subject to the conditions mentioned therein. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has again considered

---

140. Kanhyalal v Ramchandra, AIR 1959 MP 415.
141. Md Jabir v Narayan Prasad, AIR 1960 Pat 126.
142. Har Kishan Das v Gulab Das, AIR 1956 Bom 513.
143. Gulam Mohamed v Fazul Nishan, AIR 1932 Lah 289 : (1932) 13 Lah 25; Krishnan Nair v Ramchandra, AIR 1956 Bom 268; Sheonath v Balasami, AIR 1959 Pat 484; CM Pillai v HS Kadhiri Thaikal, AIR 1974 Mad 199.
144. Krishna Chandra v Radha Kanta Saha Choudhury, AIR 1948 Cal 111; Gora Chand v Profulla, AIR 1925 Cal 906 : (1926) ILR 53 Cal 166; Baboo Ram v Ajmersingh, AIR 1966 HP 77.
145. Amalabala v Surat Kumari, AIR 1932 Cal 380 : (1932) 54 Cal LJ 593; Kali Charan v Bibhuti, AIR 1933 Cal 85 : (1932) ILR 60 Cal 191.
146. Bherusingh v Ramgopal, AIR 1972 MP 217; Ulhannan v Prudential Trust, AIR 1965 Ker 16.
147. Rabindra v Jnanendramohan, AIR 1932 Cal 9 : (1931) ILR 58 Cal 1018; affirmed by the privy council in, Jnanendra Moban v Rabindra Nath, AIR 1933 PC 61 : (1933) 60 IA 71 : 60 Cal 670.
148. Nathan v Samson, AIR 1931 Rang 252 (FB) : (1932) 9 Rang 480.
149. Bank of Chettinad v SPKPVR Chettyar Firm, AIR 1936 Rang 87 : (1936) 14 Rang 94.
150. Jnanendra Mohan v Rabindra Nath, AIR 1933 PC 61 : (1933) 60 IA 71; following in Ram Narain v Lala Suraj Narain, AIR 1934 Oudh 75 (FB) : (1934) ILR 9 Luck 435.
151. Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340 : (1955) 1 SCR 117 : (1954) SCJ 514; Dynand Mohan v Rabindranath, AIR 1933 PC 31 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 670; Hiralal v Kalinath, AIR 1962 SC 199, affirming, AIR 1955 All 569; Anand Rao v Kishen Das, AIR 1954 Hyd 190; Samikannu v Arumugam, (1955) 2 Mad LJ 16; Surinder Nath Kapoor v UOI, (1998) Supp SCC 626.

the question in UOI v Siddique Ahmed,[152] and it has held, reviewing its previous decisions, that no objection based on absence of territorial jurisdiction could be taken in execution, unless it was apparent on the face of the decree.

In Basant Singh v Trilokinath,[153] it has been held that when on the allegation in the plaint, the suit is beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court, a decree passed by it is a nullity and that the objection can be raised in execution.

In Subbamma v Subbamma,[154] it has been held by the Andhra High Court that a court has, under O XXIX, rule 12, no power to award mesne profits for more than three years and that a decree passed in contravention of the section is a nullity and that the objection could be taken in execution.

In a case in which an application was made to execute a final decree after the preliminary decree on which it rested, had been set aside on appeal, a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that as the final decree was superseded the court of execution had power to determine whether the decree was a valid and operative decree and to refuse to execute it if it was no longer operative.[155]

This was approved by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court.[156] CJ Rankin observed that this case had not been considered in the previous Full Bench case.[157]

But a decree passed against a person who was dead at the date of the decree without bringing his legal representative on the record is a nullity, and it cannot be executed against his estate.[158] A decree passed in a suit instituted against a ruling prince without the certificate required by section 86 of the CPC, is a nullity and the court executing the decree can entertain the objection.[159] The Registrar of Co-operative Societies acting under the rules is a court, his award is a decree, and a court which is called upon to execute it has no power to go behind it.[160] A decree passed in terms of an award by a court acting under the Bombay Rent Control Act is a nullity as the Act contains no provision for reference to arbitration and that is an objection which can be taken in execution.[161] A decree directing a sale of raiyati holding in contravention of sections 46 and 47 of Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, 1908, is void and the objection can be taken in execution proceedings but if the question had been raised in the suit and a finding given that the land is not raiyati, its correctness cannot be challenged in execution.[162] An objection that a decree in ejectment could not be executed by reason of the provision in House Rent Control Order is one which could be taken in execution proceedings as it is directed

---

152. UOI v Siddique Ahmed, AIR 1961 Cal 92; Benares Ice Factory v Shuklal, AIR 1961 Cal 422.
153. Basant Singh v Trilokinath, AIR 1960 P&H 610 : (1959) ILR Punj 1588.
154. Subbanna v Subbanna, AIR 1962 AP 500.
155. China Gounden v Kalyanasundaram, AIR 1947 Mad 126 : (1940) 2 Mad LJ 881; Ugra Narain v Basanta, (1919) 17 Cal WN 868.
156. Talebali v Abdul Aziz, AIR 1929 Cal 689 (FB) : (1927) ILR 57 Cal 1013.
157. Gora Chand v Prafulla, AIR 1925 Cal 906.
158. Jungli Lall v Laddu Ram, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 240; Rup Narain v Ramayee, (1878) 3 Cal LR 192; Narendra v Gopal, (1912) 17 Cal LJ 634; Imdad Ali v Jagan Lal, (1895) ILR 17 All 478; Radha Prasad v Lal Saheb, (1891) ILR 13 All 53 : 17 IA 150; Janardhan v Ramchandra, (1902) ILR 26 Bom 317; Vishwanath v Lallu, (1909) 11 Bom LR 1070; Subramania v Vaithinatha, (1913) ILR 38 Mad 682; Radha Kishen v Bihari Lal, AIR 1934 Lah 117; Ram Khelwan v Ramuddar, AIR 1939 Pat 534; Bariruddin v Saradindu 38 Cal WN 1124.
159. Bai Shakri v Bapu Singhji Takhat Singhji, AIR 1958 Bom 30.
160. Gopalji v Indore Premier Co-op Bank Ltd, AIR 1957 MB 56.
161. Sabavva v Basappa Andaneppa, (1955) ILR Bom 386 : 57 Bom LR 261.
162. Chintamani v Zahiruddin, AIR 1956 Pat 57.

not against the passing of the decree but against its execution.[163] Such an objection could be taken in execution even if the House Rent Control Order came into force after the institution of the suit in which the decree in ejectment was passed.[164] Where the execution of a decree in ejectment was resisted by the tenant on the ground that the title of the landlord to the lands had ceased as a result of the Madhya Pradesh Jagir Abolition Act, 1951, it was held that the objection was one which could be raised in execution.[165] A preliminary decree for partition cannot be executed.[166]

[s 38.5] Construction of Decree by Executing Court

If the decree is free from ambiguity, the court of execution is bound to execute it whether it be right or wrong.[167] But it cannot, under the guise of interpretation, make a new decree for the parties.[168] Altering the terms of the decree must be clearly understood in contrast of construing a decree or interpreting a decree or giving clarity to its terms and conditions. In the garb of the latter, the court cannot create a new decree which is neither intended nor passed by the court of competent jurisdiction. Executing court can provide clarity, interpret or construe the decree, by keeping the decree as passed by the court of the competent jurisdiction intact and undisturbed. While exercising its jurisdiction, if the executing court, in the guise of these ingredients, materially alters the terms and conditions of the decree, to the prejudice of any of the parties to the decree, which ought to have, if at all, fallen in the domain of courts of competent jurisdiction, i.e., appellate or the court that passed the decree, certainly the executing court would outgress its jurisdiction as an executing court. Permitting an executing court to alter the terms of the decree would be opposed to all settled canons of civil jurisprudence. A decree which has been passed and has not been assailed in the regular appeals which were available to the parties against whom the decree was passed, such party cannot be permitted to abuse the process of law before the executing court to alter the decree, which has attained finality in all aspects.[169] But though a court executing a decree cannot go behind the decree, it is quite competent to construe the decree where the terms of the decree are ambiguous, and to ascertain its precise meaning, for, unless this is done, the decree cannot be executed.[170] There is no question in such a case of the executing court going behind the decree. If, on examination of the nature and contents of the decree, the court finds that it is a purely declaratory decree, it must refuse to execute it.[171] If the decree creates a charge on property in which the judgment-debtor had a widow's estate, the executing court has jurisdiction to inquire if the charge continued after the widow's death and if it could be enforced against the property in the hands of her legal representative.[172] The construction of a decree must be

---

163. Patanker v Sastri, AIR 1961 SC 272 : (1961) 1 SCR 591 : (1961) 1 SCJ 221; affirming, (1954) ILR Mys 440.
164. K Punnen v P Kurup, AIR 1956 Tr & Coch 1.
165. Narsing v Rao Nihalkaran, AIR 1962 MP 318.
166. Vishwasrao v Ushapai, AIR 1988 Bom 393. As to whether a decree passed by a court which has irregularly assumed jurisdiction can be executed, see section 21: "Section 21 and Execution Proceedings". As to the powers of a court to which a decree is transferred for execution, see notes to section 42 and O XXI, rule 7.
167. Pirbhu v Rup Singh, (1898) ILR 20 All 397; Udwant v Tokhan Singh, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 353 : 28 IA 57.
168. Ramasami v Kailasa, AIR 1951 SC 189 : (1951) SCR 292 : (1951) SCJ 78.
169. Gurde v Singh v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1988 P&H 106.
170. Satrughna v Sridhari, AIR 1966 Ori 203 : (1966) Ori LR 368.
171. Thapar v Sudhir, AIR 1966 J&K 13.
172. Radhamoni v Gobind Chandra, AIR 1942 Pat 196; Meenambal v Aburubammal, AIR 1930 Mad 688 : (1930) ILR 53 Mad 750.

governed by the pleadings and the judgment.[173] And the court should, if possible, put such a construction upon the decree as would make it in accordance with law.[174] When a particular construction has been put upon a decree in a former execution proceeding, it is not open to the court in a subsequent application to treat that construction as erroneous.[175]

[s 38.6] Distinction Between Section 38 and Section 63

Section 38 is a general section dealing with execution. It contemplates only one decree-holder applying to execute only one decree. Section 63 applies when there are more decree-holders than one, but the same property has been attached by more courts than one. Section 63 cannot be controlled by this section. Hence, where acting under section 63, the decree of the court of lower grade is called up by the court of higher grade, the latter court has jurisdiction to sell the property attached in execution of that decree.[176]

By virtue of Uttar Pradesh Civil Laws Amendment Act, 1972, the decree could not have been set aside or invalidated and the only consequence which would ensue is that the decree would be lying dormant and could not be executed. Once the bar placed by the 1972 Act is removed, by virtue of the doctrine of eclipse, the decree will revive and become at once operative and executed.[177]

[s 38.7] Sections 38 and 39(4) — Harmonious Reading

In view of the aforesaid insertion of sub-section (4), it has been made clear, removing all doubts that the court which has passed a decree, is not authorised to execute the decree against any person or property outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. Therefore, the doubts which might or could have arisen on the question of jurisdiction of an executing court, have been removed. In a harmonious reading of both the sections 38 and 39(4), it appears that the court which has passed a decree cannot have any jurisdiction to proceed with the execution of a decree when circumstances and conditions mentioned in section 39 exist.[178]

[s 38.8] Execution of Arbitration Award

It may be noted that if one juxtaposes the expression "court" occurring in section 36 with section 2(e) of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, it would mean that the award shall be enforced in the same manner as if it were a decree made by a court having jurisdiction to decide questions forming the subject-matter of the arbitration if the same had been the subject-matter of the suit. If that be so, the inquiry would be which is the court having jurisdiction to decide the question forming the subject-matter of the arbitration, if the same had been the 173. Radhamoni v Gobind Chandra, AIR 1942 Pat 196; Seth Manakchand v Chaube Manoharlal, 71 IA 65 : (1944) ILR Nag 597 : 48 Cal WN 435; Ram Kirpal v Rup Kuari, (1884) ILR 6 All 269 : 11 IA 37; Kali Krishna v Secretary of State, (1889) ILR 16 Cal 173 : 15 IA 186; Jagatji v Sarabjit, (1892) ILR 19 Cal 159 : 18 IA 165; Lachmi v Jwala, (1896) ILR 18 All 344; Shivlal v Jumaklal, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 542; Topan Mal v Kundomal Gangaram, AIR 1960 SC 388; affirming, AIR 1953 All 710; Ratanmala v Gopal Lal, AIR 1955 Cal 14; Bhagwati Prasad v Babulal, AIR 1957 Pat 8; Gouri Kumari v Krishna Pasad 36 Pat 323 : AIR 1957 Pat 575; Raman v Narayanan, AIR 1957 Ker 31.

---

174. Amolak v Lachmi, (1897) ILR 19 All 174; Bakar v Udit Narain, (1899) ILR 21 All 361; Radha Kishan v Collector of Jaunpur, (1901) ILR 23 All 220 : 28 IA 28.
175. See note to section 11, "Orders in Execution Proceedings".
176. Pabbati Venkata v Doredla Venkataratnam & Sons, AIR 1939 Mad 169 : (1939) ILR Mad 248.
177. Dularey Lodh v Third Addl District Judge, Kanpur, (1984) 3 SCC 99.
178. Uma Kanoria v Pradip Kumar Daga, AIR 2003 Cal 162.

subject-matter of a suit. Then, that court which has the jurisdiction to decide the subject-matter of the arbitration would have jurisdiction to levy execution. That takes us to the CPC.

On a combined reading of sections 38 and 20 of the CPC, it can be seen that the court which can entertain a suit with respect to the subject-matter of arbitration dispute alone can exercise the power under section 36 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 as well.[179]

[S 39] Transfer of decree.—(1) The Court which passed a decree may, on the application of the decree-holder, send it for execution to another court [180][of competent jurisdiction],—

(a) if the person against whom the decree is passed actually and voluntarily resides or carries on business, or personally works for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such other Court, or

(b) if such person has no property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree sufficient to satisfy such decree and has property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such other Court, or

(c) if the decree directs the sale or delivery of immovable property situate outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it, or

(d) if the Court which passed the decree considers for any other reason, which it shall record in writing, that the decree should be executed by such other Court.

(2) The Court which passed a decree may of its own motion send it for execution to any subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction.

[181][(3) For the purposes of this section, a Court shall be deemed to be a Court of competent jurisdiction if, at the time of making the application for the transfer of decree to it, such Court would have jurisdiction to try the suit in which such decree was passed.]

[182][(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise the Court which passed a decree to execute such decree against any person or property outside the local limits of its jurisdiction.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 39.1]	State Amendment	693	[s 39.6]	Court Which Passed a Decree	696
[s 39.2]	Alterations in the Section	693	[s 39.7]	Decree on the Original Side	697
[s 39.3]	Sections 38 and 39(4) — Harmonious Reading	694	[s 39.8]	Decree Passed — Not by a Civil Court	697
[s 39.4]	Sections 39(4) and O XXI, Rule 3 and O XXI, Rule 48	694	[s 39.9]	Another Court	697
[s 39.5]	Sub-section (1) and (2) — Relative Scope — Power of Transfer Under Sub-section (2) is independent of Sub-section (1)	696	[s 39.10]	Applications for Transfer of a Decree	698
			[s 39.11]	Entire Decree Should be Transferred	698
			[s 39.12]	Jurisdiction of the Transferee Court	698

179. ICDS Ltd v Mangala Builders Pvt Ltd, AIR 2001 Kant 364.
180. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 18 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
181. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 18 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
182. Inserted by Act 22 of 2002, section 2 (w.e.f. 1-7-2002).

[s 39.13] Transfer of Decree for Execution..... 699
[s 39.14] Initiation of Proceedings on Transfer of Decree 700
[s 39.15] Clause (A): Residence of Judgment-debtor Outside the Jurisdiction..... 700
[s 39.16] Clause (B): Property of Judgment-debtor Outside the Jurisdiction..... 700
[s 39.17] Clause (C): Decree for sale or possession outside the Jurisdiction 700
[s 39.18] Clause (D): Court Considering that Execution Should be in Another Court.....701
[s 39.19] Sub-clause (2) 701
[s 39.20] Simultaneous Execution of Decree in more Places than One..... 702
[s 39.21] Appeal 702
[s 39.22] Award 702
[s 39.23] Transfer of Decree by Small Cause Court 702

[s 39.1] State Amendment

Uttar Pradesh.—The following amendments were made by Uttar Pradesh Act No. 31 of 1978, section 2 (w.e.f. 1-8-1978).

In its application to the State of Uttar Pradesh, sub-section (3) substituted as under:—

"(3) For the purpose of this section a Court shall be deemed to be a Court of competent jurisdiction if the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit wherein the decree was passed does not exceed the pecuniary limits, if any, of its ordinary jurisdiction at the time of making the application for the transfer of decree to it, notwithstanding that it had otherwise no jurisdiction to try the suit."

[s 39.2] Alterations in the Section

The words "of competent jurisdiction" in sub-section 2 were inserted by the CPC. The same words are added in sub-section 1 by the Amendment Act, 1976. The new sub-section 3 added by the Amendment Act, 1976, clarifies, in view of a conflict in judicial opinion, as to whether the transferee court must be one of competent pecuniary jurisdiction and if so, at what stage such competence should be judged. See notes on jurisdiction of court executing a decree—rule 3 under section 38. The new sub-section provides that it would be court of competent pecuniary jurisdiction if it has jurisdiction to try the suit in which the transferred decree is passed at the time when the application for transfer to it is made.

The new sub-section (4) has been inserted in the section by the latest amendment by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002 effective from 1-7-2002 to specify that the court which passed decree cannot execute the decree against any person or property outside the local limits of its jurisdiction.

The court explicated that even before amendment to section 39, the Apex Court in the landmark case of Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan,[183] held that defect of jurisdiction whether pecuniary or territorial strikes at the very authority of the court and decree passed by the court which does not enjoy jurisdiction would become irrelevant and unenforceable. Further, court said that the Apex Court in the case of Mohit Bhargava v Bharat Bhushan Bhargava,[184] has reiterated that as per section 39(4) of CPC, the executing court has no discretion and the decree ought to be transferred to the court having jurisdiction over the property.[185]

---

183. Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340 : 1955 SCR 117 : (1954) 2 Mad LJ 60.
184. Mohit Bhargava v Bharat Bhushan Bhargava, AIR 2007 SC 1717 : (2007) 4 SCC 795 : (2007) 5 SCR 397.
185. K Gayathri Mallya v The Manager, The Urban Co-op Bank Ltd, 2020 (3) Kar LJ 685.

Section 39 clearly states that a decree be executed by another court of competent jurisdiction:

(i) if the person against whom the decree is passed actually and voluntarily resides or carries on business, or personally works for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such other court, or

(ii) if such person has no property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court which passed the decree sufficient to satisfy such decree and has property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such other court, or

(iii) if the decree directs the sale or delivery of immovable property situated outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court which passed it, or

(iv) if the court which passed the decree considers for any other reason, which it shall record in writing, that the decree should be executed by such other court.

The court may on an application of the decree-holder under sub-section (1) of section 39 and on its own motion under sub-section (2) of section 39 transfer the decree for execution to courts of competent jurisdiction.

The Rajasthan High Court[186] has held that section 39 is an enabling provision, and the word "may" in the sub-section is not to be construed as "must" or "shall". Similarly, the Punjab,[187] Patna,[188] Mysore[189] and Rajasthan[190] High Courts have held that by transferring the decree to another court for execution, the court which passed the decree does not lose jurisdiction to pass appropriate orders. The insertion of sub-section (4) in section 39 is aimed at nullifying the effect of the above stated judgments passed by various high courts.

The situation emerging is that courts, which passed the decree, cannot execute the decree passed against any person or property outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. The decree must be transferred to the courts of competent jurisdiction.

[s 39.3] Sections 38 and 39(4) — Harmonious Reading

In view of the aforesaid insertion of sub-section (4), it has been made clear removing all doubts that the court, which has passed a decree, is not authorised to execute the decree against any person or property outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. Therefore, the doubts, which might or could have arisen on the question of jurisdiction of an executing court, have been removed. In harmonious reading of both, the two sections 38 and 39(4), it appears that the court which has passed a decree cannot have any jurisdiction to proceed with the execution of a decree when the circumstances and conditions mentioned in section 39 exist.[191]

[s 39.4] Sections 39(4) and O XXI, Rule 3 and O XXI, Rule 48

Section 39 does not authorise the court to execute the decree outside its jurisdiction but it does not dilute the other provisions giving such power on compliance of conditions stipulated in those provisions. Thus, the provisions, such as, O XXI, rule 3 or O XXI, rule 48 which provide differently, would not be affected by section 39(4) of the CPC.[192]

---

186. Tara Chand v Misrimal, AIR 1970 Raj 53.
187. Punjab Co-op Bank v Bikram Lal, AIR 1959 P&H 71.
188. Darshan Singh v Baldeo Das, AIR 1946 Pat 365.
189. Sundra Rao v Appaiah Naidu AIR 1954 Mys 1.
190. Laxmi Narain v Firm Ram Kumar AIR 1971 Raj 30.
191. ICDS Ltd v Mangala Builders Pvt Ltd, AIR 2001 Kant 364.
192. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344.

YK Sabharwal J, (as he then was), speaking for the three-judge Bench of the Supreme Court observed as follows in the above judgment:

> 23. Section 39(1) of the Code provides that the Court which passed a decree may, on the application of the decree-holder send it for execution to another court of competent jurisdiction. By Act 22 of 2002, Section 39(4) has been inserted providing that nothing in the section shall be deemed to authorise the Court which passed a decree to execute such decree against any person or property outside the local limits of its jurisdiction. The question is whether this newly added provision prohibits the executing court from executing a decree against a person or property outside its jurisdiction and whether this provision overrides Order XXI Rule 3 and Order XXI Rule 48 or whether these provisions continue to be an exception to Section 39(4) as was the legal position before the amendment.
>
> 24. Order XXI Rule 3 provides that where immovable property forms one estate or tenure situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of two or more courts, any one of such courts may attach and sell the entire estate or tenure. Likewise, under Order XXI Rule 48, attachment of salary of a Government servant, Railway servant or servant of local authority can be made by the Court whether the judgment-debtor or the disbursing officer is not within the local limits of the court's jurisdiction.[193]

After noticing its earlier decision in the Salem Advocate Bar Association case (supra), the Supreme Court clarified the matter and held that in case of a decree for sale of property outside the jurisdiction of the court passing the decree, the same has to be transferred to a court having jurisdiction over the property for execution.[194] PK Balasubramanyan J, speaking for the Bench, observed as follows:

> A decree could be executed by the court which passed the decree so long as it is confined to the assets within its own jurisdiction or as authorised by Order XXI Rule 3 or Order 21 Rule 48 of the Code or the judgment-debtor is within its jurisdiction, if it is a decree for personal obedience by the judgment-debtor. But when the property sought to be proceeded against, is outside the jurisdiction of the court which passed the decree acting as the executing court, there was a conflict of views earlier, some courts taking the view that the court which passed the decree and which is approached for execution cannot proceed with execution but could only transmit the decree to the court having jurisdiction over the property and some other courts taking the view that it is a matter of discretion for the executing court and it could either proceed with the execution or send the decree for execution to another court. But this conflict was set at rest by Amendment Act 22 of 2002 with effect from 1.7.2002, by adopting the position that if the execution is sought to be proceeded against any person or property outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the executing court, nothing in Section 39 of the Code shall be deemed to authorise the court to proceed with the execution. In the light of this, it may not be possible to accept the contention that it is a matter of discretion for the court either to proceed with the execution of the decree or to transfer it for execution to the court within the jurisdiction of which the property is situate.[195]

Declining to interfere with the judgment of the high court which refused to set aside the orders passed against the judgment-debtor, the Supreme Court further observed in the above case that the orders of restraint issued to a third person from handing over property in his possession to judgment-debtor along with concerned documents were in the nature of a "freezing order" or a "Mareva injunction" and an order akin to an Anton Piller order, orders that can be issued even if the property or the person concerned is outside the jurisdiction of the court.[196]

---

193. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353, p 3361 : (2005) 6 SCC 344.
194. Mohit Bargava v Bharat Bhushan Bhargava, AIR 2007 SC 1717 : (2007) 4 SCC 795.
195. Mohit Bhargava v Bharat Bhushan Bhargava, AIR 2007 SC 1717, p 1719–1720 : (2007) 4 SCC 795.
196. Mohit Bargava v Bharat Bhushan Bhargava, AIR 2007 SC 1717 : (2007) 4 SCC 795, para 9.

[s 39.5] Sub-section (1) and (2) — Relative Scope — Power of Transfer Under Sub-section (2) is independent of Sub-section (1)

The question is whether sub-section (2) of section 39, CPC, providing for suo motu transfer is an independent one or is circumscribed by the contingencies as set out in sub-clauses(a) to (d) of sub-section (1) of section 39. The language of sub-section (2) does not contemplate any such fetter. While sub-section (1) deals with transfer to another competent court having jurisdiction or assets being located within its jurisdiction, sub-section (2) empowers the court passing the decree of its own motion to transfer it for execution to any subordinate court of competent jurisdiction. Sub-section (2) confers a suo motu power to assign a decree for execution of its own motion to any subordinate court. The exercise of the power under sub-section (2) of section 39, CPC, to send the decree for execution to a subordinate court, can be exercised without meeting the requirements of sub-clauses(a) to (d) under sub-section (1) of section 39 of the CPC. The expression used in sub-section (2) of section 39, CPC, is "to any subordinate Court for execution" in contradistinction to "another Court of competent jurisdiction", as used in sub-section (1) of section 39 of the CPC. The power under sub-section (2) of section 39 can be exercised for administrative reasons to ensure expedition in execution of the decree, etc. In case of Delhi, for instance, the Civil Nazarat is located at the district courts. The warrants for possession and warrants for sale or attachment of properties, etc, are executed through the administrative civil judge. In such circumstances, if the court may find that the decree can be conveniently and expeditiously executed by the district court, it may in the exercise of powers under sub-section (2) of section 39 of the CPC, send the decree for execution to the district courts. Accordingly, it can be said that the exercise of the powers to transfer under sub-section (2) of section 39, CPC, can be exercised independently of the powers under sub-section (1) of section 39 of the CPC.[197]

[s 39.6] Court Which Passed a Decree

See notes to section 37 under the same head above.

Where as section 39(1) deals with transfer of a decree on an application made therefore by a decree-holder, sub-section 2 deals with transfer of a decree suo motu by the court which passed the decree but only to a court subordinate to it.[198] The section is an enabling provision and the word "may" in both the sub-sections is not to be construed as "must" or "shall".[199] If a decree is transferred to another court, such transfer takes effect from the date of the order of transfer.[200]

By transferring the decree to another court for execution, the court which passed the decree does not lose jurisdiction to pass orders till the certificate is received from the transferee court under section 41.[201] It retains its jurisdiction to pass appropriate orders.[202] It does not lose its power to pass orders under this section by reason of the fact that the properties had been transferred to the jurisdiction of another court.[203] The court could

---

197. Pearay Lal & Sons Pvt Ltd v Jamuna Properties Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Del 126.
198. Chandravathi v Payapatillath, AIR 1966 Ker 318 : (1966) ILR 2 Ker 74.
199. Tarachand v Misrimal, AIR 1970 Raj 53 : (1969) ILR 19 Raj 412.
200. State of Rajasthan v R Savkasha, AIR 1972 Guj 179.
201. Darsan Singh v Baldeo Das, AIR 1946 Pat 365 : (1946) ILR 25 Pat 145; Punjab Co-op Bank v Bikram Lal, AIR 1959 Punj 71.
202. Radhe Shyam v Devendra, AIR 1952 Pat 213 : ILR 31 Pat 56; Sundara Rao v Appaiah Naidu, AIR 1954 Mys 1 : (1954) ILR Mys 193; Laxmi Narain v Firm Ram Kumar, AIR 1971 Raj 30.
203. Lalithamba v Mangamma, AIR 1958 AP 763 : (1958) 2 Andh WR 511.

also pass orders for simultaneous execution.[204] The powers conferred by this section and section 44A are independent and alternative and it is accordingly open to the decree-holder to pursue either, at his choice.[205] An order of transfer under this section can be made only by the court which passed a decree and it was accordingly held that where a decree was passed by the court of the district judge, Gwalior, on 18 November 1948, when it was governed by the Madhya Bharat Code and subsequently the CPC was extended to it, it ceased to be the same court within this section and consequently an order of transfer of execution made by it was ultra vires the section and the transferee court acquired no power to execute the decree.[206] The transferee court has no authority to transfer the execution proceedings to another court as that could be done only by the court which passed the decree.[207]

[s 39.7] Decree on the Original Side

A Special Bench of the High Court of Bombay has held that the high court has jurisdiction, in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction, to execute a decree passed on its original side anywhere within the Presidency of Bombay.[208]

The Calcutta High Court has held that the court which passed a decree can appoint a receiver over the property situated outside the territorial jurisdiction. It was held that the said practice or procedure is adopted in view of rule 3 of the Original Side Rules, which cannot be curtailed by section 39(4) of the CPC. The said practice and procedure followed by the high court for a long time also partakes the character of law by virtue of rule 3 Chapter XL of the Original Side Rules.[209]

[s 39.8] Decree Passed — Not by a Civil Court

An order passed by the Debt Relief Court under the Central Provinces and Berar Indebtedness Act, 1939, cannot be transferred to a civil court for execution.[210]

[s 39.9] Another Court

The court to which the decree is sent for execution must be a court in India.[211] Decrees cannot be sent to courts outside India except in the case for which section 45 makes special provision.[212] It was accordingly held by the Supreme Court that an order of transfer made on 28 August 1950 by the subordinate judge of Bankura to the court of the district judge, Morena, in Gwalior State, fell outside the section as the transferee court was not, on that day, governed by the CPC.[213] Such court must be of competent jurisdiction, i.e., it must be a court which, at the time of making the application for the transfer of the decree, would have jurisdiction to try the suit wherein the decree was passed.

---

204. Venkatarami Reddi v Rami Reddi, (1951) ILR Mad 375 : (1950) 1 Mad LJ 787; Ram Kumar v Hazari Lal, AIR 1961 Raj 157 : (1960) ILR Raj 1624.
205. Lakhpat Rai v Atma Singh, AIR 1962 P&H 228 : (1961) ILR Punj 166.
206. Moloji Narsing v Sankar Saran, AIR 1962 SC 1737; affirming, AIR 1958 All 775.
207. Nandram v Gopal Das, AIR 1956 MB 255.
208. Chimnabai v Kasturbhai, AIR 1934 Bom 225 : (1934) ILR 58 Bom 729.
209. Birla Corporation Ltd v Prasad Trading Co, AIR 2007 Cal 38.
210. Ramgopal Raghunath v Ramchandra Krishnarao, AIR 1949 Ngp 359 : (1949) ILR Nag 187.
211. Chinnaswami v Annamalai, AIR 1941 Mad 309 : (1941) ILR Mad 574; Kasturchand v Parsha, (1887) ILR 12 Bom 230.
212. Ratan v Khatoo, (1902) ILR 29 Cal 400; Pierce Leslie v Perumal, (1917) ILR 40 Mad 1069.
213. Firm Hansraj v Firm Lalji Raja & Sons, AIR 1963 SC 1180.

[s 39.10] Applications for Transfer of a Decree

An application for a transfer of a decree under this section need not be in any particular form. It is enough if it gives sufficient particulars of the decree to be transferred.[214] Where, on the application of the decree-holder, the court which passed the decree granted leave to the transferee court to sell property and that order was communicated to that court, it was held by the Supreme Court that there was in substance, a transfer of the decree under this sub-section.[215] An objection raised by a judgment-debtor opposing the transfer of a decree for execution, is an objection relating to the execution of the decree and the order passed on such objection is an order falling under section 47 of CPC.[216] An objection that the order of transfer was ex parte can be raised by the judgment-debtor and if the objection is overruled, the order will fall under section 47.[217] Ordinarily, an order transferring a decree under this section is merely a ministerial order.[218] Such an order can be passed ex parte without notice to the judgment-debtor[219] and where the application is only for transfer of the decree, it can be ordered even without notice to the judgment-debtor under O XXI, rule 22.[220] Where the transferee court has jurisdiction inherently, absence of a formal order for transfer is a mere irregularity.[221]

In a case for execution of a decree for payment of money, where preliminary objection was raised with regard to the territorial jurisdiction of the court in receiving the execution application, it was held that the question of transferring the execution proceeding would arise only upon the examination of judgement-debtor in court on the question as to whether he holds any property within the territorial jurisdiction and as to whether he has any other debts within the territorial jurisdiction of the court.[222]

The provisions for filing an application for execution begins from rule 10 of O XXI. The provisions of rule 5 and 6 of the said Order precede rule 10. Therefore, order of transfer of an execution to some other court can be made even before reaching the stage of rule 10, i.e., before the application for execution of the decree is filed.[223]

[s 39.11] Entire Decree Should be Transferred

The High Court of Calcutta has held that the entire decree, and not a part of it, should be sent for execution to another court.[224]

[s 39.12] Jurisdiction of the Transferee Court

The court to whose jurisdiction the subject matter of the decree is transferred, acquires inherent jurisdiction over the same by reason of such transfer, and if it entertains an execution

---

214. Sheikh Hafeez Uddin v Ram Chunder Das, AIR 1937 All 397.
215. Mohanlal v Benoy Krishna, AIR 1953 SC 65 : (1953) SCR 377 : (1953) SCJ 130.
216. Manmatha Pal v Sarada Prosad, AIR 1939 Cal 651.
217. Firm Ganeshdas Badrinarayan v Amuluk Chand, AIR 1940 Cal 161; Saralabala v Shyam Prosad, AIR 1953 Cal 765.
218. Banares Bank Ltd v Jyoti Bhusan Gupta, AIR 1951 All 362; Devi Das v Mohamed, AIR 1935 Lah 508 : (1935) 17 Lah 13; but see Manmatha Pal v Sarada Prosad, AIR 1939 Cal 651.
219. Nehar Gang v Anath Nath, AIR 1956 Pat 269.
220. Re Mahalakshmamma, (1956) Andh LT 997.
221. Venkamamidi v Nannapaneni, AIR 1943 Mad 449 : (1943) ILR Mad 804.
222. DVM Construction v Sree Infrastructure Finance Ltd, AIR 2009 Cal 227 (DB).
223. Raj Kumar and Brothers v Hindustan Steel Works Construction Ltd, AIR 2007 Jhar 7 : (2006) 4 JLJR 379.
224. Kusum Kamini v Sattesh Chandra, AIR 1935 Cal 118.

application with reference thereto, it would, at worst, be an irregular assumption of jurisdiction and not a total absence of it, and if objection to it is not taken at the earliest opportunity, it must be deemed to have been waived, and cannot be raised at any later stage of the proceedings.[225]

The transferee court gets jurisdiction to execute a decree only when there is an order of transfer by the court which passed the decree. Therefore, an execution application to a transferee court presented before an order of transfer is made, is incompetent.[226] But if an execution application is presented before a transfer order is passed and is continued after such an order is passed, the proceedings are not invalid, as the presentation of a fresh application after the date of the transfer order would cure the formal defect.[227] An application presented after an order of transfer is made but before the copy of the decree and the certificate as required by O XXI, rule 6 is sent, is valid.[228]

[s 39.13] Transfer of Decree for Execution

A decree passed by one court may be sent for execution to another court, either on the application of the decree-holder on one of the grounds stated in this section, or by the court which passed it of its own motion. When a decree is sent by the court which passed it for execution to another court, the court sending the decree must send a copy of the decree and other documents mentioned in O XXI, rule 6, to the court by which the decree is to be executed. The latter court must, on receiving the copy of the decree and the other documents, cause the same to be filed (O XXI, rule 7). A mere application to transfer a decree is not an application for execution;[229] and this is particularly so in chartered high courts where decrees are transferred by ministerial order.[230] The decree-holder who has applied for execution to the court which passed the decree need not make a fresh application to the transferee court.[231] When he has not applied to the court which passed the decree, he must apply to the transferee court for execution (O XXI, rule 10). The court executing a decree sent to it for execution has the same powers in executing such decree as if it had been passed by itself (section 42).

Where one of the judgment-debtors does not reside voluntarily or works for gain or carries on business or has property within the jurisdiction of the court which passed the decree, it was held by the Kerala High Court that decree against the said judgment-debtor can be transferred to a court of competent jurisdiction while retaining the decree to be executed against other judgment-debtors. The transferee court can execute the decree only against that judgment-debtor and not against other judgment-debtors.[232]

---

225. Ramagonda Malagonda Patil v Bhajarang Tukaram Bhojane, AIR 2003 Kant 154.
226. Govind v Sadashiv, AIR 1955 Bom 93.
227. Arunachala v Lingayya, AIR 1953 Mad 171 : (1952) 2 Mad LJ 347 : 65 LW 729 : 1952 Mad WN 817; Theagaraya v Sambasiva, AIR 1934 Mad 283 : 57 Mad 795 : 66 Mad LJ 492 : 39 LW 488 : 1934 Mad WN 90.
228. Mohan Lal v Benoy Krishna, supra; Ademma v Venkatasubbiah, AIR 1933 Mad 627 : 65 Mad LJ 137 : 38 LW 208 : 1933 MWN 577; dissenting from Nanjundappa v Nallakaruppan 55 Mad LJ 120; Venkataratnam v Chenniah, AIR 1940 Mad 214 : 50 LW 764. See notes to section 38 under the head: "Jurisdiction of Court Executing the Decree".
229. Khetpal v Tikam Singh, (1912) ILR 34 All 396.
230. Banku Behary v Narain Das, AIR 1927 PC 73 : 54 IA 129 : ILR 54 Cal 500; Chutterput Singh v Sait Sumari, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 903.
231. KB Dutt v Taraprasanna, AIR 1924 Pat 120 : (1923) ILR 2 Pat 909.
232. PN Sree Kumaran Nair v Dhanalakshmy Bank, AIR 2009 Ker 26 : (2008) 3 Ker LT 52 : (2008) 4 Civil Court C 449.

Provisions of CPC relating to execution apply to orders passed by the family court. Thus, where the judgment-debtor was not residing within the territorial limits of jurisdiction of the Family Court at Secunderabad and his place or residence was shown as Adilabad, it was held by the Andhra Pradesh High Court that the family court at Secunderabad should not have entertained the application for the arrest of judgment-debtor and should have transmitted the decree to a competent court in Adilabad district to execute the decree.[233]

[s 39.14] Initiation of Proceedings on Transfer of Decree

Where a decree is transferred for execution to another court, it is the application for execution to that court, which initiates the proceedings in execution. The receipt of the decree is a ministerial act. A decree passed by a sub-judge in Madras Presidency was transferred to a court in Burma. The papers in the proceeding were received in due course. The application for execution was made after the separation of Burma from British India. It was held that the decree of the Madras court became a foreign decree, and the Burma court had no jurisdiction to execute it, no reciprocation in respect of execution having been made.[234]

[s 39.15] Clause (A): Residence of Judgment-debtor Outside the Jurisdiction

This clause provides for transfer of the decree if the judgment-debtor is resident in the jurisdiction of another court. The power of the court, under this clause, to transfer a decree is not confined to the case where execution is sought against the person of the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder is not bound to state, in the application for transfer, the mode in which the decree is to be executed. If he satisfies the court that the judgment-debtor resides in the jurisdiction of another court, he may ask for transferring the decree to that court without stating anything more in his application.[235] If the judgment-debtor's garnishee is resident in another jurisdiction, the decree must be transferred there to serve a prohibitory order upon him.[236] Where a decree passed against three judgment-debtors was transferred to another court for execution as against two of them, the transferee court was held to have no jurisdiction to entertain an execution application against the third judgment-debtor.[237]

[s 39.16] Clause (B): Property of Judgment-debtor Outside the Jurisdiction

If the judgment-debtor's property is out of jurisdiction, the court which passed the decree cannot attach it, but must transfer the decree to the court within whose local limits, the property may be.[238]

[s 39.17] Clause (C): Decree for sale or possession outside the Jurisdiction

As stated in rule 1 under section 38, territorial jurisdiction is a condition precedent to a court excepting a decree. If the decree directs the sale of immovable property within the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of another court, it must be sent to that court for execution.

---

233. K Srinivas Rao v K Renuka Bai, 2007 (1) Andh LD 691 : 2007 (2) Andh LT 659.
234. Muthukarappan v Sellami, AIR 1938 Rang 385 : (1938) ILR Rang 355.
235. SA Ramanathan Chettiar v MP Kasi Chettiar, AIR 1944 Mad 73; Dwarka Nath v Imperial Bank of India, AIR 1929 Cal 529 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 1176.
236. Begg Dunlop & Co v Jagannath, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 104.
237. Ayodhya Bai v Govind Trading Co, AIR 1956 Ajm 39.
238. Bank of Bengal v Sarat, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 141; Hari Das v National Insurance Co, AIR 1932 Cal 213 : (1932) ILR 59 Cal 199.

There is an exception to this in the case of a decree for the enforcement of a mortgage; see exception 1 to rule 1 under section 38 above. As to such decrees, the court may either execute the decree itself or send it for execution to the court having local jurisdiction.[239]

[s 39.18] Clause (D): Court Considering that Execution Should be in Another Court

In a Bombay case, the court had expressed a doubt whether clause (d) of this section enables a subordinate judge to transfer a decree for execution to a small cause court, where the property attached was within the local jurisdiction of the subordinate judge.[240] An order for transfer is necessary even when the same judge holds office, both as a judge of the small cause court and as a judge on the original side and the same can be made by the judge either on the application of the party or otherwise.[241] Such an order of transfer could be implied when he orders execution against immovable property.[242] Under section 39(1), the decree-holder has no indefeasible right to get his application for transfer of the decree to another court ipso facto allowed, particularly when the case is outside section 39, clauses (a), (b) and (c).[243]

A transfer order under section 39(1)(d) should be proved. In the absence of such proof, it cannot be presumed that the transferee court has jurisdiction.[244]

[s 39.19] Sub-clause (2)

The exercise of the power under sub-section (2) of section 39, CPC, to send the decree for execution to a subordinate court can be exercised without meeting the requirements of sub-clauses(a) to (d) under sub-section (1) of section 39, CPC. The expression used in sub-section (2) of section 39 is "to any subordinate Court for execution" in contradistinction to "another Court of competent jurisdiction", as used in sub-section (1) of section 39, CPC. The power under sub-section (2) of section 39 can be exercised for administrative reasons to ensure expedition in execution of the decree, etc. In the case of Delhi, for instance, the Civil Nazarat is located at the district courts. The warrants for possession and warrants for sale or attachment of properties, etc, are executed through the administrative civil judge. In such circumstances, if the court may find that the decree can be conveniently and expeditiously executed by the district court, it may in the exercise of powers under sub-section (2) of section 39, CPC, send the decree for execution to the district courts. Accordingly, it is held that the exercise of the powers to transfer under sub-section (2) of section 39, of CPC can be exercised independently of the powers under sub-section (1) of section 39.[245]

Where a court which passed a decree transferred it for execution to district court A, an application for execution to court B which is subordinate to court A, is not legal.[246]

---

239. Kartick Nath v Tilukdhari, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 667; Chhatu Ram v LIC of India, AIR 1974 Pat 371.
240. Krishna v Bhau, (1894) ILR 18 Bom 61.
241. Abdul Khadar v Mohammed, AIR 1956 TC 213 : (1956) TC 250.
242. Nageshwar Prasad v Lakshman Prasad, AIR 1960 Pat 171.
243. Mahadeo Prasad v Ram Lochan, AIR 1981 SC 416 : (1980) 4 SCC 354.
244. Pera Khatika v Lal Behari, AIR 1982 All 82.
245. Pearay Lal & Sons Pvt Ltd v Jamuna Properties Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Del 126.
246. Mohammad Mehdi v Zainuddin, AIR 1957 Pat 654.

[s 39.20] Simultaneous Execution of Decree in more Places than One

A court passing a decree has the power to send its decree to more courts than one for concurrent execution. But this power should be sparingly exercised, and, when exercised, it would be, in many cases, proper to impose terms on the decree-holder that he should not proceed to a sale under all the attachments at once.[247] The court executing the decree, may after notice to the judgment-debtor to send the decree for simultaneous execution to another court if it is satisfied that the assets in its jurisdiction are not likely to satisfy the decree.[248] The Allahabad High Court issued a warrant of arrest of the judgment-debtor after it had sent the decree for simultaneous execution to another court.[249] It has been held by the Allahabad High Court on a review of the authorities, that simultaneous execution in more courts than one is permissible.[250]

[s 39.21] Appeal

An appeal lies from an order rejecting an application for the transfer of a decree. The reason is that questions relating to the transfer of decrees are questions relating to "execution" within the meaning of section 47.[251]

[s 39.22] Award

An award filed under section 11 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, is enforceable under section 15 of the Act "as if it were a decree of the court". It may, therefore, be transferred for execution as a decree under this section to another court.[252] So also, an award made under rules framed under section 43 of the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912.[253]

[s 39.23] Transfer of Decree by Small Cause Court

Section 31 (b) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 contains a special provision for transfer of decrees passed by the Presidency Small Causes Courts. A transfer of a decree by small cause court, Calcutta, direct to the court of the district munsiff is valid under this section.[254]

[S 40] Transfer of decree to Court in another [255][State].—Where a decree is sent for execution in another State, it shall be sent to such Court and executed in such manner as may be prescribed by rules in force in that [255][State].

---

247. Saroda Prosad v Luchmeeput, (1872) 14 MIA 529; Krishto Kishore v Rooplall, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 687; Deb v Chowdhury, AIR 1927 Rang 258 : (1927) 5 Rang 397; Dwarka Nath v Imperial Bank of India, AIR 1929 Cal 529 : (1929) ILR 56 Cal 1176; Fatechand v Jitmal, AIR 1929 Bom 418 : (1929) ILR 53 Bom 844 : 31 Bom LR 1105; Athivarapu Venkatarami Reddi v Kotamareddit Ram Reddi, AIR 1950 Mad 582.
248. Gurudas v Jnandra, AIR 1935 Cal 268 : (1935) 39 Cal WN 165.
249. Makhan Lal v Mst Bhagwana, AIR 1936 All 655 : (1936) All LJ 277.
250. Bhagwan Das v Gomti Bai, AIR 1962 All 619.
251. Bhabani Charan v Pratap Chandra, (1904) 8 Cal WN 575. But see section 2(2) as now amended.
252. Sital v Clement Robson & Co, AIR 1921 All 199 : (1921) ILR 43 All 394.
253. Krishnaji v Mahadeo, AIR 1922 Bom 377 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 128.
254. Jagu Ram v Pannalal, AIR 1962 Pat 272; Sarjoo Prasad v Second Addl. Dist. Judge, Kanpur, AIR 1975 All 13.
255. Substituted for "Province" by AO 1950.

[s 40.1] Executed in Such Manner as may be Prescribed by Rules in Forces in that State

The manner of execution is that of the court which executes the decree, but as to whether execution of the decree is barred by limitation or not it is the law governing the court which passed the decree that applies.[256] Sections 40, 41 and 42 of the CPC prescribe only the procedure for executing the decree passed by one court, transmitted to the transferee court for execution, and these sections do not make any substantial law. That the transferor court retains substantial control over the decree, is evident from sections 41 and 46. The power conferred by section 42 on the executing court is the power for the limited purpose of execution of the decree. Matters concerning discharge or satisfaction of the decree and the like, have to be determined by the proper law of contract, viz, the substantive law of the place where the debt was contracted and where the decree was passed. Therefore, a debt which ripened into a decree in Bombay and was transmitted to a Tamil Nadu court for execution against the judgment-debtor, could not be declared to have been discharged under the provisions of the Tamil Nadu Debt Relief Act.[257] Where a decree of the Madras High Court was transferred to the district court of Bangalore in the State of Mysore, it was held that the judgment-debtor could not claim that the decree should be scaled and instalments fixed for payment of the amount in accordance with Mysore Agriculturists Relief Act, as these are matters of substantive rights on which the parties would be governed by the law of Madras.[258] Where a decree passed by a court of small causes is sent for execution to the original side, it has been held that an order for arrest passed by the transferee court was not open to appeal but could be revised.[259] It would be otherwise if the order were for attachment of immovable properties.[260] The word "rules" in the section means rules in the First Schedule or rules framed under section 122. Where no rules have been framed under section 122, the decree does not become un-executable. The execution in such cases would be governed by the rules in the First Schedule.[261] Section 5 of Madhya Pradesh Sahayata Upkram (Vishesh Upbandh) Adhiniyam 1978 operates even against execution of decree obtained against the relief undertaking by its creditors outside the State of Madhya Pradesh. The bar contained in section 5, by way of suspension of suits or other legal proceedings, is thus, an absolute bar, which is only for the period contemplated by the Act. All that is sought to be done is to suspend its animation for the period mentioned in the notification, without affecting the validity of the decree transferred to the State of Madhya Pradesh. Section 5, therefore, does not come into conflict either with section 40 or section 42 of the CPC.[262]

[S 41] Result of execution proceedings to be certified.—The Court to which a decree is sent for execution shall certify to the Court which passed it the fact of such execution, or where the former Court fails to execute the same the circumstances attending such failure.

---

256. Inderchand v Bansropan, AIR 1948 Pat 245 : (1947) ILR 26 Pat 307; Tincowri v Debendro Nath, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 491; Sree Krishna v Alumbu, (1913) ILR 36 Mad 108; Subbier v Metal Corp of India Ltd, AIR 1954 Cal 169 : 93 Cal LJ 25.
257. PS Ramamoorthy Sastry v Selver Paints and Varnish Works Pvt Ltd, AIR 1984 Mad 172.
258. Basheer Ahmed v Padmanabha, AIR 1953 Mys 37; Ramavtar v Pop Singh, AIR 1970 Ori 36 : (1970) ILR Cut 504.
259. Kunhiraman v Madhavan Nair, AIR 1957 Mad 761.
260. Ponnappa v Thiruvengadam, 49 Mad LJ 104.
261. Chhegalal v Shyamlal, AIR 1960 MP 387; Indore Soap Factory v National Industries Co, AIR 1963 MP 153.
262. Binod Mills Co Ltd v Suresh Chand Mahavir Prasad Mantri, (1987) 3 SCC 99.

[s 41.1] Certify

The court of execution must certify the result of the execution to the court which passed the decree and transferred it for execution. When the certificate is sent, the transferee court ceases to have seizing of the execution proceeding; until then decree rests in the transferee court.[263] The court is not bound to certify failure of execution if the decree-holder wishes to make another attempt.[264] The court has no power to issue a certificate under this section, so long as the execution case is pending before it.[265] A certificate has to be issued under this section only when the transferee court has executed the decree and where it has failed to execute it, it has to certify the circumstances attending on such failure. Until such a certificate is issued, the transferee court retains its jurisdiction.[266] The Oudh Court has held that though the transferee court ceases after certification to have jurisdiction further to execute the decree, it has power to decide an objection taken before it in respect of anything done in the course of the execution proceedings taken by it.[267] Mere notification of payments made on account of the decree to the court which passed the decree does not amount to a certification under this section.[268] In a Bombay case, it was said that the section only means that the court of execution should keep the court which passed the decree informed of what has happened in the execution.[269] The Patna High Court has held that section 41 does not prescribe any particular form of certificate and sending intimation by the transferee court to the court which passed the decree that the execution case has been dismissed is sufficient compliance.[270] A covering letter forwarding a certificate is not essential.[271] Such a view, it is submitted, is not correct. A certificate as envisaged by the section is an important step having the effect of determining jurisdiction of the transferee court and is sent only after failure to execute or after execution to the extent it can.[272] The certificate required by the section enjoins the transferee court to apply its mind and affirm the statement of fact that execution was either made or could not be made after bona fide efforts to do so. The failure to execute as contemplated here, is failure after such bona fide efforts and not negligence or omission to perform duty. The words "certify" and "fails" in the section are used in their ordinary meanings and mean to make a declaration in writing under the hand or hand and seal as to the result of the execution proceedings in the transferee court and the circumstances thereof. The provisions of the section are mandatory and therefore the transferee court has to strictly adhere to them. Accordingly, merely sending a copy of the order of dismissal of the execution petition to the transferor court without a non-satisfaction report is not sufficient compliance with the section. There is no particular form of certificate but the certificate, whatever the form, must affirm the statement of facts relating to the result

---

263. Nagi Reddi v Thikkavarapu, AIR 1947 Mad 431 : (1948) ILR Mad 117; Pratabgir v Chandanmal Duddha, AIR 1951 Hyd 65; Abda Begum v Muzaffar, (1898) ILR 20 All 129; Vithu v Ganesh, AIR 1923 Bom 396 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 453; Shivlingappa v Shidmalappa, AIR 1924 Bom 359 : (1924) 26 Bom LR 345; Muhammad v Chhatto Lal, AIR 1926 Pat 274 : (1926) ILR 5 Pat 398; Radhe Shyam v Devendra, AIR 1952 Pat 213 (FB).
264. Vithu v Ganesh, AIR 1923 Bom 396 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 453.
265. Savithri v Kamal Singh, AIR 1955 Pat 456.
266. Prahlad v Thakur, AIR 1961 Pat 149; Suryanarayana v Bhavani Shankar, (1960) 1 Andh WR 260; Punjab Co-op Bank Ltd v Bikram Lal, AIR 1959 P&H 71 : (1958) ILR Punj 2430; Ram Kumar v Hazarimal, AIR 1961 Raj 157 : (1960) ILR Raj 1624.
267. Mst Jilai v Abdul Rahaman, AIR 1929 Oudh 76 : (1929) ILR 4 Luck 209.
268. Shivlingappa v Shidmalappa, AIR 1924 Bom 359 : (1924) 26 Bom LR 345; Vithu v Ganesh, AIR 1923 Bom 396 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 453.
269. Maniram v Vithu, AIR 1923 Bom 371.
270. Darsansingh v Baldeodas, AIR 1946 Pat 365 : (1946) ILR 25 Pat 145.
271. Benoy Krishna Mukerjee v Mohanlal Goenka, AIR 1950 Cal 287.
272. Shivlingappa v Shidmalappa, (1924) 26 Bom LR 345.

of the execution proceedings.[273] In another case, the Bombay High Court held that where the transferee court dismisses the execution application at the instance of the decree-holder, the decree-holder can apply to the court passing the decree, to execute the decree even before the receipt of the certificate.[274] Where an execution application filed in a transferee court had been disposed of, a further execution application presented to the transferor court without a certificate from the transferee court under this section is not incompetent.[275]

It has been held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court that even after the transferee court certifies to the transferor court, under this section, the result of execution, the former court has jurisdiction to entertain an application to set aside its previous order.[276]

[S 42] Powers of Court in executing transferred decree.—[277][(1)] The Court executing a decree sent to it shall have the same powers in executing such decree as if it had been passed by itself. All persons disobeying or obstructing the execution of the decree shall be punishable by such Court in the same manner as if it had passed the decree. And its order in executing such decree shall be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal as if the decree had been passed by itself.

[278][(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1), the powers of the Court under that sub-section shall include the following powers of the Court which passed the decree, namely:—

(a) power to send the decree for execution to another Court under section 39;

(b) power to execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor under section 50;

(c) power to order attachment of a decree.

(3) A Court passing an order in exercise of the powers specified in sub-section (2) shall send a copy thereof to the Court which passed the decree.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to confer on the Court to which a decree is sent for execution any of the following powers, namely:—

(a) power to order execution at the instance of the transferee of the decree;

(b) in the case of a decree passed against a firm, power to grant leave to execute such decree against any person, other than such a person as is referred to in clause (b), or clause (c), of sub-rule (1) of rule 50 of Order XXI.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 42.1]	State Amendment	706	[s 42.4]	Powers of the Transferor Court after Transfer	709
[s 42.2]	Powers of Court Executing Transferred Decree	706	[s 42.5]	State Amendment in Uttar Pradesh	711
[s 42.3]	Limitation on the Powers of the Transferee Court	708

273. SO Mills v RO Mills, AIR 1969 AP 263; Pannalal v Appalabhuketula, AIR 1969 Ori 147.
274. Fatechand v Jitmal, AIR 1929 Bom 418 : (1929) ILR 53 Bom 844 : 31 Bom LR 1105.
275. Aftab Ahmed v Hindustan Commercial Bank, AIR 1906 All 558; Dharamchand v Sakalchand, AIR 1967 Mys 24 : (1965) 2 Mys LJ 85.
276. Mohammad Hanif v Ali Raza, AIR 1933 All 783 (FB) : (1933) ILR 55 All 891.
277. Section 42 renumbered as sub-section (1) thereof by Act 104 of 1976, section 19 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
278. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 19 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[s 42.1] State Amendment

Uttar Pradesh.—The following amendments were made by Uttar Pradesh Act No. 14 of 1970, section 2 (w.e.f. 8-4-1970).

"42. Power of Court in executing transferred decree.—(1) The Court in executing a decree sent to it shall have the same powers in executing such decree as if it has been passed by itself. All persons disobeying or obstructing the execution of decree shall be punishable by such Court in the same manner as if it had passed the decree, and its order in executing such decree shall be subject to the same rule in respect of appeal as if the decree had been passed by itself.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1), the powers of the Court under that sub-section shall include the following powers of the Court which passed the decree, namely:—

(a) power to send the decree for execution to another Court under Section 39;

(b) power to execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor under Section 50;

(c) power to order attachment of a decree;

(d) power to decide any question relating to the bar of limitation to the executability of the decree;

(e) power to record payment or adjustment under r 2 of O XXI;

(f) power to order stay of execution under r 29 of O XXI;

(g) in the case of a decree passed against a firm, power to grant leave to execute such decree against any person other than a person as is referred to in clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-rule (1) of r 50 of O XXI.

(3) A Court passing an order in exercise of powers specified in sub-section (2) shall send a copy thereof to the Court which passed the decree.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to confer on the Court to which the decree is sent for execution, the power to order execution at the instance of the transferee of a decree."

[s 42.2] Powers of Court Executing Transferred Decree

The court executing a transferred decree has, as sub-section (1) clearly states, the same powers as if the decree had been passed by itself. The newly added sub-section (2) now declares that such transferee court has, when necessary:

(i) the power to send the decree for execution to another court under section 39;

(ii) the power to execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor under section 50; and

(iii) the power to order attachment of a decree.

Where such transferee court exercises any such power, it has, under the new sub-section (3), to transmit a copy of its order to the court which passed the decree. The new sub-sections have been added to avoid delay in execution proceedings.

The transferee court, having all the powers of the court which passed the decree, can sell properties outside its territorial jurisdiction under circumstances under which the transferor court could do so.[279] All applications arising out of execution proceedings transferred to it have, therefore, to be made to it and its jurisdiction continues until:

---

279. Jonalalgadda Seetharamayya v Kaja Sivaramakrishna Rao, AIR 1944 Mad 145, in Letters Patent Appeal, AIR 1944 Mad 446.

(i) the execution proceedings are withdrawn from it; or

(ii) it has certified under section 41, execution, or execution as far as possible, or its failure to execute.[280] The mere striking off or rejection of an execution application for some informality in the application does not terminate the jurisdiction of the transferee court to execute the decree or render it necessary to send a certificate to the transferor court.[281] If the application is dismissed for non-prosecution and a certificate of failure of execution is sent, the only court that can entertain a fresh application is the court which passed the decree.[282]

In a Patna case,[283] court X, which passed a decree, transferred it for execution to court Y. An execution application was disposed of by court Y but no certificate under section 41 was sent to court X. Subsequently, the decree was confirmed on appeal and a second execution application was presented to court Y reciting the fact of the confirmation of the decree by the appellate court. This was construed as an application to execute the decree of the appellate court. It was then objected that the appellate decree had never been transferred for execution. This objection was overruled. It was held that court X had, under section 37(a), power to execute the appellate decree, and that as court Y had all the powers of court X, it retained its jurisdiction to execute the decree even after the appeal. A similar decision has been given by the Andhra Pradesh High Court.[284] Where a decree is, after its transfer for execution, modified in appeal, the transferee court can proceed with the execution after amending the pending petition in accordance with the appellate decree.[285]

The transferee court can decide all questions arising in execution as if it were its own decree.[286] It can, in executing a decree for specific performance, decide whether the defendant is in a position to perform his part of the decree.[287] On the section, as it stood before the amendment, judicial opinion was divided on the question whether a transferee court can pass orders under O XXI, rule 29, or decide a question under rule 50 of that order. See notes under those rules. This conflict of opinion has now been resolved by amending rule 29 of O XXI on the one hand and by enacting sub-section 4 in this section so far as rule 50 of O XXI is concerned. The amended rule 29 of O XXI provides that where a suit is pending in any court against the holder of a decree of such court or of a decree which is being executed by such court on the part of the person against whom the decree was passed, the court (that is the court before whom such suit is pending) may, on such terms as to security or otherwise, stay the execution of the decree until such pending suit is decided. It would seem that since it is the court before whom such a suit is pending which has the power to stay, an application for stay of execution would have to be filed in that court and not before the court to which the decree has been transferred for execution unless such a suit is pending before the transferee court. As regards the question under rule 50 of O XXI, clause (b) of the new sub-section (4) clearly excluded from the transferee court, the power to grant leave to execute the decree transferred to

---

280. Manorath Das v Ambika (1910) 13 WN 533; Vithu v Ganesh, AIR 1923 Bom 396 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 453; Shivlingappa v Shidmalappa, AIR 1924 Bom 359 : (1924) 26 Bom LR 345; Mohammed v Chhattoo, AIR 1926 Pat 274 : (1926) ILR 5 Pat 398; Sheshiyer v Madan Mohan, AIR 1932 Pat 286 : (1932) ILR 11 Pat 513.
281. Abda Begum v Muzaffar, (1898) ILR 20 All 129.
282. Mathura v Kailash, (1898) 3 Cal WN 211. See note "Certify" under section 41 above.
283. Ekram Hussain v Umatul, AIR 1931 Pat 27 : (1930) ILR 9 Pat 829.
284. Bangar Raju v Alluri Raja, AIR 1957 AP 403.
285. Bhagmal v Purshotham, AIR 1963 MP 154.
286. Sital Prasad v Clement Robson & Co, AIR 1921 All 199 : (1921) ILR 43 All 394; Sanwal Das v Collector of Etah, AIR 1924 All 700 : (1924) ILR 46 All 560.
287. Jai Narain v Kedarnath (1956) SCR 62 : AIR 1956 SC 359, affirming, AIR 1954 Pat 497.

it against any person other than the person referred to in clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-rule (1) of rule 50 of O XXI, that is, a person who has appeared in the suit in his own name or who has admitted that he is, or, who has been adjudged to be a partner or a person though served individually as a partner has failed to appear. Sub-section (4) likewise excludes the power to order execution at the instance of a transferee of the decree.

[s 42.3] Limitation on the Powers of the Transferee Court

The court to whose jurisdiction the subject matter of the decree is transferred acquires inherent jurisdiction over the same by reason of such transfer, and if it entertains an execution application with reference thereto, it would, at the worst be an irregular assumption of jurisdiction and not a total absence of it, and if objection to it is not taken at the earliest opportunity, it must be deemed to have been waived, and cannot be raised at any later stage of the proceedings.[288]

On the section, as it stood before its amendment, the view held was that since the jurisdiction of the transferee court was limited to the execution of the decree transferred to it, it could not transfer the decree for execution to another court.[289] That view can no longer hold good since clause (a) of sub-section (2) expressly confers, on the transferee court, power to send the decree for execution to another court under section 39. In other respects, its powers are limited in the same way as if it were its own decree. It cannot entertain an objection as to the legality or correctness of the decree,[290] or that the decree is defective,[291] or that it was obtained by fraud,[292] or that it directs a sale of property which is not saleable under section 60 of the CPC.[293] It cannot alter, vary or add to the terms of the decree, or allow future interest where none is allowed by the decree;[294] nor can it question the right of a transferee of a decree whose name is on the record as the person entitled to execute it.[295] It can, however, refuse to execute the decree, if it finds that the decree was against a dead person.[296] Where certain persons are not served or adjudged as partners in the main suit and they are sought to be made liable as partners in execution proceedings the decree-holder must expressly apply and get the question of their liability determined.[297]

The transferee court has no power to question the jurisdiction of the court which passed the decree.[298] There was a conflict of decisions on this point but that was settled by the omission, from O XXI, rule 7, of the words "or the jurisdiction of the court which passed it" which occurred in section 225 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. The Calcutta High Court has held that when a decree appears, on the face of it, to have been passed by a court which had

---

288. Ramagonda Malagonda Patil v Bhajarang Tukaram Bhojane, AIR 2003 Kant 154.
289. Shib Narain v Bepin Behary, (1878) ILR 3 Cal 512.
290. Maharaja of Bhurtpur v Rani Kanno Dei, (1901) ILR 23 All 181; Kashi v Jamuna, (1904) ILR 31 Cal 922; Subramania v Punjamma, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 324; Lakshmibai v Ravji, AIR 1929 Bom 217 : 31 Bom LR 400.
291. Rajerav v Nanarav, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 528.
292. Pexatav Digambar, (1891) ILR 15 Bom 307.
293. Sadashiv v Jayanti, (1884) ILR 8 Bom 185; Madho Lal v Katwari, (1888) ILR 10 All 130.
294. Gajadhar v Firm Manulal, AIR 1925 Pat 807 : (1925) ILR 4 Pat 440.
295. Ramchandra v Mohendro Nath, (1874) 21 WR 141; Dhunesh v Oolfat, (1874) 21 WR 219; Prithi Chand v Satya, AIR 1932 Pat 168 : (1932) ILR 11 Pat 94.
296. Radha Kishen v Behari Lal, AIR 1934 Lah 117.
297. S Vijaychandra Prabhatilal Sharma v Manek Metal Syndicate Bombay, AIR 1990 Guj 190.
298. Hari v Narsingrao, (1914) ILR 38 Bom 194; Sheopat Rai v Harakchand, (1919) PR 22; Ramanadan of Ettiyapuram v Chidambaram, (1920) ILR 43 Mad 675.

no jurisdiction, the court of execution is entitled to refuse to execute it.[299] But the Rangoon High Court, in the case of a transferred decree, expressed dissent and held that the validity of a decree cannot be questioned by the executing court.[300]

If the court which passed the decree has ordered execution, the transferee court cannot question the legality or propriety of such an order.[301] But there is conflict of opinion on the point whether a transferee court can decide, in an application under this section, the question whether execution is barred by limitation. Where the court which passed the decree decides the question of limitation and then transfers the decree for execution, the transferee court cannot reopen such a decision.[302] The conflict of opinion has arisen in cases where the court merely makes an order of transfer without deciding the point of limitation. One view is that it is implied in the very order of transfer, that it is executable and the question is therefore constructively res judicata.[303] The other view is that the question of limitation does not arise for decision at the stage of transfer and it is for the transferee court to decide it.[304] The third view is that in such a case, the transferee court should stay execution and leave the objection to be decided by the court which passed the decree.[305] The submission is that since the plea of bar by limitation goes to the root of the executability of the decree, it is one which ought to be raised at the stage of transfer. The decision in Jai Narain v Kedrnath,[306] does not conclude the question. It is obvious that the judgment-debtor must have notice of the transfer to enable him to invoke the plea of limitation.

If the court transferring a decree enters a wrong amount in the certificate, the court executing the decree can correct the error.[307]

[s 42.4] Powers of the Transferor Court after Transfer

After transferring a decree to another court for execution, the court which passed the decree cannot execute the decree itself; and an application for execution made to it after the transfer and before a certificate of non-satisfaction under section 41 has been returned, is not even a step in aid of execution so as to save limitation.[308] This is one view. The other view is that there is no justification for holding that the transferor court cannot execute a decree after it is

---

299. Gora Chand v Profulla, AIR 1925 Cal 907 : (1926) ILR 53 Cal 166.
300. Nathan v Samson, AIR 1931 Rang 252 (FB) : (1932) 9 Rang 480.
301. Mulla Abdul v Sukkhinaboo, (1897) ILR 21 Bom 456; Ram Lal v Radhey Lal, (1885) ILR 7 All 330; Beerchunder v Maymana, (1880) ILR 5 Cal 736.
302. See notes to section 11 under the heading "Orders in Execution Proceedings... Constructive Res Judicata in Execution Proceedings".
303. Rajata Giripati v Bhavani Shankaran, AIR 1924 Mad 673; Abdul Afeez v Official Receiver, (1958) 2 Mad LJ 526 : 1958 Mad WN 552; overruling Appayya v Venkataratnam, AIR 1954 Mad 1 : (1953) 2 Mad LJ 225; Palaniappa v Mariappa, AIR 1960 Mad 343; Srinath Chakravarthi v Prianath, AIR 1931 Cal 312; Sunder Rao v Appiah Naidu, AIR 1954 Mys 1 (FB) : 1954 ILR Mys 153; Hussin v Saji 15 Bom 28.
304. Samasekhara v Seshagiri, AIR 1960 AP 321 : (1959) 2 And WR 303 : (1959) And LT 670; Chhotay Lal v Puran Mull, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 39, p 41; Leake v Daniel, (1868) 10 WR 10 (FB); Machimai v Subramaniam, AIR 1928 Rang 40 : (1928) 5 Rang 775; Arjun Das v U Ka ya, AIR 1936 Rang 271 : (1936) 14 Rang 550; Rama Rai v Dayal Singh, (1894) ILR 16 All 390.
305. Srihari v Murari, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 257.
306. Jai Narain v Kedrnath, AIR 1956 SC 359 : (1956) SCR 62.
307. Mangal Chand v Dulari, AIR 1938 All 654 : (1938) All LJ 980.
308. Krishna v Ganga, AIR 1947 Pat 338 : (1946) ILR Pat 790; Maharaja of Bobbili v Narasaraja, 43 IA 238, affirming, (1914) ILR 37 Mad 231; Jnanendra Nath v Kumar Jogendra, AIR 1923 Pat 384 : (1923) ILR 2 Pat 247; Jatendrakumar v Mahendra Chandra, AIR 1933 Cal 906 : (1933) ILR 60 Cal 1186; Ram Mohan v Radhey Lal, AIR 1936 Oudh 64; Rangaswami v Sheshappa, AIR 1922 Bom 359 : (1922) ILR 47 Bom 56.

transferred to another court; and that when the transferor court transfers a decree, it does not divest itself of its power but only vests the transferee court with powers it would not otherwise have.[309] The difference of opinion mainly turns on the construction placed on the judgment in the case of Maharaja of Bobbili v Narasaraja.[310] But the court which passed the decree does not altogether surrender control of the execution proceeding. It has power under O XXI, rule 26 to make an order for stay of execution. It may withdraw execution by calling back the decree;[311] or it may make an order for simultaneous execution by another court;[312] or it may make an order for rateable distribution.[313] It has, moreover, jurisdiction to decide an objection as to limitation if referred to it by the transferee court.[314] The transferor court can decide whether the decree has been satisfied.[315] It can also entertain an execution petition even though it has passed an order for transfer so long as no certificate has been issued.[316] If the decree is assigned after transfer, the assignee must apply for the execution to the original court.[317] If after a decree has been transferred for execution the judgment-debtor dies, the court which passed the decree is, by section 50, the proper court to order that execution should proceed against the legal representative. This is, however, merely a question of procedure and if the transferee court makes the order, that would be only an irregularity which might be waived.[318] It has been held that the transferee court has no jurisdiction in certain cases to bring on record legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor.[319] Where the execution petition had been disposed of by the transferee court but no certificate had been sent under this section, it has been held that an execution application presented to the transferee court is not incompetent.[320] All orders passed by the transferee court in execution are appealable to the court to which appeals lie from decrees of that court. It has accordingly been held that where a decree of high court for over Rs 5,000 was transferred to the court of the district munsiff, an appeal against an order passed by him would lie not to the high court but to the district court.[321]

---

309. Mojibanisa v Kadir Bux, AIR 1951 All 380; Thakur Vishwanath Singh v Mahabir Prasad, AIR 1937 Nag 305 : (1937) ILR Nag 440; Makhan Lal v Mst Bhagwana Kuer, AIR 1936 All 655; KK Deb v NL Chowdhury, AIR 1927 Rang 258 : (1927) 5 Rang 397; Pedda Subb Rao v Lavu Ankamma, AIR 1933 Mad 110; Kanti Narain v Madan Gopal, AIR 1935 Lah 465 (Skemp J, dissenting) (FB) : (1934) 16 Lah 442; Sundardas v Kalliandas, AIR 1940 Sau 111; Ranjam v Golam 39 Cal WN 129; Fatechand v Jitmal, AIR 1929 Bom 418 : (1929) 53 Bom 844; Radhe Shyam v Devendra, AIR 1952 Pat 213 (FB).
310. Maharaja of Bobbili v Narasaraja, 43 IA 238.
311. Lang v Jaswantilal, AIR 1926 Bom 271 : (1926) 50 Bom 439; Dwarkadas v Saligram, AIR 1939 Pat 144 : (1939) 17 Pat 617.
312. Venkatarami Reddi v Rami Reddi, AIR 1950 Mad 582; Darsan Singh v Baldeo Das, AIR 1946 Pat 365 : (1946) 25 Pat 145; Bhagwan Das v Gomti Bai, AIR 1962 All 619, overruling Parsottam v Raj Narain, AIR 1957 All 336; Punjab Co-op Bank v Bikram Lal, AIR 1959 Punj 71; Saroda Prosad v Luchmeeput, (1872) 14 MIA 529; Kristo Kishore v Rooplall, (1882) 8 Cal 687; Deb v Chowdhury, AIR 1927 Rang 258 : (1927) 5 Rang 397; Dwarkanath v Imperial Bank of India, AIR 1929 Cal 529 : (1929) 56 Cal 1176.
313. Basheshar Das v Central Co-op Bank Ltd, AIR 1934 Lah 113.
314. Srihari v Murari, (1886) 12 Cal 257.
315. Ramchand v Vazirchand, AIR 1962 P&H 293.
316. Abdul Sattar v Masurya Din, AIR 1961 MP 158; dissenting from Nagireddi v Kolamma, AIR 1947 Mad 431.
317. Framji v Rattansha, (1872) 9 Bom HCR 49; Kadir v Ilahi Baksh, (1880) 2 All 283; Amar Chundra v Guru Prosunno, (1900) 27 Cal 488; Tameshar v Thakur Prasad, (1903) 25 All 443; Shamsul Huq v Abdul Rahaman, (1935) 39 Cal WN 960.
318. Jang Bahadur v Bank of Upper India Ltd, AIR 1928 PC 162 : 55 IA 227.
319. Punjab Co-op Bank v Bikram Lal, AIR 1959 P&H 71.
320. Aftab Ahmed v Hindustan Commercial Bank, AIR 1906 All 558.
321. Jambulinga v Vadivel Achari, AIR 1956 Mad 390.

[s 42.5] State Amendment in Uttar Pradesh

Section 42 shall stand substituted as under and shall be deemed to have been substituted w.e.f. 2-12-1968:

> Section 42. Power of Court in executing transferred decree.—(1) The court executing a decree sent to it shall have the same powers in executing such decree as if it had been passed by itself. All persons disobeying or obstructing the decree shall be punishable by such court in the same manner as if it had passed the decree, and its order in executing such decree shall be subject to the same rules in respect of appeal as if the decree had been passed by itself.
>
> (2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1), the powers of the Court under that sub-section shall include the following powers of the Court which passed the decree, namely:
>
> (a) power to send the decree for execution to another Court under section 39;
>
> (b) power to execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor under section 50;
>
> (c) power to order attachment of a decree;
>
> (d) power to decide any question relating to the bar of limitation to the executability of the decree;
>
> (e) power to record payment or adjustment under Rule 2 of Order XXI;
>
> (f) power to order stay of execution under Rule 29 of Order XXI;
>
> (g) in the case of a decree passed against a firm, power to grant leave to execute such decree against any person other than a person as is referred to in clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-rule (1) of rule 50 of Order XXI.
>
> (3) A Court passing an order in exercise of the powers specified in sub-section (2) shall send a copy thereof to the Court which passed the decree.
>
> (4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to confer on the Court to which a decree is sent for execution, the power to order execution at the instance of the transferee of a decree. Uttar Pradesh Civil Laws Amendment Act, 1970 (14 of 1970).[322]

Where a decree of the small causes court is transferred to the court of munsiff, the latter cannot execute it by sale of immovable property, because under section 42 (as amended by Uttar Pradesh Act 24 of 1954), the transferee court can exercise the power, only if the transferor court can, by virtue of the provision contained in O XXI, rule 82, it has no power to order sale of immovable property.[323]

[324][[S 43] Execution of decrees passed by Civil Courts in places to which this Code does not extend.—Any decree passed by any Civil Court established in any part of India to which provisions of this Code do not extend, or by any Court established or continued by the authority of the Central Government outside India, may, if it cannot be executed within the jurisdiction of the Court by which it was passed, be executed in the manner herein provided within the jurisdiction of any Court in the territories to which this Code extends.]

---

322. For the effect of this amendment see the following cases: Ram Lachan v Mahadeo Prasad, AIR 1970 All 554; Bhola Koeti v Laxmi Devi, AIR 1972 All 537.
323. Mahadeo Prasad Singh v Ram Lochan, AIR 1981 SC 416 : (1980) 4 SCC 354 : 1981 SCR (1) 732.
324. Substituted by Act 2 of 1951, section 8, for section 43 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

SYNOPSIS

[s 43.1] Alterations in the Section 712
[s 43.2] This Section and Sections 44 and 45 712
[s 43.3] "Any Part of India" 712

[s 43.1] Alterations in the Section

This section was substituted by section 8 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951 for the old section which ran as follows:

> Any decree passed by a civil court established in any part of British India to which the provisions relating to execution do not extend, or by any court established or continued by the authority of the central government or by the Crown Representative in the territories of any foreign Prince or State, may, if it cannot be executed within the jurisdiction of the court by which it was passed, be executed in manner herein provided within the jurisdiction of any court in British India.

[s 43.2] This Section and Sections 44 and 45

Under this section, read along with sections 44 and 45, the Indian courts have power:

(i) to execute decrees of those Indian courts to which the CPC does not apply, such as scheduled districts;

(ii) to execute decrees of the civil courts outside India which are established by the authority of the central government;

(iii) to execute the decree of the revenue courts in any part of India to which the provisions of the CPC do not apply; and

(iv) to execute decrees of Indian courts in the states to which the state government has notified that section 45 would apply.[325]

[s 43.3] "Any Part of India"

A decree passed by the Gwalior Court on 18 August 1948 is outside this section as it is not one passed by any court established in any part of India to which the provisions of this CPC extend or by any court established or continued by the authority of the central government outside India.[326] A decree passed by the court in Madhya Bharat is not governed by this section as the CPC was not applicable to it.[327] The words "any part of India to which the provisions of this Code do not extend" have been construed as not applicable to sovereign states like former Indian states to which the CPC could not be extended.[328]

[329][[S 44] Execution of decrees passed by Revenue Courts in places to which this Code does not extend.—The State Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare that the decrees of any Revenue Court in any part of India to which the provisions of this Code do not extend, or any class of such decrees, may be executed in the State as if they had been passed by Courts in that State.]

---

325. Kishendas v Indo-Carnatic Bank, AIR 1958 AP 407.
326. Moloji Narsingh Rao v Shankar Saran, AIR 1962 SC 1737; affirming, AIR 1958 SC 775.
327. Wahid Ali v Aziz, AIR 1956 Bhopal 24.
328. Kantilal v Dominion of India, AIR 1954 Cal 67.
329. Substituted by Act 2 of 1951, section 9, for section 44 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

SYNOPSIS

[s 44.1] History of the Section 713
[s 44.2] By notification 713
[s 44.3] Limitation 713

[s 44.1] History of the Section

This section was substituted by section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act 11 of 1951 for the old section which ran as follows:

> The Provincial Government may by notification in the Official Gazette declare that the decrees of any civil or revenue courts in any Indian State, not being courts established or continued by the authority of the central government or of the crown representative, or any class of such decrees, may be executed in the province as if they had been passed by courts of British India.

For courts situated in those parts of India to which the Code does not extend, see section 1, sub-section (3).

[s 44.2] By notification

A notification under this section does not alter the character or incidents of a foreign judgment.[330] And accordingly, an ex parte decree passed by a foreign court against a non-resident foreigner does not become executable by reason of the notification.[331]

The relevant date for executability is the date when the order is to be made, so that if the notification was made on or before that date the section would apply.[332]

[s 44.3] Limitation

The period of limitation for executing decrees executable in India under these sections is the period prescribed by the law of India in force at the place where execution is applied for.[333]

[334][[S 44A] Execution of decrees passed by Courts in reciprocating territory.— (1) Where a certified copy of a decree of any of the superior Courts of [335][] any reciprocating territory has been filed in a District Court, the decree may be executed in [336][India] as if it had been passed by the District Court.

(2) Together with the certified copy of the decree shall be filed a certificate from such superior court stating the extent, if any, to which the decree has been satisfied or adjusted and such certificate shall, for the purposes of proceedings under this section, be conclusive proof of the extent of such satisfaction or adjustment.

(3) The provisions of section 47 shall as from the filing of the certified copy of the decree apply to the proceedings of a District Court executing a decree under this

---

330. Nilratan v Cooch Behar Loan Office, AIR 1941 Cal 64 : (1941) 1 Cal 171 : (1940) 45 Cal WN 113 : 72 Cal LJ 148.
331. Rajendra v Shanker, AIR 1958 All 775.
332. Chunilal Kasturchand v Dundappa Damappa, AIR 1951 Bom 190.
333. Amarnath v Narain Das, AIR 1947 Oudh 206 : (1947) 22 Luck 353; Nabibhai v Dayabhai, (1916) 40 Bom 504.
334. Inserted by Act 8 of 1937, section 2.
335. The words "the United Kingdom or" omitted by Act 71 of 1952, section 2.
336. Substituted by Act 2 of 1951, section 3 for "the States" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

section, and the District Court shall refuse execution of any such decree, if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Court that the decree falls within any of the exceptions specified in clauses (a) to (f) of section 13.

[337][Explanation 1.—"Reciprocating territory" means any country or territory outside India which the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare to be a reciprocating territory for the purposes of this section; and "superior Courts", with reference to any such territory, means such Courts as may be specified in the said notification.

Explanation 2.—"Decree" with reference to a superior Court means any decree or judgment of such Court under which a sum of money is payable, not being a sum payable in respect of taxes or other charges of a like nature or in respect of a fine or other penalty, but shall in no case include an arbitration award, even if such an award is enforceable as a decree or judgment.]]

SYNOPSIS

[s 44A.1]	History of the Section	714	[s 44A.7]	Competency of Executing Court	717
[s 44A.2]	Policy Behind the Section	715	[s 44A.8]	Concept of Residence of Judgment-debtor Immaterial	717
[s 44A.3]	Decree of a Foreign Non-reciprocating Country	715	[s 44A.9]	Foreign Award	717
[s 44A.4]	District Court	716	[s 44A.10]	Foreign Judgment Not on Merit — Cannot be Executed	718
[s 44A.5]	"As if it had been passed by the District Court"	716	[s 44A.11]	Legal Fiction — Execution of Foreign Decree by Debt Recovery Tribunal	720
[s 44A.6]	Sub-Section (3): Conditions for Execution of Decree by Another Court	717

[s 44A.1] History of the Section

This section was inserted by section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1937 (8 of 1937). By the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian laws) Order 1937, a few changes were made in the section. Thus, in Explanation 2, the words "Central Government" and "Official Gazette" were substituted in the said explanation for the words "Governor-General in Council" and "Gazette of India" respectively and by a subsequent supplementary Order of 1937, the words "or in India" were omitted from Explanation (2).

The words were after the word "Dominions", by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1952, the present Explanations 1 and 2 were substituted for the old explanations 1 to 3 which were as follows:

Explanation 1—'Superior courts' with reference to the United Kingdom means the High Court in England, the court of Session in Scotland, the High Court in Northern Ireland, the court of Chancery of the County, Palatine of Lancaster and the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Durham.

Explanation 2—'Reciprocating territory' means any country, or territory, situated in any part of His Majesty's Dominions which the central government may, from time-to-time, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare to be reciprocating territory for the purposes of this section; and 'superior courts' with reference to any such territory, means such courts as may be specified in the said notification.

337. Substituted by Act 71 of 1952, section 2, for Explanations 1 to 3.

Explanation 3—'Decree', with reference to a superior court, means any decree or judgment of such court under which a sum of money is payable, not being a sum payable in respect of taxes or other charges of a like nature or in respect of fine or other penalty, and:

(a) with reference to superior courts in the United Kingdom, includes judgments given and decrees made in any court in appeals against such decrees or judgments; but

(b) in no case includes an arbitration award, even if such award is enforceable as a decree or judgment.

[s 44A.2] Policy Behind the Section

This section is meant to reciprocate the policy contained in the Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act, 1933, and is a part of the arrangement under which on the one part decrees of Indian courts should be executable in the United Kingdom and on the other part decrees of courts in the United Kingdom and other notified parts of His Majesty's dominions should be executable in India.[338]

Presidency small cause courts cannot execute the decree of a foreign court of reciprocating territory as this section has not been extended to such courts.[339]

[s 44A.3] Decree of a Foreign Non-reciprocating Country

A decree passed by the Lahore Court prior to 15 August 1947 became, thereafter, a decree of the foreign court in relation to the courts in India and could not, in the absence of reciprocating agreement be executed in a court of Delhi.[340] Likewise, a. decree passed by a court in Burma cannot after it became a republic be executed in any court in India, there being no reciprocating agreement with that state.[341]

The Bombay High Court has held that the decree passed by the High Court of Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Court of the First Instance is a decree of a court in reciprocating territory. Hong Kong ceased to be a colony of the United Kingdom with effect from 1-7-1997 and sovereignty over Hong Kong has been resumed by China. Hong Kong does not cease to be a reciprocating territory upon its becoming a part of the Republic of China. After reunification of Hong Kong with the Republic of China, the Supreme Court of Hong Kong referred to in the Government notification dated 23 November 1968 issued under section 44-A continues to be in existence though by a different name viz high court. However, mere change in name/title of a court would not take it out of the purview of the notification issued under section 44-A. It was further held that the said court will be a "superior Court" within the meaning of section 44-A of the CPC.[342]

---

338. See Statement of Objects and Reasons, Gazette of India, Pt V, p 24, dated 16 February 1935.
339. Subramaniam v Srinibash, AIR 1951 Mad 289.
340. Said-ul-Hamid v Federal Indian Assurance Co, AIR 1951 P&H 255 : (1951) Punj 111; Punjab Co-op Bank v Naranjan Das, AIR 1961 P&H 369 : (1960) 2 Punj 241.
341. Muthia Chettiar v Firm Shwebo, AIR 1957 Mad 25.
342. Sumikin Bussan International (Hong Kong) Ltd v King Shing Enterprises Ltd (in Liquidation), 2008 (3) AIR Bom R 92 : 2008 (5) Bom CR 464.

[s 44A.4] District Court

The high court, for the purposes of execution of the decree, would be considered as the district court.[343]

The words "District Court" in the section include the high court in its original side. By virtue of section 12 of the Bombay City Civil Court Act, 1948 read with the notification dated 20 January 1950 issued under section 4 of the Act the Bombay City Civil Court is the district court under this section in respect of matters covered by the notification.[344]

Where a judgment of an English Court was sought to be executed in India, there was no dispute that the decree was of a court in a reciprocating territory. It was accordingly held that the provision of section 44-A has to be complied with, and the district court empowered to execute the decree can also execute decrees of superior courts of any reciprocating territory. It was further directed that the decree may be executed on its certified copy being filed in district court, whereafter it would be taken as if it is a decree passed by the district court itself.[345]

[s 44A.5] "As if it had been passed by the District Court"

The words "as if it had been passed by the District Court" have the effect of making the entire scheme of O XXI applicable, in respect of execution of decrees of foreign courts.[346] Consequently, an application for execution of such a decree would not be entertained where no step for its execution nor any step in aid of such execution, has been taken by the decree-holder in any court in India within three years from the date of the decree.[347] Likewise, notices under O XXI, rule 22 have to be taken out when an application for execution is made more than one year after the date of the decree or where the application is against the legal representatives of a party to the decree unless for reasons to be recorded, the court considers that the issue of such notice would cause unreasonable delay.[348] The induction of O XXI and its scheme do not, however, have the effect of barring the judgment-debtor from raising any plea based on clauses (a)–(f) of section 13.[349] The filing of a certificate required by the section is a condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction thereunder. If no such certificate is filed, the application for execution is liable to be dismissed.[350] However, in a case relating to a decree from a court in England, it was held by the Karnataka High Court that production of non-satisfaction certificate from High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, is not a condition precedent to initiate execution proceedings. It is procedural aspect and does not pertain to jurisdiction. It was also held in the above case that where damages for breach of contract is awarded according to the terms and conditions of agreement by applying English, it cannot be said that decree of execution is being enforced to recover penalty as stated in Explanation 2 to section 44A.[351] But once the certified copy of the decree and the certificate are produced, execution can proceed even against an immovable property situated in this country inspite of the judgment-debtor

---

343. Janardhan Mohandas Rajan Pillai v Madhubhai Patel, AIR 2003 Bom 490.
344. Geglani v Beharilal Beniprasad Pvt Ltd, AIR 1978 Bom 255.
345. Vitol SA v Deepak Fertilizers and Petrochemicals Corpn Ltd. Pune, AIR 2012 Bom 57 : 2012 (5) All MR 164.
346. Sheik Ali v Sheik Mohamed, AIR 1967 Mad 45 : (1966) 2 Mad 551.
347. Lakhpat Rai Sharma v Atma Singh, AIR 1971 P&H 476 : 73 Punj LR 224.
348. Jharkhand Mines and Industries Ltd v Nand Kishore, AIR 1969 Pat 228.
349. Morteys Biham Ltd v Roshanlal, AIR 1961 Bom 156.
350. Uthamram v Abdul Kassim & Co, (1963) 2 Mad LJ 412.
351. India Builders Corp v Masood Asif, 2010 (1) : AIR Kar R 151.

having been adjudicated an insolvent by the court of the reciprocating territory as that court has no jurisdiction to vest such a property in the official assignee.[352]

[s 44A.6] Sub-Section (3): Conditions for Execution of Decree by Another Court

Section 44A(3) of the CPC reads that by virtue of sub-section (3), the court shall refuse execution if it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that the decree falls within any of the exceptions in clauses (a) to (f) of section 13. Thus, under sub-clause (b), if the decree has not been given on the merit of the case, then the following judgment is not conclusive between the parties and the same cannot be executed in India. Under section 13(b), even an ex parte judgment in favour of the plaintiff may be deemed to be a judgment given on merits if some evidence is adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs and the judgment, however, brief, is based on a consideration, of that evidence. Where however, no evidence is adduced on the plaintiff side and his suit is decreed merely because of the absence of the defendant either by way of penalty or in a former manner, the judgment may not be one based on the merits of the case.[353]

When an application is made for transmission of the decree, the judgment-debtor is entitled to raise all objections available under clauses (a)–(f) of section 13.[354]

[s 44A.7] Competency of Executing Court

Once decree of foreign superior court is sought to be executed under section 44A of the CPC as if it is the decree of the Indian court executing the same, no further question would survive regarding competence of such executing court. If the ship in question which is arrested at Visakhapatnam had sailed out of the territorial waters of Andhra Pradesh, then the Andhra Pradesh High Court would have lost its jurisdiction to entertain such a suit or the execution proceedings for executing the decree of foreign court. But once it was within its territorial waters, the ship could have been validly subjected to such a suit not only against itself but against its owner.[355]

[s 44A.8] Concept of Residence of Judgment-debtor Immaterial

The application for execution of decree of reciprocating court would lie in any district court, therefore, concept of residence of judgment-debtor need not be considered while filing such application under section 44-A.[356]

[s 44A.9] Foreign Award

The only difference as found is that while under the Foreign Awards Act a decree follows, under the new Act the foreign award is already stamped as the decree. Thus, a party holding foreign award can apply for enforcement of it but the court, before taking further effective steps for the execution of the award, has to proceed in accordance with sections 47–49. In one proceeding there may be different stages. In the first stage, the court may have to decide about the enforceability of the award having regard to the requirement of the said provisions. Once

---

352. Indian Overseas Bank v SMM Musthaba, AIR 1977 Mad 199 : (1977) 2 Mad 1.
353. International Woolen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, (2001) 2 LRI 765.
354. Indian General Investment Trust Ltd v Raja of Khalikote, AIR 1952 Cal 508.
355. MVAL Quamar v Tasavliris Salvage (International) Ltd, (2000) 3 LRI 886.
356. Janardhan Mohandas Rajan Pillai v Madhubhai Patel, AIR 2003 Bom 490.

the court decides that foreign award is enforceable, it can proceed to take further effective steps for execution of the same. There arises no question of making foreign award as a rule of court/decree again. If the object and purpose can be served in the same proceedings, in our view, there is no need to take two separate proceedings resulting in multiplicity of litigation. It is also clear from the objectives contained in para 4 of the Statement of Objects and Reasons, sections 47 to 49 and the scheme of the Act, that every final arbitral award is to be enforced as if it were a decree of the court. The submission that the execution petition could not be permitted to convert as an application under section 47 is technical and is of no consequence. For enforcement of a foreign award, there is no need to take separate proceedings, one for deciding the enforceability of the award to make rule of the court or decree and the other to take up execution thereafter. In one proceeding, the court enforcing a foreign award can deal with the entire matter.[357]

The holder of a foreign award need not take out two proceedings, i.e., one for deciding the enforceability of the award and the other for its execution. Therefore, such an award can be directly put in execution and the executing court would be entitled to execute it upon considering whether the award complies with the provisions of Part II, Chapter I in relation to the New York Convention Awards and Chapter II in relation to Geneva Convention Awards as may be applicable. It may be noted that when foreign decrees are put in execution under section 44A of the CPC also, the procedure does not contemplate two separate proceedings, one for deciding the enforceability of the foreign decree and the other for its execution.[358] When the law of a forum country is silent in regard to the limitation prescribed for execution of a foreign decree then the law of limitation of the cause country would prevail. Thus, the limitation period as prescribed in foreign court (from reciprocating country) for execution of a decree would apply.[359] The period of limitation would begin from the date when the decree was passed in the foreign court. However, if the decree holder first takes steps-in-aid to execute the decree in the cause country, and the decree is not fully satisfied, and the decree-holder prefers a petition for execution in India, it should be done within a period of three years as per Article 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 from the finalisation of the execution proceedings in the cause country.[360]

The Delhi High Court has held that Part II of Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 is a complete Code in itself for enforcement of foreign award except where suit is filed for the enforcement of such award. The exception is contained in Explanation 2 to section 44-A(2) of the Code which excludes from within its ambit an arbitration award.[361]

[s 44A.10] Foreign Judgment Not on Merit — Cannot be Executed

Undoubtedly, the burden of proving that the decree is not on merits would be on the party alleging it. However, courts never expect impossible proofs. It would never be possible for a party to lead evidence about the state of mind of the judge who passed the decree. Of course, amongst other things, the party must show that the decree does not show that it is on merits, if

---

357. Fuerst Lawson Ltd v Jindal Exports Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 2293 : (2001) CLC 746 (SL).
358. Enro-Asia Chartering Coprn Pvt Ltd v FI Ltd, AIR 2002 Bom 447.
359. Bank of Baroda v Kotak Mahindra Bank Ltd, AIR 2020 SC 1474 : (2020) 4 Mad LJ 171 : (2020) 2 CTC 877.
360. Bank of Baroda v Kotak Mahindra Bank Ltd, AIR 2020 SC 1474 : (2020) 4 Mad LJ 171 : (2020) 2 CTC 877.
361. Marina World Shipping Copr Ltd v Jindal Exports Pvt Ltd, 2007 CLC 1606.

necessary, the rules of that court, the existence or lack of existence of material before the court when the decree was passed and the manner in which the decree is passed.

It cannot be said that the expression "judgment on the merits" implies that it must have been passed after contest and after evidence had been let in by both sides. An ex parte judgment in favour of the plaintiff may be deemed to be a judgment given on merits if some evidence is adduced on behalf of the plaintiffs and the judgment, however brief, is based on a consideration of that evidence. Where however no evidence is adduced on the plaintiff's side and his suit is decreed merely because of the absence of the defendant either by way of penalty or in a formal manner, the judgment may not be one based on the merits of the case.

It is clear that if the decree cannot be said to be a decree on merits, such a decree cannot be enforced in India.[362]

In Alcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Celem SA of FOS 34320 Roujan,[363] it was urged by the appellant before the Supreme Court that the order passed by the court in England imposing costs being an interlocutory order did not have the shades of a "judgment" to be executed before an Indian court and hence, the order was not a "decree" which may be executable. The Supreme Court held that as far as the explanation with regard to reciprocal territory is concerned, there is no dispute that England is a reciprocating territory for the purpose of section 44A. Section 44A indicates an independent right conferred on a foreign decree holder for enforcement of a Decree/Order in India. Section 44A gives effect to the policy contained in the Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act, 1933. It is a part of the arrangement under which, on one part, decrees of Indian courts are made executable in the United Kingdom, and on the other part, decrees of courts in the United Kingdom and other notified parts of Her Majesty's dominions are made executable in India. As the United Kingdom is a reciprocating territory, and the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, England being a recognised superior court in England, therefore, the order passed by that court was found executable in India under section 44A by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court further held that section 44A deals with "execution of decrees passed by courts in reciprocating territory". Picking definition of "decree" from section 2(2), of "foreign judgment" from section 2(6), "judgment" from section 2(9), "order" from section 2(14) and Explanation 2 to section 44A(3), it was held that on conjoint reading of "decree", "judgment" and "order" from any angle, the order passed by the English Court fell within the definition of "Order" and therefore, it was a judgment and thus became a "decree" as per Explanation to section 44A(3). In the instant case, the court in England, after following the principles of natural justice, by recording reasons and very importantly basing on the application of the appellant itself, had conclusively decided the issue with regard to jurisdiction and passed the order coupled with costs. Hence, it was held that the order passed by the foreign court is conclusive in that respect and on the merits and hence, executable as a decree.

It was also held that Explanation II to section 44A does not refer to the costs as contemplated under section 35. The costs having been quantified have assumed the character of a money decree for costs and cannot be equated, either with a fine or penalty which is imposed on a party by the court or taxes claimed and are taxes payable to a local authority, Government, or other charges of a like nature.[364]

---

362. International Woollen Mills v Standard Wool (UK) Ltd, AIR 2001 SC 2134 : (2001) 5 SCC 265.
363. Alcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Celem SA of FOS 34320 Roujan, AIR 2017 SC 1 : (2017) 2 SCC 253 : (2016) 12 Scale 645.
364. Alcon Electronics Pvt Ltd v Celem SA of FOS 34320 Roujan, AIR 2017 SC 1 : (2017) 2 SCC 253 : (2016) 12 Scale 645.

[s 44A.11] Legal Fiction — Execution of Foreign Decree by Debt Recovery Tribunal

In interpreting a provision creating a legal fiction, the court is to ascertain for what purpose the fiction is created, and after ascertaining this, the court is to assume all those facts and consequences which are incidental or inevitable corollaries to the giving effect to the fiction. But in so construing the fiction, it is not to be extended beyond the purpose for which it is created, or beyond the language of the section by which it is created. It cannot also be extended by importing another fiction. And a legal fiction in terms enacted for purposes of this Act is normally restricted to that Act and cannot be extended to cover another Act. Legal fictions may not be created only by the legislature and delegated legislation may also create such fictions. But it must be remembered that what can be deemed to exist under a legal fiction are facts and not legal consequences which do not flow from the law as it stands.[365]

The court has to ascertain the purpose for which the fiction is created and after ascertaining the purpose, the court is to assume all those facts and consequences which are incidental or inevitable corollaries to the giving effect to the fiction. This being the position, as far as the provision under section 44A(1) of the CPC is concerned, the fiction is to treat the judgment and decree of the superior court as equivalent to those of district courts for the purposes of execution in India. There is no unjustified extension of this fiction in the application made by the respondent bank that in view of the constitution of the Debts Recovery Tribunal, the jurisdiction gets transferred to the Debts Recovery Tribunal. The Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993 is a special Act to provide a complete mechanism for adjudication and recovery of certain debts of nationalised banks, and section 34 gives it an overriding effect. Under section 17(1) read with section 2(g) and section 34 of the Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993, the tribunal has the exclusive jurisdiction to recover these debts and, therefore, legal fiction will have to be deemed to have been extended to authorise the execution of a foreign decree by the tribunal.[366]

In view of the provisions of section 44A(1), CPC which requires that a foreign decree may be executed in India as if it has been passed by the district court, it would not be necessary to consider the difference between the execution of the domestic decree and foreign decree by the transferee court in India. A domestic decree must necessarily be executed in accordance with the law in relation to execution of such decree in India. A foreign decree by virtue of section 44A(1) must also be so executed in accordance with the law in India. Thus, for the purpose of ascertaining whether a foreign decree is liable to be executed only under the provisions of Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993 the difference between the two kinds of decree would be of no significance. The execution of a decree, whether domestic or foreign, is in the nature of an application for recovery of a debt and must be entertained and decided by the Debt Recovery Tribunal alone and its recovery officer only under the scheme of the Act.[367]

Section 44A of the CPC makes it clear that the foreign decree may be executed in India as if it has been passed by the district court. Thus, the original character of a foreign decree is not of any consequence and the amount payable under the decree or order of any "civil court" may

---

365. Commentary on Principles of Statutory Interpretation, 8th Edn, 2001, chapter 5, as quoted in Harshadrai O Mody v Bank of India, AIR 2003 Bom 125 (DB).
366. Commentary on Principles of Statutory Interpretation, 8th Edn, 2001, chapter 5, as quoted in Harshadrai O Mody v Bank of India, AIR 2003 Bom 125 (DB).
367. Bank of India v Harshadrai Odhoiji, AIR 2002 Bom 449.

be treated as (debt) payable within the meaning of section 2(g) of Recovery of Debts Due to Banks and Financial Institutions Act, 1993. Thus, the amount claimed by the decree-holder-bank under the decree by foreign court is a debt within the meaning of the section.[368]

[369][[S 45] Execution of decrees outside India.—So much of the foregoing sections of this Part as empowers a Court to send a decree for execution to another Court shall be construed as empowering a Court in any State to send a decree for execution to any Court established [370][] by the authority of the Central Government [371][outside India] to which the State Government has, by notification in the Official Gazette, declared this section to apply.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 45.1]	State Amendment	721	[s 45.4]	State Amendment in Pondicherry — Pondicherry (Union Territory)	722
[s 45.2]	Alterations in the Section	721
[s 45.3]	Execution of Indian Decrees in Foreign Territory	721

[s 45.1] State Amendment

Pondicherry.—After Section 45 the following was inserted as section 45A by The Pondicherry (Extension of Laws) Act, 26 of 1968 (w.e.f. 5-9-1968):—

45A. Execution of decrees, etc passed or made before the commencement of the Code in Pondicherry.—Any judgment, decree or order passed or made before the commencement of this Code by any Civil Court in the Union Territory of Pondicherry shall, for the purpose of execution, be deemed to have been passed or made under this Code:

Provided that nothing contained in this section shall be construed as extending the period of limitation to which any proceeding in respect of such judgment, decree or order may be subject.

[s 45.2] Alterations in the Section

The words "or continued" were omitted from this section and the words "in any Indian State" were substituted for the words "or of the Crown Representative in the territories of any foreign Prince or State" by the Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order 1948, and, again by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950, the words "outside India" were substituted for the words "in any Indian State".

[s 45.3] Execution of Indian Decrees in Foreign Territory

This is the only section which refers to the execution in foreign territory of decrees of courts in India. Such decrees can only be executed in foreign territory by courts established there by the Central Government and empowered by notification under this section. It is only when the court in foreign territory is a court established by the Central Government in the extra-territorial jurisdiction that there is power to provide for the transfer to it of decrees of Indian

---

368. Bank of India v Harshadrai Odhaiji, AIR 2002 Bom 449.
369. Substituted by the AO 1937, for section 45.
370. The words "or continued" omitted by AO 1948.
371. Substituted by AO 1950 for "in any Indian State" which had been substituted for "or of the Crown representative in the territories of any foreign prince or State" by IAO 1948.

courts for execution, for, in foreign territory execution would be pursuant to the legislative authority or sovereign power to such state or territory.[372]

The three previous sections dealt with the converse case of the execution by the Indian courts of decrees of:

(a) Indian courts to which the provisions of the CPC do not extend (section 43).

(b) Courts outside India which are established or continued by the Central Government (section 43).

(c) Revenue courts situated in India (section 44).

(d) Superior courts of the United Kingdom or of any reciprocating territory (section 44A).

All other decrees of foreign courts, i.e., courts outside India not notified under section 44 must be enforced by suit.

[s 45.4] State Amendment in Pondicherry — Pondicherry (Union Territory)

In its application to the Union Territory of Pondicherry, after section 45, insert the following:

Section 45A. Execution of decrees, etc., passed or made before the commencement of the Code in Pondicherry—Any judgment, decree or order passed or made before the commencement of this Code by any civil court in the Union Territory of Pondicherry shall, for the purpose of execution, be deemed to have been passed or made under this Code:

Provided that nothing contained in this section shall be construed as extending the period of limitation to which any proceeding in respect of such judgment, decree or order may be subject.[373]

[S 46] Precepts.—(1) Upon the application of the decree-holder the Court, which passed the decree may, whenever it thinks fit, issue a precept to any other Court which would be competent to execute such decree to attach any property belonging to the judgment-debtor and specified in the precept.

(2) The Court to which a precept is sent shall proceed to attach the property in the manner prescribed in regard to the attachment of property in execution of a decree:

Provided that no attachment under a precept shall continue for more than two months unless the period of attachment is extended by an order of the Court which passed the decree or unless before the determination of such attachment the decree has been transferred to the Court by which the attachment has been made and the decree holder has applied for an order for the sale of such property.

SYNOPSIS

[s 46.1] Attachment under Precept 722
[s 46.2] Appeal 724

[s 46.1] Attachment under Precept

It was, at one time, proposed to do away with the system of execution by transfer of decree under sections 36 to 42, and to substitute another system whereby the court which passed the 372. Pierce Leslie v Perumal, (1917) 40 Mad 1069.

373. See Act 26 of 1968, section 3(i) and Schedule, Pt II, w.e.f 5-9-1968.

decree, retained complete control and issued precepts to one or more other courts to carry on execution under its direction. This proposal was abandoned and the system of execution by transfer of decree retained. But the proposal led to the insertion of the present section by which the court which passed the decree can issue a precept of attachment to ensure for two months or pending transfer of decree and application for execution. The object of a precept is to enable a decree-holder to obtain an interim attachment where there is ground to apprehend that he may otherwise be deprived of the fruits of his decree. No such attachment, however, can continue for more than two months except in the two cases mentioned in the section. The effect of the proviso is to render re-attachment unnecessary. When money is attached under a precept and the period of the operation of the precept is over, the money can be paid over to another decree-holder, who subsequently attaches it.[374] In an Andhra case, the facts were as under:

(i) Property in town A was attached;

(ii) Execution proceedings were going on in town B;

(iii) Application had been made to hold the auction in town A, where the sale would fetch a higher price as a large number of bidders were expected to bid.

It was held that the jurisdiction of court at B to give direction to court at A to conduct the auction was not affected by the mere expiry of the period of attachment.[375] When the attachment of a debt out of jurisdiction is made directly and not through a precept, the attachment is illegal.[376]

As a general rule, territorial jurisdiction is a condition precedent to a court executing a decree and neither the court which passes the decree, nor the court to which it is sent for execution, can execute it in respect of property lying outside its territorial jurisdiction. The object of section 46 (precepts), is simply to enable the attachment of the property of the judgment-debtor situated within the jurisdiction of another court, in order to prevent the judgment-debtor from alienating or otherwise dealing with it to the detriment of the judgment-debtor till proper proceedings are taken.[377]

As per the Chit Funds Act, 1982, the Registrar has no power to execute the award and the award with a certificate is transferred to a civil court as per section 71 of the Chit Funds Act, 1982. Since the Registrar has no power to execute the award as a court of first instance, the court which received such order or award would be deemed to be a court which passed a decree as per section 37 of CPC. A court has stated that section 46 cannot be strictly construed to contend that since a civil court has not passed a decree, it has no jurisdiction to issue precepts. The court noted that precepts is issued to the other court in order to prevent any encumbrance over the property though property does not lie in the jurisdiction of the court issuing precepts.[378]

The court to which a precept is issued, derives its authority from that precept and has no power to do anything not authorised thereby, but it must be presumed to have inherent powers to deal with all matters that may incidentally arise in connection with proceedings for attachment. It cannot, therefore be said that the court to which a precept is issued has no

---

374. Gurdiyal Singh v Kharzan Chand, AIR 1936 Lah 486.
375. Karri Venkata Reddi v Central Bank of India, AIR 1990 Pat 81.
376. Sheerazee v Reddy, AIR 1940 Rang 34 : (1939) ILR Rang 624.
377. Manganese Ore (India) Ltd v Mangilal Rungta, AIR 1981 Del 114.
378. Shriram Chits Tamil Nadu Pvt Ltd v P Ravikumar, (2019) 4 CTC 695 : (2019) 3 LW 860 : LNINDORD 2019 MAD 5993.

jurisdiction to stay execution if the judgment-debtor deposits the decretal amount in court or gives security for payment of the amount.[379] An order of precept is not an order transferring a decree for execution to the court to which it is issued.[380] This section deals with execution of decrees and does not affect the jurisdiction of the court under O XXXVIII, rule 5 to attach before judgment, properties lying outside the jurisdiction of the court.[381] See also the under mentioned decision on the proviso to the section.[382]

[s 46.2] Appeal

It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras that an order under this section is not an order in execution, that it only tends to facilitate execution but is not in itself a step in execution and it is therefore not appealable.[383] A different view however has been taken in Kapoorchand v Revati Prasad.[384] Even if it is treated as a step in execution it would not be appealable in view of the amendment of the definition of decree in section 2(2).

Questions to be determined by Court executing decree

[S 47] Questions to be determined by the Court executing decree.— (1) All questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, or their representatives, and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit.

(3) Where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the representative of a party, such question shall, for the purposes of this section, be determined by the Court.

[385][Explanation I.—For the purposes of this section, a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed and a defendant against whom a suit has been dismissed are parties to the suit.

Explanation II.—(a) For the purposes of this section, a purchaser of property at a sale in execution of a decree shall be deemed to be a party to the suit in which the decree is passed; and

(b) All questions relating to the delivery of possession of such property to such purchaser or his representative shall be deemed to be questions relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of this section.]

---

379. Puran Mal v Dina Nath, AIR 1926 Lah 433 : (1926) 8 Lah LJ 164.
380. Champalal v Mohanlal, AIR 1959 MP 397.
381. Chiman Das v Mahadevappa, AIR 1961 AP 417.
382. Hindustan Bicycle Manufacturer and Industries Corp Ltd v Nath Bank Ltd, AIR 1957 Pat 209.
383. Pallonji Shapoor v Edward Vaughan Traders ILR 12 Bom 400; Kasiwar Dey v Asvini Kumar ILR. (1920) Cal 241; Roy Kishenji v Sri Kishen, AIR 1940 Cal 26 : (1939) 2 Cal 370; Ramchandrudu v Bakraj Gulabchad, AIR 1952 Mad 826 : ILR 1952 Mad 489.
384. Kapoorchand v Revati Prasad, AIR 1956 MB 208.
385. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 20, for Explanation (w.e.f. 1-2-1977). Earlier Explanation was inserted by Act 66 of 1956, section 5 (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).

SYNOPSIS

[s 47.1] State Amendment 726
[s 47.2] Changes in the Section 727
[s 47.3] General Impression About Execution of Decree..... 728
[s 47.4] Power of Court 728
[s 47.5] Inconsistency Between Judgment and Decree..... 729
[s 47.6] Bar of Suit 730
[s 47.7] Execution Petition — Signing of..... 730
[s 47.8] Executing Court Cannot go Behind Decree 731
[s 47.9] Execution Petition by Trust — Filing of..... 731
[s 47.10] Decree in Nullity 732
[s 47.11] To What Decrees the Section Applies..... 732
[s 47.12] Section to be Construed Liberally... 738
[s 47.13] Transfer of Execution to Collector — Effect..... 741
[s 47.14] "And not by a suit" — Whether Objection to Execution can be Raised by way of Defence.....742
[s 47.15] Compromise..... 743
[s 47.15.1] Decree on Compromise of Suit..... 743
[s 47.15.2] Compromise Prior to a Decree 744
[s 47.15.3] Compromise of a Decree 746
[s 47.16] Agreement Modifying Terms of Decree 749
[s 47.17] Questions Relating to Execution, Discharge or Satisfaction..... 750
[s 47.17.1] Mis-description of Property 750
[s 47.17.2] Property Wrongly Taken in Execution 751
[s 47.17.3] Property Taken in Execution of Decree Subsequently Amended..... 753
[s 47.17.4] Transfer of Property by Decree holder 753
[s 47.17.5] Property Taken in Execution of Ex parte Decree Set Aside..... 753
[s 47.17.6] Quantum 754
[s 47.17.7] Injunction Granted by Decree 754
[s 47.17.8] Objections to Attachment or Sale by Parties or their Representatives 754
[s 47.17.9] Surety..... 754
[s 47.17.10] Construction of Decree..... 755
[s 47.17.11] Bankers Lien 757
[s 47.17.12] Arbitration 757
[s 47.17.13] Adjustment of Decree..... 758
[s 47.17.14] Adjustment of Fine Paid in Criminal Court 759
[s 47.17.15] Award of Lok Adalat... 760
[s 47.17.16] Agreement to Give Time..... 760
[s 47.17.17] Substituted Share 760
[s 47.17.18] Accretion to Mortgaged Property 761
[s 47.17.19] Rateable Liability of different Mortgaged Properties..... 761
[s 47.17.20] Waste Committed by Judgment-Debtor after Decree for Possession..... 761
[s 47.17.21] Decree for Possession..... 761
[s 47.17.22] Resistance or Obstruction to the Possession of Property 762
[s 47.17.23] Validity of an Assignment of a Decree..... 763
[s 47.17.24] Mutual Obligations Under a Decree 763
[s 47.17.25] Scaling of Decrees 764
[s 47.17.26] Suits Giving Relief to Tenants against Eviction..... 764
[s 47.17.27] Sub-tenant 765
[s 47.17.28] Alteration in Circumstances..... 766
[s 47.18] Questions not Relating to Execution, Discharge or Satisfaction..... 766
[s 47.18.1] Questions as to the Validity of the Decree..... 767
[s 47.18.2] Mal-administration of Judgment-debtor's Estate 770
[s 47.18.3] Second Suit for Redemption..... 770
[s 47.18.4] Payment Before Decree..... 770
[s 47.18.5] Construction of Decree..... 771
[s 47.19] Parties to the Suit..... 771
[s 47.19.1] Questions Between Decree-Holders Inter se..... 772
[s 47.19.2] Questions Between Judgment-debtors Inter se..... 772

[s 47.19.3] Questions Between a Party and his own Representatives. 773
[s 47.19.4] Question Between Decree Holder and Successor-in-interest of Judgment Debtor..... 773
[s 47.19.5] Party Added at the Execution Stage 773
[s 47.19.6] Questions Between a Party and a Stranger..... 773
[s 47.20] Explanations I and II: Deemed Parties to the Suit and Deemed Questions Relating to Execution, Discharge or Satisfaction..... 775
[s 47.21] Representatives 778
[s 47.21.1] Effect of Death of Decree Holder on Execution ... 780
[s 47.21.2] Questions Between Legal Representatives of Deceased Decree-holder..... 780
[s 47.21.3] Transferee of a Decree.... 781
[s 47.21.4] Transferee of Property from a Judgment-debtor under Money Decree... 781
[s 47.21.5] Pre-emption Decree..... 782
[s 47.21.6] Decree for Specific Performance 782
[s 47.21.7] Transferee from Judgment-debtor of Property Under Attachment..... 782
[s 47.21.8] Purchaser of Judgment-debtor's Equity of Redemption Under a Private Sale..... 782
[s 47.21.9] Purchaser of Judgment-debtor's Equity of Redemption at a Judicial Sale..... 783
[s 47.21.10] A Purchaser of Property from a Party to a Suit in Which an Injunction has Been Granted Affecting Such Property is not a "Representative" within the Meaning of this Section..... 783
[s 47.21.11] Official Assignee..... 783
[s 47.21.12] Purchaser from a Judgment-debtor under O XXI, Rule 83 784
[s 47.21.13] Purchaser from a Judgment-debtor of an Occupancy Holding 784
[s 47.21.14] Purchaser from a Judgment-debtor of a Portion of a Holding..... 784
[s 47.21.15] Stranger Purchaser at a Court Sale and a Purchaser at a Revenue Sale 784
[s 47.22] Objections to Attachment or Sale by Parties or their Representatives... 785
[s 47.23] Objections to Attachment by Sale by Third Parties 787
[s 47.24] Execution Purchaser..... 787
[s 47.25] Application by an Auction-purchaser for Costs on Improvements — When Sale Set Side..... 793
[s 47.26] Sub-section (3): Inquiries as to Who is Representative of a Party..... 793
[s 47.27] Stay of Execution 794
[s 47.28] The term "execution has not been stayed" 795
[s 47.29] Sub-section (2)— Its Omission..... 795
[s 47.30] Where a Sale is Sought to be Set aside on the Ground of Fraud 796
[s 47.31] Setting aside Sale — Instances 796
[s 47.32] Appeal 798
[s 47.33] Dismissal of Appeal— Effect on Pending Execution..... 798
[s 47.34] Revision..... 799
[s 47.35] Appeal Remanded for Disposal— Effect on Execution 799
[s 47.36] Orders Passed under Special Statutes..... 800
[s 47.37] Limitation Procedure and Evidence 800
[s 47.38] Res Judicata 803
[s 47.39] Estoppel..... 803
[s 47.40] Satisfaction of Decree 804

[s 47.1] State Amendment

Uttar Pradesh.—The following amendments were made by Uttar Pradesh Act No. 57 of 1976, section 3 (w.e.f. 1-1-1977).

In its application to the State of Uttar Pradesh, Explanation II as inserted by Uttar Pradesh Act 24 of 1954 shall be omitted—Uttar Pradesh Act 57 of 1976, section 3 (w.e.f. 1-1-1977).

[s 47.2] Changes in the Section

This section corresponds with section 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (now replaced by Civil Procedure Code, 1908) except in the following particulars:

(i) Sub-clauses (a) and (b) of section 244, which provided for the determination of questions regarding the amount of mesne profits and interest in execution proceedings have been omitted, as it was deemed expedient that such questions should be determined by the decree and not in execution.[386]

(ii) The words "or to the stay of execution thereof" which occurred in section 244 after the words, "execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree" have been omitted in the present section.[387]

(iii) Sub-section (2) was introduced in 1908. It gave legislative sanction to the practice followed by the courts under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.[388]

(iv) Under the old section 244, the court executing the decree had the option when a question arose as to who was the representative of a party, itself to determine the question or to stay execution until it was determined by a separate suit. Sub-section (3) of the present section renders it obligatory on the executing court itself to determine the question, as it was considered inexpedient that separate suits should be instituted for the decision of such a question.[389]

(v) The explanation, as it stood until the Amendment Act, 1976 was introduced in 1908 to resolve the conflict of decisions noted in the commentary under the heading "Explanations I and II: deemed parties".

(vi) The Amendment Act, 1976 omits sub-section (2). That sub-section was as follows:

> (2) The court, may, subject to any objection as to limitation or jurisdiction, treat a proceeding under this section as a suit or a suit as a proceeding and may, if necessary, order payment of any additional court-fees.

The omission of this sub-section was made in consequence of the change made in the definition of the word "decree" in section 2(2), the result to which was that a determination of any question within this section would no longer be regarded as a decree. It would be incongruous after that change to permit the court to convert an application into a suit and order payment of court-fees and yet say that a determination therein is not a decree.

(vii) The Amendment Act, 1976 substitutes:

Explanations I and II for the explanation as it stood till then. The explanation prior to 1976 read as follows:

> Explanation—For the purposes of this section, a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed, and a purchaser at a sale in execution of the decree are parties to the suit.

The amendment resolves controversies as regards the position of a purchaser and as regards the question of recovery by him of the property purchased by him in execution sale. The controversies on both the points are noted below under the head: "Explanation I and II, deemed parties to the suit", etc.

---

386. See CPC, O XX, rule 12.
387. As to the effect of the omission, see notes, "Stay of execution".
388. See notes below under the head "sub-section (2)—its omission".
389. See notes below under the head "sub-section (3): Inquiry as to who is the representative of a party".

[s 47.3] General Impression About Execution of Decree

It is a general impression prevailing amongst the litigant public that the difficulties of a litigant are by no means over on his getting a decree for immovable property in his favour. Indeed, his difficulties in real and practical sense, arise after getting the decree. Presumably, to tackle such a situation and to allay the apprehension in the minds of litigant public that it takes years and years for the decree holder to enjoy fruits of the decree, the legislature made drastic amendments in provisions in the aforementioned rules, particularly, the provision in rule 101 in which it is categorically declared that all questions including questions relating to right, title or interest in the property arising between the parties to a proceeding on an application under rule 97 or rule 99 or their representatives, and relevant to the adjudication of the application shall be determined by the court dealing with the application and not by a separate suit and for this purpose, the court shall, notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other law for the time being in force, be deemed to have jurisdiction to decide such questions. On a fair reading of the rule it is manifest that the legislature has enacted the provision with a view to remove, as far as possible, technical objections to an application filed by the aggrieved party whether he is the decree holder or any other person in possession of the immovable property under execution and has vested the power in the executing court to deal with all questions arising in the matter irrespective of whether the court otherwise has jurisdiction to entertain a dispute of the nature.[390]

[s 47.4] Power of Court

Under section 47 of the CPC, all questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of decree have to be determined by the court executing the decree and not by a separate suit. The powers of the court under section 47 are quite different and much narrower than its powers of appeal, revision or review. A first appellate court is not only entitled but obliged under law to go into the questions of facts as well as like trial court apart from questions of law. Powers of second appellate court under different statutes like section 100 of the CPC, as it stood before its amendment by Central Act 104 of 1976 with effect from 1-2-1977, could be exercised only on questions of law. Powers under statutes which are akin to section 100 of the CPC, as amended and substituted by the aforesaid Central Act, have been further narrowed down as now in such an appeal only substantial question of law can be considered. The powers of Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution of India, should not be exercised simply because a substantial question of law arises in a case, but there is further requirement that such question must be of general public importance and it requires the decision of the Supreme Court. Powers of revision under section 115 of the CPC cannot be exercised merely because the order suffers from legal infirmity or substantial question of law arises, but such an error must suffer with the vice of error of jurisdiction. Of course, the revisional powers exercisable under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, and likewise in similar statutes stand on entirely different footing and is much wider as there, the court can go into correctness, legality or propriety of the order and regularity of proceedings of the inferior court. It does not mean that in each and every case the revisional court is obliged to consider question of facts as well like a first appellate court, but the court has the discretion to consider the same in appropriate cases whenever it is found expedient, and not in each and every case. Discretion, undoubtedly, means judicial discretion and not whim, caprice or fancy of a judge. Powers of review cannot be invoked unless it is shown that there is error apparent on the face of the record in the order sought to be reviewed.

---

390. NSS Narayana Sarma v Goldstone Exports Pvt Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 251.

Where a decree is passed in respect of the same property which is mentioned in the schedule of the plaint, objection of the judgment debtor for correction of the decree is untenable, more so when application for correction of decree has been rejected up to the stage of appeal.[391] The issue as to whether the decree has been discharged or satisfied has to be determined by the executing court under section 47 of the CPC and the executive court must execute the decree as it stands without adding anything to it.[392]

The exercise of powers under section 47 of the CPC is microscopic and lies in a very narrow inspection hole. Thus, it is plain that the executing court can allow objection under section 47 of the CPC to the executability of the decree if it is found that the same is void ab initio and null, apart from the ground that decree is not capable of execution under law either because the same was passed in ignorance of such a provision of law or the law was promulgated making a decree inexecutable after its passing.[393]

In an execution proceeding, an objection was raised that land measuring 2.792 acres appurtenant to the bungalow was resumed in terms of the notice dated 23 September 1970 and taken over by Union of India. The said notice was not assailed by the grantees before any court or authority. The possession of the resumed land appurtenant to the bungalow was taken over and was also not assailed. The said land appurtenant to the bungalow had been utilised by the Union of India for the construction of barracks. The entire extent of 2.792 acres of land including the one under the barracks could, therefore, be taken over pursuant to the resumption order which was never assailed and had thereby attained finality. On these facts, it was held that possession of the above extent of land could not be taken away from the Union of India for delivery to the decree-holders since after resumption of the property and the taking over of the possession by Union of India in exercise of its rights as the paramount title-holder, it was no longer holding the same as a tenant so as to be answerable to the petitioners as its landlords. The Union of India was on the contrary holding the resumed property in its own right and in a capacity that was different from the one in which it had suffered the decree for eviction. It was accordingly held that this was a significant change in the circumstances in which the decree was passed rendering it inexecutable.[394]

[s 47.5] Inconsistency Between Judgment and Decree

It is the settled proposition of law that while there is some inconsistency between the judgment and the decree, the real intendment of the result of the suit should be gathered by re-conciliation between the judgment and the decree. Neither the decree nor the judgment should be read in isolation, but in combination. The executing court is duty bound to give effect to the decree in its substance and should not pass any order rendering the judgment a futile attempt.

Where the executing court failed to take into consideration the "interest" imposed by the trial court in passing the preliminary decree followed by final decree, decree holder was

---

391. Bandi Prasad Rao v P. Hari Kesavulu, AIR 2007 AP 125 : (2007) 1 Andh LT 629.
392. Kohinoor Transporters v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR Online 2018 SC 135 : (2018) 6 Andh LD 77 : (2018) 10 Scale 50.
393. Dhurandhar Prasad Singh v Jai Prakash University, AIR 2001 SC 2552.
394. Arun Lal v UOI, (2010) 14 SCC 384.

directed to submit a draft calculation sheet to assist the executing court and writ execution was to be issued after proper calculation.[395]

In Land Acquisition proceedings, if the award of a reference court or that of an appellate court does not specifically refer to the question of interest on solatium or in cases where a claim had not been made and rejected either expressly or impliedly by the reference court or the appellate court, and merely interest on compensation is awarded, then it would be open to the execution court to say that the compensation awarded includes solatium and in such an event interest on the amount could be directed to be deposited in execution.[396]

In Land Acquisition Collector, Mohali v Surinder Kaur,[397] the respondent, after about two years from the date of reference judgment, filed an execution petition seeking direction to the appellant to pay the compensation. The appellant filed objection under section 47 pleading that the determination made by the reference court was erroneous. The objection was rejected by the execution court as well as by the high court. The Supreme Court dismissed the appeal filed by the appellant and held that while deciding the objections under section 47, the Additional District Judge (ADJ) did not have the jurisdiction to go into the legality or correctness of the judgment by which compensation was awarded to the respondent. If the appellants felt aggrieved by the judgment, then they should have filed an appeal under section 54 of the Act. Having failed to do that, the appellants cannot seek modification of the judgment in an execution petition.

[s 47.6] Bar of Suit

The bar for suit under section 47 of the CPC could be applicable only in cases where the question can be determined by the court executing the decree. Once it is clear that the civil court is not the court executing the decree for partition of the estate which is subject to the assessment for payment of revenue to the government, the bar provided under section 47 of the CPC for an independent suit by the parties to the decree cannot come in the way of the party approaching the court with such suit regarding the grievance. Undoubtedly, the scope of such suit will be subject to the other laws which may bar the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain the suit. For example, in cases of the questions to be determined under the said Act, certainly the civil courts will have no jurisdiction to entertain any suit in that regard. It will be exclusively for the competent authority under the said Act to decide those issues in view of the provisions of sections 36A and 36B of the said Act read with the decision of the Supreme Court in Shevantabai Maruti Kalhatkar's case.[398]

[s 47.7] Execution Petition — Signing of

It is not necessary that the decree-holder sign execution petition, but the court should be satisfied that the person signing the execution petition was acquainted with the facts of the case.[399] The signing of the execution petition is a ministerial act and that can be done by any person who is acquainted with the facts of the case.[400] It is very clear that the execution petition

---

395. State Bank of India v Maa Sarada Oil Mills, AIR 2003 Gau 22.
396. Chhanga Singh v UOI, (2012) 5 SCC 763 [Gurpreet Singh v UOI, (2006) 8 SCC 457 followed; Sunder v UOI, AIR 2001 SC 3516: (2001) 7 SCC 211 referred to]
397. Land Acquisition Collector, Mohali v Surinder Kaur, (2013) 10 SCC 623 : (2013) 10 Scale 406.
398. Prakash Nathyaba Bhosale v Laxman Ganabe Bhosale, AIR 2003 Bom 41; Shevantabai Maruti Kalhatkar v Ramu Rakhamaji Kalhatkar, AIR 1999 SC 2623.
399. Kopargaon Sahakari Society v Deorao, AIR 1976 Bom 333.
400. Lilavati v Municipal Corp Bombay 66 Bom LR 868.

presented by the secretary of the trust is properly and legally presented before the court. It is not necessary that all the trustees and decree-holders should sign the execution petition.[401]

[s 47.8] Executing Court Cannot go Behind Decree

The executing court has no jurisdiction to go behind decree.[402] The executing court has no right to vary terms of the decree, however erroneous it may be in execution proceedings. Any order passed by the executing court by travelling beyond decree/order under execution would render such orders as without jurisdiction.[403] Thus, where the trial court passed decree for payment of principal amount with simple interest only, the executing court cannot grant compound interest, thereby varying terms of decree. If, however, the order is passed by the executing court construing simple interest as compound interest, the revision against such order is maintainable.[404]

In the execution of a decree for payment of money, the decree was silent with respect to a payment of interest. It was held that the executing court cannot go beyond the decree and award interest.[405]

In the execution proceeding relating to a decree for regularisation of services of teacher and for payment of arrears of salary, a direction by the executing court to pay arrears of salary "as per Government Scale" was held by Supreme Court to be not justified on the ground that the executing court is required to execute the decree as made and it has no jurisdiction to widen its scope or add to it unless a specific question is raised relating to discharge or satisfaction of the decree as envisaged in section 47 of the CPC.[406] Altamas Kabir, J, (as he then was) speaking for the Division Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> When there were conflicting claims regarding the salary payable to Respondent 1, the said respondent ought to have taken steps to amend the prayers in the plaint so that proper relief could be provided to her. The same not having been done, the executing court had no jurisdiction to go beyond the decree as passed, despite the fact that the trial Judge had noticed the dispute and had even decided the same.[407]

In a money decree, the court granting decree had prescribed the mode of recovery. It was held by the Supreme Court that the order of the executing court altering the manner of recovery of the decretal amount was erroneous and not sustainable.[408]

[s 47.9] Execution Petition by Trust — Filing of

No doubt, section 47 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 prohibits the trustees from delegating the powers, but the explanation to section 47 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 reads as follows:

> The appointment of an attorney or proxy to do an act merely ministerial and involving no independent discretion is not a delegation within the meaning of this section.

---

401. Monalisa Rohinton Irani v Naval H Tata, AIR 2001 Bom 495.
402. SP Mishra v Mohd Laiquddin Khan, (2019) 10 SCC 329.
403. S Bhaskaran v Sebastian, (2019) 9 SCC 161.
404. State of Bihar v Mijaj International, AIR 2004 Jhar 29.
405. O Sreenivasulu v P. Santhi, AIR 2007 AP 115 : (2007) 2 Andh LD 175 : (2007) 2 Andh LT 673.
406. Vedic Girls Senior Secondary School, Arya Samaj Mandir, Jhajjar v Rajwanti, AIR 2007 SC 1779 : (2007) 5 SCC 97.
407. Vedic Girls Senior Secondary School, Arya Samaj Mandir, Jhajjar v Rajwanti, AIR 2007 SC 1779, at p 1782 : (2007) 5 SCC 97.
408. Radhey Shyam Gupta v Punjab National Bank, AIR 2009 SC 930 : (2009) 1 SCC 376.

It means that ministerial acts can be performed by a person who is authorised by the trustees to do the needful. Learned counsel for the petitioners has argued that no such authorisation is filed by the secretary before the court to show that he can sign the execution petition on behalf of the trust. However, when the court was satisfied that the secretary was acquainted with the facts of the case and could file proceedings, there does not seem to be any substance in this contention. Actual authorisation signed by all the trustees may not be there on record, but if the trust-deed provided such delegation of powers, then the secretary can definitely file execution petition before the court.[409]

On reading the provisions of section 47 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 and the provisions of O XXI, rule 11(2) of the CPC together, it is very clear that the court before which execution petition is filed has to satisfy itself with the authority of the person who has filed the execution petition. That has happened in this case and, therefore, no objection can be raised on this point.[410]

It is very clear that the execution petition presented by the secretary of the trust is properly and legally presented before the court. It is not necessary that all the trustees and decree-holders should sign the execution petition.[411]

[s 47.10] Decree in Nullity

In an application under section 47, the question that a decree is not executable being a nullity can be raised, and the executing court can decide the question. In such cases, the question of acquiescence will not be relevant. A decree which is a nullity in the eye of law is no decree, and hence even by consent of the parties, such a decree cannot be executed by the court. Even if the judgment-debtor did not raise the question, but for this reason it cannot be denied the remedy available to it under section 47 of the CPC. If the court finds that the decree is a nullity, as contended by the judgment-debtor, the court cannot proceed to execute it, and it is the duty of the court to hold that the decree is not executable.[412]

Any objection that a decree was incorrect in law cannot be taken in an execution proceeding. A decree, even if erroneous, is still binding between parties. However, when a decree is a nullity i.e., where the same has been made by a court which had no inherent jurisdiction to make it, its nullity can be set up in an execution proceeding, as lack of jurisdiction goes to the root of the competence of the court. Refusal of the executing court to execute such a decree will not amount to going behind the decree.[413]

A final decree drawn against a dead man is a nullity and cannot be executed against his legal representatives. However, in the case at hand, the plea was not taken by the legal representatives in their first petitioner and raised the plea of the death of the defendant before final decree. In the circumstances, the plea was held to be not tenable.[414]

[s 47.11] To What Decrees the Section Applies

This section presupposes the existence of a decree which is capable of execution. It does not apply to cases where the decree sought to be executed is either a nullity or declaratory in

---

409. Monalisa Rohinton Irani v Naval H Tata, AIR 2001 Bom 495.
410. Monalisa Rohinton Irani v Naval H Tata, AIR 2001 Bom 495.
411. Monalisa Rohinton Irani v Naval H Tata, AIR 2001 Bom 495.
412. Saraswat Trading Agency v UOI, AIR 2004 Cal 267.
413. RS Bajwa & Co v State of Chhattisgarh, AIR 2008 CHG 75 : (2008) 4 MPHT 105.
414. Nilamani Pradhan v Narottam Pradhan, AIR 2008 Ori 185 : (2008) Supp OLR 877.

character. A decree is a nullity when it has been passed by a court having no jurisdiction or against a dead person. A decree passed by a court without jurisdiction is no decree, and therefore falls outside the scope of this section.[415] Inherent lack of jurisdiction is to be distinguished from lack of territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction. In the former case, the court entirely lacks jurisdiction either because the subject matter is foreign to its jurisdiction or the defendant was dead, when the decree was passed or some such ground by reason of which the court could not have seizing of the case.[416] If the defendant dies before the suit is concluded, and yet a decree is passed without bringing his legal representatives on record, the decree is a nullity and incapable of execution. If, in such a case, an application to execute the decree against a legal representative is made, its validity can be challenged in execution proceedings.[417] If a property is taken in execution, such a legal representative can sue to recover it.[418] At one time, the view taken by several high courts was that the question relating to the validity of a decree is not one pertaining to its execution, discharge or satisfaction. Hence, such a question was outside the scope of this section and should be tried in a suit and not in execution proceedings.[419] However, the Supreme Court in Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan,[420] held that though a court executing a decree cannot go into the question of correctness or legality of a decree, it can entertain the objection that it is a nullity on the ground that the court which passed it had no jurisdiction to pass it.[421] This is not going behind the decree, since, the decree being null and void, there is no decree at all.[422] The next question is whether a suit which raises the question of nullity of a decree is barred under this section. There is authority for the view that it is.[423] The High Court of Patna has held that where property was sold in execution of a decree but at the time of the sale, the title thereto was not in the judgment-debtor but in another, the sale was a nullity. Accordingly, the successor-in-title could challenge such a state by an application under this section and not by a suit.[424] If the court which passes the decree lacks inherent jurisdiction, the decree would obviously be a nullity and can be challenged at the stage of execution. In such a case, the execution court does not go behind the decree, since there is no decree at all. Once the question of want of jurisdiction is raised but overruled, it cannot be raised again and would be treated inter parties that the court had inherent jurisdiction.[425] Question of validity of decree is

---

415. Ram Narain v Suraj Narain, AIR 1934 Oudh 75 (FB) : (1934) 9 Luck 435, Hans Raj v Niranjan Lal, AIR 1952 Punj 159; Nandagopal v Baidyanath, AIR 1957 Pat 87.
416. V Appannammanayuralu v B Sreeramulu, AIR 1978 AP 160.
417. Radha Prasad v Lal Saheb, (1891) 13 All 53 : 17 IA 150; Janardhan v Ramachandra, (1903) 26 Bom 317; Sripat v Tribeni, (1918) 40 All 423; Imdad Ali v Jagan Lal, (1895) 17 All 478; Narendra v Gopal, (1912) 17 Cal LJ 634; Subramania v Vaidyanatha, (1915) 38 Mad 602; Jangli Lal v Laddu Ram, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 240 (FB). Where the defendant died after the hearing was concluded but before judgment was pronounced, the decree was held to be valid on the nunc pro tunc, doctrine—Chetan v Balbhadra, (1891) 21 All 314; see also Munna Koer v Durga Prasad, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 192.
418. Beni Prasad v Mukteswar, (1899) 21 All 316; Mahabir v Narain, AIR 1931 All 490 (FB), (1932) 54 All 25; Cantonment Board v Kishen Lal, AIR 1934 All 609 (FB) : ILR 57 All 1.
419. Chintaman v Chintaman, (1898) 22 Bom 475; Gomathan v Komandur, (1904) 27 Mad 318; Rangasami v Tirupati, (1905) 28 Mad 26; Kumareetta v Sabapathy, (1907) 30 Mad 26; Khetrapal v Shyama, (1904) 32 Cal 265; Liladhar v Chathurbuj, (1899) 21 All 277; Hira Lal v Parmeshwar, (1899) 21 All 356; Ragha v Gopal, AIR 1930 Bom 132 : (1930) 54 Bom 162; Ajoy Kumar v Pushpabala, AIR 1952 Assam 54 : 1951 ILR Assam 522.
420. Kiran Singh v Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340 : (1955) 1 SCR 117 : (1954) SCJ 514.
421. See notes to section 38 under the heading "Power of execution court".
422. Sundar Dass v Ram Prakash, AIR 1977 SC 1201 : (1977) 2 SCC 602 : (1977) 3 SCR 60.
423. Shivaji v Vital, AIR 1927 Bom 53 : 28 Bom LR 1367; Dadu v Tukaram, AIR 1959 Bom 221; Ballkrishna v Shantilal, AIR 1961 Bom 56 : (1960) Bom 554 : 62 Bom LR 410; Ballabhadas v Parmal, AIR 1961 MP 36.
424. Central Bank of India v Vaibi Das, AIR 1968 Pat 32.
425. Prahalad Dora v State, AIR 1969 Ori 21 : 34 Cut LT 1175.

not one relating to its discharge or satisfaction, and cannot be gone into by executing court.[426] If a court grants a decree even when the suit is barred by time, the court would be committing an illegality and the remedy of the aggrieved party is to get it set aside by preferring an appeal against it. So long as the court is having jurisdiction, the decree cannot be ignored even if it is erroneous and the only way of correcting it is by preferring an appeal or revision. It is not open to a party to contend in another suit or in collateral proceedings that a decree passed against him is void, merely on the ground of illegality. The execution court cannot go beyond a decree.[427] Delivering property not covered by the decree is "action in excess of the decree". In such a case, judgment-debtor should apply under section 47 and should not file a separate suit.[428] A question as to the identity of the property in respect of which the decree is sought to be executed, cannot be gone into by the executing court, under section 47, according to the Bombay High Court.[429] The ratio of these decisions is that a party to a decree has not merely the right to raise the objection of nullity of a decree in execution proceedings but is bound to do so. Consequently, an order for execution operates constructively, as res judicata. The bar to a separate suit arises not under this section but under section 11 on the ground that such a plea is one which a party not merely might but ought to have put forward in execution proceedings.

Declaratory decrees do not fall within this section for the reason that rights declared by such decrees can only be enforced by a suit.[430] But a decree passed in terms of an award, providing that on the happening of an event, the vendor shall be entitled to take back possession of the property does not make the award declaratory and therefore inexecutable.[431] A declaratory decree does not bar a subsequent suit for possession. Section 47 does not bar the suit, because a declaratory decree could not have been executed.[432] A decree for specific performance is not to be construed as declaratory merely because it does not provide when the purchase amount has to be paid and is executable.[433] Similarly, the fact that the decretal amount is not mentioned but which can be ascertained on the construction of the decree, does not make it incapable of execution.[434] Proceedings taken pursuant to a preliminary decree are proceedings in a pending suit and do not fall within this section. This is also so, where the decree is partly preliminary and partly final in so far as it relates to matters which are preliminary.[435] A decree passed on an award in a dispute relating to division of properties under Aliyasanthana law is in the nature of the preliminary decree. Hence, an application to carry it out is a proceeding in a suit.[436] A partition decree entitling the parties to be put in possession of allotted properties on payment of necessary court fees will not be hit by this section.[437] A final decree was passed in a suit for partition. Subsequently, there was interference with plaintiff's possession over the allotted portion. It was held that suit filed by the plaintiff for injunction to restrain the defendant from interference with possession was not barred. Subsequent acts of the defendants give rise to fresh cause of action.[438] The judgment of the trial court, and the preliminary decree based on it, mentioned the exclusion of certain properties from partition. In appeal, the high court did not

---

426. Ganapathi v Balasubramania Gounder, AIR 1987 Mad 124.
427. V Chinna Lakshmaiah v Samurla Ramaiah, AIR 1991 AP 177.
428. Gopal Krishna Kamath v R Bhaskar Rao, AIR 1989 Ker 251.
429. MT Gore v VR Kolhatkar, AIR 1980 Bom 277.
430. Ramaswami v Mudhiah, AIR 1925 Mad 279 : (1925) 48 Mad 482.
431. Prakash Chand v Harnam Singh, AIR 1973 SC 2065 : (1973) 2 SCC 481.
432. Rajendra Narain v Bajrang, AIR 1983 All 364.
433. Ramakrishna v Mukund Shankar, AIR 1963 All 49.
434. Bapurao v Hanumanthrao, AIR 1950 Hyd 48.
435. Dharam Dutt v Ram Lal, AIR 1957 P&H 161.
436. M Hegde v Meenakshi, AIR 1960 Mys 193.
437. Noha Haja v Veeram, AIR 1942 Mad 364.
438. Ram Lakhan Tewari v Ram Samujh Tewari, AIR 1981 All 211.

set aside that particular direction. It was held that the question of exclusion of that property could not be raised at a subsequent stage before the executing court.[439] But a decree directing the defendant to pay maintenance and charging it on the property is a composite decree and is executable.[440] Question whether suit premises falls within "slum area" is a mixed question of law and fact. It cannot be raised for the first time, in execution proceedings.[441] Proceedings under section 21 of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, are in the nature of execution, provisions of the CPC are applicable.[442] The question whether a decree is executable or not is to be decided by the executing court.[443] The objectors to the execution of the decree of the subordinate judge (as passed in appeal against dismissal of the title suit) raised the plea that the interest of one minor plaintiff who attained majority during pendency of suit could not be represented by the holder of power of attorney on behalf of all the plaintiffs. This point (though raised by the party concerned) was not considered by the subordinate judge. However, the high court, in second appeal, did not enter into the question on the ground that that was a question of fact. The objector's grievance on this score did not appear to be unfounded. But nothing could be done in this regard in the execution proceeding, since that would definitely amount to interfering with the decree as passed by the subordinate judge and as confirmed by high court. The objectors might seek their relief in this regard in some other proceeding, if permissible by law.[444] Decree for eviction, on ground of default in payment of rent, was based on evidence. There was absence of findings regarding the ground of eviction in the judgment and decree. It was held that this did not make the decree void or inexecutable.

In the case of a declaratory decree, the successful party cannot be allowed to suffer when the decision of the civil court, which has attained finality is not honoured by the judgment-debtor. Thus, where employees of a private college recognised and aided by Government of West Bengal were granted a decree declaring them class-III employees entitled to benefits and privileges attached to those posts, they were within their rights to move the high court under Article 226 of the Constitution. It was held by the Supreme Court that the high court, while granting the reliefs prayed for in the writ petition was not acting as an executing court.[445]

A party cannot suffer on account of the lapse of the court and a party cannot be wronged for an act or omission of the court. If a party proves its case, it is the duty of the court to grant relief. The court cannot afford to be unmindful to the ground of eviction, duly proved in evidence. An absence of judicial finding in spite of evidence to substantiate the ground of eviction, cannot render a decree void.[446] Judgment-debtor, in an Allahabad case, objected to the execution of a money decree on the ground that he was a "professional" decree-holder. But as no evidence was produced to support the objection, it was not entertained.[447] There are certain well-recognised exceptions to the ordinary rule that the executing court is not entitled to go behind the decree. When the decree is a nullity or the decree-holder has lost the right to execute the decree on account of a subsequent change in the law or some subsequent development, then the executing court can take note of the change in the situation and can refuse to execute the decree on that basis. The decree, under execution was not only a nullity on

---

439. Babusaheb Singh v Parsid Narain Singh, AIR 1991 SC 1731.
440. Govindamal v Chidambara, AIR 1963 Mad 215.
441. Bhaurao v Savitribai, AIR 1991 Bom 55.
442. Pokhraj Jain v Padma Kashyap, AIR 1990 Del 159.
443. Chandmul v Vishnu Sarma, AIR 1953 Ajm 43.
444. Lichubala Biswas v Jindar Mondal, AIR 1990 Cal 151.
445. State of West Bengal v Kamala Prasad, AIR 2010 SC 1456 : (2010) 4 SCC 568.
446. Satpal Tandon v Jyotsna Ghosh, AIR 1991 Cal 228.
447. Madan Lal v District Judge Pauri Garhwal, AIR 1988 All 40.

the date it was passed, but had also been rendered inexecutable on account of the subsequent order passed by the authority by accepting the claim of the judgment-debtors to remain in possession of the land. Thus, the decree-holder had lost his right to recover possession of the land from the judgment-debtors. Therefore, the rejection of an application filed under section 47, challenging the validity and executability of the decree was illegal.[448] Where the executing court held that the arbitrator had jurisdiction to pass the award and that the due notices were given to the parties and reasonable opportunity was afforded, the omission of the reasons from the award could not render it non est and a nullity. A decree which can be said to be non est and a nullity is the one which a court having no jurisdiction to pass it, passed it, or it was a decree against a dead person or against a person who, at no stage was legally present before the court which passed the decree.[449] The executing court can very well decline to execute a decree, if it is satisfied that it is a nullity. When it does so, it is not to be regarded as going behind the decree, for the simple reason, that there is no decree at all to go behind.[450]

The question whether a particular decree is executable, falls within section 47. It is a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.[451] The question of in-executability of the decree is included within "execution discharge or satisfaction" of the decree. Hence a dispute about second instalments not being paid is covered.[452] Eviction decree was passed. Appeal was dismissed. Plea was taken that decree in revision was not executable, as it was passed against a tenant who died. It was held that decree was executable and was not a nullity. In the revision petition filed by S, the high court was not satisfied that there existed any ground warranting interference with the judgment and decree passed by the appellate court below. The death of section did not, in any way, make the judgment invalid, in as much as it was passed in a revision under section 115 of the CPC, in which the high court could even suo motu call for the records and dispose of it after examining them and satisfying itself that the order of the subordinate court did not suffer from any infirmity specified in section 115 of the CPC. The death of S did not affect the revisional power of the high court and therefore, the validity of the judgment passed in revision could not be challenged before the executing court.[453] Under State Financial Corporations Act, 1951, section 32, the district judge had no jurisdiction to allow future interest while making the order. It is well-settled law that the executing court can go into the question whether or not the decree, or order under execution, is without jurisdiction and to refuse to execute the decree or order under execution is without jurisdiction and to refuse to execute the decree or order in case it is found to be without jurisdiction. This is because a decree or order passed by a court without jurisdiction, is a nullity and its invalidity can be set up whenever and wherever it is sought to be enforced or relied upon. Under the circumstances, the court below erred in rejecting the petitioner's contention about want of jurisdiction to avoid future interest.[454] Execution application did not mention date of decree, nor did it specify movable or immovable property sought to be attached. Judgment-debtor did not raise objection as to existence of fatal defects in the application for execution of decree before executing court or appellate court. It was held that such objection would not be allowed to be raised in revision.[455] A decree for specific performance of an agreement to sale

---

448. Radha Dei v Lalit Bihari Mohanty, AIR 1991 Ori 36.
449. Hoshiarpur Central Co-op Bank Ltd v Urmar Harmonium Reed Workshop CIS Ltd. AIR 1989 P&H 245 (DB).
450. VS Alwar Ayyannagar v Gurusamy Thevar, AIR 1981 Mad 354.
451. State of Uttar Pradesh v Matendra Tripathi, AIR 1984 All 59.
452. UOI v SB Singh, AIR 1988 All 225.
453. Rahima Khatun v On the death of Samser Ali his LRs Amrun Nahar, AIR 1985 Gau 40.
454. Laxmi Furniture and Saw Mills v HPFC, AIR 1985 HP 108.
455. Ghulam Nabi Khan v Abdul Gani Khan, AIR 1981 J&K 103.

land, directed division of the plot into two portions and then sell, subject to permission of the local authority. Judgment-debtor's application for such permission was refused. It was held that the judgment-debtor could seek a declaration that the decree had become inexecutable in the circumstances. He need not wait till the decree-holder applied for execution.[456] When the execution court allowed the execution petition of the mortgager for delivery of possession and set the heirs of the mortgagee ex parte, the court could not, on basis of the office note, that final decree is not passed, suo motu review and set aside its earlier order for delivery of possession and dismiss the execution petition.[457] The appellant was the owner of the suit property. His title suit against his tenant for ejectment and mesne profit was decreed, subject to payment of compensation for the structure raised by the tenant. The appellant filed a second titled suit not only against the original title suit but also against the respondent, who is alleged to be a sub-tenant. The respondent pleaded that he was a sub-tenant of the original tenant, that he had acquired title to the site and structures either by purchase from the tenant or by adverse position and that the decree in the earlier suit had become barred by limitation. The question before the Supreme Court was, whether the decree in the earlier suit bars the subsequent suit. The Hon'ble Supreme Court observed that in view of provisions of rules 35 and 36 of O XXI, of the CPC and Article 136 of the Schedule of the Limitation Act, 1963, no independent suit for recovery of possession of the property, which is the subject matter of the decree, would lie. All questions arising between the parties or their representatives, relating to execution or satisfaction of that decree, should also be determined by the executing court and not by a separate suit. However, the condition precedent for applicability of the said provision is that a person in possession should have derivative title of tenancy rights of the demised property, that is, the subject matter in execution through the judgment-debtor in the suit.[458]

By reasons of his own plea of ownership by purchase or adverse possession, it was not open to him to claim any right as a tenant under the appellant's tenant or as a sub-tenant of the appellant. His tenancy right with the appellant's tenant, having been merged into his ownership right, he denied himself of the right under section 47 read with O XXI, rule 36 of the CPC.

Where objection in an execution proceeding was raised under section 47 of the CPC that the execution proceeding was premature and hence vitiated on account of not being maintainable, it was held by Supreme Court that the principles applicable to suits filed prematurely would apply to such a premature execution proceeding.[459]

A decree for possession was passed ex parte. The execution was struck off, in full satisfaction, on 26 July 1965. Thereafter, the ex parte decree was set aside. The suit land was again found to be in possession of the defendant. After contest, another decree was passed. When that decree was sought to be executed, it was contended on behalf of the judgment-debtor that the decree was not executable because the possession had been already delivered under the first decree. It was held that the objection could not be sustained. What was now being executed was not the same decree. Once an ex parte decree has been set aside, it becomes non est and it is only the subsequent decree, passed after contest, which is to be treated as (the) decree in the suit and it is that decree alone which can be executed.[460] Decree-holder purchased certain properties in court auction. Application was made by him for possession. Plea by judgment-debtor

---

456. Narinder Kumar v HC Mehta, AIR 1987 Del 275.
457. Krishnan v Muthu Gounder, AIR 1997 Mad 57.
458. Indian Iron and Steel Co Ltd v Chagan Lal Marwari, (1994) Supp 3 SCC 719.
459. Pushpa Sahakari Avas Samiti Ltd v Gangotri Sahakari Avas Samiti Ltd, (2012) 4 SCC 751.
460. Salim Sultan v Third Addl District Judge, AIR 1983 All 32.

was, that, he, being one of the co-owners, the decree-holder was entitled only to symbolic possession and not to khas possession. It was held that the judgment-debtor's entire right in the property having been sold in auction, he could not resist delivery of possession to the decree-holder, auction purchaser. The judgment-debtor could, but for section 47, have instituted a suit for declaration of the right, and also for consequential relief. Such rights of the judgment-debtor can be agitated only in a proceeding initiated under section 47, and not otherwise. The judgment-debtor's rights in properties in their entirety had been sold in public auction. The decree-holder purchaser, thus, stepped into the shoes of the judgment-debtor. Persons who can raise any objection in regard to the delivery of khas possession can, at best, be the persons who could claim to be the co-owners along with the decree-holder purchaser.[461] The plaintiffs sued for their title to the disputed land and for restraining the principal defendants from disturbing possession therein. The suit was dismissed by the trial court but allowed by the subordinate judge. Defendants' appeal from this judgment and decree was dismissed by the high court. Plaintiffs put the decree of subordinate judge to execution for recovery of possession of suit lands after evicting the defendants therefrom, and for recovery of costs, etc. It was held that this execution petition must be taken to be an application for execution of the high court's decree. There was no necessity for amending the execution petition.[462] Where there is obstruction to the delivery of possession of premises and application is made by the landlord for removal of the obstruction, the executing court can adjudicate the matter, even if the obstruction is by a person who is independently in possession of the premises. The Amendment Act of 1976 has inserted (in O XXI), new rules 98 to 104, in conformity with the legislative policy of entrusting the determination of all questions including question as to the title of the concerned party, to the executing court. The scope of the proceeding has been widened so as to include all questions arising between the parties and relevant to the adjudication of the application.[463] A sale held without drawing up a proclamation under O XXI, rule 66, is void. Judgment-debtor's application to challenge the sale cannot be dismissed merely because it is filed under O XXI, rule 90 instead of under section 47.[464] Decree was passed for eviction and arrears of rent. Decree was executed against the property of intervener in that eviction suit. Intervener filed a separate suit for declaration of title, confirmation of possession and permanent injunction against decree-holder. It was held that though no prayer for conversion of the suit into proceeding under section 47 had been made, such an order could be made under clause 18.[465]

[s 47.12] Section to be Construed Liberally

It is well-settled that no suit will lie on an executable judgment. The only remedy on such a judgment is by way of execution.[466] The section prohibits any relief being granted in a separate suit which will interfere with the conduct of proceedings by the court executing the decree.[467] The section lays down the principle that matters relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree and arising between the parties including the purchaser of a sale in execution should be determined in execution proceedings and not by a separate suit. It

---

461. Joseph alias Kunjachan v Sethyappa, AIR 1991 Ker 120.
462. Lichubala Biswas v Jindar Mondal, AIR 1990 Cal 151.
463. N Palaniappan v G Pandwangan, AIR 1990 Mad 327.
464. Jagannathan v Angamuthu Pillai, AIR 1990 Mad 226.
465. Jugal Kishore Singh v Lakshmi Kumari, AIR 1981 Ori 121.
466. Ramanand v Jai Ram, AIR 1921 All 369 : (1921) 43 All 170; Ramaswami v Muthiah, AIR 1925 Mad 279 : (1925) 48 Mad 482.
467. Azizan v Matuklal, (1896) 21 Cal 437; Lal Das v Kishore Das, (1896) 22 Bom 463.

matters not whether such a question arises before or after the decree has been executed.[468] The object of the section is to provide a cheap and expeditious procedure for the trial of such questions without recourse to a separate suit and to check needless litigation. This was what was expressed by the Privy Council in regard to the Codes of 1861 and 1882.[469] In conformity with these pronouncements a liberal construction has been consistently placed upon the section.[470] Accordingly, the court could convert till recently a suit which would be hit by this section into a proceeding under it and vice versa.[471]

On the other hand, the conditions which bar a separate suit must not be lost sight of. This conditions refers:

(a) to the questions; and

(b) to the parties.

The questions must relate to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. The parties must be the parties to the suit or their representatives. If both these conditions are fulfilled, the question must be determined in execution proceedings and a separate suit will be barred.

Altering the terms of the decree must be clearly understood in contrast of construing a decree or interpreting a decree or giving clarity to its terms and conditions. In the garb of the latter, the court cannot create a new decree which is neither intended nor passed by the court of competent jurisdiction. Executing court can provide clarity, interpret or construe the decree, while keeping the decree as passed by the court of competent jurisdiction, intact and undisturbed. While exercising its jurisdiction, if the executing court in the guise of these ingredients materially alters the terms and conditions of the decree to the prejudice of any of the parties to the decree, which ought to have, if at all, falls in the domain of courts of competent jurisdiction, i.e. appellate or the court that passed the decree, certainly the executing court would outgress its jurisdiction as an executing court.

Permitting an executing court to alter the terms of the decree, would be opposed to all settled canons of civil jurisprudence. A decree which has been passed and has not be assailed in the regular appeals, which were available to the parties against whom the decree was passed, such party cannot be permitted to abuse the process of law before the executing court to alter the decree which has attained finality in all respects.[472]

A decree was held to be inexecutable on the grounds of being without jurisdiction in view of interpretation of the then prevailing law. The legislature, subsequently clarifying its intention, conferred jurisdiction on such courts with retrospective effect. Such a decree does not become extinct but remains only dormant which would be revived as a result of amendment and would become executable.[473] It is a settled principal of law that it is not incumbent upon the executing court that it must put to trial every objections which are filed in any execution

---

468. Imdad Ali v Jagan Lal, (1895) 17 All 478; Collector of Jaunpur v Bithal Das, (1902) 24 All 291; Gopi Rai v Rambhanjan, AIR 1922 Pat 166 : (1922) 1 Pat 336.
469. Chaudry Wahed v Jumabe, (1873) 11 Beng LR 149, 155; Prosunno Kumar v Kali Das, (1895) 19 Cal 683 : 19 IA 166; Amir Chand v Bakshi, (1916) 30 Mad LJ 238 : 32 IC 354 (PC).
470. Set Umedmal v Srinath, (1900) 27 Cal 810; Goberdan v Bishan, (1901) 23 All 116, 118; Jamini Nath v Dharma Das, (1906) 33 Cal 857; Amar Chandra v Sebak Chand, (1907) 34 Cal 642; Ram Chand v Shamas Din, AIR 1938 Lah 690; Durga Devi v Shanti Prakash, AIR 1961 P&H 229 : (1960) 1 Punj 731; Chhtradharilal v Shyamabai, AIR 1966 MP 67 : 1965 MPLJ 627.
471. Charu Chandra v Birendra Nath, AIR 1970 Cal 34 : (1969) 2 Cal 656: 73 Cal WN 645.
472. Gurde v Singh v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1998 P&H 106.
473. Dularey Lodh v Third Addl District Judge, Kanpur, (1984) 3 SCC 99.

proceedings, even if prima facie they appear to be frivolous, vexatious and are only intended to delay the execution and frustrate the procedure of law or where it amounts to an abuse of the process of the court.[474] Unnecessary prolongation of litigation sometimes results even in frustrating the decree itself. Such an attempt on the part of the objector to frustrate a decree is a mischief which has to be prevented by due process of law and expeditious decision of such ill-founded and frivolous objections would also be in the interest of justice and within the permissible field of jurisdiction of the execution.[475] In cases where all sorts of mischievous and dishonest tactics are resorted to in order to delay or defraud the execution, the executing courts must be absolutely firm and ruthless in stopping such unhealthy practices. This is absolutely essential because otherwise the rule of law would not only be set but it would virtually nullify and neutralise the orders of competent courts.[476] In Amalendu Kumar Bera,[477] the decree was passed in respect of declaration of title and permanent injunction restraining the State from interfering with the possession of the suit property of the appellant. When the State tried to interfere with possession, the decree-holder filed for execution of the decree with regard to interference with possession and the State filed a revision petition. The Supreme Court rejected the same by holding that the delay in filing the execution case cannot be a ground to condone the delay in filing the revision against the order refusing to entertain objection under section 47. The court held that merely because the respondent is a State, delay in filing the appeal or revision cannot and shall not be mechanically considered and in the absence of "sufficient cause", delay shall not be condoned.

Opportunity to object to executability of the decree could be taken only once and repeated applications are unwarranted.[478] It is a settled proposition that the execution court cannot permit execution of a decree different from the decree passed by the appropriate competent court. By amendment of the execution petition, the opposite party no. 3 inserted only that description which was given in the house rent claim petition and in respect of which the house rent controller passed the order of eviction. It appears that original execution petition did not contain any detailed description of the premises in question. The decree-holder opposite party no. 3 did not change or alter or substitute any description, but merely supplied the description to rectify an omission. If the decree-holder had sought to introduce a description different from the description given in the house rent controller petition, the judgment-debtor petitioner might have a legitimate grievance.[479] Law is well-settled that an executing court cannot go behind the decree except when the decree is a nullity or without its jurisdiction.[480] But if the executing court has gone or travelled beyond terms of the decree and has set up a new case, which is not the case of the party, then nothing could prevent the high court from exercising its revisional jurisdiction in either setting aside the said decree or correcting its jurisdictional errors.[481] Mere use of the words "struck off in full satisfaction" would not mean that the decree has been satisfied and no further execution can take place.[482] A question which

---

474. Rock Tyres, Chandigarh v Ajit Jain, AIR 1998 P&H 202.
475. Also see "If frivolous objections of the present kind are permitted to unreasonably and unnecessarily prolong the delivery of possession to a decree-holder, in accordance with law, it would certainly amount to putting a premium on abuse of process of law". B Gangadhar v BG Rajalingam, AIR 1996 SC 780; Jagdish Narain v Satish Chand Goswami, AIR 1997 Raj 209.
476. Vigneshwar v Ganga Bai Coam Narayan Bhat Prasad, AIR 1997 Kant 149.
477. Amalendu Kumar Bera v State of West Bengal, (2013) 4 SCC 52 : (2013) 2 Pat LJR (SC) 397.
478. RPA Valliammal v R Palanichami Nadar, (1997) 10 SCC 209.
479. Chloride India Ltd v District Judge, Puri, AIR 1997 Ori 135 (DB).
480. Arjun Sethi v LA Collector, Cuttak, AIR 1998 Ori 34; State Bank of India v Indexport Registered, AIR 1992 SC 1740 : (1992) 3 SCC 159 (FB).
481. Man Industrial Corp Ltd v RFC, AIR 1997 Raj 108.
482. Sarish Chandra v The 17th Addl District Judge, Lucknow, AIR 1994 All 117.

could not have been raised as defence in the suit cannot be raised after the decree is passed. Decree, as defined in section 2(2) of the CPC, means the formal expression of an adjudication which, so far as regards the court expressing it, conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in the controversy in the suit.

Once it is so determined and expressed formally in decree, setting up a new case or right for investigation in execution thereof would amount to going behind the decree.[483]

An executing court has jurisdiction while executing the decree to examine the executability of the decree.[484] So long as on the face of the decree a partner of a firm is the decree-holder, the executing court cannot refuse to disburse the amount deposited by the judgment-debtor to the certified decree-holder on the allegation that decree was really in favour of the firm, hence all the partners are entitled to the decretal amount.[485] Non-impleadment of judgment-debtors who have no interest in the case will not invalidate the execution proceedings.[486] The questions to be determined by a court dealing with a preliminary decree, before passing a final decree, may not be the one under section 47 but still, the transfer of decree by assignment and writing is covered by O XXI, rule 16 of the CPC for the purpose of execution.[487] In case of a joint decree where the shares of the parties are distinct or separable, even though some of the decree-holders have transferred their shares to the judgment-debtor, the decree does not become inexecutable as a whole, but can be executed by one of the decree-holders under the provisions of O XXI, rule 15 of the CPC at least to the extent of the share of the decree-holder. Where, in the decree, the share of the plaintiffs have not been specified and it was a joint decree passed in favour of the decree-holders, such a decree could be executed as a whole by one of the joint decree-holders, especially when the other decree-holders who have allegedly transferred their shares in the property did not come to oppose the application or denied that the same were not for their benefit.[488]

[s 47.13] Transfer of Execution to Collector — Effect

In a suit for partition, once the court passes the decree declaring shares of the parties in an undivided estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the government and orders division and separate possession of such estate in accordance with the shares so declared, then the court is enjoined to direct such partition or separation be effected by the Collector or any Gazetted Officer subordinate to Collector deputed by him in that behalf. Further, in order to give meaningful effect to such declaration and directions issued in terms of section 54 read with O XX, rule 18(1) of the CPC, the court is further enjoined to send the relevant papers to the concerned Collector or Gazetted Officer. Once the papers are transmitted to the revenue officer, the court passing the decree for partition under O XX, rule 18(1) of CPC becomes functus officio in relation to the decree for partition passed by it and all further proceedings for the execution of such decree are to be carried out by the concerned revenue officer. The civil court is not the executing court for the purpose of execution of the decree for partition of the estate which is subject to the assessment for payment of revenue to the government. Being so, the question of approaching the civil court under section 47 of the CPC with the grievance

---

483. Basu Dev v The Fourth Addl District Judge, Jhansi, AIR 1997 All 288.
484. Kamta Prasad v The Second Addl Judge, Mainpuri, AIR 1997 All 201; Tokerimum Nisa v Sultana Khanan, AIR 1993 Ori 34; Potti Venkata Kasi v VV Vyas, AIR 1983 AP 64.
485. Baaji Govindan v Kerala State Housing Board, Thiruvananthapuram, AIR 1999 Ker 31 (DB).
486. Jaseentha Joseph v Louius Neeklauusc, AIR 1997 Ker 40.
487. Atava Akkulamma v Gajjela Papi Reddy, AIR 1995 AP 166.
488. Lalita Devi v Kamla Devi, AIR 1995 All 21.

regarding non-compliance of such decree or acts in contravention thereof or in violation of law by the revenue officer in the course of execution of such decree does not arise at all. Certainly, the provisions of O XXI of the CPC would not be attracted in such cases as the execution of a decree is not by the civil court. Being so, neither the provisions of section 47 nor those of O XXI can be of any help in such cases. Further, the matters pertaining to the execution of such decrees cannot be dealt with under the exercise of inherent powers under section 151 of the CPC. Undoubtedly, therefore, it can be said that the grievance relating to refusal of the revenue officer to execute the decree and therefore, direction for the execution to be carried out in terms of the decree, i.e., as per the declaration of shares under O XX, rule 18 of the CPC can be entertained by the civil court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction to pass order under section 151 of the CPC for compliance of the said declaration, i.e., for execution of the decree in accordance with the terms thereof. Therefore, in cases of contravention of provisions of law or transgression of law or non-enforceability of the decree for partition on account of events occurring subsequent to the passing of such decrees or in relation to the similar such grievances, the limited control which can be exercised by the civil courts can be only by way of an independent suit. The bar for suit under section 47 of the CPC could be applicable only in cases where the question can be determined by the court executing the decree. Once it is clear that the civil court is not the court executing the decree for partition of the estate which is subject to the assessment for payment of revenue to the government, the bar provided under section 47 of the CPC for an independent suit by the parties to the decree cannot come in the way of the party approaching the court with such suit regarding the grievance in relation the execution of the partition decree.[489]

[s 47.14] "And not by a suit" — Whether Objection to Execution can be Raised by way of Defence

The section provides that all questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, shall be determined by the court executing the decree and not by a separate suit. The words "and not by a separate suit" have given rise to the question whether, if a party to a suit fails to raise an objection to execution in execution proceedings, he may raise it by way of defence, in a suit brought against him. In Bhiram Ali v Gopi Kanth,[490] the High Court of Calcutta held that he is entitled to raise the objection by way of defence. The ground of the decision was that what is prohibited by the section is the determination of question relating to execution by a separate suit and not their determination in a separate suit. Bhiram Ali's case and the Calcutta cases which followed it, have been overruled by a later full bench ruling of the same high court in Lakshman Chandra v Ramdas Mandal.[491] The grounds of the decision are:

(i) that the words "shall be determined by the court executing the decree" amount to a direction that the executing court alone shall determine questions relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, thus giving the court executing the decree exclusive jurisdiction to determine such questions; and

(ii) that the prohibition conveyed by the words "and not by a separate suit" is a provision in aid of the previous direction.

---

489. Prakash Nathyaba Bhosale v Laxman Ganaba Bhosale, AIR 2003 Bom 41.
490. Bhiram Ali v Gopi Kanth, (1897) 24 Cal 355.
491. Lakshman Chandra v Ramdas Mandal, AIR 1929 Cal 374 : (1929) 57 Cal 403 : 33 Cal WN 795.

In the full bench case, the decree was satisfied by an adjustment, but the adjustment was not certified to the court as required by O XXI, rule 2. The decree-holder applied for execution and the judgment-debtor's property was put up for sale and purchased by the decree-holder himself. The decree-holder afterwards sued the judgment-debtor for possession. The judgment-debtor contended that the decree had been satisfied and that the sale was therefore fraudulent and void. It was held that the judgment-debtor was precluded by this section from raising this defence. The full bench held that it did not make any difference whether the objection was raised by the judgment-debtor by a suit of his own or by way of defence in a suit brought against him. O XXI, rule 2, is not limited to the particular judgment-debtor who makes the adjustment; and one judgment-debtor cannot plead in defence an uncertified adjustment or payment made by another judgment-debtor.[492] Similarly, if A obtains a decree against B as the legal representative of C, and in execution of that decree, property alleged to be belonging to the estate of C is sold and purchased by P and P sues for possession, B is barred from contending that the property belonged to him and did not form part of C's estate.[493]

Bhiram Ali's case has been followed by the Madras High Court in several decisions.[494] The Madras decisions require reconsideration in view of the Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court referred to above.

In an execution of a decree, where the Executing Court passed orders confirming auction sale, the Andhra Pradesh High Court held that to get the order of auction and confirmation of sale set aside, a separate suit is barred by section 47 and O XXI, rule 92 of the CPC.[495]

[s 47.15] Compromise

The parties have the option to contest legal disputes or compromise them prior to disposal of the suit during execution proceedings.

In the following sub-headings, such options of compromise between the parties and their implications are considered.

[s 47.15.1] Decree on Compromise of Suit

If a suit ends in a compromise decree, a subsequent suit to enforce a term in the decree, which related to a matter not raised by any of the issues in the suit but was a consideration for the matter in suit and constituted a necessary and integral part of the adjustment of claim in the suit is barred under this section.[496] But where the compromise decree comprises matters outside the scope of the suit and there is no operative clause therein relating to them, a suit with respect to them is not barred.[497]

---

492. Harihar v Bhubneshwar, AIR 1936 Pat 270 : (1936) 15 Pat 422.
493. Beni Madhab v Rai Charan, AIR 1929 Cal 247 : (1929) 56 Cal 467; U Tin v Maung Sein, AIR 1931 Rang 117 (FB) : (1931) 9 Rang 305; Sukhdeo v Donger, AIR 1935 All 588 : (1935) All LJ 490.
494. Venkataramanachariar v Meenatchisundararamaiyer, (1909) 19 Mad LJ 1; Thathu Naick v Kondu Reddi, (1909) 32 Mad 242; Munshi China Dandasi v Munishi Pedda Tatiah, AIR 1921 Mad 279 : (1921) 41 Mad LJ 261.
495. Y Prasad Rao v P Venkat Raju, AIR 2007 AP 142 : (2007) 3 Andh LT 403.
496. Rabindranath v Dhirendranath, AIR 1940 Cal 82 : (1940) 43 Cal WN 1007; Kalyandas v Ganga Bai, AIR 1961 MP 67.
497. Jagdish Chandra v Kameshwar, AIR 1953 Pat 178 : ILR 31 Pat 851.

A suit to set aside a consent decree on the allegation that it was obtained by fraud or misrepresentation is not barred, as such allegations do not relate to execution of the decree but to the impeachment of the decree itself.[498]

The consent decree cannot be defeated on the ground that the third party has been illegally inducted by the judgement-debtor. The executing court will be fully justified in ignoring the said transfer as completely null and void.[499]

A Division Bench of the Delhi High Court has held that a settlement decree passed by a Court on the basis of a compromise must be executed and should not be interfered with, by modifying the decree or going behind the decree. Thus, where in a partition suit the parties settled the dispute on terms and conditions specifically recorded in a settlement and a compromise decree was passed on the said terms and conditions, stay of sale of the property on the ground that the appellant was prepared to pay the amount of Rs 10 lacs to the decree-holder to save the ancestral property cannot be allowed.[500]

[s 47.15.2] Compromise Prior to a Decree

The discussion, thus far, has been with reference to agreements relating to execution, discharge and satisfaction of a decree entered into after it has been passed. But where such an agreement is entered into before the decree is passed, the question has been discussed whether it could be set up in bar of execution. On that, judicial opinion is divided. One of the earliest decisions on the question is that of the Full Bench of the Bombay High Court in Laldas v Kishendas,[501] wherein it was held that it could be determined in execution. In Binoda v Rajendra,[502] it was held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court that a court executing the decree could not go into an agreement entered into, prior thereto, whether it related to the enforcement of the whole decree or its satisfaction in part. This has been consistently followed in that court[503] and it has also been observed that the remedy of the party aggrieved by a breach of the agreement was to enforce his rights thereunder in a separate suit and move for an injunction restraining the decree-holder from executing the decree. This view has been adopted by the High Courts of Rangoon,[504] Lahore,[505] Nagpur[506] and Punjab.[507] In Madras, the question was considered by a Full Bench in Chidambara v Krishna,[508] wherein it was held by the majority following the long-standing practice of the court[509] that a pre-decree agreement could be pleaded in execution proceedings and that it fell outside O XXI, rule 2 as that was applicable only to agreements entered into subsequent to the passing of the

---

498. Addisons Paints and Chemicals v Sant Ram, AIR 1976 Del 137.
499. Prataprai Trambakalal Mehta v Jayant Nemchand Shah, AIR 1996 Bom 296.
500. Gyan Devi v Smt. Leela Devi, AIR 2007 Del 240 (DB).
501. Laldas v Kishendas, (1898) 22 Bom 463; followed in Burjorij v Madhavlal, AIR 1934 Bom 370.
502. Binoda v Rajendra, (1902) 29 Cal 810 (FB).
503. Choti Narain v Kameswar, (1902) 6 Cal WN 796; Hasan Ali Gauzi Ali, (1904) 31 Cal 179; Harendranath v Gopal Chandra, AIR 1935 Cal 177.
504. Mulla v Maung Po, AIR 1928 Rang 140 : (1928) 4 Rang 118; Moolla v The Chartered Bank of India, AIR 1928 Rang 36 : (1927) 5 Rang 685.
505. Dilsukh Rai v Lakshman Das, AIR 1927 Lah 894 : (1927) 9 Lah LJ 7; Robert Hercules v Skinner, (1937) Lah 209, AIR 1937 Lah 537.
506. Bhasker Dattareya v Nilkant, AIR 1938 Ngp 265.
507. Co-op Bank v Ram Sarup, AIR 1953 P&H 267.
508. Chidambara v Krishna, AIR 1918 Mad 1174 (FB) : ILR 40 Mad 233 : 32 Mad LJ 13.
509. Rama Iyer v Srinivasa Pathar, ILR 19 Mad 230; Rukmani v Krishnamacharya, 9 Mad LT 464; Krishnamachariar v Rukmani, 15 Mad LJ 370; Subramanya v Kumaravelu, 39 Mad 541; Velu v Krishnaswami, AIR 1925 Mad 591 : 48 Mad LJ 277, and Venkatasubba v Manickammal, AIR 1926 Mad 582, wherein Chidambara v Krishna, supra was followed.

decree. The precise scope of this decision was the subject matter of consideration in latter cases.[510] The question was again considered by a later full bench of the same high court,[511] which held that a distinction should be made between an agreement which related to the mode of execution or satisfaction of a decree and one which had the effect of rendering the decree nugatory and inexecutable in whole or in part, and that while the former could be pleaded in execution, the latter could not be.[512] This Full Bench decision of Madras High Court[513] was followed by the Punjab and Haryana High Court[514] in the recent past and it was held that in execution proceedings initiated for the execution of decree pre-decretal decisions, compromise or any arrangement could not be pleaded to defeat the execution. Where an agreement made subsequent to the suit but before the decree was passed, constituted an understanding that the decree, when passed, should not be executed, the agreement can be pleaded in execution proceedings as it relates to execution.[515] But executability of compromise decree not incorporating stipulation of executability in event of non-compliance by parties does not strip the decree of its executability.[516] In Allahabad, the trend of the authorities was in favour of the view that pre-decree agreements could be pleaded in execution.[517] In Krishna Raj Trading Corp v Ram Saran,[518] that court has, however, held on a review of the authorities that such agreements could not be pleaded in execution. The High Court of Andhra Pradesh has held, following the decisions of the Madras High Court, that pre-decree agreements could be set up in execution.[519] In Ramasubbu v Sankararam,[520] the High Court of Kerala has held that such agreements could not be pleaded in execution but the question would appear to have been left open in a later decision.[521] The only remedy of a person who wishes to challenge a compromise decree on the ground of fraud is to file a suit for setting aside the said decree. Such an objection cannot be entertained during the course of execution proceedings.[522]

In a case relating to specific performance of contract, the parties entered into a compromise before decree, and a decree was passed in terms of the compromise. The decree, as per terms of agreement, was executable within a period of one month. After more than four years, the decree holder sought to execute the decree. The Jharkhand High Court held that the execution proceeding was not filed in the court which passed the decree, and as such the executing court was bound to confine itself within the scope of the decree itself and had no jurisdiction to grant any extension of time for performance of the contract under the decree.[523]

Company A sought execution against Company B of a compromise decree. Under that decree, Company B was to take over the entire share holding of Company A in a detergent company. But, before execution, the detergent company was ordered to be wound up. Section 536(2) of the Companies Act, 1956 prohibits transfer of shares of a company which is

---

510. Butchayya v Tayar Rao, AIR 1931 Mad 399: (1930) 54 Mad 184 : 60 Mad LJ 721 where the authorities are discussed.
511. See also Pappanna v Venkayya, AIR 1935 Mad 860 : ILR 58 Mad 994 : 69 Mad LJ 451; Perumalsami v Rajammal, AIR 1955 Mad 339 : 68 LW 233.
512. Sha Manmall Misrimall v K Radhakrishnan, AIR 1972 Mad 108 : (1971) 2 Mad LJ 487.
513. Adappa Papamma v Venkayya, AIR 1935 Mad 860 (FB).
514. Harnam Singh v Arbindu Nath, AIR 2004 P & H 210.
515. Rangaswamy Reddiar v CJ Ammal, AIR 1974 Mad 6.
516. Gopal Lal v Babu Lal, AIR 2004 Raj 273.
517. Gowri Singh v Gajadhar Das, 6 All LJ 403; Narain v Basudev, AIR 1950 All 427.
518. Krishna Raj Trading Corpn v Ram Saran, AIR 1962 All 374 : (1962) 1 All LJ 423.
519. Ratan Chand Firm v Subramanyam, AIR 1960 AP 324.
520. Ramasubbu v Sankararam, AIR 1951 Tr & Coch 216.
521. Usman v Mammooty, AIR 1961 Ker 179.
522. Mohammad Aleem v Maqsood Alam, AIR 1989 Raj 43.
523. Md. Hanif Khan v Naresh Prasad, AIR 2010 Jhar 73 : 2010 AIR Jhar R 564.

to be wound up. It was held that Company B could not be freed to pay for and purchase the shares. A's application was not maintainable.[524] In a suit filed by the plaintiff for a declaration that he was the owner of the property and not the tenant of the defendant, the compromise decree was passed setting the question of ownership of the property. It was agreed that the defendant was the owner of the property. Further, parties agreed that on payment of a certain sum by the plaintiff, a reconveyance deed would be executed by the defendant. The question of tenancy was also settled, and the plaintiffs were required to pay enhanced rent. It was held that, in essence, the compromise was relating to the subject matter of the suit. Simply because the reconveyance was to be executed, it cannot be said that it was a fresh contract capable of enforcement by way of a suit for specific performance. As the compromise had merged into a decree, there was no separate agreement in existence. The only thing existing was the decree, containing the compromise agreement. Since this compromise agreement had ceased to exist, it could not be enforced by way of a separate suit. The decree could be put to execution, if the defendant had failed to execute it within the time mentioned in the compromise.[525]

[s 47.15.3] Compromise of a Decree

The general power of deciding questions in relation to execution, discharge or satisfaction of decree under section 47 can thus be exercised subject to the restriction placed by O XXI, rule 2, including sub-rule (3), containing special provisions relating to payment of money due under a decree outside the court or in any other manner adjusting the decree. The general provision under section 47 has, therefore, to yield to that extent to the special provisions contained in O XXI, rule 2 which have been enacted to prevent a judgment-debtor from setting up false or fabricated pleas so as to prolong or delay the execution proceedings.[526]

The expression "or the decree of any kind is otherwise adjusted" are of wide amplitude. It is open to the parties namely, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor to enter into a contract or compromise in regard to their rights and obligations under the decree. If such contract or compromise amounts to an adjustment of the decree, it has to be recorded by the court under rule 2 of O XXI. It may be pointed out that an agreement, contract or compromise which has the effect of extinguishing the decree in whole or in part on account of decree being satisfied to that extent will amount to an adjustment of the decree within the meaning of the rule and the court, if approached, will issue the certificate of adjustment. An uncertified payment of money or adjustment which is not recorded by the court under O XXI, rule 2 cannot be recognised by the executing court. In a situation like this, the only enquiry that the executing court can do is to find out whether the plea taken on its face value, amounts to adjustment or satisfaction of decree, wholly or in part, and whether such adjustment or satisfaction had the effect of extinguishing the decree to that extent. If the executing court comes to the conclusion that the decree was adjusted wholly or in part but the compromise or adjustment or satisfaction was not recorded and/or certified by the court, the executing court would not recognise them and will proceed to execute the decree.[527]

The CPC does not restrict the liberty of the parties to enter into an agreement with reference to their rights and obligations under the decree. If the parties contract upon the terms which have reference to and affect the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, questions relating to such terms would have to be determined by the executing court. An adjustment

---

524. Transport Corp of India Ltd v Haryana State Industrial Corp Ltd, AIR 1991 P&H 225.
525. Bishambar Nath Agarwal v Kishan Chand, AIR 1990 All 65 (DB).
526. Padma Ben Banushali v Yogendra Rathore, AIR 2006 SC 2167 : (2006) 12 SCC 138.
527. Padma Ben Banushali v Yogendra Rathore, AIR 2006 SC 2167 : (2006) 12 SCC 138.

not recorded under O XXI, rule 2 would, no doubt, not be recognised by a court executing the decree.[528] But no suit will lie to enforce an adjustment failing within this section.[529] A compromise in execution proceedings providing for a mode of discharge of the decree, does not itself discharge a decree. Therefore, all questions arising on the agreement are matters to be determined in execution and not in a separate suit.[530] Thus, where an award provides payment by instalments and further provides that on payment of such instalments, the decree shall be taken as satisfied, the judgment-debtor can rely on the award before the executing court that the decree has been already satisfied.[531] Similarly, a compromise entered in an execution proceeding by which execution is postponed on an undertaking by the judgment-debtor to pay interest at a higher rate than the decretal rate is enforceable in execution proceedings. The jurisdiction of the executing court to enforce such a compromise is not taken away by O XXIII, rule 4.[532] In so executing the compromise, the executing court has the power to determine whether it contains a penal clause or a fresh contract and to grant relief on that basis.[533] Where a compromise contains a clause for penal forfeiture, equitable relief against such a clause can be granted when time is not the essence of the contract.[534] Where the parties have entered into an agreement against the execution of a decree, a question would arise whether such an agreement is a bar to the execution. Whether there is such a bar, depends upon the nature of the agreement and the intention of the parties. If the agreement supersedes the decree and the decree is abandoned, the contract could be the basis for a subsequent suit. If it is not so, it would be the executing court which would determine all questions relating to such an agreement.[535] For example, if after obtaining a decree for possession by eviction of the tenant from the demised premises, the decree-holder creates a fresh tenancy, the decree is not adjusted under O XXIII, rule 2 so as to require certification. The judgment-debtor can object under this section that the fresh tenancy created in his favour made the decree un-executable.[536]

Section 47 mandates determination by an executing court, questions arising between the parties or their representatives relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree and does not contemplate any adjudication beyond the same. A decree of a court of law being sacrosanct in nature, the execution thereof cannot to be thwarted on mere asking and on untenable and purported grounds having no bearing on the validity or the executability thereof.[537]

In order to enforce a term of a decree of compromise which ended in dismissal, it can be satisfied only by means of an independent suit, unless, of course, in the compromise, it is stated that the terms so stipulated in the compromise petition are enforceable by means of an execution, despite a decree of dismissal. In the instant case, the earlier suit, being a title suit, had ended in a decree by compromise. Hence, the plaintiff ought to have levied an execution order to satisfy the terms of decree, instead of maintaining an independent suit for specific

---

528. The Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd, Fyzabad v Bind Band Kuer, AIR 1939 PC 80 : 66 IA 84, p 101 : (1939) 41 Bom LR 708; Bhiki v Kundanlal, AIR 1940 All 107 : (1939) All LJ 1051; Chaube Mahendra Rao v Lala Bishambar Nath, AIR 1940 All 270 (FB).
529. Ganpat Rao v Sridhar, AIR 1955 Bom 64 : ILR 1955 Bom 57 : 56 Bom LR 1005.
530. Bharat Bank v Sehgal Bros, AIR 1960 P&H 459; affirmed on appeal Sehgal Bros v Bharat Bank, AIR 1961 P&H 439.
531. Haridas Mundra v Mahabir, AIR 1975 Cal 357 : 79 Cal WN 810.
532. Motilal v Md Hssan Khan, AIR 1968 SC 1087 : (1968) 2 SCJ 824.
533. Gandhi Gopaldas v Lalitabai, AIR 1971 Guj 270 : 12 Guj LR 492.
534. Deepchand v Ticamchand, AIR 1974 Cal 222.
535. Parmananda v Bhagabati Dei, AIR 1969 Ori 32 : 34 Cut LJ 1121.
536. Chitra Talkies v Durga Dass, AIR 1973 All 40 : (1972) 2 All 90.
537. Brakewel Automotive Components India Pvt Ltd v PR Selvam Alagappan, LNIND 2017 SC 126.

performance of a contract.[538] In a compromise decree, one party included some other part of the property by giving up a part of the claim. It was held that the decree is not one relating to some extraneous matter and was executable.[539] A compromise providing for a new decree in place of a decree already under execution is not executable, but the same is not true of a compromise which regulates the mode of payment of the decree under execution. Any such compromise is executable, as such matter rests upon the intention of the parties as expressed in agreement, than on anything else.[540] Under the consent decree, A undertook to execute a sale deed in respect of the land in his possession and cultivation, in favour of V, within 15 days of the date of the decree. It was held that it was only when the judgment-debtor A expresses his readiness and willingness to execute the deed of conveyance, the decree-holder was under obligation to pay the consideration. As a matter of fact, the judgment-debtor had, hardly within five days of the passing of the consent decree, executed the conveyance deed in favour of K. In that state of affairs, v could not have tendered the amount. The executing court was clearly in error in expressing its inability to extend the time under O XX, rule 14. Even if the consent decree in question is taken as a decree for pre-emption in respect of a particular sale of the property, the decree did not specify any date on which the pre-emptor, i.e., the decree-holder, had to deposit the amount, failing which the suit stood dismissed. The court would not be justified in rejecting the execution of the decree on the ground that the decree-holder had failed to pay the amount of consideration.[541] The only remedy of a person who wishes to challenge a compromise decree on the ground of fraud is to file a suit for setting aside the said decree. Such an objection cannot be entertained during the course of execution proceedings.[542] Concession was given to the defendant by a compromise decree. Lesser amount was agreed to be received, but not in full acquittance of the suit claim. It was held that what was granted to the defendants under the decree, was only a concession and the plaintiff did not agree to the full quittance of the claim. Therefore, the default clause would not be a penalty and the defendants could not invoke the benefit of section 74 of the Contract Act, 1872.[543] A suit was filed by the plaintiff for a declaration that he was the owner of the property and not the tenant of the defendant. A compromise decree was passed, settling the question of ownership of the property, and it was agreed upon, that the defendant was the owner of the property and further they agreed, that on payment of certain sum by the plaintiff, a reconveyance deed would be executed by the defendant. The question of tenancy was also settled, and the plaintiffs were required to pay at the enhanced rate of rent. It was held that essentially, the compromise was relating to the subject matter of the suit. Simply because the reconveyance deed was to be executed, it cannot be said that it was a fresh contract and capable of enforcement by way of a suit for specific performance. As the compromise had merged into the decree, there was no separate agreement at all, in existence. Only because a period of two years was allowed to the plaintiff to pay the amount for reconveyance and the rent, that would not affect the executability of the decree. The decree could be put to execution, if the defendant had failed to execute it within the time mentioned in compromise.[544] Where the compromise decree between the parties provided that the defendant would be liable to be evicted from the suit land after expiry of 10 years "by appropriate action in court of law", the plaintiff's ejecting the defendants from the suit land in their possession by taking appropriate legal action by filing a

---

538. Nebubala Sardar v Abdul Aziz Baidya, AIR 1991 Cal 402.
539. Brijlal v Roshanlal, AIR 1980 HP 13.
540. Ghulam Nabi Khan v Abdul Gani Khan, AIR 1981 J&K 103.
541. Kanbi Vaju Vasta Botad v Kanbi Popat Vasta, AIR 1985 Guj 184.
542. Mohammad Aleem v Maqsood Alam, AIR 1989 Raj 43.
543. N Kullayyappa v N Dastagiri Saheb, AIR 1982 AP 154.
544. Bishambar Nath Agarwal v Kishan Chand, AIR 1990 All 65 (DB).

suit for ejectment or in any other manner as may be permissible in law; but not by applying for execution of the compromise decree. The issue can only be adjudicated properly in an appropriate proceeding and not in an execution of a decree. Had the intention been to allow the defendant only permissive possession for a period of 10 years and ejectment thereafter in execution of the compromise decree, the decree would have so provided.[545]

[s 47.16] Agreement Modifying Terms of Decree

The question whether an agreement between the parties to a decree altering or modifying its terms could be enforced in execution, has been the subject of consideration in several cases. There was a large body of opinion in support of the view that it could not be the ground of the decisions, that a court executing the decree cannot go behind it and that it could only record an adjustment which would pro tanto discharge the decree or execute it according to its terms.[546] It was also further held that an agreement which is purely executory cannot be recognised as an adjustment.[547] Considering this question, the Privy Council observed in Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd v Thakurain Bind Basini Keur:[548]

> If it appears to the court acting under Section 47 that the true effect of the agreement was to discharge the decree forthwith in consideration of certain promises by the debtor, then, no doubt, the Court will not have occasion to enforce the agreement in execution proceedings but will leave the creditor to bring a separate suit. If, on the other hand, the agreement is intended to govern the liability of the debtor under the decree and to have effect upon the time or manner of its enforcement, it is a matter to be dealt with under Section 47. In such a case, to say that the creditor may perhaps have to file a separate suit is to misread the Code which be requiring all such matters to be dealt with in execution discloses a broader view of the scope and functions of the executing court.

On the basis of the above observations, it was held, in a number of decisions,[549] that the executing court should record not merely an agreement which results in the satisfaction of the decree, but also an executory agreement providing for a mode of discharge and that it would make no difference whether the agreement modifies or alters the decree.

The question was once again considered by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court and it was held, by a majority, that the decision in Oudh Commercial Bank's case did not change the law as laid down in the decisions previously and that an agreement altering the terms of a decree cannot be pleaded in execution.[550] The question has also been considered by the Punjab High Court which has held, differing from the Allahabad decision and by a majority, that an agreement modifying the terms of the decree could be pleaded in execution even though it did not, in itself, result in satisfaction of the decree and that in view of the decision in the Oudh Commercial Bank case, the earlier decisions taking a different view could not be followed.[551]

---

545. Bibekannanda Bhowal v Satindra Mohan Deb, AIR 1996 SC 1985.
546. Gobardan Das v Dau Dayal, AIR 1932 All 273 (FB) : ILR 54 All 573; Venkatagiri v Satagopa, 14 Mad LJ 359; Lodd Govinddas v Ramdas, AIR 1916 All 604; Azizur Rahman v Aliraja, AIR 1928 Cal 527.
547. Fateh Muhammad v Gopal Das, ILR : 7 All 424.
548. Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd v Thakurain Bind Basini Keur, AIR 1939 PC 80 : (1938-39) 66 IA 84.
549. Mahendra v Lala Bishembar, 1940 All 377 (FB); Bhiki Mal v Kundan Lal, AIR 1940 All 270; Chatrapati v Hari Ram, AIR 1940 All 423 : 1940 All 536; Ram Sevak v Ram Sadhari, AIR 1952 All 169; Durga Prasad v Ganga Bai, AIR 1958 All 387; Meg Raj v Kesariman, AIR 1948 Ngp 35 : 1947 ILR Nag 197.
550. Mahmud Hassain v Motilal, AIR 1961 All 1 (FB).
551. Sehgal Bros v Bharat Bank, ILR 1961 Punj 439; affirming Bharat Bank v Sehgal Bros, ILR 1960 Punj 459.

[s 47.17] Questions Relating to Execution, Discharge or Satisfaction

Questions relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree arising between the parties to the suit or their representatives are within this section and must be decided in execution and not by separate suit. Under Explanation II (b), all questions relating to delivery of possession are deemed to be questions relating to execution and therefore have to be tried under this section. The following are examples of such questions:

[s 47.17.1] Mis-description of Property

When the suit as to immovable property has been decreed and the property is not definitely identified, the defect in the court record caused by overlooking of provisions contained in O VII, rule 3 and O XX, rule 3 of the CPC is capable of being cured. After all, a successful plaintiff should not be deprived of the fruits of decree. Resort can be had to section 152 or section 47 of the CPC, depending on the facts and circumstances of each case which of the two provisions would be more appropriate, just and convenient to invoke. Being an inadvertent error, not affecting the merits of the case, it may be corrected under section 152 of the CPC by the court which passed the decree by supplying the omission. Alternatively, the exact description of decretal property may be ascertained by the executing court as a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of decree within the meaning of section 47 of the CPC. A decree of a competent court should not, as far as practicable, be allowed to be defeated on account of an accidental slip or omission.[552]

In a suit for specific performance of agreement to sell immovable property, the map of suit property was not annexed to plaint, and the defendants did not object to such fact promptly, the trial court did not insist on such map and the map was filed for the first time in execution proceedings. However, the draft sale deed accompanied by a notice requiring objections to be made by judgment-debtor as provided by sub-rule(2) of rule 34 of O XXI of the CPC was not caused to be served by the executing court, and the judgment-debtors repeatedly insisted, on draft sale deed being delivered to them enabling objections being filed and there was no determination by the executing court that the immovable property as delineated and demonstrated in the map accompanying the draft sale deed was the property forming the subject-matter of agreement to sell and the decree. The Supreme Court, observing that it was section 47 which would be invoked in the instant case, gave directions to the executing court to ascertain an exact description of property.[553]

In an execution of eviction decree, the delivery warrant was issued, and revision was filed against it. The revisional court, directing the execution court to first consider objection as to identity of suit property before issuing delivery warrant, further directed restoration of possession to tenant-judgment-debtor, since objection already settled in eviction proceedings the order was wholly erroneous, since the court cannot be asked to go behind the decree. The courts should see through such diabolic plans of judgment-debtor which deny the fruits of the decree to a decree-holder; cantankerous litigation of tenant-judgment-debtor is a bogey to delay eviction by abuse of process of court.[554]

In an execution of decree pertaining to agricultural produce which was passed on a suit seeking direction to the agricultural produce market committee for renewal of licence and

---

552. Pratibha Singh v Shanti Devi Prasad, AIR 2003 SC 643 : (2003) 2 SCC 330.
553. Pratibha Singh v Shanti Devi Prasad, AIR 2003 SC 643 : (2003) 2 SCC 330.
554. Ravinder Kaur v Ashok Kumar, AIR 2004 SC 904 : (2003) 8 SCC 289 : (2003) 1 SCW 7158.

allotment of vacant site. The decree was passed for allotment of vacant site in between sites 10/C and 11/2. The sketch map annexed to the report of advocate commissioner showed that there was drain of about two feet width between the two sites and there existed sufficient space and extent excluding the drainage portion for satisfying decree The high court, misread the report and misconstrued the physical features as disclosed by report and concluded the decree as not executable. The order of the high court was set aside by Supreme Court. The market committee was directed to allot space between site nos. 11/2 and 10/C which was vacant and preventive steps to be taken to avoid seepage of drain water, and non-creation of unhygienic conditions were directed to be incorporated in an undertaking along with the agreement.[555]

In the execution proceeding of a particular case, a decision on ground of uncertainty of decree was given. The commissioner's report described the suit land as bound on three sides by "nullah", whereas the decree mentioned that the three sides of suit land were bound by roads. "Road" included "nullah or drain" as per section 2 (xxiii) of Manipur Town and Country Planning Act, 1940. Therefore, there was no discrepancy in description of the boundaries of land and the objection was rejected.[556]

Where a decree for mandatory injunction was passed in favour of plaintiff directing defendants to hand over balcony occupied by them to plaintiff and no dimensions were initially mentioned in plaint and the judgment and the decree also did not refer to any dimensions nor did it incorporate any sketch from where dimensions could be gathered, it was held by the Supreme Court that at the stage of execution, the plaintiff cannot be permitted to file an amended site plan and seek amendment of decree.[557]

In an execution proceeding relating to an award by Arbitrator for possession of immovable property, the judgment–debtor filed objection on the ground that the property was not identifiable. It was found by the high court that a map was attached with the award in which all the required details were provided. It was also found that along with the revision petition copy of the Official Gazette has been annexed wherein clear-cut area and boundary of the property has been given. It was held that under these circumstances, the executing Court should have no difficulty in executing the award.[558]

[s 47.17.2] Property Wrongly Taken in Execution

If the decree-holder takes in execution land not included in the decree, or in excess of the decree, the judgment-debtor must apply under this section for the recovery of such land, and a separate suit for that purpose will not lie.[559] This is because the question whether a particular property is covered by a decree relates to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. It is for the executing court to satisfy itself, as to the identity of the property which is the subject matter of the decree. Such a question of identity arises where the decree-holder takes

---

555. P Varadarajulu v Agricultural Produce Market Committee, AIR 2004 SC 1989 : AIR 2004 SCW 2189 : (2004) 4 SCC 217.
556. K Shetrimayum Ibohal Singh v State of Manipur, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1367 (Gau) : (2006) 1 Gau LT 252.
557. Ramesh v Harbans Nagpal, (2015) 8 SCC 716 : 2015 (4) Scale 172.
558. Ram Agarwal v Brijendra Kaur, AIR 2008 Uttr.25 : 2008 (4) ALJ 176.
559. Duljeet v Rewal, (1878) 22 WR 435; Biru Mahata v Shyama Churn, (1895) 22 Cal 483; Pratab Singh v Beni Ram, (1880) 2 All 61; Abdul Karim v Islamun Nissa Bibi, (1916) 38 All 339; Ganapatrao v Anandrao, (1920) 44 Bom 97; Sharfu v Mirkhan, (1919) 1 Lah LJ 230; Rajaratnam v Sheikh Hasambi, AIR 1926 Mad 968 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 255; Radha Charan v Kailash, AIR 1928 Cal 776; Lakshminarayan v Laduram, AIR 1932 Bom 96 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 1557; Provita Sundari v Saroda Charan, AIR 1935 Cal 15 : (1934) 38 Cal WN 996; Ramanandam v Jaffer, ILR 33 Pat 394.

in execution land not included in the decree or in excess of the decree.[560] But where, in the redemption decree passed against defendants, an objection by one defendant judgment-debtor that his land was not part of the suit land, was not tenable if the objecting defendant had filed written statement in suit and such objection was not raised at preliminary decree stage or even at time of final decree.[561] The question that a property sold was not saleable in execution is one relating to discharge of the decree.[562]

In a case where a husband obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, the question whether the wife has done necessary acts in fulfilment of the decree is one for the executing court to decide.[563] In Merla Ramanna v Nallaparaju,[564] the Supreme Court observed:

> It is well settled that when a sale in execution of a decree is impugned on the ground that it is not warranted by the terms thereof, that question could be agitated, when it arises between the parties to a decree, only by an application under section 47, Civil Procedure Code and not in a separate suit.

Where in execution of a decree in ejectment, the decree-holder obtained possession and satisfaction of the decree was recorded and thereafter the judgment-debtor applied for redelivery on the ground that the order for delivery was illegal, it was held by the Supreme Court that the question whether the decree was completely satisfied and the court became functus officio was a question which related to the execution, satisfaction and discharge of the decree and should be tried under section 47.[565] But where a decree has been passed with reference to a property in which the rights of the judgment-debtor have lapsed as a result of a special statute and new rights in place of the old rights have been substituted, an execution to attach the property with reference to the old rights therein cannot lie.[566] The plaintiff obtained a decree against only one of the two defendants, but took in execution money that had been paid by the surety of the other defendant. The Privy Council said that the question was between parties to the suit and related to the satisfaction of the decree and that whatever remedy the aggrieved defendant had, section 47 precluded a suit against the plaintiff.[567] Where an application for delivery in execution of a decree for pre-emption is resisted by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the property in question was not the subject matter of the suit, the dispute is one which falls under section 47.[568] The decision in Kangali v Shyamsundar,[569] that when property not comprised in a mortgage decree was sold in execution thereof, the judgment-debtor could enforce his rights thereto in a suit and that section 47 was not a bar to its maintainability as the sale was a nullity does not appear to be correct. Where a decree-holder entitled to joint possession was given exclusive possession in execution, the application of the judgment-debtor to be put back in joint possession falls within this section and the fact that the decree had been executed does not affect the position.[570] An application for refund of excess amount realised in

---

560. M Pillai v PKV Naidu, AIR 1968 Mad 433 : (1968) 3 Mad 224 : (1968) 2 Mad LJ 472.
561. Narinder Singh v Kishan Singh with Thakar Dwara Bhagwan Narainji Dham through Mahant Govind Dass v Sarabjit Singh, AIR 2002 SC 2603 : (2002) 6 SCC 46.
562. CSJ Hussain v Rameshwar, AIR 1972 All 350 : (1972) All WR 174; Shiv Prasad v Talideri, AIR 1973 Raj 159.
563. MP Shreevastava v Veena, AIR, 1966 P&H 506 : 1965 Punj LR (supp) 135.
564. Merla Ramanna v Nallaparaju, AIR 1956 SC 87 : (1955) 2 SCR 938 : (1956) SCJ 101; Benares Ice Factory v Sukhlal, AIR 1961 Cal 422.
565. Patankar v Sastri, AIR 1961 SC 272 : (1961) 1 SCR 591 : (1961) 1 SCJ 221.
566. Vidya Sagar v Sudesh Kumari, AIR 1975 SC 2295 : (1976) 1 SCC 115 : (1976) 2 SCR 194.
567. Marret v Mahomed, AIR 1930 PC 86 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 425.
568. Tharapada Mishra v Hare Kishen, AIR 1957 Cal 335.
569. Kangali v Shyamsundar, AIR 1957 Ori 14 : (1956) Cut 631.
570. Sansarchand Mela Ram v Shamlal Danpat Rai, AIR 1957 P&H 307.

execution of a decree falls within this section and must be decided by the executing court even though satisfaction of the decree had been recorded.[571]

[s 47.17.3] Property Taken in Execution of Decree Subsequently Amended

If a mortgagee brings property to sale in execution of a decree for sale, and an error in the mortgage amount is subsequently discovered, the judgment-debtor claiming a refund of the excess,[572] or the decree-holder claiming to recover the deficit,[573] must apply under this section, and a separate suit will not lie. An objection by the judgment-debtor that the sale proclamation is not in accordance with the decree falls within this section.[574]

[s 47.17.4] Transfer of Property by Decree holder

Where decree holders were alleged to have transferred their right, title and interest in suit property in favour of third parties by registered deeds of conveyances, objection was taken under section 47 that properties stood vested in transferees and decree holders had no right to execute the decree. It was held that mere transfer of property is not transfer of decree and the executing court is bound to allow execution at instance of recorded decree holders, unless transferees approach under O XXI, rule 16.[575]

In an execution proceeding, where the right, title and interest of the decree-holder had been affirmed upto the second appellate stage, it was held by the Orissa High Court that a person who purchased the property during pendency of litigation is not entitled to challenge delivery of possession to the decree-holder. However, he can file a suit under section 144 CPC after the decree-holder recovers his possession. It is also open to the purchaser to file a suit for enforcing his right, if any, under the sale deed.[576]

[s 47.17.5] Property Taken in Execution of Ex parte Decree Set Aside

If property is realised in execution of an ex parte decree which is afterwards set aside, the judgment-debtor must apply for restitution under this section.[577] There is, however, a conflict of decisions as to whether this case falls under section 144.[578] Where a court sale in favour of the decree-holder purchaser was set aside under section 23 of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act, 1938, a suit by the judgment-debtor to recover possession of the property was held to be not barred under this section as it did not relate to execution, discharge and satisfaction of the decree.[579]

---

571. Raja Babu v Sayed Mahomed, AIR 1961 Raj 227.
572. Harnam v Muhammad, (1905) 27 All 485; Dhan Kunwar v Mahtab Singh, (1900) 22 All 79.
573. Nilratan v Ram Rattan, (1901) 5 Cal WN 627.
574. Varkey v Bhaskaran, AIR 1958 Ker 78; Gayaprosad v Dhanrupmal, AIR 1954 Cal 492.
575. Sarwari Begum v Nazir Ahmed, AIR 2003 Cal 230.
576. Sanjukta Sahoo v Sailabala Mishra, AIR 2009 Ori 62 : 2009 (107) Cut LT 32 : 2009(2) Civil Court Cases 795.
577. Saran v Bhagwan, (1903) 25 All 441; Swamirao v Valentine, (1920) 44 Bom 702; Ratnasi Agariya v Jay Singh, AIR 1955 Ngp 29 : ILR 1955 Nag 425.
578. See note under that section, "Where the decree is varied or reversed".
579. C. Mukkayi v Pattavumma, AIR 1955 Mad 173; Ayisumma v Kunhammayan, AIR 1958 Ker 84.

[s 47.17.6] Quantum

The court must determine the quantum which the debtor is bound to pay. But where the trial court has left that question open for being considered at the time of execution, the executing court ought to determine the quantum and dispose of the issue.[580]

[s 47.17.7] Injunction Granted by Decree

A suit to enforce a permanent injunction granted by a decree is barred by this section. The remedy is by execution.[581] But this is so only when the injunction granted is a mandatory injunction. A suit for appropriate relief with respect to breach of a perpetual injunction is not barred.[582]

[s 47.17.8] Objections to Attachment or Sale by Parties or their Representatives

See notes below under the same heading.

[s 47.17.9] Surety

The surety contracts: "Trust the borrower, I undertake to be responsible" or "if he does not pay I will". This is the basic postulate or essence of the contract of guarantee. A surety in the eyes of law is a favoured debtor. Under section 128 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, save as otherwise provided in the contract, the liability of the surety is co-extensive with that of the principal debtor. The surety thus becomes liable to pay the entire amount. His liability is immediate and simultaneous. It is not deferred until the creditor exhausts his remedies against the principal debtor either personally or against the property mortgaged or hypothecated by him. The creditor gets the right to recover the amount straightway from the surety. The right of the creditor to proceed against the surety is not dependent or contingent upon his remedy being exhausted against the borrower. The creditor cannot be asked to pursue his remedies against the principal debtor either personally or against his mortgaged or hypothecated property in the first instance.[583]

Where the principal debtor, on payment of certain amount, offered to pay balance in monthly instalments of Rs 1,000, the executing court directed accordingly and closed proceedings. No objection was ever raised by decree-holder to the new set of rights and obligations that emerged thereby, to which the surety had never been party. In view thereof it could be said that surety has been relieved of his liability by principal debtor and no fresh execution proceeding can be filed against the surety alone.[584]

Once the decree-holder chose to proceed against any one of judgment-debtors and realised the decretal amount to certain extent, he could not proceed against other, unless he exhausted his remedies vis-a-vis the former.[585]

---

580. State Bank of Travancore v Devassia Joseph, AIR 1990 Ker 195.
581. Sachi Prasad v Amarnath, (1919) 46 Cal 103; Yosef v Moses, AIR 1931 Bom 490 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 114.
582. Ajab Rao v Atmaram, AIR 1954 Nag 245 : (1954) Nag 332; Joseph v Makkaru, AIR 1960 Ker 127. For further discussion see notes under O XXI, rule 32(5).
583. State Bank of India v Goutmi Devi Gupta, AIR 2002 MP 81.
584. C Laxmaiah v State Bank of Hyderabad, Madanapuram Branch, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1409 (AP), (2005) 3 Andh LT 539.
585. C Laxmaiah v State Bank of Hyderabad, Madanapuram Branch, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1409 (AP), (2005) 3 Andh LT 539.

[s 47.17.10] Construction of Decree

Executing court has competence to construe a decree, though it cannot go behind it. However, to interpret the decree sought to be executed, it can refer to reliefs sought in the plaint and discussions in the judgment in order to ascertain the true import of the decree. The plaintiff in an Orissa case prayed for (a) declaration of title to the suit land, (b) confirmation of possession and (in the alternative) (c) for recovery of possession. The suit was tried and decreed ex parte. On the basis of evidence on record, the plaintiff was found to be in possession and, accordingly, a decree declaring that the plaintiff had got the right, title and possession over the land in suit was passed. It was held that the executing court was justified in interpreting the decree to mean, that the relief sought in the plaint were granted and since one of the reliefs sought was to direct delivery of possession, the execution application for delivery of possession was maintainable even in the absence of specific direction for delivery of possession in the decree.[586] Hence, where a money decree was passed against a company and its managing director making them jointly and severally liable, and the executing court, on a construction of the decree, disallowed execution against personal property of the managing director, it was held that the order was justified. Construction of a decree is not governed by a general rule and depends on the facts.[587] Mere acceptance of commissioner's report by the trial court does not give rise to a liability unless there be clear determination that for the entire mesne profits as decreed by the court, the liability is that of a particular defendant. Without getting the final decree amended by trial court fixing the liability of a particular defendant for that amount, in execution he cannot be proceeded against on the basis of liability arising out of constructing of decree on ground of ambiguity.[588] Where there is a decree for mesne profits and a commissioner is appointed, mere acceptance of his report by the commissions does not give rise to a liability of a particular defendant, unless there is a clear determination that for the entire period, the liability is that of a particular defendant. Such question is not dealt with in the decree, cannot be dealt with in execution by way of "construction" of decree. The decree has to be got amended.[589] It is true that the executing court is not an automaton and it can exercise its power to properly construe the decree, in order to find out the true import and effect of the same, so that it can proceed to execute the decree in its true and correct perspective, giving full effect to the same, and for that purpose, the court can look into the pleadings and judgment. But it cannot travel outside those materials. A decree has a sanctity of its own and there cannot be any "fishing" inquiry at the execution stage.[590] Although the executing court cannot go behind a decree, it can interpret a decree where the same is not clear in terms. While so interpreting the decree, the executing court is to presume that decree was passed keeping the correct legal position in mind. When there is ambiguity in the decree, the executing court can go behind the decree and look into the pleadings and the judgment, in order to have the ambiguity dispelled. But, where the decree is clear, unequivocal and is not ambiguous, the executing court cannot call for the assistance of pleadings, judgment and so on. It has to be spelled out from the decree itself, as to whether it is a declaratory decree simpliciter or whether there are accompaniments to the decree with consequential directions in case the right conferred is not given effect to. On the facts, the decree was held to be declaratory only and hence not executable.[591] The party, in compliance with the order of the

---

586. Biswanath v SD Uttara Bewa, AIR 1988 Orissa 9 : (1986) 2 Ori LR 480 (DP Mohapatra, J).
587. Hrushikesh Panda v Indramani Swami, AIR 1987 Ori 79 (DB).
588. Padmalaya v Shyam Sunder Sahu, AIR 1980 Ori 1.
589. Padmalaya v Shyam Sunder Sahu, AIR 1980 Ori 1.
590. Kitabian Bibi v Ramlal Durgadutta, AIR 1984 Gau 44.
591. Pathi Venkata Viswanatham v Vallabha Vyas, AIR 1983 AP 64.

court for depositing certain amount in court, tendered a cheque for the prescribed amount on the last date for payment. The same was encashed in due course. The payment by cheque was held to be a valid payment, in the absence of anything in the order suggesting that the deposit was to be in cash. The objection that there was no money on the date of delivery of the cheque to support payment of it and that it was only subsequently (when arrangements were made) that the cheque was realised, would not be maintainable. The reason is that there was nothing to suggest that, under the arrangements made for payment of the cheque, even if it had been encashed on the date it was delivered, the cheque would not have been encashed and there was no finding by the court that on the date the cheque was tendered, the cheque would not have been realised.[592] It is not necessary in a suit for specific performance either to separately claim possession or for the court to pass a decree for possession. A decree for specific performance of contract includes everything incidental to be done by one party or another to complete the sale transaction, the rights and obligations of the parties in such a matter being indicated by section 55 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

In the execution of a decree in a suit relating to specific performance of contract, the Andhra Pradesh High Court held that omission to make specific prayer for the relief of possession is not fatal to the execution proceeding. It was observed that in the light of the statutory duties and obligations cost on the seller by virtue of section 55 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and also in the light of the scope and ambit of section 22 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963, the mere fact that such specific prayer for delivery of possession was not made, the same cannot be taken advantage of, when there is no dispute or controversy that the judgment debtors-defendants are in possession. The decree for execution of sale deed would imply the decree of delivery of possession too, because these are obligations which flow from the relief of execution of sale deed.[593] The Allahabad High Court has held that where in a suit for specific performance, the subsequent purchaser was also made a defendant in the suit and the decree in the suit was also against him, the executing court could always grant the relief of possession once the court executed sale deed in favour of the decree-holder, as the relief of possession is incidental to the execution of sale deed.[594]

In a suit, preliminary decree for dissolution of firm was passed commission was appointed for settling the accounts of the firm. The Commission in its report valued only goodwill of the firm but did not give any valuation of trademark. It was held by a Division Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court that the report of the Commissioner is incomplete since it did not give any valuation of trademark. The decree which refers to assets and properties of the firm is inclusive of its trademark, which has separate entity and is not included in goodwill. It was held that direction to auction trademark is in consonance with intention behind the decree.[595]

When such a suit for specific performance is ended by a final decree transferring the title, that title relates back to the date of agreement on which the suit is based, and the court will not permit the decree to be rendered nugatory by intermediate conveyances. Once this established legal position is borne in mind, there shall not be any doubt about the competence of the

---

592. K Saraswaty v P.S.S. Somasundaram, AIR 1989 SC 1553 : (1989) 4 SCC 527 : (1989) 22 SCR 819 : JT 1989 (2) SC 480.
593. Smt. Suluguru Vijaya v Pulumati Manjula, AIR 2007 AP 35 : (2007) 2 Andh LT 218.
594. Jafar Mian v Qaiser Jahan Begum, AIR 2007 All 5 : (2006) 6 All LJ 296.
595. Kale Khan Mohd Hanif v Mohd Iqbal, AIR 2009 MP 84 (DB).

executing court in granting possession even if the decree is silent as far as delivery of possession is concerned.[596]

[s 47.17.11] Bankers Lien

Section 171 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 gives statutory recognition to the concept of "banker's general lien". It provides that the bankers may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, retain as a security for a general balance of account, any goods bailed to them. Money is a species of goods which may be the subject-matter of bailment and over which lien may be exercised. The general lien of bankers, as judicially recognised and dealt with in section 171 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, attaches to all goods and securities deposited with them as bankers by a customer or by a third person on a customer's account, provided there is no contract, express or implied, inconsistent with such lien. The Supreme Court has laid down the law on "banker's lien". It has been held after a detailed survey of various authorities on English law on the subject that by the mercantile system the bank has a general lien over all forms of securities or negotiable instruments deposited by or on behalf of the customer in the ordinary course of banking business and that the general lien is a valuable right of the banker judicially recognised and in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, a banker has a general lien over such securities or bills received from a customer in the ordinary course of banking business and has a right to use the proceeds in respect of any balance that may be due from the customer by way of reduction of customer's debit balance. Such a lien is also applicable to negotiable instruments including FDRs which are remitted to the bank by the customer for the purpose of collection. There is no gain saying that such a lien extends to FDRs also which are deposited by the customer. When the words used in the letter accompanying the FDRs gave the authority to the bank to retain the deposits "so long as any amount on any account" is due from the judgment-debtor. The Supreme Court held that the recital in the letter shown that a general lien is created in favour of the bank in respect of those two FDRs. The bank was given the authority to retain the FDRs so long as any amount on any account was due from the judgment-debtor. Thus, the bank had a right to set off in respect of these FDRs if there was a liability of the judgment-debtor due to the bank.[597]

[s 47.17.12] Arbitration

Executing court, while deciding objections as to indivisibility of award, could not decide whether portion of award declaring assets in favour of one group was executable or not.[598] If a point of jurisdiction arises then the same can be agitated, not only in an application under section 30 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (now replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996) but also in resistance to execution of decree passed upon the award.[599] No court can pass a decree directing a defendant to do an impossible or an illegal act. If a decree were to be passed simpliciter for a sum expressed in a foreign currency, it would be to direct the defendant to do an act, which would be in violation of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973 (now repealed, Foreign Exchange Management Act (FEMA), 1999). Such a decree can, therefore, only be passed by making the payment in foreign currency, subject to the permission of the foreign exchange authorities being granted. If, however, the authorities do not grant

---

596. Prataprai Trambakalal Mehta v Jayant Nemchand Shah, AIR 1996 Bom 296.
597. Syndicate Bank v Vijay Kumar, AIR 1992 SC 1066; State Bank of India v Goutmi Devi Gupta, AIR 2002 MP 81.
598. Ramesh C Vaish v Banwari Lal Jaipuria, AIR 1999 Cal 339 (DB).
599. JD Singh v Calcutta Port Trust, AIR 1994 Cal 148.

permission for payment of the judgment debt in foreign currency, it would not be possible for the defendant to make such payment, resulting in the decree becoming infructuous and the plaintiff getting nothing under it. The court must, therefore, provide for the eventuality of the foreign exchange authorities not granting the requisite permission or even if such permission is given, the defendant not paying the decretal debt, or not wanting to discharge the decree by making payment in foreign currency or in Indian rupees. This can only be done by the decree providing in the alternative for payment of a sum of money in Indian rupees, which will be equivalent to the sum decreed in foreign currency. It is but just, that a man, who is in law entitled to receive a sum of money in a foreign currency, should either receive it in such currency or should receive its equivalent in Indian rupees.[600]

Where parties have entered into an agreement, containing arbitration clause, but subsequently, on their own volition consented to abandon arbitration clause, and had entered into another agreement to refer their matter to High Power Committee as per mechanism evolved by Central Government, it is incumbent upon parties to abide by the said subsequent agreement in toto and take recourse to mechanism evolved by them. The mere use of word "Arbitration" or "Arbitrator" in a clause in agreement will not make it an arbitration agreement. The intention of parties should be gathered from the terms of the agreement.[601]

[s 47.17.13] Adjustment of Decree

The question whether a decree has been paid or adjusted out of court, is one for the court of execution to decide under this section. An executing court has jurisdiction to record an adjustment entered into between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and to ascertain its legal effect.[602] If the judgment-debtor applies to enter up satisfaction of a decree by a writing in the nature of a compromise and the decree-holder objects that the writing was obtained by fraud, the question is one relating to the discharge of the decree, and is to be decided by the court of execution under this section.[603] An application by a decree-holder to set aside an order recording satisfaction of a decree on the ground of fraud of his agent and the judgment-debtor, falls under this section.[604] If the adjustment has not been certified by the judgment-debtor within the time allowed by law, and the decree-holder proceeds to execute the decree, the dispute, no doubt, is one relating to the satisfaction of the decree, but it cannot be dealt with either under this or any other section relating to execution, for an uncertified adjustment cannot be recognised by any court executing the decree.[605] Where it was admitted that payment had been certified or recorded, the same, (even if actually made) could not be recognised by the court executing the decree.[606] By virtue of O XXI, rule 2(3), "a payment or adjustment, which has not been certified or recorded in accordance with the rule, shall not be recognised by any court executing the decree". Therefore, when a decree-holder takes out execution, the judgment-debtor will not be entitled to plead (if, by the date of his plea, a period of 30 days has expired from the date of payment or adjustment, as the case may be) that he has paid the

---

600. Forasol v ONGC, (1984) Supp SCC 263.
601. Paradeep Phosphates Ltd v Paradeep Port Trust, AIR 2009 Ori 139 : 2009 (107) Cut LT 836 (DB).
602. Chaube Mahendra Rao v Lala Bishamber Nath, AIR 1940 All 270 (FB) : (1940) All LJ 301 : (1940) II R All 377.
603. Muhammad Kasim v Rukia Begam, (1919) 41 All 443.
604. Monorath v Atmaram, AIR 1943 Ngp 335; Sheodahin Tiwari v Ramjanam Tiwari, AIR 1934 Pat 202; Gajraj Singh v Debi Singh, AIR 1937 Oudh 298.
605. Azizan v Matuk Lal, (1894) 21 Cal 437; Bamagulu v Bapanna, (1892) 15 Mad 302; Dino Bandhu v Hari, (1904) 31 Cal 480; Ram Labhaya v Mukundamal, AIR 1922 Lah 428 : (1922) 3 Lah 319.
606. Bhabani Dasya v Tulsi Ram Keot, AIR 1990 Gau 90.

money due, or has otherwise adjusted the decree, outside the court. The expression "may" in O XXI, rule 2(3), has to be construed and understood as "shall". By placing this construction, no inconsistency arises between O XXI, rule 2 and section 47. It does not mean that the provisions in O XXI, rule 2 read with Article 125 of the Limitation Act, 1963, should be ignored.[607] The general and broader provisions of section 47 of the CPC, clothing the court with the jurisdiction to decide all questions pertaining to execution, discharge and satisfaction of a decree cannot be allowed to defeat the special provisions of O XXI, rule 2 of the CPC dealing with adjustments of the decree. When the satisfaction of the decree is based on an adjustment, provisions of section 47 cannot be pressed into service unless the adjustment is recorded in accordance with rule 2 of O XXI of the CPC.[608] It is no doubt open to the parties to adjust or compromise their rights under the decree, but if it amounts to adjustment of decree, it must be reported to the court whose duty it is to execute the decree so that that court may record or certify the same. If it is not done, the court, before which the execution proceedings are initiated, will proceed to execute the decree. It is not every time that the decree-holder and judgment-debtor enter into a compromise after the decree. The judgment-debtor may even set up a false case of compromise and creation of fresh tenancy after the decree. It is in order to prevent such judgment-debtors that O XXI, rule 2 has been enacted so that if such compromise or creation of fresh tenancy has not been recorded, the judgment-debtor be not encouraged to imitate another round of litigation under section 47 of the CPC.[609] In a Madras case, it was not in dispute that the entire amount due under the decree passed by the trial court had been discharged by payment and deposit, and therefore, there was no further amount due to the plaintiff under the decree as passed by the trial court. It was held that the plaintiff may be entitled to further amounts in the event of its success in the appeal filed by it against the decree. But that would not prevent the executing court from recording the payment made by the defendant towards the decree passed by the trial court. In fact, an unconditional deposit of the amount decreed in court will operate as a discharge of the decree. Just because an appeal against the decree is pending, at the instance of the plaintiff, it does not mean that the decree passed by the trial court could not be satisfied by the defendant by payment or adjustment otherwise. It is not in dispute in the instant case that the entire amount due under the decree passed by the trial court had been discharged by payment and deposit, and therefore, there is no further amount due to the plaintiff under the decree passed by the trial court. The plaintiff may be entitled to further amounts, in the event of its success in the appeal filed by it against the decree. But that will not prevent the executing court from regarding the payments made by the trial court. In fact, unconditional deposit of the amount decreed in court will operate as a discharge of the decree.[610]

[s 47.17.14] Adjustment of Fine Paid in Criminal Court

Where the payment or deposit made by respondent in the criminal case was the amount fined, a part of it was ordered to be paid to petitioner. So, out of Rs 22,000 imposed as fine, if Rs 11,280 has not been ordered to be paid to the petitioner in the criminal case, that amount would have gone to the state as fine amount and not that, the amount would have remained with the respondent. Further, the said payment of Rs 11,280 was made in that court

---

607. P Narasaiah v P Rajoo Reddy, AIR 1989 AP 264.
608. Badriprasad v Mallubhai, AIR 1994 MP 37 (DB).
609. Sultana Begum v Prem Chand Jain, (1997) 1 SCC 337; Pratapari Trambakal Mehta v Jyant Nemchand Shah, AIR 1992 Bom 48.
610. KR Shankar Rai v State Bank of India, AIR 1989 Mad 255. Also see the CPC, O XXI, r 2(3).

as part of fine amount in pursuance of order of sentence passed in criminal proceedings for the offence committed by respondent and not towards the liability arising under civil law or sought to be enforced against him by petitioner in execution proceedings. In other words, payment or satisfaction of decree passed in suit would not have come to the aid of respondent for avoiding the consequence of default in the payment of entire or any part of fine amount ordered in criminal case. Similarly, payment of fine amount in the criminal case would not have discharged the respondent from his liability to pay the amount claimed in civil proceedings.[611]

[s 47.17.15] Award of Lok Adalat

The award of the Lok Adalat is fictionally deemed to be decree of court and therefore the courts have all the powers in relation thereto as it has in relation to a decree passed by itself. This includes the powers to extend time in appropriate cases. The award passed by the Lok Adalat is the decision of the court itself, though arrived at by the simpler method of conciliation instead of the process of arguments in court. The effect is the same.[612]

Where the suit for possession was decreed in favour of appellant decree holder and pending appeal the dispute referred to the Lok Adalat, the award was passed by the Lok Adalat on basis of compromise. The award provided for sale of scheduled property to appellant on payment of sum within two years. The plea of the respondent was that execution of sale deed could not take place due to default on part of appellant. Notice and telegram was issued, requiring respondent to execute sale deed as submitted in award. The respondent did not receive said notice and it was returned unserved. No obligation was held cast on appellant to examine the postman. The presumption under section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 attracted the obligations on respondent to evince his willingness to execute sale deed within two years and not on appellant as assumed by the high court. The order of the high court dismissing petition for execution of award filed by appellant was found not proper.[613]

[s 47.17.16] Agreement to Give Time

A fair bargain for time in consideration of a reasonable rate of interest properly recorded, has its effect upon the rights of the parties under the decree and the executing court has jurisdiction under this section to ascertain its legal effect and to order accordingly.[614]

[s 47.17.17] Substituted Share

Where a decree gives a right to possession of a share in a ijmali mahal, which has prior to the date of the decree been partitioned under the Estates Partition Act, 1897, the court in proceedings for execution of the decree, has power under this section to put the decree-holder in possession of the specific land substituted for his share on partition.[615] Where, after the mortgagee had obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged properties, they were acquired

---

611. Gayathri v Clement Mary, AIR 2003 Kant 134.
612. PT Thomas v Thomas Job, AIR 2005 SC 3575 : (2005) 6 SCC 478 : 2005 (10) JT SC 304.
613. PT Thomas v Thomas Job, AIR 2005 SC 3575 : (2005) 6 SCC 478 : 2005 (10) JT SC 304.
614. Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd v Binda Bansi Kuer, AIR 1939 PC 80 : 41 Bom LR 708 PC : ILR 14 Luck 192; Bhiki v Kundanlal, AIR 1940 All 107 : (1939) All LJ 1051. For cases of eviction see J Bhimaraju v KK Subudhi, ILR AIR 1972 Ori 81 : (1971) Cut 523; Bhagat Ram v Lilawati, AIR 1973 HP 57; Doshi Kantilal v M Chandulal, AIR 1973 Guj 80.
615. Baijnath v Ravaneshwar, AIR 1922 PC 54 : 49 IA 139 : ILR 1 Pat 378; Nabhobai v Haiman Gaiv, AIR 1954 MB 181 : 1954 MB 426.

under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, the decree-holder was held entitled to proceed in execution against the compensation amount as substituted security.[616]

[s 47.17.18] Accretion to Mortgaged Property

The question, whether certain property is an accretion to the mortgaged property, is a question to be determined under this section in execution of a decree for redemption obtained by the mortgagor against the mortgagee.[617]

[s 47.17.19] Rateable Liability of different Mortgaged Properties

Question relating to rateable liability of different mortgaged properties is within the section.[618]

[s 47.17.20] Waste Committed by Judgment-Debtor after Decree for Possession

The question whether the judgment-debtor has committed waste, eg, cut down trees, after a decree against him for possession, is one to be dealt with under this section, and not by a separate suit;[619] also compensation for such waste;[620] so also waste committed by decree-holder in possession,[621] so also a claim for damages for damage done to the property of a co-sharer after a decree for partition.[622] It is observed in Kunhikoya v Ahmed Kutty[623] that a claim by a party to a decree based on allegations of waste is not within the scope of section 47. This observation is open to question. The real ground of the decision, however, is that a person against whom the claim was made, was not a representative of the judgment-debtor and therefore section 47 had no application.

[s 47.17.21] Decree for Possession

Where a decree is passed for possession in a suit for pre-emption, conditional on the plaintiff paying a specified sum of money within a time fixed by the court, and the money is paid, but possession is not delivered to the plaintiff, his only remedy is by an application under this section. A suit for possession is barred under this section.[624] The High Court of Kerala, however, has taken the view that where there is only delivery by symbolical possession in execution, the decree-holder can maintain a suit for possession on the basis of execution sale.[625]

Section 47 bars a separate suit only in respect of a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. If there is a subsequent dispossession after the decree of possession is complied with, a suit to obtain possession is not barred simply because there was an earlier

---

616. Ramanathan v Abdul Hamid, AIR 1963 Mad 73; Nabbobai v Hasan Gani, AIR 1954 MB 181 : (1954) MB 426; Sudhir Kumar v Chandrakantha, AIR 1955 Cal 560 : 52 Cal WN 446.
617. Motilal v Bai Mani, AIR 1925 PC 86 : ILR 49 Bom 233 : 52 IA 137.
618. Pandurang Kashinath Patel v Subari Deorao Despande, AIR 1949 Ngp 155 : (1948) ILR Nag 595.
619. Hari v Sakharam, AIR 1923 Bom 391 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 449; Kumara Rama Panikkar v Variath Ouseph, AIR 1953 TC 77; Phool Kuer v Manoharmal, AIR 1955 All 223 : (1954) All LJ 730; Manishankar v Niranjan Sarup, AIR 1955 All 686.
620. Poomalai v Ramalingam, AIR 1977 Mad 411 : (1977) 2 Mad 365.
621. TS Ramanatha Ayyar v S Abdul Salam Sahib, AIR 1945 Mad 179.
622. Varadaraja v Parameswara, AIR 1935 Mad 280 : (1935) 68 Mad LJ 27.
623. Kunhikoya v Ahmed Kutty, AIR 1952 Mad 59 : (1951) 2 Mad LJ 399.
624. Raman v Jai Ram, AIR 1921 All 369 : (1921) 43 All 170; Sovani v Bhima, AIR 1922 Pat 407 : (1922) 1 Pat 157; Abdul Karim v Islam-un Nissa, (1916) 38 All 339.
625. Chathu v Janaki Amma, AIR, 1969 Ker 121.

decree obtained by the plaintiff for possession which decree had been complied with. In fact, there will be no question of executing the earlier decree, when it has already been complied with.[626] Where a decree for possession in favour of the plaintiff provided for the defendants removing construction materials stored by him in the property, a suit by the latter for damages on the ground that the decree-holder prevented him from removing them, is barred under this section.[627] Where the landlord obtained a decree in ejectment and after recovering possession sued the judgment-debtor for compensation for certain sums paid by him, it was held that this was not a question relating to the execution, discharge and satisfaction of the decree and the executing court cannot go into it.[628] In a decree for possession, if the legal representatives of a judgment-debtor contend that they were in possession in their own right, that contention must be decided in execution proceedings.[629] In an execution of a decree for possession of immovable property, the judgment-debtor tenant delayed the execution of the decree for several years. The High Court of Uttarakhand directed the judgment debtor to pay rent/damages as were being paid earlier to the decree-holder till the date of delivery of possession.[630] Where a compromise decree providing for eviction is challenged by the tenant as a nullity on the ground that it was in violation of the relevant Rent Act, the executing court can go into the decree to ascertain whether the grounds for eviction permissible under the Act, were pleaded and admitted by the tenant when he agreed to the consent decree.[631] The question relating to delivery of possession to the auction purchaser or its representative is a matter relating to execution, discharge and satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of section 47 of the CPC. Sub-section (1) of section 47 prohibits determination of such questions by way of a separate suit and mandates that such questions shall be determined only by the court executing the decree and not by a separate suit.[632]

[s 47.17.22] Resistance or Obstruction to the Possession of Property

Provision is made in the CPC for delivery of possession of immovable property in execution of a decree and matters relating thereto. In O XXI, rule 35 provisions are made empowering the executing court to deliver possession of the property to the decree holder, if necessary, by removing any person bound by the decree who refuses to vacate the property. In rule 36, provision is made for delivery of formal or symbolical possession of the property in occupancy of a tenant or other person entitled to occupy the same and not bound by the decree to relinquish such occupancy. Rules 97–101 of O XXI contain the provisions enabling the executing court to deal with a situation when a decree holder entitled to possession of the property encounters obstruction from "any person". From the provisions in these rules which have been quoted earlier, the scheme is clear that the legislature has vested wide powers in the executing court to deal with "all issues relating to such matters". It is a general impression prevailing amongst the litigant public that difficulties of a litigant are by no means over on his getting a decree for immovable property in his favour. Indeed, his difficulties in real and practical sense, arise after getting the decree. Presumably, to tackle such a situation and to allay the apprehension in the minds of litigant public that it takes years and years for the decree

---

626. Uma Shanker v Sarbjeet, AIR 1996 SC 1005 : (1996) 2 SCC 371.
627. Murari Lal v Debi Saran, AIR 1956 All 555.
628. Mana Devi v Malki Ram, AIR 1961 All 84.
629. STR Pillai v Dhanlakshmi, AIR 1972 Mad 190 : 85 Mad LW 19.
630. Murli Singh (deceased by LRs.) v Ram Singh, AIR 2007 Utr 80 : 2007 (3) UC 1509.
631. Nai Bahu v Lala Ramnarayan, AIR 1978 SC 22; Nagindas v Dalpatram, AIR 1974 SC 471.
632. KN Krishnappa v TR Gopalkrishna Setty, AIR 1997 Kant 152; Gal Nagamma v Hardar Babubali, AIR 1992 Kant 208.

holder to enjoy fruits of the decree, the legislature made drastic amendments in provisions in the aforementioned rules, particularly, the provision in rule 101 in which it is categorically declared that all questions including questions relating to right, title or interest in the property arising between the parties to a proceeding on an application under rules 97 or 99 or their representatives, and relevant to the adjudication of the application shall be determined by the court dealing with the application and not by a separate suit. For this purpose, the court shall, notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other law for the time being in force, be deemed to have jurisdiction to decide such questions. On a fair reading of the rule it is manifest that the legislature has enacted the provision with a view to remove, as far as possible, technical objections to an application filed by the aggrieved party whether he is the decree holder or any other person in possession of the immovable property under execution and has vested the power in the executing court to deal with all questions arising in the matter, irrespective of whether the court otherwise has jurisdiction to entertain a dispute of the nature. This clear statutory mandate and the object and purpose of the provisions should not be lost sight of by the courts seized of an execution proceeding. The court cannot shirk its responsibility by skirting the relevant issues arising in the case. The position is manifest that when any person claiming title to the property in his possession is obstructing the attempt by the decree-holder to dispossess him from the said property, the executing court is competent to consider all questions raised by the persons offering obstruction against execution of the decree and pass appropriate order, which under the provisions of O XXI, rule 103 is to be treated as a decree.[633]

[s 47.17.23] Validity of an Assignment of a Decree

Whether the assignment of a decree is valid or not is essentially a question arising between the parties and relates to execution of the decree and falls under this section. A suit for the declaration that the assignment is valid does not lie.[634] Where a debt on which a suit had been filed was assigned, the assignee could apply under section 146 and O XXII, rule 10, to bring himself on record and execute the decree which was passed on the debt and his application is one under section 47.[635]

[s 47.17.24] Mutual Obligations Under a Decree

Where a decree for specific performance directed that on the plaintiffs tendering or paying the amounts specified, the defendants were to execute in favour of the plaintiffs, proper deeds of transfer of certain properties, the question whether the defendant is able to perform his part of the decree and whether he transfers the very thing which the decree directs him to transfer must be determined in execution and not by a separate suit.[636] In the case of such a decree, even if it is silent about giving possession, the executing court under this section, can direct possession to be given to the decree-holder as possession is incidental in such a decree.[637]

---

633. NSS Narayana Sarma v Goldstone Exports Pvt Ltd, AIR 2002 SC 251 : (2002) 1 SCC 662.
634. Kundanmal Jasraj v Surajkuvarbai, AIR 1943 Bom 455 : 45 Bom LR 859; Balchand v Kachru, AIR 1938 Nag 267.
635. Jugal Kishore v Raw Cotton Co, AIR 1955 SC 376 : (1955) 1 SCR 1369 : (1955) CJ 371 : (1955) SCA 440.
636. Jai Narain v Kedarnath, AIR 1956 SC 359 : (1956) SCR 62.
637. Narayana Pillai v PC Subbalakshmi Ammal, AIR, 1978 Ker 236; Prataprai Trambakalal Mehta v Jayant Hemchand Shah, AIR 1996 Bom 296.

[s 47.17.25] Scaling of Decrees

Where a mortgage decree was scaled, interest reduced and a new decree passed, the order scaling the decree is not an order relating to execution of the decree within section 47, but is a new decree and appealable as such.[638] But an order made for the enforcement of the order falls within section 47.[639]

[s 47.17.26] Suits Giving Relief to Tenants against Eviction

The question whether a tenant against whom a decree in ejectment has been passed is a "Kudikidappakaran", liable to be evicted only in accordance with the provisions of the Travancore Prevention of Eviction Act, 1948, or whether he is entitled to the protection under the provisions of the Stay of Execution Proceedings Act, 1950, are questions which should be determined by the executing court.[640] Where a decree for ejectment was made against a tenant in breach of the provisions of the Rent Control Order giving him protection, it was held that the execution court must refuse to enforce it.[641] Regarding the existence of any of the grounds mentioned in section 13 of the Rajasthan Premises (Control of Rent and Eviction) Act, 1950, the executing court will proceed to record the statements of each party and such other witnesses of both the parties, as it thinks necessary to reach any conclusion. It is none of the concern of the court to see what shall be the result of two interpretations of a particular provision of the law.[642] When section 2(2) was not amended, an order under section 47 by reason of a legal fiction was to be treated as a decree and, thus, an appeal against an order made under section 47 was maintainable in terms of section 96 of the CPC. After the amendment of section 2(2) of the CPC, no appeal lies under section 96 of the Act. If an objection filed under section 47 of the CPC is stated to be an appealable order coming within the purview of section 104 of the CPC, the purpose of the amendment would be frustrated. If decree is valid and has not been held to be a nullity by reason of lack of inherent jurisdiction by a court of law, the question as of the same being an order appealable in terms of clause 15 of Letters Patent does not arise.[643] This case is an example of as to how a small step in haste makes a person repent at leisure. The landlady, exasperated by law's delay, wanted to seize an opportunity to dislodge the tenant. In her enthusiasm to execute the decree, the landlady persuaded the executing court to bye-pass the process of law and obtained a warrant for possession and got it executed post-haste. This was despite a stay order passed against the execution of decree. The executing court did not care to inquire into and find out whether the conditions of the stay were fulfilled and the stay order had been automatically vacated. The first appellate court had not taken care to put a time limit for performance of the conditions imposed upon the tenant for staying the execution of the decree. It was not, therefore, simply a case where the conditions of the stay order not having been complied with within the time given by the appellate court. Some inquiry was absolutely necessary before the stay order could have been treated as automatically vacated for non-compliance of the conditions imposed by the stay orders.[644]

Against the decree for ejectment passed by a civil court, qua a commercial tenancy in the state of Delhi, before the declaration of law by the Supreme Court in Gian Devi Anandcase[645]

---

638. Rajindra v Balmukand, AIR 1954 All 63.
639. Ashalata v Jedunath, AIR 1954 SC 409 : (1955) 1 SCR 150 : (1954) SCJ 690 : (1956) SCA 635.
640. Varkey Chacko v Mathai Varkey, AIR 1953 TC 427.
641. K Punnan v P Kurup, AIR 1986 TC 1 (FB).
642. Kishan Lal v Shyam Lal represented by, Kedar, AIR 1990 Raj 46 (DB).
643. Ramesh C Vaish v Banwarilal Jaipuria, AIR 1999 Cal 339 (DB).
644. Kaushalya Bai v Fifteenth Addl Judge to the Court of District Judge, Indore, AIR 1994 MP 55 (DB).
645. Gian Devi Anand v Jeevan Kumar, AIR 1985 SC 796 : (1985) 2 SCC 683.

that such a tenancy is heritable, the judgment-debtors can successfully raise objection to its execution on the ground that the same was passed by a court lacking inherent jurisdiction and therefore inexecutable.

Because of the operation of section 14 of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, the only authority to pass a decree for ejectment of the tenanted premises is the Rent Controller appointed under the Act and section 50 of the Act specifically bars the jurisdiction of the civil court to entertain any suit or proceeding in so far as it relates to the eviction of any tenant from the premises which were covered by the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958. The eviction decree was passed by the civil court, on the basis of the view taken by the high court, that commercial tenancies are not heritable, and that the statutory tenancy of the original tenant came to an end on his death. In Gian Devi Anand's case,[646] the interpretation given by the Delhi High Court that commercial tenancies were not heritable was overruled, as being erroneous. The Supreme Court, in Gian Devi Anand's case[647] did not lay down any new law but only interpreted the existing law which was in force. The interpretation of a provision relates back to the date of the law itself and cannot be prospective of the judgment. When the court decides that the interpretation given to a particular provision earlier was not legal, it declares the law as it stood right from the beginning as per its decision. The interpretation given by Supreme Court declaring that the commercial tenancies are heritable would be the law as it stood from the beginning as per the interpretation put by Supreme Court. It would be deemed that the law was never otherwise. Jurisdiction of the civil court has not been taken away by the interpretation given by Supreme Court. Supreme Court declared that the civil court had no jurisdiction to pass such a decree. A decree passed by a court having no jurisdiction over the subject-matter would be a nullity and the judgment-debtor can object to the execution of such a decree being a nullity and non est. Its invalidity can be set up whenever it is sought to be enforced, including the stage of execution of the decree or any other collateral proceedings. The view of high court, while rejecting the objection raised to executability of decree that the decision of Supreme Court in Gian Devi Anand's case[648] would operate prospectively, was found improper.[649]

The tenant's right to remain in occupation of the non-residential premises governed by the Maharashtra Rent Control Act, 1999 is a property, such property is saleable, and the tenant has disposing power over the interest of tenancy for this benefit and in view thereof, it can be said that the interest of the tenant of non-residential premises to which the Maharashtra Rent Control Act, 1999 applies is attachable and saleable in execution of the decree against the tenant.[650]

[s 47.17.27] Sub-tenant

The history of the litigation reveals that the tenant surrendered the lease with effect from 31-8-1953 by a notice, but failed to vacate it on the due date. Landlord was therefore required to file a suit against the tenant on the basis of the notice for surrender of tenancy.

During pendency of the suit, the tenant entered into a compromise and in terms thereof vacated the leased premises. As against the sub-tenants, which the tenant had inducted during

---

646. Gian Devi Anand v Jeevan Kumar, AIR 1985 SC 796 : (1985) 2 SCC 683.
647. Gian Devi Anand v Jeevan Kumar, AIR 1985 SC 796 : (1985) 2 SCC 683.
648. Gian Devi Anand v Jeevan Kumar, AIR 1985 SC 796 : (1985) 2 SCC 683.
649. Sarwan Kumar v Madan Lal Aggarwal, AIR 2003 SC 1475 : (2003) 4 SCC 147 : (2003) 1 SCR 918 : JT 2003 (1) SC 607.
650. TES Pvt Ltd v Indian Chemicals, AIR 2004 Bom 198 (FB).

subsistence of tenancy, one of the terms of the compromise decree reserved liberty to the landlord to take necessary legal steps for their eviction. The landlord thereafter instituted an independent suit for eviction of the sub-tenant. In that suit, the court held that the remedy of the landlord is to execute the compromise decree. The firm, as sub-tenant, had filed a counter suit seeking declaration of its status as direct tenant under Act of 1950 and protection thereunder. In the counter suit of the sub-tenant, the court took the same view that the remedies of the parties lay in execution proceedings. The judgment rendered in the counter suit of the sub-tenant, i.e., the firm, was challenged in Supreme Court in special leave petition but it was withdrawn. The judgment rendered in the counter suit, as also the other rendered in the suit filed by the landlord against the sub-tenant, had attained finality. It is only after the landlord failed in obtaining eviction decree in the suit filed by it that it moved an application for execution of the compromise decree. One of the terms of the compromise decree which reserved the right to the landlord to take necessary legal steps to evict the sub-tenants, makes the decree executable to that extent. It could not, therefore, be urged by the firm that the compromise decree on its terms is not executable.[651]

Where a suit for recovery of possession was filed against lessee of land only without including the building thereon which was constructed and sublet by lessee with the permission of lessor, the decree passed upon admission of lessee to surrender the land would be inexecutable against the sub-lessees, particularly when no leave was obtained under O II, rule 2 in respect of the building. Therefore, the decree as it stood was final and could be executed only against the land and against the lessee. It could not have been executed in respect of the building constructed thereon, nor it could be executed against persons who were not sub-lessee/tenant of the land; which was the subject matter of the suit but were sub-lessees/tenants in respect of the building, which comprised of the land and the building. Moreover, though a decree for eviction against the lessee/tenant is binding on the sub-lessee/tenant, there are some exceptions to it. One such exception is that the sub-tenant/lessee has a right independent of the lessee/tenant. In case the sub-lessee/tenant is able to prove collusion, then the sub-lessee/tenant is said to have a right independent of the lessee/tenant, and in this instant case, collusion between landlord and lessee was prima facie apparent because the decree was passed on admission of lessee to surrender the suit land though he was receiving substantial amount of rent from sub-lessees and also because he did not file any objection to application for amendment so as to include building.[652]

[s 47.17.28] Alteration in Circumstances

As to the power of the executing court to take note of altered circumstances existing at the date of execution, see the cases noted below.[653]

[s 47.18] Questions not Relating to Execution, Discharge or Satisfaction

If the question that arises between the parties or their representatives does not relate to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, the section does not apply, and a separate suit will lie. The following are leading cases on the subject:

---

651. Arm Group Enterprises Ltd v Waldorf Restaurant, AIR 2003 SC 4106 : 2003 AIR SCW 2088 : (2003) 6 SCC 423 : 2003 (3) JT SC 450.
652. Mehta Suraja v United Investment Corp, AIR 2002 Cal 108.
653. Ramabhadra v Ramanna, AIR 1952 Mad 125; Nabbaobai v Hasan Gani, AIR 1954 MB 181 : 1954 MB 426.

[s 47.18.1] Questions as to the Validity of the Decree

The principle generally is that the court executing the decree cannot go behind the decree and question its validity. The section assumes that a valid decree exists.[654] It cannot hold an investigation to determine that the court which passed the decree, lacked jurisdiction to do so.[655] A decree passed by a court without jurisdiction over the subject matter or on other grounds which goes to the root of its exercise or jurisdiction, lacks inherent jurisdiction. It is a coram non judice (not before a judge). A decree passed by such a court is a nullity and is non est. Its invalidity can be set up whenever it is sought to be enforced or is acted upon as a foundation for a right, even at the stage of execution or in collateral proceedings. The defect of jurisdiction strikes at the authority of the court to pass a decree which cannot be cured by consent or waiver of the party.[656] A decree passed by a court having no jurisdiction over the subject-matter would be a nullity and the judgment-debtor can object to the execution of such a decree being a nullity and non est. Its invalidity can be set up whenever it is sought to be enforced including the stage of execution of the decree or any other collateral proceedings.[657] In the eyes of law, a procedural irregularity in itself would not amount to branding the decree as "without jurisdiction" or "a nullity".[658] In this case, an argument was advanced that a decree is a nullity, can be raised even in execution proceedings and a separate suit for a declaration that the decree is a nullity is not maintainable under section 47. The Karnataka High Court did not consider this question as this ground was not urged before the lower court and in the memorandum of appeal. It is respectfully submitted that the defects of jurisdiction cannot be cured hence it is a wrong judgment. In view of Sushil Kumar Mehta v Gobind Ram Bohra,[659] it will not be open to a party to challenge a judgment when it is sought to be enforced on the ground that the judgment is based on wrong conclusions or on erroneous findings or on wrong application of law. As the remedy of the aggrieved party in such cases is to challenge the same in appeal or revision, as the case may be and not to challenge it when it is sought to be enforced, the respondents challenge in this case against the judgment cannot be sustained. Since the plea of lack of jurisdiction was pleaded by the respondents and that has been considered and found against them, they cannot raise the very same point in the executing court.[660] Nor can it set aside a sale on the ground that it was illegal in the absence of leave by the insolvency court which has appointed the receiver.[661] When respondents could not be said to be "necessary party" to the suit, non-joinder of respondents, would not make a decree passed by the Court of Small Causes, Bombay, nullity or inexecutable. If the decree is not null and void, as per settled law, appropriate proceedings will have to be taken by the persons aggrieved by such decree.[662] Where an arbitrator under the Punjab Co-operative Societies Act, 1961 has jurisdiction to make an award and makes such award after due notice to the parties, the executing court cannot declare the award non est and refuse to execute the award. A decree (or award) is non

---

654. Fazal Ilahi v RB Sabel & Co, AIR 1935 Lah 549.
655. Ahmed Khan v Mohd Khasim, AIR 1976 Kant 13.
656. Sushil Kumar Mehta v Gobind Ram Bohra, (1990) 1 SCC 193.
657. Sarwan Kumar v Madan Lal Aggarwal, AIR 2003 SC 1475 : (2003) 4 SCC 147 : (2003) 1 SCR 918 : JT 2003 (1) SC 607.
658. Rafique Bibi v Sayed Waliuddin, AIR 2003 SC 3789 : (2004) 1 SCC 287.
659. Sushil Kumar Mehta v Gobind Ram Bohra, (1990) 1 SCC 193; Laxmi Narayan Rao v Janardan Shettigara, AIR 1994 Kant 105.
660. KP Antony, "Santhosh", Edakkad Amsom, Puthiyangadi, Calicut v Thandiyode Plantations Pvt Ltd, Thandiyode, South Wynad, AIR 1996 Ker 37.
661. Manulal v Natwarlal, AIR, 1976 Pat 321.
662. Balavant N Viswamitra v Yadav Sadashiv Mule, AIR 2004 SC 4377 : (2004) 8 SCC 706.

est, only if it is against a dead person or against a person not represented or is otherwise made without jurisdiction.

The award cannot be regarded as non est merely because no reasons were recorded.[663]

See note—Powers of executing court under section 38, and the note under the heading "To what decree the section applies" under section 47 above. But a suit to set aside a decree as invalid is not barred by section 47, for, the section refers to cases where the satisfaction of the decree as distinguished from its validity is in issue.[664] But section 8 of the Societies Registration Act, 1860, which imposes a bar for imposing liability on the members of the society and the decree passed against the members of the society in their individual capacity is a nullity. The decree passed against the office bearers of the society cannot be upheld as the decree against them in their personal capacity. The personal decree passed against the office bearer of society is a nullity and unenforceable under the law. When once the decree becomes a nullity, it cannot be executed through the execution proceedings against the personal property of the bearer of society.[665] That would also be the case where the challenge is that the decree was obtained by fraud. Such an objection cannot be tried by the executing court.[666] But, in a decision, the Supreme Court has stated that when the decree is passed by a court which lacks the inherent jurisdiction to pass it, objection as to the validity of the decree can be raised in an execution proceeding if the objection appears on the face of the record. But if it does not so appear and requires examination of the questions raised and decided at a trial, or which could have, but have not been raised, the executing court will have no jurisdiction to entertain such an objection. Thus, where a decree for eviction of a tenant has been made by a small cause court without any objection as to its jurisdiction having been raised and the question depends on the interpretation of the terms of the lease and the use to which the land was put at the date of the lease, it was held that these questions cannot be allowed to be raised in the execution proceedings.[667] The principle that an executing court can go into question of lack of jurisdiction apparent on the record is well-settled.[668] This can be done even where execution has been struck off in full satisfaction[669] or where delivery of disputed property has been taken in execution.[670] But where a decree has been passed in a suit filed without notice under section 164 of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, such a suit lacks maintainability but is not one without inherent jurisdiction. If the question of maintainability has not been raised, the decree is binding on the parties and that point cannot be agitated in the executing court.[671]

Similarly, a decree passed on an unregistered award is not a nullity. An objection against such a decree would not be entertained in execution.[672] The question that the decree is barred by limitation, can be gone into in execution proceedings but not the question that on account of certain statutory provisions the judgment-debtor was entitled to certain relief, for, such a

---

663. Hoshiarpur Central Co-op Bank v Urmar Harmonium Reed Workshop CIS Ltd, AIR 1989 P&H 245 (DB).
664. Ram Charan v Salik Ram, AIR 1930 All 628 : (1930) 52 All 217; Raja Ram v Chhaddammi, AIR 1926 All 475 : (1926) 48 All 574.
665. Someswara Swamy Vari Devasthanam v Dasam Suryavaryane, AIR 2004 AP 223.
666. Sudindra v Budan, (1886) 9 Mad 80; Dhanii Ram v Luchmeswar, (1896) 23 Cal 639; Karam Ali v Mt Sagi, AIR 1962 Pat 432.
667. VD Modi v RA Rehman, (1970) 2 Mad LJ 85; ND Co-op Trans Society v Suraj Mani, AIR 1977 HP 35.
668. MS Adekar v AV Umathe, AIR 1965 Bom 129.
669. Raja Ram v Bhagwan Das, AIR 1973 All 82 : (1972) ILR All 783.
670. Sitaram Srigopal v Union Carbide, AIR, 1973 Cal 322 : 77 Cal WN 525.
671. ETGUS Society v Sunil Waste Corpn, AIR 1971 Bom 91 : 72 Bom LR 620.
672. Bansilal v Nandlal, AIR 1975 MP 25.

question does not directly relate to execution,[673] nor can the executing court say that a part of the decree contravenes the terms of section 23 of the Moneylenders Act, 1946 and therefore is inexecutable,[674] nor the decree passed against the governing body of the college which was defendant without seeking leave of the court to continue the suit against the university upon whom the interest of the original defendant devolved and impleading would make the decree void ab initio so as to invoke application of section 47 of the CPC and entail dismissal of execution.[675] Under the unamended section, the view taken was that the question of delivery of possession of a property purchased by a decree-holder in execution, was not a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree[676] since, such a question was something consequential upon his purchasing the property and therefore the purchaser's right was either to apply under O XXI, rule 97 or file a separate suit.[677] This is no longer correct in view of the new Explanation II. But it may still be held that a dispute between the decree-holder who has purchased the property in auction sale and his assignee as to who is entitled to the money deposited by the judgment-debtor for having the sale set aside, does not relate to execution.[678] Such an assignee is not a deemed purchaser under clause (a) of Explanation II, nor does the question of deposit of delivery of possession of the auctioned property arise.

Though the general principle is that executing courts cannot go behind the decree and question its validity, courts have, sometimes, taken into account legislation affecting the decrees. In one case, the plaintiff obtained a decree for injunction restraining a district board from realising an illegal tax. After the decree was passed, the tax was validated by legislation and the court refused to execute the decree on the ground that the decree was no longer capable of execution.[679] The proprietor of an estate obtained a decree for possession of certain lands. Before the date of the decree, the title to the lands was extinguished by the MP Abolition of Proprietary Rights Act, 1951 but this fact had not been brought to the court's notice when the decree was passed. The judgment-debtor objected to the execution of the decree on the ground that it was in contravention of the provisions of the Act and was therefore a nullity. The Supreme Court upheld the objection and held that the objection could be taken before the executing court under this section.[680] A reversioner against whom a decree is being executed as legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, cannot object in execution that the debt for which the decree was passed was not binding on the estate of which he is the reversioner but may file a separate suit for a declaration to that effect.[681] If sons, who are not parties to the suit against their father on a mortgage and who had been found not to be represented in the suit by their father, desire to challenge the mortgage on the basis of which the suit was brought and decree obtained by the mortgagee, they cannot do so in execution.[682] Where a decree passed against a minor is sought to be executed, the questions whether the minor was

---

673. Narsimhrao v Venkateswarlu, AIR : 1965 AP 346 : 1965 Andh WR 435.
674. Yusufbhai Ismailbhai v Manilal Mohanlal, AIR 1965 Guj 282.
675. Dhurandhar Prasad Singh v Jai Prakash University, AIR 2001 SC 2552.
676. Dayashankar v Khubchand, AIR 1973 Raj 304.
677. KK Thakkar v LA Patil, AIR 1968 Bom 98 : 69 Bom LR 502 : 1967 Mah LJ 861.
678. Krishnan Nair v Kunchi Amma, AIR 1967 Ker 86 : (1966) 2 Ker 234.
679. Bukkan Singh v District Board, AIR 1933 Lah 41 : (1933) 14 Lah 230.
680. Haji SK Subhan v Madhorao, AIR 1962 SC 1230 : (1962) 2 SCJ 575.
681. Hamidgani v Ammasahib, AIR 1941 Mad 898; Tallapragada v Boorugapally, (1907) 30 Mad 402; Ala Singh v Wavawa, (1931) PR 14.
682. Thiruvendipuram Dorairajam v Venaswami Rama Naidu, AIR 1950 Mad 47; Hamidgani v Ammasahib, AIR 1941 Mad 898; Lakshamadu v Ramudu, AIR 1939 Mad 867 : (1940) ILR Mad 123; Ram Gopal v Ajodhya Pradad, AIR 1953 All 281; Devana Philipose v Venkita Subba, AIR 1954 TC 118 : (1953) TC 275 : 1952 Ker LT 289.

properly represented and whether he has suffered any prejudice, cannot be investigated in execution proceedings.[683] When the minor has not been properly represented in a suit, he is not a party to the suit in the proper sense of the term. A suit by him to set aside the decree in the suit and the sale in execution of the decree is not barred by this section.[684] But where a suit was decreed, as against a number of defendants some of whom were minors, a suit by the major defendants disputing the validity of the decree on the ground that the minors were not properly represented in the previous suit was held to be barred by this section.[685] An executing court cannot investigate into facts to determine whether relationship of landlord and tenant existed between the parties when the rent court passed the order of eviction in order to determine whether that court had jurisdiction to do so.[686] If a decree strikes at the jurisdiction of the court or the court lacks jurisdiction, it strikes at the very root of the authority to pass the order or the decree. Such a decree will be a nullity. Nullity has to be understood in the sense that it is ultra vires the power of the court passing the decree and not merely avoidable decree.[687] A declaratory decree merely declares the right of the decree-holder vis-a-vis the judgment-debtor and does, in terms, direct the judgment-debtor to do or refrain from doing any particular act or thing. If a decree does not direct reinstatement or payment of arrears of salary, the executing court could not issue any process for the purpose as that would be going outside or beyond the decree.[688]

[s 47.18.2] Mal-administration of Judgment-debtor's Estate

A decree-holder failing to realise his decree by execution against the judgment-debtor's executor, may file a suit against the executor for the administration of the estate and for an account on the footing of misadministration. This is his only remedy for the conduct of the executor and is not a matter for the court of execution.[689]

[s 47.18.3] Second Suit for Redemption

When a mortgagor is, in effect, bringing a suit to execute a previous mortgage-decree for redemption, the suit is barred under this section.[690] But if the right to redeem was reserved to him by the decree in the previous suit, a fresh suit for redemption will lie.[691] The better opinion is that if the former mortgage-decree does not extinguish the right of redemption, a fresh suit for redemption will not be barred.[692] Such a suit is not an execution of the former decree, but a fresh exercise of the same right.

[s 47.18.4] Payment Before Decree

Inexecution of a decree, it is not open to the judgment-debtor to contend that he should get credit for the amount paid before the decree.[693]

---

683. Umar v Mahahabirlal, AIR 1940 Pat 59.
684. Dwarka v Sitta, (1940) ILR All 344.
685. Ballabhdas v Parmal Singh, AIR 1961 MP 36.
686. Narayana Gowda v Krishna Madyastha, AIR 1976 Kant 56.
687. Urban Improvement Trust, Jodhpur v Gokul Narain, AIR 1996 SC 1819 : (1996) 4 SCC 178.
688. State of Madhya Pradesh v Mangilal Sharma, (1998) 2 SCC 510.
689. Saratmani v Bata, (1908) 35 Cal 1100.
690. Hari v Shappurji, (1887) 10 Bom 461.
691. Tani v Hari, (1887) 16 Bom 659 (FB); Abdul v Vaman, AIR 1921 Bom 284 : (1921) 45 Bom 1355; Ambu v Kelu, AIR 1930 Mad 305 : (1930) 53 Mad 805.
692. See note, "Finality of Decree in Redemption Suits".
693. Bhaskar v Nilkanth, AIR 1938 Ngp 265; Seth Samrat Das v Seth Narain Das, AIR 1955 Bhopal 3

[s 47.18.5] Construction of Decree

Executing court can interpret the decree sought to be executed. For doing so, it can refer to reliefs sought in the plaint and discussions in the judgment in order to ascertain the true import of the decree. The plaintiff in an Odisha's case, prayed for:

(i) declaration of title to the suit land;

(ii) confirmation of possession and (in the alternative); and

(iii) for recovery of possession.

The suit was tried and decreed ex parte. On the basis of the evidence on record, the plaintiff was found to be in possession and, accordingly, a decree declaring that the plaintiff had got the right, title and possession over the land in suit was passed. It was held that the executing court was justified in interpreting the decree to mean that the reliefs sought in the plaint were granted and since one of the reliefs sought was to direct delivery of possession, the execution application for delivery of possession was maintainable even in the absence of a specific direction for delivery of possession in the decree.[694] It is well-settled that a decree which merely declares the right of the party and has not directed any act to be done, is incapable of being executed and only a separate suit, and not an application under section 47 of the CPC, will lie to impose the right so declared. It is equally well-settled that the question whether the decree is capable or incapable of execution is pre-eminently one coming under the provisions of section 47 of the CPC. The question, as to executability of the decree, can be decided by executing court only and not by the court passing the decree. At the same time, the executing court has to execute the decree as it is and it cannot go behind the decree.[695] A plea by the managing director and the director of a private company that they are not personally liable, is a mixed question of fact and law and could not be raised before an executing court, irrespective of the fact that a joint decree is passed against the private limited company and its managing directors and its directors.[696]

In a case, decree for permanent injunction was passed restraining the judgment-debtor from planting any tree on the land in question. The decree did not speak of removal of any tree which had already been planted. The Supreme Court held that interpreting the said decree by the executing court and holding that there should not be any tree within two karams on either side of common boundary of parties was not in consonance with the tenor of the decree. It was further held that "as the decree did not clothe the decree holder to pray for execution of the decree by way of removal of the trees, the same could not have been directed by the learned Executing Court in the name of construing the spirit of the decree under execution".[697]

[s 47.19] Parties to the Suit

If the question is one relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, but does not arise between the parties to the suit, the section does not apply, and a suit is not barred. "Parties" ordinarily means parties who are opposed to each other in the suit, though not necessarily as plaintiff and defendant;[698] for, in a partition suit, co-defendants may be

---

694. Biswanath v SD Uttara Bewa, AIR 1988 Ori 9.
695. Radha Rajak v Balmiki Devi, AIR 1998 Pat 75.
696. Indian Overseas Bank v AB Senam, AIR 1999 Ker 364.
697. Gurde v Singh v Narain Singh, AIR 2008 SC 630 : (2007) 14 SCC 173.
698. Bathai Bayyalakshmi Amal v Thoppai Bapu Aiyar, AIR 1946 Mad 90 : (1946) ILR Mad 640; Mangaya v Sriramula, (1913) 24 Mad LJ 477; Sundar Das v Bishan Das, AIR 1936 Lah 116.

opposed to each other. Thus, where a decree was passed against J and R on a joint debt and it was scaled as against J, a subsequent application by J to adjust towards the decree as scaled, payments made by R is not within this section, as it is not one between the parties to the order scaling the debt nor could they be adjusted as they were prior to the scaling.[699] Where a party not taking part in the execution proceedings to be intimated about the date fixed for hearing[700] questions arising between parties who are not opposed to each other, or between a party and a stranger, do not fall under section 47. The following are illustrations:

[s 47.19.1] Questions Between Decree-Holders Inter se

Disputes between rival decree-holders seeking to attach the same property,[701] or claiming against each other in the distribution of assets,[702] or between joint decree-holders inter se,[703] are not within the section, unless they affect the judgment-debtor.[704] Where one of the two legal representatives of a decree-holder transferred his rights in the decree to a third person a suit by the latter against the other legal representative for his share of the realisations is not barred by this section.[705]

In a case, where there was a dispute between decree-holders that warrant of possession should not be issued only in favour of one but should be issued in favour of all the decree-holders jointly and an application under section 47 was filed, it was held that such a dispute between co-decree holders/co-plaintiffs is not covered by this section.[706] The Madhya Pradesh High Court relied on the decision of the Apex Court in Jagdish Dutt's case[707] wherein it has been laid down that a joint decree can be executed as a whole since it is not divisible and it can be executed in part only where the share of the decree-holders are defined or those shares can be predicted or the share is not in dispute.

[s 47.19.2] Questions Between Judgment-debtors Inter se

The Allahabad High Court has held that questions between judgment-debtors inter se are not within the section.[708] But the Madras High Court has held that they are[709] and this has been followed by Rangoon.[710] Where there is money decree against the principal debtor and the guarantors, their liability is joint and several. Decree-holder need not exhaust his remedies against the mortgaged/hypothecated property as well as the principal debtor before proceeding against the guarantors.

---

699. Janki Bai v Bikaji, 59 Bom LR 610.
700. Dataram Jaganath Firm HUF v MS Jagi, AIR 1990 Ori 160.
701. Ram Chunder v Hamiran, (1906) 11 Cal WN 433; Ramanathan v Karuppaya, (1926) 51 Mad LJ 436; M Salamatulla v Murlidhar, AIR 1936 Oudh 277.
702. Sanjivii v Ramasami, (1885) 8 Mad 494; Viswanathan v Yawabanda, AIR 1936 Mad 136 : (1936) II R 59 Mad 399.
703. Munshi Rai v Rup Narain, AIR 1927 Pat 288 : (1927) 6 Pat 386. But see Abdul Satar v Chi Doe Rhi, AIR 1927 Rang 45 : (1926) 4 Rang 418.
704. Hari Kishen v Gopeswar, AIR 1937 Cal 177.
705. Siva Parvathamma v Krushna Chandra, AIR 1956 Ori 53 : (1955) Cut 454.
706. Shiv Autar v Hariom, AIR 2007 MP 130 : 2007 (3) Civil Court Cases 35 (Gwalior Bench).
707. Jagdish Dutt v Dharma Pal, AIR 1999 SC 1694 : (1999) 3 SCC 644.
708. Raynor v Mussoorie Bank, (1885) 7 All 681; Abdul Aziz v Abdul Rahim, AIR 1929 All 291 : (1929) 27 All LJ 757.
709. Vedaviasa v Madura, AIR 1924 Mad 365 : (1924) 45 Mad LJ 478.
710. Abdul Satar v Chi Doe Rhi, AIR 1927 Rang 45 : (1927) 4 Rang 418.

The proposition that the decree-holder must exhaust remedies against the principal debtor suffers from the vice of total vagueness. The stage when such remedies would be deemed to have been exhausted, will have to be necessarily spelt out. If not, such a proposition would create almost insurmountable difficulties in the way of the decree-holder. The law should not be interpreted so as to deny to the decree-holder, the fruits of his decree.[711] From the scheme of O XXI, rule 49, it would be clear that in execution of a decree obtained against a partner in his personal capacity, the property of the partners cannot be attached, although an order charging the interest of such partner in the partnership property etc contemplated by O XXI, rule 49 can be passed.[712]

[s 47.19.3] Questions Between a Party and his own Representatives.[713]

A question arising between the representatives of one of the parties is also not a question between the parties and their representatives.[714]

[s 47.19.4] Question Between Decree Holder and Successor-in-interest of Judgment Debtor

If the decree was passed against the governing body of the college which was the defendant without seeking leave of the court to continue the suit against the university upon whom the interest of the original defendant devolved and impleading it, such an omission would not make the decree void ab initio so as to invoke application of section 47 and entail dismissal of execution. The validity or otherwise of the decree may be challenged by filing a properly constituted suit or taking any other remedy available under law on the ground that original defendant absented himself from the proceeding of the suit after appearance, as it had no longer any interest in the subject of dispute or did not purposely take interest in the proceeding or colluded with the adversary or any other ground permissible under law.[715]

[s 47.19.5] Party Added at the Execution Stage

Party added at the execution stage is not within the section, such as a receiver.[716]

[s 47.19.6] Questions Between a Party and a Stranger

A dispute between a party to the suit or his representatives on the one hand and a stranger (not a purchaser at the execution sale) on the other, is outside the scope of this section. Under the new Explanation II, a purchaser or property at a sale in execution of a decree, though a stranger to the suit, is deemed to be a party to the suit in which the decree has been passed. Before the recent amendment, the view taken was that a suit by the purchaser in court auction of the interest of a co-sharer against the other co-sharers for partition and separate possession

---

711. State Bank of India v Balak Raj Abrol, AIR 1989 HP 41.
712. KP Sobhana Ltd v Catholic Syrian Bank Ltd, AIR 1989 Ker 246.
713. Annamalai Mudali v Ramaswami Mudali, AIR 1941 Mad 161 : (1941) Mad 438; Maganlal v Doshi, (1901) 25 Bom 631; Raynor v Mussoorie Bank, (1885) 7 All 681, 686; Bhagwati v Banwari Lal, (1909) 31 All 82 (FB); Kedar Nath v Arun Chandra, AIR 1937 All 742 (FB) : (1937) All 921.
714. Mundyappu Hengsu v Sampa Alvathi, AIR 1965 Mys 268.
715. Dhurandhar Prasad Singh v Jai Prakash University, AIR 2001 SC 2552 : (2001) 6 SCC 534 : 2001 (4) Scale 495.
716. Satyanarayan Bannerjee v Kalyani Prasad Singh Deo, (1945) 49 Cal WN 558 : 80 Cal LJ 198.

of that interest does not fall under this section.[717] But, after the amendment, such a purchaser is a deemed party to the suit wherein the decree was passed and the question of delivery of possession of the co-sharer's share in the property would be deemed to be a question relating to execution. Hence the view held in those cases may not henceforth be held to be correct. Where, pending a second appeal, the decree-holder died and his widows were brought on record as his legal representatives, an application by a third person claiming to be the representative of the deceased decree-holder to enforce the decree is not within this section.[718] Proceedings against the garnishee in execution are outside section 47,[719] and so is an order directing execution on the application of a commissioner for recovery of costs directed to be paid by a party.[720] The members of joint Hindu family do not become entitled to file objections under section 47, CPC. Section 47 is a special provision regarding objections in the execution by the parties to the suit. It cannot be extended to the persons, who are not parties to the suit on the basis that they are also members of joint Hindu family. This provision cannot be availed by them and the only option for them is to file a separate suit.[721]

When a party is suing or being sued in a representative capacity (section 11, Explanation VI and O I, rule 8) all persons whom such party represents, are parties. Thus, if a decree is passed against a karnavan of a tarwad in his representative capacity, all members of the tarwad are parties to the suit,[722] in their capacity as members of the tarwad.[723] A minor[724] or a lunatic[725] not represented by a proper guardian adlitem is deemed not to be a party to the suit. So also, when a decree is passed against a manager of a joint Hindu family, the junior members will be constructively parties to the suit only with reference to disputes relating to joint family properties but not those relating to their individual properties.[726] An objection, however, on this ground cannot be taken in execution proceedings against the minor or lunatic, for an executing court cannot go behind the decree, but the judgment may be attacked in revision or by appeal or by a regular suit.[727] A judgment-debtor, who objected to a sale of property on the ground that he had acquired a fresh title to it, subsequent to the decree, was held not to be a party to the suit in respect of that objection.[728] A benamidar is neither a party nor a representative of a party within this section.[729] A dispute between a decree-holder and his assignee is not a dispute between parties to the suit and a separate suit relating to the validity of the assignment is competent.[730] Where in a suit for possession there was no privity of contract between plaintiff-landlord and respondents, it was the case of the plaintiff-landlord that property was let out to respondents. Respondents were also not claiming through the plaintiff-landlord but through the tenant of plaintiff, and at most could be treated to be sub-tenants. The respondents/sub-tenant cannot, in the instant case, be said to be necessary party to suit proceedings and were not required to be joined as defendants in suit. Non-joinder of

---

717. Avidayamma v Paramartha, AIR 1954 Tr & Coch 299; Suryanjaneyulu v Venkateswarlu, AIR 1955 Pat 203.
718. Kalabathi v Chandra Narain, AIR 1962 Pat 55; Manturni v Munni Lal, AIR 1963 Pat 127.
719. Bharat Pictures Ltd v UP Chougani, AIR 1954 Bho 30.
720. Ramkeshwar Prasad v Babu Girija, AIR 1957 Pat 501.
721. Shyam Sunder v Firm Narain Das Bal Krishna, AIR 2001 All 222.
722. Marivittil v Pathram, (1907) 30 Mad 215; Kamal Kutti v Ibrayi, (1901) 24 Mad 658.
723. Narayanan v Theva Amma, AIR 1927 Mad 1043 : (1927) 51 Mad 46.
724. Rashid-un-nissa v Muhammad, (1909) 31 All 572 : 36 IA 198.
725. Kalipada v Hari, (1917) 44 Cal 627 : 35 IC 856.
726. Junnoo Singh v Ram Narain, AIR 1956 All 580.
727. Kalipada v Hari, (1917) 44 Cal 627 : 35 IC 856.
728. Sham Lal v Amar Prasad, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 219.
729. Venkamma v Parthasarathi, AIR 1926 Mad 1081 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 381.
730. Sarab Sukh v Prem Dutt, AIR 1937 Lah 465 : (1937) Lah 162.

respondent sub-tenant to the suit, will not make decree passed in suit nullity or inexecutable qua sub-tenant.[731]

Where a person, who has been joined as a party to a suit being a co-sharer, claims that the property sold at a court auction in execution of the decree in the suit is in excess of what could be sold and he is resisted not only by the auction-purchaser but also by the decree-holder, an issue relating to execution of the decree arises between such person and the decree-holder, both of whom were parties to the suit. The fact that he was merely joined as proforma defendant will make no difference.[732] By reason of the new Explanation II(a), the auction-purchaser is also a deemed party to the suit.

Summary suit for recovery of money advanced by plaintiff to respondent no 2, a proprietary concern was decreed. The decree was put in execution. A receiver was appointed in respect of properties of respondent no 2. Respondent no 1, a public limited company filed objection to appointment of receiver. The stand of respondent no 1 was that the company has taken over the business of the proprietary concern of respondent no 2. The company is a tenant under the mother of respondent no 2. Since the receiver was appointed without notice to the company, the substantial rights and interest over the properties as tenants were being affected. The revisional court set aside the order of appointment of receiver on ground that on the basis of affidavits it was not possible to say that transfer if any made by respondent no 2 to the company is a fraudulent transfer and the matter has assumed the proportion of a full-blown suit. The revisional court directed the execution court to decide the question of title.

It was held that the order of revisional court was clearly unsustainable on more grounds than one. Respondent no 1 claimed its tenancy from mother of respondent no 2. Her application to be impleaded as a party in the present proceedings was rejected. At no point of time had she pressed a claim of being the owner of the property. In any event, the question of tenancy cannot be decided by the execution court. The executing court cannot go beyond the decree. It is the settled position in law which flows from section 38 of the CPC, except where the decree is a nullity or is without jurisdiction. The crucial expression in section 47 is "all questions arising between the parties to the suit","or their representatives". Order XXI, rule 54 deals with attachment of immovable property, while rule 58 deals with adjudication of claims to, or objections to attachment of property. The case of respondent no 1 was thus not covered by section 47 or O XXI, rule 54 or rule 58.[733]

[s 47.20] Explanations I and II: Deemed Parties to the Suit and Deemed Questions Relating to Execution, Discharge or Satisfaction

Under section 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, the High Courts of Allahabad[734] and Calcutta[735] took the view that a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed and a defendant against whom a suit had been dismissed, ceased to be parties to the suit. On the other hand, the High Courts of Madras,[736] Bombay[737] and later on, Calcutta,[738] held that such persons continued to be parties to the suit for purposes of this section. To resolve this conflict, the

---

731. Balavant N Viswamitra v Yadav Sadashiv Mule, AIR 2004 SC 4377 : (2004) 8 SCC 706.
732. Shiv Ram Kehar Singh, AIR 1934 Lah 105.
733. TCI Finance Ltd v Calcutta Medical Centre Ltd, AIR 2005 SC 3654 : (2005) 8 SCC 41.
734. Kalka v Basant, (1901) 23 All 346; Sheo Parshad v Nawab Singh, (1910) 32 All 321.
735. Rahimuddi v Loll Meah, (1902) 29 Cal 696; Ram Pershad v Jagannath, (1903) 30 Cal 134.
736. Ramaswami v Kameshwaramma, (1990) 23 Mad 361 (FB).
737. Gawri v Vigneswar, (1863) 17 Bom 49.
738. Nirode Kali Roy v Harendra Nath, AIR 1938 Cal 113 : (1938) 1 Cal 280.

legislature introduced an explanation by which it gave effect to the latter view. However, the further question still remained unresolved, viz, whether a claim for possession by a purchaser in court auction held in pursuance of execution of a decree is not one relating to execution of the decree. The recent amendment omits the explanation and brings, in its place, two explanations. The first explanation is a reproduction of the first part of the deleted explanation and the second explanation enacts that such a purchaser is not only to be deemed a party but the question relating to delivery of possession to him is to be deemed to be one relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. All objections, therefore, to attachment or sale by the judgment-debtor fall under this section and not O XXI, rule 58.[739] But if an objection is raised by two persons, one of whom is a party, but the other is not, and such an objection is dismissed, the latter could file a suit under O XXI, rule 63.[740] But that is no longer possible as that rule has been omitted by 1976 Amendment Act. The procedure laid down for the execution of the decrees is elaborately dealt with in O XXI of the CPC. Various safeguards were fixed to ensure that if any issue arises during the execution, the same can be dealt with in execution petition proceedings instead of driving the parties to file separate suit for appropriate relief. As can be seen from section 47 of the CPC, all the questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed relating to the execution, discharge or a satisfaction of the decree are required to be considered by the executing court. Therefore, the requirement of section 47 is that the question should arise between the parties to the suit and the question should relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, subject to the explanation. Therefore, when once the decree is executed or decretal amount is discharged, or the satisfaction is recorded by the court, no further question would arise for determination of the court. That is the reason why deeming clauses were introduced. In Explanation II, the purchaser of the property, at a sale in execution of the decree, was also deemed to be a party to the suit and all questions relating to the decree of the possession of such property was deemed to be a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.[741]

As the words of sub-section 1 indicate, the words "parties to the suit" need not be given a limited meaning as connoting only parties opposed to each other in the suit. A judgment-creditor and his representative as also a judgment-debtor and his representative are parties opposed to each other.[742] Where, on an application for execution of a money decree obtained against the insolvents and their sons, the joint family property of the judgment-debtors attached before judgment was sought to be proceeded against, the official receiver, who was a party to the decree, prayed for an order to deliver the attached property for administration by him on the insolvency side. The issue between him and the attaching decree-holder, was whether the property was the self-acquired property of the insolvents or was the joint family property of the father and the sons. It was held that the issue was between parties to the suit and related to the execution of the decree and consequently had to be decided by the executing court.[743] On the other hand, the question still remains whether a person against whom the suit is dismissed on the ground of misjoinder, is a party within the meaning of this section. Such a person was improperly impleaded and therefore, was never treated by the court as a party to whom the decree would be binding. In this case, the high court, while deciding the appeal

---

739. Jamini v Kali Prasad, AIR 1921 Cal 242 : (1921) 34 Cal LJ 477; Sheikh Kaloo v Bholanath, (1925) 6 Pat LJ 725; Mst Madho v Hazari Mal, AIR 1929 Pat 141 : (1929) 8 Pat 717; Chettyar Firm v Teo Ee Sanh, AIR 1927 Rang 273 : (1927) 5 Rang 393.
740. Thandaran v Unnalachan, AIR 1934 Mad 435 : (1934) 57 Mad 822.
741. Chivukula Ranjith Kumar v Santhilal Nemichand, AIR 2000 AP 113.
742. Mohd Akhtar Ali v Badrudin, AIR 1973 Pat 187.
743. Venkata Suryanarayana v Official Receiver, AIR 1965 AP 451 : (1965) 2 Andh WR 321.

of the judgment-debtor, had observed that so far as compensation is concerned "it would be opened to the D-1 to seek compensation for the properties in an appropriate proceedings in accordance with law". The Supreme Court, in appeal, did not consider necessary to get into the scope of section 47 of the CPC to decide the controversy. It was observed by the Hon'ble Supreme Court that the words "in an appropriate proceedings" cannot certainly mean execution proceedings of the very same decree, which is but the same proceedings. The said words meant a separate independent proceedings.[744]

In Krishnappa v Periaswamy,[745] the Madras High Court held that a defendant, against whom the suit was dismissed on account of misjoinder is not a party. In Sunamma v Radhobhayi,[746] the same high court held that a defendant who had been properly impleaded, but as against whom the suit was dismissed because the plaintiff had abandoned his case, as against him is a defendant against whom a suit has been dismissed under section 47. But when a party whose joinder is not proper is exonerated, he ceases to be a party and the claim preferred by him to the property attached in execution does not fall within this section.[747] So also, where sons who were impleaded in a suit for the recovery of a debt of the father, pleaded exemption from liability and were exonerated, it was held that they ceased to be parties to the suit and that section 47 did not apply.[748] In a later case, however, it has been held that whether a party to a suit who has been exonerated continues to be a party within this section when he is struck off on the ground on which he is exonerated and when he is struck off on the ground that his joinder was improper, he ceases to be a party.[749] When a suit is dismissed against the defendant on the ground that he is not concerned with it, he is no longer a party for the purpose of section 47.[750] Where, in a suit on a mortgage, the minor son of the mortgagor who disputed its validity, was directed to be removed, it was held that he still continued to be party and that the binding character of the mortgage could be decided in execution.[751] A person, who is not a party to a promissory note, cannot be properly impleaded as a party in a suit thereon and when on his objection, the suit is withdrawn and dismissed as against him, he is not a party within section 47.[752] In Abdul v Sundara,[753] a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that a person who is not a proper party to the suit, is not a party under section 47 for the purposes of execution, and that it matters not that the court, instead of striking out his name under O I, rule 10(2), has dismissed the suit as against him. A person whose name is struck off the record, is a person whom the court does not regard as a person to be bound by the decree and is, therefore, not a party under section 47.[754] The Allahabad High Court has held that an order exempting a defendant from the suit is equivalent to an order dismissing the suit as against

---

744. MPEB v Central Indian Electric Supply Co Ltd, (1995) 1 SCC 364.
745. Krishnappa v Periaswamy, (1917) 40 Mad 964; followed in U Kala v Ma Hnin, AIR 1927 Rang 137 : (1927) 5 Rang 110.
746. Sunamma v Radhobhayi, (1918) 41 Mad 418.
747. Mahalakshmamma v Hanumayya, AIR 1953 Mad 916 : (1953) 1 Mad LJ 808; Ramayya v Venkanraju, AIR 1954 Mad 916; Ramayya v Venkanraju, AIR 1954 Mad 864 (FB) : (1954) 2 Mad LJ 176; Mulkraj v Ramdas, AIR 1962 J&K 43.
748. Ramayya v Venkanraju, AIR 1954 Mad 864 (FB) : (1954) 2 Mad LJ 176(suit against the son on a promissory note executed by the father to which he was not a party).
749. Kailasa Reddiar v Ponnammal, (1961) 2 Mad LJ 119.
750. Suresh Mohan v Shamal Mall, AIR 1957 Pat 437 : ILR 36 Pat 424.
751. Mohalinga v Santhangopalakrishna, AIR 1958 Mad 80 : (1958) 2 Mad LJ 580.
752. Suryaprakasa Rao v Abdullah Saheb, AIR 1959 AP 106 : (1958) ILR AP 759.
753. Abdul v Sundara, AIR 1930 Mad 817 (FB) : (1913) 54 Mad 81; approving Krishnappa v Periaswamy, (1917) 40 Mad 964, and overruling Sethu v Ramaswamy, AIR 1926 Mad 484 : (1926) 49 Mad 494, and Linga v Lakshumanan, AIR 1926 Mad 687 : (1926) 50 Mad LJ 387; Kusmi v Sadasi, AIR 1942 Pat 432 : (1942) 21 Pat 601; Radha Nath v Ramchandra, AIR 1954 Cal 367.
754. Nallaperumal v Sakul, AIR 1928 Mad 276 : (1928) 54 Mad LJ 721.

him and that if his name is not struck off the record, he is a party to the suit for purposes of the execution.[755] The executing court can decide the question about the non-executability of the decree, or it being a nullity and that this aspect of controversy is covered by the expression "execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree" used in section 47 of the CPC.[756]

[s 47.21] Representatives

The "representative" in this section includes not only "legal representatives" in the sense of heirs, executors or administrators, but also "representative in interest", that is, any transferee of the decree-holder's interest, or any transferee of the judgment-debtor's interest, who so far as such interest is concerned is bound by the decree.[757] The word "representative" as used in this section means a person in whom the interest of a party to the suit has vested either by an act of the party (i.e., a transferee from the party) or by operation of law, which ordinarily means and includes cases of testamentary and intestate succession upon the death of the party to the suit or upon his insolvency or cases of forfeiture.[758] Even a transferee pendente lite is a representative of his transferor within the meaning of sub-section (3) of section 47. One who claims to be a transferee by operation of law, would as well be a representative of the decree-holders interests in the decree and the decree-holder disputes it, the execution court has to resolve the dispute for proceedings with the execution of decree. The word "representative" used in section 47 is obviously much wider than the words "legal representative" as used in section 50 of the CPC.[759] In the case of a pre-emption decree, the right to execute it after the death of the pre-emptor decree-holder, will vest in his legal representative by operation of law. But that would not be the position where the pre-emptor decree-holder assigns his rights in the decree, in favour of a third party since the decree-holder has no right to transfer a pre-emption decree.[760] A surety for the performance of a decree is not a representative of a party within the meaning of this section.[761] It was at one time supposed that a transferee, by judicial sale, could not be a representative,[762] but this view is no longer tenable. He is now a deemed party to the suit to which the decree has been passed. Hence an auction-purchaser is a necessary party in a revision petition filed against an order refusing to stay confirmation of court sale.[763] It was also said that a "representative" is a person who succeeds to the rights of any of the parties after decree;[764] but this is incorrect for a transferee may be bound by the decree on the doctrine of lis pendens.[765]

---

755. Seed Ahmed v Raza Hussain, AIR 1933 All 57 : (1932) 54 All 1031; Sachitanand v Radhapat, AIR 1928 All 234 : (1928) 26 All LJ 524
756. Sunder Theaters v Allahabad Bank, AIR 1999 All 14.
757. Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, (1897) 24 Cal 62; Gulzari Lal v Madho Ram, (1904) 26 All 447; Tara Prasanna v Nilmoni, (1914) 41 Cal 418; Azhar Hussain v Mohammad Shibli, AIR 1939 Nag 183 : (1939) Nag 548; Gauri Dutt v Dawring, AIR 1934 Pat 413 : (1934) 13 Pat 735; Bankery Behari Lal v Brij Rani, AIR 1944 Oudh 314; Annamalai Mudali v Ramaswami Mudali, (1941) Mad 1003 : (1954) 1 Mad LJ 501.
758. Hanmantagouda v Shivappa, (1940) 42 Bom LR 1123; Ajodheya Lal v Mahanath Brijkishore, AIR 1940 Pat 615.
759. Gangabai Gopal Dass Mohta v Ful Chand, AIR 1997 SC 1812 : (1997) 10 SCC 387.
760. Hazari v Zila Singh, AIR 1970 P&H 215 : (1970) ILR 1 Punj 326 : 71 Punj LR 927.
761. Raghuber Singh v Jai Indra Bahadur Singh, 46 IA 228 : 236; Abdul Ali v Rupchand, AIR 1953 Hyd 111. See section 145 below.
762. Gour Sundar v Hem Chunder, (1889) 16 Cal 335; Sabhaji v Sri Gopal, (1895) 17 All 222.
763. Kariman Bai vs Laxman Lal Ram Pratap, AIR 1978 Raj 120.
764. Bankey Behanlal v Brij Rani, AIR 1944 Oudh 314; Kameshar Prasad v Ran Bahadur, (1896) 12 Cal 458.
765. Sheo Narain v Chunilal, (1900) 22 All 243; Gopinath v Sajani, (1905) 10 Cal WN 240; Gur Prasad v Ram Lal, (1899) 21 All 20.

Thus, when at the time of the purchase, the property purchased was under attachment in execution of a decree, the purchaser was regarded as a representative of the judgment-debtor.[766]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A, in execution of his decree, obtained on 14 March, an order for the attachment of the property of B. The attachment was actually effected on 17 March. But, before this, B had obtained an interim order from the court of appeal for stay, a copy of which was received by the court of execution on 16 March. The stay order was vacated on 15 April. C, believing that the attachment after the stay order was invalid, purchased the property from B on 27 May. A, however, continued to prosecute his execution proceeding against B and three years later the high court restored the attachment. Held that, as C purchased during the pendency of the execution proceedings, he was bound by the order of the high court on the principle of lis pendens and must be regarded as a representative of B. The question of the validity of the attachment is one that falls to be decided by the court of execution, and it mattered not that the court was called upon to decide the question formally after the judgment-debtor had sold the property.[767]

(ii) A filed a suit against B and obtained an attachment of the properties before judgment. Then, in execution of an award passed by the Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies, the properties were brought to sale and purchased by C. Then A obtained a decree and proceeded to sell the same property. C preferred a claim under O XXI, rule 58 and that having been dismissed, filed a suit under O XXI, rule 63. It was held that he was a representative of the judgment-debtor, and that the petition under O XXI, rule 58 was misconceived, that the suit under O XXI, rule 63 was not maintainable but that it could be converted into a proceeding under section 47.[768] This cannot now be done in view of the omission of sub-section (2) of section 2;rule 63 of O XXI having also been omitted, no such suit is possible and therefore the remedy of C is only under this section.

The High Court of Bombay once took the view that a purchaser pendente lite was not the representative of his vendor.[769] But this view was dissented from by the High Court of Madras[770] and was contrary to the view taken by the Privy Council[771] and the High Court of Calcutta.[772] At a later date, the High Court of Bombay changed its view and held, in a suit for possession of immovable property, that a transferee of a defendant pendente lite was a representative of the defendant.[773] That was also the view of the High Court of Nagpur.[774] According to a Calcutta decision, two tests are to be employed in order to determine whether a particular person is a representative: first, whether any portion of the interest of the decree-holder or of the judgment-debtor which was originally vested in one of the parties, has by the act of the parties or by operation of law vested in the person sought to be treated as a representative, and secondly, if there has been devolution of interest in the person in whose favour it has taken place.[775] A devisee,[776] a legatee,[777] a lessee,[778] and a person taking joint

766. Sheo Narain v Chunilal, (1900) 22 All 243; Gopinath v Sajani, (1905) 10 Cal WN 240; Gur Prasad v Ram Lal, (1899) 21 All 20.
767. Venkatachalapathi v Venkatappayya, AIR 1932 Mad 86 : (1931) 55 Mad 495 : 136 IC 306.
768. Veerayya v Veeraraghaviah, AIR 1961 AP 298.
769. Basappa v Bhimangowda, AIR 1928 Bom 65 : (1928) 52 Bom 208.
770. Lakshminarayana v Hanumayuya, AIR 1937 Mad 508.
771. Parmeshri Din v Ram Charan, AIR 1937 PC 260 : (1937) 39 Bom LR 1019 : 41 Cal WN 1130.
772. Nishi Kanta v Kumar Promotha Nath, (1934) 37 Cal WN 1015 : AIR 1934 Cal 145.
773. Gopal v Dnyanu, ILR AIR 1938 Bom 367 : (1938) Bom 649.
774. Narayan Rao v Chunilal, AIR 1953 Nag 263 : (1952) ILR Nag 150.
775. Ajodhya Rao v Hardwar Ray, (1907) 9 Cal LJ 485; Naranappa v Khurana, AIR 1953 Mys 153; J.L. Arora v ME Periera, AIR 1977 Del 12.
776. Bhawani Shanker v Naranshaker, (1899) 23 Bom 536.
777. Chettiar Firm v Teo Ee San, AIR 1927 Rang 273 : (1927) 5 Rang 393.
778. Nishi Kanta v Kumar Promatha Nath, AIR 1934 Cal 145; Murari Lal v Debi Saran, AIR 1956 All 555.

property under the rule of survivorship[779] are representatives. A sub-lessee is a representative of the lessee and would be bound by a decree for possession passed against the lessee provided the eviction is based on a ground which determines the sub-lease.[780]

In a suit for specific performance of contract, an objection was raised by the judgment-debtor in the execution proceeding that property under the draft sale deed was joint family property and not his exclusive property and that property has been sold to two outsiders. It was held by the Orissa High Court that the objection raised by the judgment-debtor for the first time is not tenable in view of the provisions of section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.[781] The principle of law has been explained in the following words:

> Lis Pendens is a doctrine common to the Courts of both law and equity and rests on the foundation that it would be plainly impossible that any action or suit could be brought to a successful termination if alienations pendente lite were permitted to prevail. The law maxim "ut lite pendente nihil innovetur", i.e. during litigation nothing new should be introduced, aims at prevention of multiplicity of suits. Even otherwise, where a decree is for execution of a document, the executing Court has only to determine whether the draft document is in conformity with the terms of the decree. The executing Court having no power to go beyond the decree is not only to act in consonance with the terms of the decree but ensure that the draft document does not go beyond the terms. Thus where a decree does not deal with or has given no direction regarding possession of any third party and/or alienation pendente lite, the executing Court will have no jurisdiction to delve into such aspects.[782]

The legatee of a part of an estate is not a legal representative.[783]

The following are illustrations of persons held to be representatives under this section:

[s 47.21.1] Effect of Death of Decree Holder on Execution

It is true that in the light of the provisions of rule 12 of O XXII, CPC, the provisions of O XXII do not apply to the execution proceedings and the execution cannot abate on the death of the decree holder, but the question is as to whether from this provision, it can be concluded that execution can proceed after the death of the decree holder without substitution of his heirs. The reply will certainly be in the negative. There must be somebody to prosecute the proceedings and the execution proceedings cannot be proceeded till the heirs of the decree holder are substituted. The decree holder, who moved application for execution, died in the year 1982. Her heirs have still not been substituted. The natural question is as to who will prosecute the execution proceedings.

This principle will equally apply to the decree holder. Therefore, the execution cannot proceed till the heirs of the decree holder are brought on record in her place.[784]

[s 47.21.2] Questions Between Legal Representatives of Deceased Decree-holder

In one case, two persons, namely the wife and sister of deceased decree-holder claimed the right to represent him. The proceedings were instituted by the petitioner who claimed to be the heir of the decree-holder alleging herself to be the sister of the decree-holder. The issue, therefore, which has arisen is between two persons claiming a right to represent the

---

779. Peari Lal v Chandi Charan, (1906) 11 Cal WN 163.
780. Guru Shiddhaswami v Dakshina Maharashtra Digambar Jain Sabha, AIR 1953 SC 514 : (1953) SCJ 730.
781. Doki Surya Prakash Rao v Gopal Krishna Dolai, AIR 2007 Ori 168.
782. Doki Surya Prakash Rao v Gopal Krishna Dolai, AIR 2007 Ori 168, p 170.
783. Deshpande v Srinivasan, (1954) Mad 1003 : (1954) 1 Mad LJ 501; Narsu v Mamda, (1950) 1 Mad LJ 476.
784. Makkhan Lal Jaiswal v Executive Engineer, Land Planning Division, AIR 2002 All 75.

deceased decree holder. Neither the petitioner nor the respondent no 2 is a party to the suit. In such a situation, the dispute about the right of representation is not really between the parties or with even one of the parties to the suit, but between two sets of persons claiming to represent one of the parties, namely, the plaintiff decree holder. It is a dispute about who is the legal representative. In such a situation, the provisions of section 47 are not applicable as that provision applies only to a dispute between parties to the suit. Sub-section (3) of section 47 provides that "where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the representative of a party such question shall for the purposes of this section be determined by the court". The words of this sub-section make it clear that the determination is to be for the purposes of section 47. The purpose of section 47 is the decision of questions arising between parties to the suit or their representatives and relating to execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Now, the question whether a person is a representative of a party when raised by the other party to the suit would be covered under sub-section (1) of section 47 as it would be a decision between the representative of one party on the one hand and the other party on the other hand. But where the dispute between two persons claiming to be the legal representative of one party arises on the death of that party, the dispute is not one between two parties to the suit or between a representative of one party on the one hand and the other party to the suit on the other hand and hence would not be a dispute covered under the scope of section 47(1) or of section 47(3), CPC. Thus, where a judgment-debtor challenges the right of a person claiming to be the representative of the decree-holder, he is challenging the right of such person to execute the decree and a question relating to execution therefore arises between the parties to the suit but a dispute between two persons claiming to be the legal representative of the decree-holder in which the judgment-debtor is not interested would not be a dispute between the parties to the suit or with any party to the suit at all and hence would not be covered under section 47.[785]

[s 47.21.3] Transferee of a Decree

A transferee of a decree, or of the interest of any decree-holder in a joint-decree within the meaning of O XXI, rule 16, is a "representative" of the decree-holder.[786] A transferee from such transferee is also a 'representative' of the decree-holder.[787]

A judgment-creditor who attaches a decree held by the judgment-debtor against another is a "representative" of the judgment-debtor. A holds a decree against B. C obtains a decree against A, and, in execution, attaches the decree held by A against B. C is a "representative" of A in proceedings in execution of A's decree against B.[788]

[s 47.21.4] Transferee of Property from a Judgment-debtor under Money Decree

A obtains a decree against B for Rs 5,000. B then sells certain property belonging to him to C. C is not a "representative" of B, for the decree is a simple money decree, and does not relate to the specific property sold to C.[789]

---

785. Nand Rani v Civil Judge, Junior Division, Pilibhit, AIR 2004 All 307.
786. Dwar Buksh v Fatik, (1899) 26 Cal 250; Badri Narain v Jai Kishen, (1894) 16 All 483; Sheo Prasad v Lall, AIR 1925 Pat 449 : (1925) 4 Pat 120.
787. Ganga Das v Yakub Ali, (1900) 27 Cal 670.
788. Sah Man Mull v Kanagasabapathi, (1893) 16 Mad 20; Krishnan v Venkatapathi, (1906) 29 Mad 318; Peary Mohun v Romesh, (1888) 15 Cal 371. See also O XXI, rule 53(3).
789. Madho Das v Ramji, (1894) 16 All 286; Shivram v Jivu, (1889) 13 Bom 34; Rashbehary v Surnomoyee, (1881) 7 Cal 403; Mst Bhampul v Harbuksh Singh, (1912) PR No 64, p 242 (gift by judgment-debtor of his entire property).

[s 47.21.5] Pre-emption Decree

A obtains a decree for pre-emption and deposits the requisite amount and then transfers the lands to B. A suit by the transferee for recovery of possession of lands is not barred as the decree for pre-emption is personal to the decree-holder and the transferee is not his representative.[790]

[s 47.21.6] Decree for Specific Performance

An application for possession of properties in execution of a decree for specific performance of an agreement to sell, obtained against the transferee of the vendor, falls within this section as the transferee is the representative of the vendor with respect to the liability of the latter to deliver possession.[791]

[s 47.21.7] Transferee from Judgment-debtor of Property Under Attachment

A purchaser, lessee, or mortgagee, from a judgment-debtor, of property belonging to the judgment-debtor and attached in execution of a decree against him, is the "representative" of the judgment-debtor, within the meaning of this section, for the property being under attachment at the date of the purchase, lease or mortgage, the purchaser, lessee or mortgagee is bound by the decree so far as the interest transferred to him is concerned.[792] But where the judgment-debtor enters into a contract to sell property before it is attached, the transferee from him pursuant to the contract is not his representative.[793] Where in execution of a money decree, the judgment-debtor was arrested, and he was released on his executing a bond securing immovable properties, an application by the decree-holder to enforce the bond as against a person who had obtained a subsequent mortgage from the judgment-debtor fails within this section as he is a representative of the latter.[794]

[s 47.21.8] Purchaser of Judgment-debtor's Equity of Redemption Under a Private Sale

A obtains a decree against B for sale of certain property, mortgaged to him by B. After the date of the decree, B sells his equity of redemption in the mortgaged property to C. C is a "representative" of B, the judgment-debtor, for the property having been purchased after it was affected by A's mortgage-decree, C is, to the extent, bound by A's decree. Hence, any question relating to the execution of A's decree, and arising between A and C, must be determined by the court executing A's decree, and not by a separate suit,[795] and even so if the execution is of the personal decree passed under O 34, rule 6.[796] The same procedure would apply even if B had transferred his interest in the property to C during the pendency of the mortgage suit and before the passing of the decree.[797]

---

790. Ramsingh v Gaindaram, AIR 1953 P&H 163 : (1954) ILR Punj 15.
791. Subhodh Kumar v Hiramoni, AIR 1955 Cal 267.
792. Gur Prasad v Ram Lal, (1899) 21 All 20 (sale); Matheuson v Gobardhan, (1901) 28 Cal 492 (lease); Paramananda v Mahabeer, (1897) 20 Mad 378 (mortgage); Kuppana v Kumara, (1911) 34 Mad 450 (sale); Narayenaswami v Seshappier, (1907) 17 Mad LJ 321 (mortgage); Lalji Mal v Nand Kishore, (1897) 19 All 332; Ishar Das v Parma Nand, (1925) 6 Lah 544 : AIR 1926 Lah 134 (mortgage); Manicka Chettiar v Rajammal, 1955 (2) Mad LJ 357 : 1955 Mad WN 664. See section 64.
793. Varughese v Ouseph Lonan, AIR 1952 TC 467 : (1952) TC 201.
794. Subramanya v Esakki Madan, AIR 1953 TC 364.
795. Madho Das v Ramji, (1894) 16 All 286.
796. Samhut Rai v Sambaran Rai, AIR 1944 Pat 105 : (1943) 22 Pat 678.
797. Sheo Narain v Chunilal, (1900) 22 All 243.

[s 47.21.9] Purchaser of Judgment-debtor's Equity of Redemption at a Judicial Sale

A obtains a decree against B for the sale of certain property mortgaged to him by B. Before the property could be sold in execution of A's decree, X, who holds a money decree against B, brings B's equity of redemption in the mortgaged property to sale in execution of his decree, and it is purchased by C. C is a "representative" of B, and judgment-debtor, for the property having been purchased after it was affected by A's mortgage-decree, C is, to that extent, bound by A's decree. Hence, any question relating to the execution of A's decree, and arising between A and C, must be determined by the court executing A's decree and not by a separate suit.[798] A obtained a decree for maintenance and it was charged on property X. In a sale in execution of the decree, B became the purchaser. X was again sold, in execution for recovery of subsequent maintenance, and purchased by A. A, having been obstructed in taking possession, filed a suit against B in ejectment. It was held that it was barred, as B was a representative of the judgment-debtor and the dispute fell within section 47.[799] But where the properties were sold in court auction prior to the suit on a mortgage and purchased by the defendants, a suit by the purchaser in execution of the mortgage decree to eject him is not barred by section 47.[800]

[s 47.21.10] A Purchaser of Property from a Party to a Suit in Which an Injunction has Been Granted Affecting Such Property is not a "Representative" within the Meaning of this Section

A obtains a decree against B, restraining B by an injunction from obstructing him in the exercise of his right of way to his land over B's land. A then sells his land to C. If B obstructs C in the enjoyment of the right of way, C's proper remedy is by way of suit against B and not in execution under this section. The reason is that an injunction does not run with the land, and C cannot, therefore, claim the benefit of the decree against B.[801] Note that C is not a transferee of the decree, but of the property only.[802]

[s 47.21.11] Official Assignee

The Official Assignee claiming property on behalf of the creditors of an insolvent judgment-debtor, is not a "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of this section.[803] Nor is a receiver appointed under O XL, rule 1 the representative of the judgment-debtor or decree-holder, as the case may be, as the title of none of parties to the suit is transferred to him, there being only change of possession.[804] In such a case, he is really a third party making a claim though for some purposes he would be entitled as representing the judgment-debtor to litigate matters under section 47.[805] An application by an official receiver on the insolvency of the

---

798. Gulzari Lal v Madho Ram, (1904) 26 All 447; Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, (1897) 24 Cal 62; Radha Kishun v Hem Chandra, (1907) 11 Cal WN 495; Mahimuddin v Pamu Sahani, AIR 1952 Ori 64.
799. Tirugnana Sambanda Mudaliar v Meenakshi Ammal, AIR 1963 Mad 144.
800. Kedarnath v Sheo Narain, AIR 1957 Pat 408.
801. Jamsetji v Hari Dayal, (1908) 32 Bom 181.
802. See notes to section 50, "Decree for injunction".
803. Kasi Prasad v Miller, (1885) 7 All 752; Grey v Hazari Lal, (1908) 30 All 486; Sardarmal v Aranvayal, (1896) 21 Bom 205; Frederick Peacock v Madan Gopal, (1902) 29 Cal 428; Official Assignee of Madras v Aiyu, AIR 1925 Mad 688 : (1925) 48 Mad LJ 530; Re Frank Morton Fisk, AIR 1956 Cal 656 : 60 Cal WN 61.
804. Satyanarayan Bannerjee v Kalyani Prasad Singh Deo Bahadur, AIR 1945 Cal 387 : (1945) 49 Cal WN 558 : 80 Cal LJ 198.
805. Mohitosh v Satish, AIR 1932 Cal 203 : (1931) 35 Cal WN 971; Official Receiver v Imperial Bank of India, AIR 1935 Mad 151 : (1935) 58 Mad 403.

judgment-debtor to have a sale in execution of a decree set aside is made by him as a representative of the judgment-debtor.[806] Whether such a receiver is a representative of the judgment-debtor or not, is a question to be determined on the facts of each case.[807] A receiver appointed under O XL, is not a representative of any party to the suit in which he has been appointed receiver.[808] The Custodian of Evacuee Properties is a representative of the evacuees and is entitled to apply under section 47 to set aside a, sale of his interest in execution of a decree on the ground that it is prohibited by the Administration of the Evacuee Property Act, 1950 and is void.[809]

[s 47.21.12] Purchaser from a Judgment-debtor under O XXI, Rule 83

The High Court of Allahabad has held that a purchaser from a judgment-debtor under O XXI, rule 83, is a "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of this section.[810] A obtains a decree against B. In execution of the decree certain property belonging to B is attached and an order is made for the sale thereof. B then obtains a certificate from the court under O XXI, rule 83, to sell the property by private sale, and the property is sold to C in pursuance of the certificate. C is a "representative" of B within the meaning of this section.

[s 47.21.13] Purchaser from a Judgment-debtor of an Occupancy Holding

A purchaser from the judgment-debtor of an occupancy holding not transferable by custom is a "representative" of the judgment-debtor. If the holding is sold in execution of the decree against the judgment-debtor, and he is dispossessed by the auction-purchaser, he may apply for possession under this section, and not under O XXI, rule 100.[811] In Tulsiram v Lakshmichand,[812] the occupancy right of a tenant A was sold in execution of a decree and purchased by X. Then the landlord B pre-empted and the sale was set aside on his depositing the sale amount. Subsequently, B attached and withdrew the amount deposited by X into court in execution of a rent decree obtained against A. X is entitled to recover the amount from B in a separate suit as he had ceased to be representative of A when B attached the amount.

[s 47.21.14] Purchaser from a Judgment-debtor of a Portion of a Holding

A purchaser from a judgment-debtor of a portion of a holding, is, so far as his interest is concerned, bound by the decree for rent obtained against the judgment-debtor under section 148A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 and by the sale in execution of that decree. He is, therefore, a "representative" of the judgment-debtor, and if he is dispossessed by the auction-purchaser, he may apply for possession under this section, but not under O XXI, rule 100.[813]

[s 47.21.15] Stranger Purchaser at a Court Sale and a Purchaser at a Revenue Sale

A purchaser at a court sale in execution of a decree of a civil court, who is a stranger, was held to be not a representative either of the judgment-debtor or the decree-holder.[814] So also, a

---

806. Dineshchandra v Munshi Jahanali, AIR 1935 Cal 503 : (1935) ILR 62 Cal 457; Narasimhacharyudu v Sambayya, AIR 1960 AP 131.
807. Official Receiver, Guntur v Amara Seshayya, AIR 1941 Mad 262.
808. Surendra Nath Chatterjee v Surendra Nath Basu, AIR 1951 Pat 451.
809. Durga Prasad v Custodian of Evacuee Property, AIR 1960 P&H 341 (FB) : (1960) 2 Punj 159.
810. Gobardhan v Bishan, (1901) 23 All 116.
811. Panchratan v Ram Sahay, (1918) 3 Pat LJ 579.
812. Tulsiram v Lakshmichand, AIR 1953 Ngp 334 : (1952) ILR Nag 89.
813. Bhikhia v Biri Bihari, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 478; Surendra Narain v Gopi, (1905) 32 Cal 1031; Krishna Chandra v Dina Nath, AIR 1928 Cal 94 : (1928) 54 Cal 1064.
814. See Maruti v Krishna, AIR 1967 Bom 34 : (1966) ILR Bom 154 : 67 Bom LR 534.

purchaser at a sale, held by a revenue court.[815] Now under Explanation II, such a purchaser is deemed to be a party to the suit and all questions relating to delivery of possession of him are questions relating to execution to be determined under this section.

[s 47.22] Objections to Attachment or Sale by Parties or their Representatives

Objections to attachment made by a judgment-debtor or his representative must be distinguished from those raised by either of them on behalf of a third person. In the former case, the objection falls under this section and a separate suit has been held to be barred.[816] The objection could be taken before the sale is confirmed[817] but not after it is confirmed.[818] In the latter case, the objection is in effect by a third person and falls under O XXI, rule 58. Until recently, the position was that such an objector could proceed either by an application under O XXI, rule 58 or by a suit. But with the deletion of rule 63 of O XXI by the Amendment Act, 1976, such a suit is no longer possible and therefore he has to file an application under O XXI, rule 58 and such an application would be disposed of according to the provisions of that rule as amended by the Amendment Act, 1976.

If the judgment-debtor objects that the property is not liable to attachment or sale[819] or that the decree-holder, in connivance with a court peon, has misappropriated part of the property attached,[820] the objection is by the judgment-debtor on his own behalf, and it must be decided by the executing court under this section. Similarly, if property is attached as property of a deceased judgment-debtor in the hands of his legal representative, and the latter objects that it is not the property of the deceased, but his own property, the case falls under this section for the legal representative is not setting up a jus tertii.[821] A person against whom a suit is dismissed, is still a party to the suit under Explanation I and an objection to attachment by

---

815. Hanmantagauda v Shivappa, (1940) 42 Bom LR 1123.
816. Rahim Buksh v Kishen Lal, AIR 1939 All 368; Pannalal v Mst Naraini, AIR 1952 SC 170 : (1952) SCR 544 : (1952) SCJ 211 : (1953) SCA 871; Karimunnissa v Alfuddin, AIR 1960 MP 76; Prafulla Chandra v Calcutta Credit Corp, AIR 1965 Assam 21.
817. Baleshwar v Ram Ranvijaya Prasad Singh, AIR 1947 Pat 46 : (1947) 26 Pat 201; Ram Chander v Sarupa, AIR 1939 Lah 113 : (1939) ILR Lah 103; Pokhar Singh v Tular Ram, AIR 1935 All 1016; Adit Prasad v Sheo Mangal, AIR 1967 All 258.
818. Baleshwar v Ram Ranvijaya Prasad Singh, supra; Firm Wasti Ram Gurditta Mal v Mst Ganeshi, AIR 1939 Lah 405 : (1939) ILR Lah 116; but see Ram Chand v Shamas Din, AIR 1938 Lah 690.
819. Jaga Tarini Dasi v Sarajranjan Pal, AIR 1941 Cal 357 : (1941) 1 Cal 336 : (1940) 45 Cal WN 323 : 74 Cal LJ 169; Trimbak v Govinda, (1895) 19 Bom 328; Majed v Raghubar, (1900) 27 Cal 187; Gohar v Kasi, (1900) 27 Cal 415; Ajodhia v Mahadeo, AIR 1927 All 574; Brown v Hanson, AIR 1933 Bom 185 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 360; Lakku v Radha Bai, AIR 1952 Bom 438; Bajnath Mukherjee v Chota Nagpur Banking Assn, ILR 27 Pat 399; Jagunandan Prasad v Bhagwat Mahton, AIR 1955 Pat 350 : ILR 34 Pat 366; Pappayamma v Rama Raju, AIR 1962 Ori 69.
820. Gajadhar v Babu Arjun, (1916) 1 Pat LJ 558.
821. Sant Ram v Atma Singh, AIR 1948 P&H 8; Amiya Prabha Das v Jyoti Bhusan Ghosh, AIR 1947 Cal 364 : (1946) 50 Cal WN 548 : 82 Cal LJ 131; Sethchand v Durga, (1890) 12 All 313; Panchanun v Rabia Bibi, (1890) 17 Cal 711 (FB); Kali Charan v Jewat, (1906) 28 All 51; Vengapayyan v Karimpanakal, (1903) 26 Mad 501; Madhusudan v Gobinda, (1900) 27 Cal 34; Murigeya v Hayat Saheb, (1899) 23 Bom 237; Gokulsing v Kissensing, (1910) 34 Bom 546; Umeshananda v Mohendra, (1911) 14 Cal LJ 337; Ajo Koer v Gorak Nath, (1914) 19 Cal WN 517; Dull v Shit Lal, (1917) 39 All 47; Bhagwant Ram v Nizam Din, AIR 1921 Lah 173 : (1921) 3 Lah LJ 406; Arunachellam v Maung San Ngwe, AIR 1924 Rang 323 : (1924) 2 Rang 168; Ishar Das v Parma Nand, (1925) 6 Lah 544 : AIR 1926 Lah 134; Mashwe v Maung Ba, AIR 1928 Rang 29 : (1927) 5 Rang 659; Naida v Rajendra, (1928) 48 Cal LJ 551; Maria v Pana, AIR 1928 Bom 534 : (1928) 30 Bom LR 1447; Charusilla Dasi v Sukhdev, AIR 1935 Cal 14 : (1935) 60 Cal LJ 251; Dinbai v Bamansha, AIR 1934 Bom 296 : (1934) 58 Bom 513; Swaminathan v Somasundaran, AIR 1938 Mad 731 : (1938) ILR Mad 1080; Ajo Koer v Gorak Nath, 481; Fakir v Giribala, 22 Cal LJ 305; Pappayamma v Rama Raju, AIR 1962 Ori 69.

him will fall under this section.[822] So also, when on a debt due by a father, a decree is passed against the sons as his legal representatives, an objection by them in execution that the decree was not binding on them because the debt was illegal or immoral is one to be decided in execution.[823] But if the objection is made by the judgment-debtor or his representative, not on his own behalf, but on account of a third party as trustee,[824] or as shebait of an idol,[825] or on the ground that the property is wakf,[826] the objection is under O XXI, rule 58, and not under this section. Where a decree for sale of mortgage property is passed against a mortgagor and on his death, his legal representative is brought on record, an objection that the mortgagor had no title to the property, does not fall under this section, as the objection relates to the validity of the decree.[827] A suit on a mortgage was filed after the death of the mortgagor, against persons alleged to be his legal representatives and they pleaded that the properties belonged to them in their own right. The plea was overruled, and a decree passed. A subsequent suit by them challenging the validity of the decree was held not to be barred as the question did not relate to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.[828] In cases where the mortgagee decree-holder or his assignee had acquired the equity of redemption in an item of the mortgaged properties after the decree, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether the mortgage decree is pro tanto satisfied. The preponderance of authority is that it is not, and the equities between him and the judgment-debtors can only be determined in a separate suit.[829] So also an objection that the debt in respect of which decree was obtained against the father (who had died subsequent to the passing of the decree) did not exist, as a fact, did not, in the special facts of that case, fall under this section.[830]

In a money suit for realization of bank loan, a decree was passed in favour of the bank. In the execution proceeding filed by the bank, the properties of the judgment-debtors were put to auction. In course of the execution proceeding, the judgment-debtors filed objection that the delay on the part of the decree-holder in selling the property has fetched lesser price causing loss to the judgment-debtors. However, the judgment-debtors offered other properties which, if sold, would satisfy the decree. It was held by the Orissa High Court that the dwelling-house of judgment-debtors will not be sold, and steps be taken to consider other properties offered for sale.[831]

When a judgment-debtor seeks the setting aside of a sale by invoking O XXI, rule 90 of the CPC, he is accepting the factum of the sale or the reality of the sale and is only questioning it on the basis of the material irregularities referred to in O XXI, rule 90. In a case where the judgment-debtor is proceeding under section 47 of the CPC, he attacks the sale either on the

---

822. Anant v Brijmohan, AIR 1956 Ngp 93 : (1955) ILR Nag 72.
823. Sethuram v Jaychand, AIR 1962 Raj 136.
824. Chokkalingam Chettiar v Raman Chettiar, AIR 1946 Mad 209 : (1946) ILR Mad 707; Mangeya v Hayat Saheb, (1899) 23 Bom 237; Bhudrudin v Abdul Rahim, (1908) 31 Mad 125; Indomati v Jogashar, (1906) 28 All 644; Roop Lal v Bekani, (1890) 15 Cal 437.
825. Kartick Chandra v Ashutosh, (1912) 39 Cal 298; Upendranath v Kusum, (1915) 42 Cal 440; contra Shah Naim v Girdhari, AIR 1927 Oudh 120 : (1927) 2 Luck 145.
826. Sheikh Nazir v Muhammad, AIR 1922 Pat 196 : (1922) 1 Pat 637.
827. Jatru Pahan v Ambikajit Prasad, AIR 1946 Pat 214 : (1954) 24 Pat 741; Hamidgam v Amma Sahib, AIR 1941 Mad 898; Ramaswami v U Tun Tha, AIR 1940 Rang 161; Venkate Gowda v Basava Gowda, AIR 1952 Mys 3 : (1952) ILR Mys 147; Daud Beg v Mahammudi Begum, AIR 1952 All 881; Devasia Philipose v Harihara Iyer, AIR 1954 TC 118 : (1952) TC 275.
828. Ramgopal v Ajodhia Prasad, AIR 1953 All 281 : (1951) ILR 1 All 545.
829. Shrinivasacharyulu v Venkatavaradacharyulu, AIR 1946 Mad 155 : (1946) ILR Mad 120; Sheo Narain Sah v M Deolodhan Kuer, AIR 1948 Pat 208 : (1946) 26 Pat 97.
830. Lakshamadu v Ramudu, AIR 1939 Mad 867 : (1940) ILR Mad 123.
831. Hari Mohan Behera v State Bank of India, AIR 2007 Orissa 96 : 2007 (1) Ori LR 337.

ground that it is void, or that it is voidable on grounds of illegality, not covered by O XXI, rule 90 of the CPC. Where O XXI, rule 90 applies, section 47 is not available.[832]

If a decree is passed against the Karnavan as the manager of a Malabar Tarwad, the executing court has jurisdiction to determine the decree-holder's right to execute the decree against the other members of the Tarwad.[833]

[s 47.23] Objections to Attachment by Sale by Third Parties

If the objection was made by a third party, the position, until the Amendment Act, 1976 was passed was that he could proceed either under O XXI, rule 58 or by a suit[834] but the claim could not be dealt with under this section.[835] Now a suit is not possible and the claim by such a third party would be under O XXI, rule 58 as amended.[836]

[s 47.24] Execution Purchaser

There has been a large body of case law relating to questions arising after the sale of the judgment-debtor's property in which the auction purchaser was concerned. These questions fell into two classes:

(a) where questions arose between the decree-holder on the one hand and the judgment-debtor on the other hand, the auction-purchaser being only interested in the result; and

(b) where questions arose between the auction-purchaser on the one hand and a party to the suit or his representative on the other hand.

As regards (a), there was no difficulty since these were questions between the parties to the suit and therefore they fell under this section.[837] It was well-settled that as between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, an objection to the sale in execution could only be taken in execution and the old section 244, corresponding to this section, was held to prohibit a suit by a party or his representative against an auction-purchaser.[838] The leading case on the subject was Prosunno Kumarv Kali Das.[839] A judgment-debtor, therefore, can seek to set aside an execution sale:

(i) on deposit under O XXI, rule 89;

(ii) for material irregularity under O XXI, rule 90;

---

832. G Rajarethna Naikan v PN Parameswara Kurup, AIR 1997 Ker 361; Mangal Prasad v Krishan Kumar Maheshwari, AIR 1992 SC 1857.
833. Pandayappa v Chennappa, AIR 1940 Mad 165.
834. Kanhaya Lal v National Bank of India, (1913) 40 Cal 598 : 40 IA 56; Sundar Singh v Ghasi, (1896) 18 All 410; Raghunath v Sarosh, (1899) 23 Bom 266.
835. Siveshwar Prasad v Lal Harnarain, AIR 1945 Pat 116 : (1944) 23 Pat 760; Ramanathan v Levvai, (1900) 23 Mad 195; Peari Lal v Allahabad Bank, AIR 1926 All 244 : (1926) 24 All LJ 334.
836. See notes above, "Objections by parties or their representatives".
837. Bhagwat Narain v Mahadeo Prasad, AIR 1942 Pat 244 : (1941) 21 Pat 233; Basti Ram v Fattu, (1886) 8 All 146 (FB); Dhani Ram v Chaturbhuj, (1899) 22 All 108.
838. Bhagwat Narain v Mahadeo Prasad, AIR 1942 Pat 244 : (1941) 21 Pat 233; Nadarmuni v Veerabhadra, (1911) 34 Mad 417; Gokul Singh v Kissen Singh, (1910) 34 Bom 546; Mohan Singh v Punchanan, AIR 1927 Cal 106 : (1927) 53 Cal 837.
839. Prosunno Kumar v Kali Das, (1892) 19 Cal 683 : 19 IA 166; Sadho v Abhenandan, (1904) 26 All 101; Gaya Prasad v Randhir Singh, (1906) 28 All 681; Mathura Das v Lachman, (1902) 24 All 239; Haribar Kanta v Rama Pandu, (1909) 33 Bom 698; Bhagwat Narain v Mahadeo Prasad, supra; Murlidhar Bhattar v Mahendra Nath Das, AIR 1949 Ori 73 : (1949) 1 Cutt 269; Mst Shabbir Bandi v Mohammad Hashim, AIR 1944 Oudh 43.

(iii) for fraud under O XXI, rule 90; and

(iv) for other reasons, e.g., that the sale is illegal or a nullity for want of notice under O XXI, rule 22,[840]

or under O XXI, rule 66;[841]

(v) or that the judgment-debtor has been adjudged insolvent and the decree gives no charge upon land,[842]

(vi) that the property is not liable to attachment and sale;[843]

(vii) that the sale is in contravention of O XXXIV, rule 14;[844] that the sale was not warranted by the terms of the decree;[845] as for example where the properties themselves were sold, though the decree directed only the sale of mortgage, rights over them;[846]

(viii) that the property sold did not belong to the judgment-debtor;[847] that the decree-holder had purchased without leave of the court;[848]

(ix) that the decree had been adjusted;[849]

(x) that the sale is invalid having been held after a stay order;[850]

(xi) that the property sold was that of the decree-holder instead of the judgment-debtor;[851]

(xii) that the receiver had purchased the property in court sale without the sanction of the court.[852]

An order setting aside an auction sale for non-payment of deposit as provided by O XXI, rule 85, is one under this section whether the auction-purchaser is the decree-holder or a stranger.[853] Where the auction-purchaser deposited the balance amount under O XXI, rule 85, but failed to lodge the receipt therefore, and the court ordered resale, an application for review

---

840. Bhau Kumar v Lachmi Kant, AIR 1941 Pat 566; Imam-un-nissa v Liakat Hussain, (1881) 3 All 424; Sahdeo v Ghasiram, (1894) 21 Cal 19; Rajagopala v Ramanujachariar, AIR 1924 Mad 431 : (1924) 47 Mad 288.
841. Dada v Jayachand, AIR 1958 Bom 278 : (1958) ILR Bom 633.
842. Anatharama v Vettah, (1916) 30 Mad LJ 611.
843. Mst. Shabbir Bandi v Mohammad Hashim, AIR 1944 Oudh 43; Ram Gopal v Khiali Ram, (1844) 6 All 448; Basti Ram v Fattu, (1886) 8 All 146; Durga Charan v Kali Prasanna, (1899) 26 Cal 727.
844. Ashuttosh v Behari Lal, (1908) 35 Cal 61; Izhuvan v Izhuvan, (1907) 30 Mad 313; Bhaichand v Ranchhodas, AIR 1921 Bom 285 : (1921) 45 Bom 174.
845. Ganga Devi v Ram Prasad, AIR 1925 All 551 : (1925) 23 All LJ 558.
846. Merla Ramanna v Nallapa Raju, AIR 1956 SC 87 : (1955) 2 SCR 938; Marrat v Shivaji & Sons, AIR 1930 PC 86; Venkatachalam v Perumal, (1912) Mad WN 44.
847. Shabbir Bandi v Mohammad Hashim, supra; Gokulsing v Kissensing, (1910) 34 Bom 546.
848. Genu v Sakharam, (1898) 22 Bom 271; Durga v Balwant, (1901) 23 All 478; Vinayaghava v Venkata, (1893) 16 Mad 287; Bank of Upper India v Fitzholmes, AIR 1928 Lah 666.
849. Dhani Ram v Chaturbhuj, (1900) 22 All 86.
850. Mohanlal v Shibdhari, AIR 1922 Pat 146; Sarat Chandra Gayan v Port Canning and Land Development Co Ltd, AIR 1946 Cal 45 : 80 Cal LJ 35; Superior Bank v Budh Singh, AIR 1924 All 698 : (1924) 22 All LJ 413.
851. Hafez Uzir v Nasimannessa, AIR 1928 Cal 865.
852. Govindarajulu v Sivarama, AIR 1953 Mad 822 : 1952 (2) Mad LJ 294; Aravindaksha v Lakshminarayana, (1956) TC 1113.
853. Nandlal v Siddiquan, AIR 1957 All 558; Siribhan v Jit Singh, AIR 1956 Pepsu 77.

of such order is within this section.[854] In general, a party can attack an execution sale only in execution proceedings and not in a separate suit. A person against whom the suit is dismissed is a party and a suit by him to set aside an execution sale is barred.[855]

The section is very wide, and in a sense, all questions relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree that arise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor fall under this section. The section, however, must be so construed as not to render, redundant, the other provisions of the CPC, e.g. rules 89, 90, and 91 of O XXI.[856] It has been held that an application by the decree-holder for confirmation of the sale on the judgment-debtor's failure to carry out the terms of the arrived at in a proceeding under O XXI, rule 90 is an application under this section.[857] But an order allowing an application by the decree-holder under O XXI, rule 66 for reduction of upset price in a sale does not.[858] An application by the judgment-debtor to set aside a sale on the ground of failure to affix the sale proclamation in any part of the property, proclaimed for sale, falls under this section and not under O XXI, rule 9.[859] Broadly stated, when a sale in execution of a decree whose validity is not questioned, is attacked on the ground that it is not merely irregular but illegal and void, that must be done by a proceeding under this section and not in an independent suit.[860] As regards (b), i.e., questions between the auction-purchaser on the one hand and a party to the suit or his representative on the other hand cases fell into two classes:

(i) cases where the decree-holder himself was the purchaser and the judgment-debtor claimed to set aside the sale; and

(ii) cases arising between the auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor and where the former sought to recover possession of the property purchased by him.

In such cases, the property may have been purchased by the decree-holder with the leave of the court under O XXI, rule 72 or by a stranger. Even where the decree-holder himself was the purchaser, two questions used to arise, viz, whether for the purpose of recovering possession of the property the decree-holder purchaser was a "party"' to the suit within the meaning of this section or whether he had ceased to be a party to the suit by reason of his purchase and whether the question as to delivery of possession to him was one relating to "execution, discharge or satisfaction". In such a class of cases, it was held that so far as the judgment-debtor was concerned, he had to proceed by an application under this section.[861] But as regards the judgment-creditor purchaser there was a conflict of opinion on both the 854. Veerayya v Tirichirapalli District Board, AIR 1961 Mad 409.

---

855. Ramanna v Nallaparaju, supra, Kuttikrishnan Nair v Madhavan Nair, AIR 1957 Ker 382; Shiva Pujan v Baban Lal, AIR 1959 Pat 13.
856. Harindra Nath v Bhola Nath, AIR 1937 All 407.
857. Ram Kalpa Kundu v Kasi Nath Dutta, AIR 1950 Cal 582 : (1949) 54 Cal WN 690; G Raja Rethna Naikkan v PN Parmeshwara Kurup, AIR 1997 Ker 361.
858. Raghunath Raju v Kasim Khan, AIR 1966 AP 152.
859. Iyer v Kunhamuthammad, AIR 1965 Ker 99; Narayanappa v Akkulappa, AIR 1965 AP 215.
860. Marla Ramanna v Nallaparaju, AIR 1956 SC 87 : (1952) SCR 938; Rajagopala Iyer v Ramanujachariar, AIR 1924 Mad 431 (FB); Lakhu v Radhabai, AIR 1952 Bom 438 : (1952) ILR Bom 1056; Ramlal v Rannia, AIR 1947 Pat 454 (FB); Bansi Sao v Debi Prasad, AIR 1961 Pat 508; Cheria Chacko v Kumaran Kesavan, AIR 1963 Ker 258, explaining the observations in Nanibai v Geeta Bai, AIR 1958 SC 706 : (1958) SCJ 925. As to the application of this section, when the sale is attacked as void on the ground that the decree itself is void, see notes "To what decree the section applies" above.
861. Ganapathy v Krishnamachariyar, (1918) 45 IA 54 : 60; Ramabhadra v Kadiryarwami, AIR 1922 PC 252 : 48 IA 155.

points. The High Courts of Madras,[862] Calcutta[863] and Nagpur[864] held that the decree-holder retained his character as a 'party' to the suit though he was also the purchaser and the question as to delivery of possession to him was one which related to execution of the decree. The High Court of Madhya Pradesh also took the view that dispute as to possession between the decree-holder auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor was one falling within this section[865] and so also such a question between the decree-holder auction purchaser and a transferee from the judgment-debtor subsequent to attachment.[866]

According to the other view, which was held by the Allahabad,[867] Patna,[868] Bombay,[869] Lahore,[870] and Rangoon[871] High Courts, a decree-holder-purchaser stood on the same footing as a stranger purchaser so that he could proceed either under O XXI, rule 95 or by a suit for possession. The reasoning was that either the question of possession to such a purchaser was not one relating to execution[872] or that the decree-holder-purchaser on his purchase, ceased to be a party to the suit. The cases in which it was held that the decree-holder-purchaser ceased, on his purchase, to be a party were not correctly decided in view of the Privy Council's ruling that such a purchaser continued to be a party even after purchase by him.[873] If the decree-holder-purchaser is obstructed in obtaining possession by a stranger claiming bona fide to be in possession on his own account, the question would not be within the purview of this section but within the purview of O XXI, rule 97 and rule 101, as recently amended and not by a suit as held earlier.[874]

Similarly, if the decree-holder purchaser were to be obstructed in obtaining possession by the judgment-debtor and a stranger to the suit, the case would not fall under this section.

---

862. Kasinatha v Uthumansa, (1902) 25 Mad 529; Kattayat v Raman, (1903) 26 Mad 740; Sandhu v Hussain, (1905) 28 Mad 87; Veyindramuthu v Maya Nadan, (1920) 43 Mad 107 (FB).
863. Kailash v Gopal, AIR 1926 Cal 798 : (1926) 53 Cal 781 : 30 Cal WN 1059; Jiteswari v Sudhakrishna, AIR 1932 Cal 672 : (1932) 59 Cal 956; Galstaun v Syed Mahammad, AIR 1932 Cal 627 : (1932) 36 Cal WN 242; Kalipada v Basanta Kumar, AIR 1932 Cal 126 : (1932) 59 Cal 117; Kedar Nath v Kshiroda, (1933) 37 Cal WN 671; Sariatoola v Rajkumar, (1900) 27 Cal 709; Ramnarain v Bandi Pershad, (1904) 11 IC 737; Hari Charan v Mon Mohan, (1914) 18 Cal WN 27; Debi Prasad v Satish Chandra, AIR 1944 Cal 32.
864. Semabai v Ganpatrao, AIR 1938 Ngp 212 : (1938) ILR Nag 583; Narayan Rao Amrita Rao v Chunilal Sitaram, AIR 1953 Ngp 236 : (1952) ILR Nag 150.
865. Ram Ratan v Chauwamal, AIR 1959 MP 348.
866. Gita Bai v Daulatrao, AIR 1962 MP 62; Bhikumal v Ram Chander Babulal, AIR 1946 Lah 134 : (1946) ILR Lah 672; Manicka Chettiar v Rajambal, (1955) 2 Mad LJ 357 : 1955 Mad WN 664.
867. Bhagwati v Banwari Lal, (1909) 31 All 82 (FB); Buddhu Misir v Bhagirathi, (1918) 40 All 216; Mohsin v Haider, AIR 1928 All 368 : (1928) 50 All 670; Kedar Mal v Arun Chandra, AIR 1937 All 742 (FB) : (1937) All 921; Mst Suraj Dei v Mst Gulab Dei, AIR 1955 All 49 : (1955) 1 All 687, overruling Baburan v Pyarilal, AIR 1919 All 390.
868. Haji Abdul Gani v Raja Ram, (1916) 1 Pat LJ 232; Dahminder Das v Bakshi, (1918) 3 Pat LJ 571; Sridhar v Jageshwar, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 716; Jadab v Rameshwar, AIR 1930 Pat 308 : (1930) 9 Pat 332; Ram Kumar v Ramcharan, (1930) 9 Pat 775 : AIR 1930 Pat 311, dissenting from Askaran v Raghunath, AIR 1925 Pat 478 : (1925) 4 Pat 726; Tribeni Prasad v Ramasray, AIR 1931 Pat 241 (FB) : (1931) 10 Pat 670 : 133 PC 337.
869. Hargovind v Bhudar, AIR 1924 Bom 429 : (1924) 48 Bom 550, overruling Sadashiv v Narayan, (1911) 35 Bom 452; Lakshman v Govind, AIR 1924 Bom 527 : (1924) 26 Bom LR 843; Hiralal v Ramchandra, AIR 1930 Bom 375 : (1930) 54 Bom 479.
870. Chotha Ram v Karmon Bai, (1918) PR No 8, p 34; Nusrat Ali v Sakina Begam, (1919) PR No 121, p 312; Sardar Mal v Kartar Singh, AIR 1939 Lah 211 : (1939) ILR Lah 295; Qazi Abdul Ghani v Lala Lal Chand, AIR 1940 Lah 230; Bali Lal v Durga, (1920) 1 Lah 134; Ram Singh Gopal Singh v Abdulla Habibulla, 1945 Lah 252 : AIR 1944 Lah 402 (FB).
871. Martin v Häshim, AIR 1930 Rang 61 : (1930) 8 Rang 162.
872. Gaya Baksh v Kuar Rajendra, AIR 1928 Oudh 199 (FB) : (1928) 3 Luck 182.
873. Ganapathy v Krishnamachariyar, (1918) 45 IA 54, 60.
874. Dwipalchandra v Jeeban, AIR 1931 Cal 574 : (1931) 58 Cal 808.

But the remedy would not be by a suit as held in earlier decisions[875] but by an application under O XXI, rules 97 and 101 as amended by the Amendment Act, 1976. Some of the Allahabad cases where questions were raised as to whether the decree-holder-purchaser was or was not the representative of the decree-holder, are no longer relevant as the remedy of a decree-holder where possession by him is resisted is by way of an application to the executing court under O XXI, rule 97 and not by a suit.

Under the section, as it stood before its amendment by Act 66 of 1956, where a stranger auction-purchaser sought to recover possession from the judgment-debtor, the questions raised were:

(i) whether such a purchaser was the representative of either party to the suit; and

(ii) whether, the question of possession by him was a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.

The conflict of opinion as regards question (2), has been already referred to. On the question whether a stranger purchaser is a representative or not and if so, whose representative, there was conflict. The High Courts of Bombay[876] and Patna[877] held that he was not a representative of either party to the suit. On the other hand, the Calcutta[878] and Allahabad[879] High Courts held that he was not the representative of the decree-holder but that he was the representative of the judgment-debtor. In Madras, there was conflict within the high court itself, until such conflict was sought, though not successfully, to be resolved by a full bench in Veyindramuthu v Maya Nadan.[880] The Lahore view was that a stranger purchaser was not the representative of the judgment-debtor.[881] For the view of Oudh Court.[882] The Nagpur High Court held that a dispute between a stranger auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor regarding delivery of possession is one relating to execution and further that such an auction-purchaser is the representative of the decree-holder and therefore such a question would fall under the purview of this section.[883]

All the high courts[884] seemed to hold that where an auction-purchaser, who is a stranger, was resisted in obtaining possession by the judgment-debtor of the property purchased by him in

---

875. Goba v Sakharam, (1920) 44 Bom 977.
876. Maganlal v Doshi Mulji, (1901) 25 Bom 631; Gokulsing v Kissensing, (1910) 34 Bom 546; Bai Mani v Ranchodlal, AIR 1923 Bom 214 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 147; Narsinbhat v Bandu Krishna, (1918) 42 Bom 411 : 20 Bom LR 495; Hanmantagouda v Shivappa, (1940) 42 Bom LR 1123.
877. Bhagwat Narain v Mahadeo Prasad, AIR 1942 Pat 244 : (1941) 21 Pat 233.
878. Ishan Chunder v Beni Madhub, (1896) 24 Cal 62 (FB).
879. Gulzari Lal v Madho Ram, (1904) 26 All 447 (FB); Ananti Kunwari v Ajudhia Nath, (1908) 30 All 379.
880. But see the following cases: (1920) 43 Mad 107; Krishna v Saraswatula, (1908) 31 Mad 177; Nadamuni v Veerabhadra, (1910) 34 Mad 417; Subbamma v Chennayya, (1918) 41 Mad 467; Veyindramuthu v Maya Nadan, (1920) 43 Mad 107; Sornam v Tiruvazhiperumal, AIR 1926 Mad 857 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 126; Sandhu v Hussain, (1905) 28 Mad 87; Manickka v Rajagopala, (1907) 30 Mad 507; Nilkantharao v Mst Satyabhama Bai, AIR 1944 Ngp 25 : (1944) Nag 230; Paramananda v Mahabeer, (1897) 20 Mad 378; Sivarama v Somasundara, (1905) 28 Mad 119; Kuppana v Kumara, (1911) 34 Mad 450; Veyindramuthu v Maya Nandan, (1920) 43 Mad 107; Nadamuni v Veerabhadra, (1910) 34 Mad 417 : 421; Arasayee v Sokkalinga, (1916) 1 MWN 287; Jainulabdin v Krishna, AIR 1921 Mad 420 : (1921) 41 Mad LJ 120; Sorimuthu v Muthu Krishna, AIR 1933 Mad 598 : (1933) 65 Mad LJ 253; Thondam Annamalai v Tiruttani Ramasami, AIR 1941 Mad 161 (FB).
881. Hukum Chand v Ganga Ram, (1919) Punj Rec No 12, p 25.
882. See Narotam v Sukraj, AIR 1928 Oudh 442 : (1928) 3 Luck 717.
883. Ramavatar Lakshman Prasad v Mst. Jugram Bai, AIR 1956 Ngp 81 : (1956) Nag 371.
884. Bai Mani v Ranchodlal, AIR 1923 Bom 214 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 147; Kishori Mohun Roy v Chunder Nath, (1887) 14 Cal 644; Bhagwati v Banwari Lal, (1909) 31 All 82 (FB). See also cases cited under the head, "First where the decree-holder is himself the purchaser"; Hari Kishan v Radha Kishan, AIR 1957 All 251; Devi Singh v Tara Chand, AIR 1962 HP 8.

execution, he could apply for delivery of possession under O XXI, rule 95 and that this section would not apply either because he was not the "representative" of the decree-holder or because the question as to delivery of possession to him was not one relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction. The Bombay view was that an auction-purchaser, even if he were the benamidar for the decree-holder was a stranger.[885] In Madras, the Full Bench decision in Veyindramuthu's case[886] was treated as an authority for the proposition that an auction-purchaser, though he be a stranger, must proceed by an application under this section and not by a suit. But this view was changed in a later Full Bench case[887] where it was held that when the judgment-debtor or any one at his instigation resists or obstructs the stranger auction-purchaser, the latter must proceed under O XXI, rule 97 and not under this section.

Apart from cases under O XXI, rule 95, questions relating to execution may arise in different ways. The High Court of Allahabad held that where property not included in the mortgage deed or in the mortgage decree was sold and delivered to a stranger purchaser in execution, the judgment-debtor could not apply under this section and that his remedy was by a suit.[888] The Madras High Court following Veyindramuthu's case, held that it was this section which applied.[889] A Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has held that an auction-purchaser under a decree which has been, after confirmation of the sale, set aside as a result of a separate suit, could apply under this section for recovery of the purchase money from the decree-holder.[890] But a Full Bench of the Madras High Court has held that where the sale was set aside in execution by an application under O XXI, rules 89, 90 or 91, the auction-purchaser could obtain refund under O XXI, rule 93, but where the sale turned out to be futile as the result of a finding that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property, in a suit by a third party after confirmation of the sale, the remedy was by way of a suit.[891] In the face of such a medley of conflicting views, it was time for the legislature to intervene and resolve the conflicts. This was done, though partially, by Act 66 of 1956 which amended the explanation to the section by providing that for purposes of this section, a purchaser at a sale in execution of the decree is a party to the suit. Consequently, a purchaser at an execution sale, whether he is the decree-holder or not, is a party to the suit and the question raised earlier whether he was a representative or not and if so, whether, of the decree-holder or of the judgment-debtor ceased. The result of the amendment was that all questions arising between the auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor had to be decided by the executing court and not by a separate suit.[892] In spite of the amended explanation, it was still necessary in order to bring the dispute under this section, that it must relate to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Thus, with the changed explanation, the earlier decisions dealing with the question whether an auction-purchaser is, or is not, a party to the suit and the distinction between a decree-holder purchaser and a stranger purchaser have lost their relevance.[893] But if a right to file a suit was available to a stranger auction-purchaser under the law as it stood before the amendment, that right would 885. Ramchandra v Gajanan, (1920) 44 Bom 352.

---

886. Veyindramuthu's case, (1920) 43 Mad 107.
887. Thondam Annamalai v Tiruttani Ramasami, AIR 1941 Mad 161 (FB).
888. Muna Lal v Collector of Shahjahanpur, AIR 1923 All 470 : (1923) 45 All 96; see also Imtiaz-un-nissa v Chuttan Lal, AIR 1925 All 236 : (1925) 47 All 304; Nagabhatta v Nagappa, AIR 1923 Bom 62 : (1923) 46 Bom 914 (judgment-debtor estopped as he had not objected to the sale).
889. Jainulabdin v Krishna, AIR 1921 Mad 420 : (1921) 41 Mad LJ 120.
890. Bindeshri Prasad v Badal Singh, AIR 1923 All 394 : (1923) 45 All 369.
891. Macha Koundan v Kottora Koundan, AIR 1936 Mad 50 : (1936) 58 Mad 202.
892. Harnandrai v Debidutt, AIR 1973 SC 2423 : (1973) 3 SCC 467; SPL Pillai v Subbarami, AIR 1972 Ker 162 : (1971) 2 Ker 472.
893. Sham Mohan Lal v Jai Gopal, AIR 1968 Del 104; Janak Raj v Gurdial Singh, AIR 1966 P&H 315 : (1966) 2 Punj 593.

still survive since the amended explanation, did not expressly or by necessary implication take away such a right.[894] The partial lacuna left by Act 66 of 1956, regarding the question as to when a question is to be regarded as one relating to execution, has now been filled in by the Amendment Act, 1976 which by the new Explanation II has enacted that not only an auction-purchaser is to be deemed to be a party to the suit wherein the decree has been passed but also that all questions relating to delivery of possession of such property shall be deemed to be questions relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction. Henceforth, all questions relating to delivery of possession between an auction-purchaser, whether he is a decree-holder or a stranger and the judgment-debtor and his representatives are to be determined under this section. Under section 47, Explanation II(a), the auction-purchaser is deemed to be a party. Under Explanation II(b), questions relating to possession are deemed to be questions relating to execution etc. Hence, such questions when raised by or against an auction purchaser, have to be determined by the court executing a decree, and not by separate suit.[895]

[s 47.25] Application by an Auction-purchaser for Costs on Improvements — When Sale Set Side

If the order confirming a sale is set aside and the auction purchaser applies for compensation as regards improvements made by him, the application does not fall under this section. It does not relate to the execution, satisfaction or discharge of the decree. But the court can act under section 151.[896]

[s 47.26] Sub-section (3): Inquiries as to Who is Representative of a Party

The question whether a person is a legal representative of a party so that execution should proceed against him is one to be decided by the court in execution.[897] An application by a person who claims that the decree-holder on record is a benamidar and that he is the heir of the true decree-holder is not within this section.[898] The court, no longer, has the option of staying the execution proceeding until the matter is settled by suit. This sub-section is ancillary to sub-section (1) and is limited to questions relating to the execution, discharge and satisfaction of a decree, and does not apply to the determination of a question between rival representatives of one party.[899] The same rule applies when the question arises in execution proceedings as to whether a certain person is a transferee of a decree, for a transferee of a decree is, as stated above, a "representative" of a party within the meaning of this section. Until the amendment of the definition of "decree" by the deletion of the words 'section 47' in section 2(2) by the 894. VSM Iyer v Azharkhan, AIR 1972 Ker 135 : (1972) 1 Ker 248 : (1972) Ker LR 70; but see Sadhucharan v Sudershan, AIR 1965 Ori 2.

---

895. Ganpat Singh v Kailash Shankar, (1987) 3 SCC 146.
896. AR Dawar v Ganesh Datta, AIR 1940 Lah 59.
897. Ganga Singh v Badri Singh, AIR 1945 Oudh 314 : (1945) 20 Luck 471; Muna Koer v Durga Prasad, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 192; Babu Lal v Janak, AIR 1926 All 681 : (1926) 48 All 429; Shaligram v Mst Dhurpati, AIR 1939 Ngp 147 : (1930) ILR Nag 165; Damodarlalji v Sone Basantlal, AIR 1952 Pat 333 : ILR 27 Pat 848; Rangappa v Rindava, AIR 1954 Bom 139.
898. Parasnmal v Jeth Singh, AIR 1957 Raj 253 : (1956) ILR Raj 217.
899. Venubai v Damodar, AIR 1933 Bom 396 : (1933) 57 Bom 641; Maganlal v Doshi Mulji, (1901) 25 Bom 631; Charan Singh v Sardar Khan, AIR 1935 Lah 384; Md Abdul Matin v Mst Bibi Hamidan, AIR 1932 Pat 329. But see Nathamai v Kasilya, AIR 1934 Mad 181 : (1934) 57 Mad 457; Ananta Parkash v Dharmanand, AIR 1957 Punj 64.

Amendment Act, 1976, an order determining whether a person is a representative of a party was a decree and therefore appealable.[900] This is no longer the position.

If the transferee of a decree dies pending execution, the executing court has power, under this section, to inquire whether the transferee was merely a benamidar for another and to allow the real owner to execute the decree.[901]

[s 47.27] Stay of Execution

The words "or to the stay of execution thereof" which occurred in section 244 after the words "execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree" were omitted in 1908. As a result of the deletion, two possible views were entertained. One was that the words were omitted because they were thought superfluous, as a plea that the execution may be stayed was equivalent to the plea that the decree should not be executed and it was thus a question relating to the execution of the decree.[902] The other view was that they were deliberately omitted and therefore questions relating to stay of execution were no longer within the section.[903] The Lahore High Court, after considering all the authorities, took the former view[904] and held that an order staying execution was one relating to the execution of the decree in the same way that an order dismissing an application for execution as time-barred would so relate and that the only difference between the two was that in one there was temporary suspension, while in the other there was prohibition. It has been held that a person who has stood as surety for costs and against whom a decree for costs has been consequently passed is a judgment-debtor within the meaning of section 2 (10) and can therefore apply for stay of execution of the decree pending an appeal therefrom.[905] The High Court of Rajasthan, in Sohanmal v Rajmal,[906] held that the question whether an order staying execution is appealable or not, depended on whether it finally decided any question as to the rights and liabilities of parties is no longer correct law in view of the amendment of the definition of a decree in section 2(2).

An order made at the instance of an interim receiver under section 52 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920 stopping a sale, does not fall under this section.[907] The courts are normally slow in staying the execution of a decree unless some cogent reasons are placed before the court.[908]

---

900. Badri Narain v Jai Kishen, (1894) 16 All 483; Krishnama v Appasami, (1902) 25 Mad 545; Ganga Das v Yakub Ali, (1900) 27 Cal 670; Khem Singh v Raghubir, AIR 1925 All 578 : (1925) 47 All 365; Narasimha v Venkatachalapathi, AIR 1934 Mad 181 : (1934) 57 Mad 457; Jnanendra Nath v Girish Chandra, (1935) 39 Cal WN 313; Ram Autar v Bate Krishna, AIR 1936 All 479 : (1936) All LJ 541.
901. Krishan v Janakiramayya, AIR 1927 Mad 903 : (1928) 51 Mad 219.
902. Subramania v Kumaravelu, (1916) 39 Mad 541 : 542; Chidambaram v Krishna, (1917) 40 Mad 233; Srinivas Prosad v Kesho Prosad, (1911) 14 Cal LJ 489; Bolanath v Satya Charan, (1951) 2 Cal 70; Audh Behari v Sailendranath, AIR 1954 Cal 339.
903. Janardhan v Martand, AIR 1921 Bom 208 : (1921) 45 Bom 241; Ramchandra v Balmukand, (1905) 29 Bom 71; Rajendra Kishore v Mathura Mohan, (1919) 25 Cal WN 555 (order refusing to stay execution); Hussain Bhai v Beltie Shah, AIR 1924 All 808 : (1924) 46 All 733, (order staying execution for a definite period); U San v U Chit, AIR 1931 Rang 221 : (1931) 9 Rang 354 (order refusing to stay execution); Chidambaran v Samasundaram, AIR 1938 Rang 317 : (1938) Rang 580.
904. Durga Devi v Hans Raj, AIR 1930 Lah 187 : (1930) 11 Lah 402, dissenting from Janardhan v Martand, (1921) 45 Bom 241 and Husain Bhai v Beltie Shah, (1924) 46 All 733 and Rajendra Kishore v Mathura Mohan, (1919) 25 Cal WN 555.
905. Shivbasappa v Marigowda, AIR 1934 Bom 252 : (1934) 58 Bom 485.
906. Sohanmal v Rajmal, AIR 1963 Raj 4.
907. Ethirajulu v Official Receiver, AIR 1933 Mad 152 : (1933) 56 Mad 453.
908. Rohit Kumar v Bodh Pal Singh, AIR 1997 Raj 159.

[s 47.28] The term "execution has not been stayed"

The term "execution has not been stayed" (Under Section 9 (2); Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (3 of 1909)) could only mean an execution which is possible in a civil court under CPC. The order as such not being capable of execution in a civil court under CPC, it must be taken as being not capable of execution as it stands today.[909]

[s 47.29] Sub-section (2)— Its Omission

Sub-section 2 was introduced in this section, in order to give legislative sanction to the practice followed by the courts under the earlier CPC. It enabled the court to treat an application under this section, as a suit or a suit as an application. If an application was brought, the court could treat it as a suit but then it had to be disposed of by itself and the parties were not to be referred to a separate suit.[910] Conversely, if a suit was brought for determination of a question which fell under this section, the court had a discretion, either to dismiss it or treat the plaint as an application under this section and dispose it of accordingly, provided of course, that the court in which the suit was brought, had jurisdiction to execute the decree[911] and the execution was not time-barred.[912] An application for execution could be treated as a suit, only when the court in which it was made, had jurisdiction to try it.[913] Accordingly, a small cause court could not convert an application by a sub-tenant claiming relief under the Rent Act into a suit for declaration of title.[914] The power was discretionary[915] and therefore no appeal lay against an order under the sub-section though the definition of "decree", as it then stood, brought such an order within it.[916] The discretion being judicially exercisable, its exercise had to be in accordance with law.[917] The power was also exercisable by an appellate court which could treat a plaint filed in the lower court as an application and the decree brought before it in appeal as an order under this section. But the appellate court also would not exercise its discretion unless the court which passed the decree had jurisdiction to execute the original decree[918] and the suit was filed within the period of limitation prescribed for applications under this section.[919] In a case where a party, instead of applying under this section, filed a suit which he prosecuted up to the stage of a second appeal, the High Court of Allahabad refused to exercise its discretion to treat the plaint as an application.[920] A minor, objected in execution proceedings that he had

---

909. TTV Dhinkaran v Dy Director, Enforcement Directorate, AIR 2003 Mad 59.
910. Seetharaman v Chidambaram, AIR 1933 Mad 166 : (1933) 56 Mad 447.
911. Jhamman Lal v Kewal Ram, (1900) 22 All 121; Sadho v Abhenandan, (1904) 26 All 101, 103; Sheodihal v Bhawani, (1907) 29 All 348; Venkata Krishnama v Krishna Rao, (1909) 32 Mad 425; Ramanna v Nalaparaju, AIR 1956 SC 87 : (1952) SCR 938; Basantlal v Beharilal, (1953) ILR Punj 609 : AIR 1953 Punj 118; Raman Nair v Lakshmi Amma, AIR 1952 TC 96.
912. Sadashiv v Narayan, (1911) 35 Bom 452 : 461; Bhaichand v Ranchhoddas, AIR 1921 Bom 285 : (1921) 45 Bom 174 : 176; Protiva Sundari Debi v Sarada Charan, AIR 1934 Cal 15 : (1934) Cal WN 996; Nirode Kali Roy v Rai Herendra Nath, (1938) 1 Cal 280 : AIR 1938 Cal 113.
913. Suryanarayana v Venkata, AIR 1954 Mad 239 : (1954) Mad 338 : (1953) 2 Mad LJ 495.
914. Khetra Mohan v Parbati, AIR 1955 Cal 295.
915. Sachi Prasad v Amarnath, (1919) 46 Cal 103; Meghraj Sah v Raj Bhansi Lal, AIR 1958 Pat 546.
916. Ramanuja v Soliappa, AIR 1931 Mad 270 : (1931) 60 Mad LJ 471.
917. Manishankar v Niranjan Swarup, AIR 1955 All 686.
918. Azizuddin v Ramanugra, (1887) 14 Cal 605; Biru Mahata v Shyama Churn, (1895) 22 Cal 483; Pasupathy v Kothanda, (1905) 28 Mad 64; Jotindar v Mahomed, (1905) 32 Cal 332; Debendra Nath v Prasanna Kumar, (1907) 5 LJ 328; Mohan Singh v Punchanan, AIR 1927 Cal 106 : (1927) 53 Cal 837.
919. Lalman Das v Jagan Nath, (1900) 22 All 376; Sarjan Bibi v Ashanulla, AIR 1927 Cal 411 : (1927) 54 Cal 524.
920. Puran Chandra v Bawan Das, (1900) AWN 196.

not been represented by any guardian ad litem in the suit but the executing court refused to entertain the objection as one affecting the validity of the decree.

On appeal from that order, the Allahabad High Court treated the application as a suit and made a declaration that the decree was not binding on the minor.[921] Conversely, when a minor filed a suit to set aside a sale on the ground that he was not properly represented in the execution proceedings, it was held that the sale was not binding on him, but that that question should be agitated in execution proceedings and accordingly the plaint was treated as an execution application.[922]

These powers have now been withdrawn by the legislature omitting sub-section 2 from the section. The omission is in pursuance of the legislative policy that all questions between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and their representatives should be disposed of under this section and not by a suit and further that an order made in such applications is not a decree from which an appeal would lie. The omission had to be logically effected since the power of the court to convert an application into a suit and vice versa ceased to be relevant, or in consonance with the amendments carried out in this section as also section 2(2).

[s 47.30] Where a Sale is Sought to be Set aside on the Ground of Fraud

It has been stated above, that the procedure for setting aside a sale on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale is by an application under O XXI, rule 90 and not by a separate suit. But an execution sale may also be challenged on the ground that the decree on which it is founded, is itself tainted with fraud, and in this case, the remedy is by a regular suit. The following are the leading cases on the subject:

(i) A suit will lie to set aside a decree and the sale held in execution of the decree where both the decree and sale are impeached on the ground of fraud.[923] The reason is that the question of the validity of a decree can only be determined by a regular suit.[924]

(ii) A obtains an ex parte decree against B. In execution of the decree, a certain property belonging to B is sold and purchased by C. The decree is then set aside under O 9, rule 13. B, thereafter, sues A and C to set aside the sale challenging not only the sale, but also the decree, on the ground of fraud. The suit is not barred under this section; B is entitled to show that the decree was obtained by fraud, and this can only be done in a regular suit.[925]

[s 47.31] Setting aside Sale —Instances

A bare reading of section 47 of the CPC shows that its scope is very wide and comprehensive enough to include all questions relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. The question about saleability of the judgment-debtors interest in a property attached in the execution proceedings is held to be a question which falls within section 47.

---

921. Daulat Singh v Maharaj Raja Ramji, AIR 1926 All 387 : (1926) 48 All 362; Chhubbo v Lala, AIR 1931 Oudh 45 : (1931) 6 Luck 452.
922. Venkata v Perumal, AIR 1952 TC 136 : (1951) TC 728.
923. Abdul v Mahomed, (1894) 21 Cal 605; Pran Nath v Mohesh Chandra, (1897) 24 Cal 546; Moti Lal v Russick Chandra, (1899) 26 Cal 326.
924. See notes above, "Questions not relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction".
925. Ram Narain v Shew Bhunjan, (1900) 27 Cal 197; Debendra Nath v Prasanna Kumar, (1907) 5 Cal LJ 328.

Following are the illustrations of sales which are held to be liable to be set aside under section 47 of the CPC.

(i) A sale in contravention of section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 is void, notwithstanding that a third party is the purchaser and only a portion of the property sold was under mortgage. Such a sale may be set aside under the present section.[926]

(ii) Where the decree-holder is himself the auction purchaser and the ex parte decree, in execution of which he purchased, has been subsequently set aside under O IX, rule 13, the sale cannot stand, even though it had been confirmed. An application to set aside the sale under such circumstances comes under this section.[927]

(iii) A court, in execution of decree, has no jurisdiction to sell property over which it had no territorial jurisdiction at the time it passed the order of a sale; such a sale may be set aside under this section.[928]

(iv) Where, through inadvertence or otherwise, the court orders sale of any property in execution of the decree, notwithstanding such previous discharge of it, the sale under such order would be null and void as ultra vires. Such a sale may be set aside under this section.[929]

(v) The question arising between a judgement-debtor and the auction purchaser as to whether certain property was liable to attachment and sale, is one to be determined under this section.[930]

(vi) Where a judgment impeaches the validity of execution proceedings which proceeded and led up to the sale of his property, and thus seeks to have sale set aside, his remedy lies by application under this section.[931]

(vii) An application to set aside an execution sale on the ground of fraud, the fraud being that the decree had been satisfied by payment to the husband of the decree-holder on the day before the sale, but the payment was not certified and the sale was held, comes within the scope of this section.[932]

(viii) An application by the judgment-debtor asking the court to set aside the sale and to restore him to possession of the property not covered by the decree is an application relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree under this section.[933]

(ix) An application to set aside an execution sale on the ground of absence of notice of the settlement of sale proclamation, as required by O XXI, rule 66 can only be considered under this section.[934]

---

926. Mayan v Pakuran, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 347.
927. Umedmal v Srinath, (1904) ILR 27 Cal 810.
928. Prem Chand v Mokhoda Devi, (1890) ILR Cal 699.
929. Chunni v Lala Ram, (1883) ILR 5 All 5.
930. Basti Ram v Fathu, (1896) ILR 8 All 146.
931. Mohdi Begam v Rasul Beg, 48 IC 39.
932. Alkokeshi v Mohini, 10 IC 625.
933. Raja Ram v Itraj, (1914) 17 OC 94.
934. Thakedath v Subramania, 53 IC 809; V Subbamma v Koniki Chengama Naidu, AIR 1999 AP 55.

[s 47.32] Appeal

Before the Amendment Act, 1976, the determination of a question under this section was under section 2(2) as it, then was, a decree and as such, unless it was an order under O XLIII, rule 1 subject to an appeal and a second appeal. The omission of the words "Section 47" from the definition of decree in section 2(2) has now drastically changed the position. An application under this section is not a suit. The order determining it is no longer a decree and is appealable only if it falls under section 104(1)(i). Sub-section (2) of section 104 provides that no appeal shall lie from any order passed in appeal under this section. Orders passed under this section are not appealable, unless they are orders falling under O XLIII, rule 1. A determination under O XXI, rules 34, 73, 92 or 106 (1) is appealable under O XLIII, rule 1 read with section 104(1)(i). Such a determination, when it is between the parties to the suit or their representatives, would fall under this section but would nevertheless be subject to one appeal, if it is also an order falling under O XLIII, rule 1. As regards appeal, therefore, orders under this section would be:

(i) orders also falling under O XLIII, rule 1; and

(ii) orders not falling under O XLIII, rule 1 and therefore not appealable.

An order of the executing court refusing to restore an application by the judgment-debtor dismissed earlier for default, amounts to confirmation of sale but since it is not a reference to set aside the sale, it is not appealable under O XLIII, rule 1.[935] Disputing from Parshva Properties v AK Bose,[936] the Punjab and Haryana High Court has held that an order under section 47 is (after 1976) not a decree and not appealable as a decree.[937]

Appeals already filed and pending on the date when the Amendment Act, 1976 was brought into force i.e., 1 February 1977, are expressly saved by section 97(2) of the Amendment Act.[938]

[s 47.33] Dismissal of Appeal— Effect on Pending Execution

When the Supreme Court had stayed the execution proceedings pending disposal of the civil appeal, after the disposal of the appeal, there was no impediment or bar to continue the execution proceedings on the application moved by the appellants to proceed with the execution. It was held that the high court committed a manifest error in taking a view that a fresh execution petition should be filed after the dismissal of the appeal by the Supreme Court as the decree passed by the high court had merged with the decree of Supreme Court and the execution petition filed earlier which was pending, was not maintainable. The Supreme Court had only confirmed the decree passed by the high court without any alteration or modification. Even otherwise, in a pending execution case, amendment could be sought if it was needed after dismissal of the appeal, under O XXI, rule 11(2)(d) of the CPC, in the execution application, the particular as to whether any appeal has been preferred from the decree is to be mentioned. If an appeal has been preferred from a decree and after disposal of the appeal necessary information can be given by filing an application, if need be, by seeking an amendment. It is one thing to say that the earlier decree passed gets merged in the decree passed by the appellate court, yet it is a different thing to say that an execution petition filed earlier is not maintainable and that there is a need to file a fresh application for execution after

---

935. Gopilal v Sitaram, AIR, 1968 MP 196 : (1968) MPLJ 365.
936. Parshva Properties v AK Bose, AIR 1979 Pat 308.
937. Jagat Ram v Jagjit Singh, AIR 1984 P&H 281.
938. Mohan Das v Kamla Devi, AIR 1978 Raj 127; Nanda Kishore v Mahabir Prasad, AIR 1978 Ori 129.

a decree is passed by the appellate court, particularly when the appellate court had stayed the execution proceedings filed earlier, it was obvious that the execution proceedings could be continued after dismissal of the appeal by appellate court without any alteration.[939]

[s 47.34] Revision

The exercise of power under section 115 of the CPC is broadly subject to the conditions that the decision, i.e., the impugned order, must have been given by a court subordinate to the high court, and no appeal lies either to the high court or to any lower appellate court against the said decision and in deciding the case, the subordinate court must have appeared to have exercised the jurisdiction not vested in it by law or failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law or acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. The purpose behind section 115 of the CPC is to provide means to an aggrieved party to obtain ratification of a non-appealable order. Therefore, for the maintainability of a revision petition there must be an error relating to the jurisdiction committed by the court below either by way of assumption of jurisdiction which it does not have or failure to exercise jurisdiction which it has or by exercising its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. In this case, the impugned order is a composite order saddling a special cost of Rs 25,000 against the judgment-debtor's petition besides a direction to the seristedar to calculate the amount due under the decree taking into account the compound interest at the rate of 15 per cent per annum, capitalising the said interest in the principal sum. The operative part of the decree has been quoted above wherein simple interest at the rate of 15%pa had been awarded on the principal sum of Rs 2,58,222 w.e.f. 5-10-985, till its realisation. There is no decree in this case for payment of compound interest at the rate of 15%pa with annual rest capitalising the sum with the principal amount. It is the settled principle of law that an executing court has no jurisdiction to go behind a decree. The learned court below has construed the interest at the rate of 15%pa as compound interest which is not in the decree. The executing court has no right to vary the terms of the decree, however, erroneous it may be in the execution proceeding. Therefore, it is a clear case in which the executing court has committed a manifest error relating to its jurisdiction which it does not have, and the exercise of its jurisdiction is definitely illegal and it equally suffers with material irregularity which has cost irreparable injustice to the judgment-debtors petitioner in this case and in this view of the matter, failure of justice was occasioned in this case. Viewed thus, the revision filed by the judgment-debtors petition is maintainable.[940]

The expression "other proceedings" in section 115 of the CPC includes proceedings under section 47. As such, revision petition against an order rejecting objection under section 47 of the CPC would be maintainable.[941]

[s 47.35] Appeal Remanded for Disposal — Effect on Execution

Where no order for execution of decree was passed at any stage of proceedings and a remand order was passed by the Supreme Court in a Special Leave Petition, for hearing appeal by appellate court de novo, still the decree of trial court would be executable as the Supreme Court judgment was passed neither in affirmation of the decree of the trial court in expressed terms;

---

939. Krishna Gopal Chawla v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2001 SC 3832 : (2001) 9 SCC 694.
940. State of Bihar v Mijaj International, AIR 2004 Jhar 29.
941. Ram Agarwal v Smt. Brijendra Kaur, AIR 2008 UP 25 : (2008) 4 All LJ 176.

nor any stay of operation of the decree of the trial court has been granted. Logically, the appeal has been restored in the same position as if it were before.[942]

In this case to apply principle of merger there must be a decree of the Supreme Court and the aforesaid order cannot partake of the character of the decree. The order of remand does not decide anything else, rather it is sent for the decision to the subordinate court. It is needless to mention that there is a distinction between decree and order.[943]

It cannot also be said in such a case that the decree of trial court is not in existence in view of the order of remand. Unless there is a decree, question of deciding the appeal does not and cannot arise. It is absurd to suggest that for the purpose of hearing of the appeal the decree would be operative, whereas for execution purpose it is kept in abeyance in view of the order of remand. The law cannot be applied discriminatingly in the same context. It cannot further be said that because of the order of remand of the Supreme Court, stay of operation of the decree had become automatic, as it will defeat the mandatory provision of the other portion of the law as O XLI, rule 5 provides for granting stay of operation of the decree by the appellate court.[944]

[s 47.36] Orders Passed under Special Statutes

A dispute between the parties arising out of an order passed under a special statute is within this section if it relates to execution, discharge or satisfaction thereof.[945] Thus, orders passed under section 15 of the Bombay Agricultural Debtors Relief Act, 1974;[946] under section 20 of the Madras Agriculturists Relief Act, 1938;[947] under section 16 of the Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950;[948] under section 18 of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1946[949] have been held to be appealable under this section. In view, however, of the change in section 2(2) this observation is no longer applicable and though such orders would fall under this section, an appeal against them can only lie if they fall under section 104(1)(i).

[s 47.37] Limitation Procedure and Evidence

An application under this section to set aside a sale inexecution of a decree must be made within 30 days from the date of the sale.[950] But if the sale is void, as where no notice is given as required by O XXI, rule 22, it is not necessary to apply to the court to set aside the sale. Hence the Article applicable in such a case is the residuary Article 137 which provides a period of three years from the date when the right to apply accrues, and not Article 127.[951] An application under this section by a representative of a judgment-debtor to set aside a sale on the ground that the property sold, belongs to him and not to the deceased judgment-debtor, is governed by Article 127 and must be made within 30 days from the date of sale.[952] In the

---

942. Kanchan Udyog Ltd v Mc Dowell & Co Ltd, AIR 2003 Cal 207.
943. Kanchan Udyog Ltd v Mc Dowell & Co Ltd, AIR 2003 Cal 207.
944. Kanchan Udyog Ltd v Mc Dowell & Co Ltd, AIR 2003 Cal 207.
945. Kunjan Nair Krishan Menon v Ouseph Devasia, AIR 1955 TC 183.
946. Guru Basappa v Neelkantappa, AIR 1951 Bom 136 : (1955) ILR Bom 393 : 53 Bom LR 371.
947. Desikachaiar v Ramachndra, AIR 1951 Mad 393 : 1951 (1) Mad LJ 23, overruling Nagappa Chettiar v Annapoorni Achi, AIR 1941 Mad 235 : (1941) ILR Mad 261.
948. Dalhousie Traders Ltd v Md. Sadique, AIR 1954 Cal 220 : 57 Cal WN 945.
949. Seshadri v Narayana, AIR 1951 Mad 640 : (1951) 1 Mad LJ 55, LW 121 : 1951 Mad WN 44.
950. Limitation Act 1963, Sch 1, Art 127.
951. Rajagopala v Ramanujachariar, AIR 1924 Mad 431 (FB) : (1924) 47 Mad 288; Manmatha Nath v Lakmi, AIR 1928 Cal 60 : (1928) 55 Cal 96; Marla Ramanna v Nallapa Raju, AIR 1956 SC 87 : (1952) SCR 938
952. Satish Chandra v Nishichandra, (1919) ILR 46 Cal 975.

case of execution against government, limitation does not commence until after compliance of section 82 since the decree until then is not executable.[953] The objections under section 47 should not be disposed of summarily. It is true that the executing courts are not enjoined by the statute to frame issue and dispose of the same in the same manner as a suit. Nevertheless, it is under an obligation to decide the dispute in a judicial manner. If the judgment-debtor wants to lead evidence, the judge ought to allow an opportunity to prove the assertion made in the objection petition. The executing court cannot dismiss the objection petition without going into the merits of the case.[954] A suit was filed for the recovery of profits alleged to have been misappropriated by the receiver. It was decreed ex parte. Both the parties to the decree died. The successor-in-interest of the decree-holder applied for execution. It was held that succession certificate was not needed. The amount in question was not a debt.[955] Symbolical delivery of possession of the sold properties supported the case of the intervener to be in possession. The sale being void, the intervener is entitled to continue in possession and the decree-holder is not entitled to interfere with it.[956] The upset price has some relation to the price which the property intended to be sold in the auction is expected to fetch. When the court gives the price, it cannot do so merely on the ipse dixit of either of judgment-debtor or the decree-holder. What should be the amount to be fixed as the upset price must, therefore, be determined after an objective consideration of all the relevant facts to which the court must apply its mind, so as to safeguard the interests of the judgment-debtor. The court must, therefore, have before it, the necessary material with regard to the nature of the property whether the property is agricultural property, the use to which the property was being put, whether the cultivation is dry cultivation or wet and such other factors which ultimately go to determine the value of the property.[957] If the decree is not fully satisfied the decree-holder is entitled to bring the other properties of the judgment-debtors to sale. The auction-purchaser similarly has a right to seek permission to deposit the entire sale price. The court sales are not an empty formality. The objections, if any, regarding confirmation of sale, must be raised before the executing court. Judgment-debtor must not be granted interim stay.[958] Property was sold in execution of a decree suit. A suit to set aside the sale was decreed, declaring the decree (which was the subject matter of execution) as not binding on the plaintiff. Direction for restitution of suit property was also contained in the decree. Decree was not merely declaratory. Considering the long pendency of litigation, the Supreme Court directed payment of market value of the suit property by the defendant, instead of restitution. On the facts and in the circumstances, and in consideration of the fact that the litigation was pending for a long period, the Supreme Court directed that justice and equity would be met after assessing the prevailing market value of the disputed house and the site as on date and directed the appellant to pay the value thereof within a time to be fixed by the district court of Kotah.[959] Executing court cannot take additional evidence. It can, however, appoint a commissioner to ascertain identity of the property in terms of the decree. A compromise decree finally allotted specific properties to the parties. It was held that it was executable by itself. Final decree need not be drawn up.[960]

---

953. UOI v K Khandelwal, AIR 1970 Ori 137.
954. Woolways, shop-cum-office, Chandigarh v Central Bank of India, Chandigarh, AIR 1990 P&H 92.
955. Snehakana Sur v Abani Bhusan, AIR 1982 Cal 378 (DB).
956. Jugal Kishore Singh v Lakshmi Kumari, AIR 1981 Ori 121.
957. Elumalai Naicker v Kishtambal Ammal, AIR 1988 Mad 106.
958. Venkateshwara Oil Mills v Syndicate Bank, AIR 1989 Kant 225.
959. Bhanwarlal v Premlata, AIR 1990 SC 623 : (1990) 1 SCC 353.
960. Lalmuni Devi v Shiv Shankar Tiwary, AIR 1980 Pat 184.

If, the appellate court has dismissed the appeal filed by judgment-debtor against decree of trial court, the decree of trial court merges with the decree passed by the appellate court and the execution petition filed within 12 years from the date of order of the appellate court is not barred by limitation.[961] The period of limitation for filing execution petition begins to run when the decree or order becomes enforceable. Appeal preferred against a decree is a continuation of suit. It is the decree of the appellate court only which is enforceable and capable of execution and not the decree passed by the trial court.[962] However, were filing of appeal against decree cannot make the decree in executable. The decree remains executable, but its execution can be suspended by order of the appellate court as per O XLI, rule 5 (1) or by the executing court as per O XLI, rule 5(2).[963]

In the undernoted case,[964] the Supreme Court held that section 4(b)(i) of the Pondicherry Limitation (Repeal of Local Laws) Act, 1994 would not save the execution petition from the bar of limitation, where the execution petition is filed after the period of limitation. In that case, the execution petition to execute the decree passed on 22 April 1983 was filed on 10 November 1995. Earlier execution petition filed by the decree-holder was dismissed for default and the petition filed for its restoration was dismissed as not pressed. The Supreme Court observed that no execution petition was pending on the date of commencement of the 1994 Act and as such the savings clause will not be applicable.

Limitation period for execution is governed by Article 136 of the Limitation Act, 1963 read with Article 134. Section 47 is not concerned with limitation.[965] The Supreme Court in Ramanna v Mallaparaju,[966] laid down that an application by a party to the suit to recover possession of the properties which had been taken delivery of under a void execution sale would be in time under Article 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908, if it was filed within three years of its dispossession. Article 128 of the Limitation Act, 1963 of which the corresponding article is Article 165 of the Limitation Act, 1908, lays down that the period of limitation is 30 days from the date of dispossession, for filing a petition for possession, by one dispossessed of immoveable property and disputing the right of the decree-holder or purchaser at a sale in execution of the decree. It has been made clear in Rammanna's case that this Article applies only to applications for being restored to possession by persons other than the judgment-debtors as under O XXI, rule 100 of the CPC and applications by judgment-debtors claiming relief on the ground that their properties which had been erroneously taken is execution of decree, are not governed by it.[967] The plea of lack of jurisdiction can be raised at any time even in second appeal, so also on the execution sides.[968] The Madras High Court, relying upon Bhanwarlal v Satyanarain,[969] held that each occasion of section gives a cause of action for filing an application to remove the obstructions.[970] The provision under Limitation Act, 1908 are applicable to proceedings of execution by virtue of O XXI, rule 105 (4).[971]

---

961. Hari Singh v Harbhajan Singh, AIR 2001 P&H 108.
962. Arakhita Naik v Narasingh Naik, AIR 2007 Orissa 175 : 2007 Supp Ori LR 337.
963. Suresh Kumar v Virendra Kumar, AIR 2007 Raj 117 : 2007 (3) Civil Court Cases 272 : 2007 (2) Raj LW 1574.
964. Kanagavaliammal v R Balsubramanian, AIR 2008 SC 1991 : (2008) 5 SCC 212.
965. Ganpat Singh v Kailash Shankar, AIR 1987 SC 1443 : (1987) 3 SCC 146.
966. Ramanna v Mallaparaju, AIR 1956 SC 87 : (1955) 2 SCR 938.
967. Achamma Cyrisc v Kerala Financial Corp, AIR 1997 Ker 75.
968. Bhavrvad Chotta Bhaga v Bhavrvad Jaga Dahya, AIR 1999 Guj 17.
969. Bhanwarlal v Satyanarain, AIR 1995 SC 358 : (1995) 1 SCC 6.
970. Adimoolam Mudaliar v PL Unnamalai Achi, AIR 1998 Mad 17 (DB).
971. R Parsuraman v K Jayalaxmi, AIR 1995 Mad 242.

[s 47.38] Res Judicata

Principles of res judicata as also of constructive res judicata apply to decisions in execution proceedings as between the parties.[972] Therefore, if a judgment-debtor, who might and ought to have raised a defence at an appropriate stage, has failed to do so, he would be precluded from urging it at any subsequent stage of the proceedings.[973] Accordingly, where the court is competent to decide a question as to jurisdiction arising from the interpretation or the applicability of a statute, even an erroneous decision is binding on the parties.[974] Where the widow of the judgment-debtor failed to appear in spite of notice under O XXI, rule 22 and raise the objection as to the saleability of the property before an order of attachment was made, it was not open to her, to subsequently file an application, under this section for release of the property even though the property proceeded against was her personal property and not belonging to her husband.[975] But the dismissal of an application resisting the execution for default of the judgment-debtor is not a decision after hearing the parties and therefore does not operate as res judicata.[976] The decree-holder, after fighting the legal battle for more than a decade, succeeded in getting a decree for the restoration of possession of the land in dispute. Only symbolic possession was delivered to her, as the land was under crops. There was no evidence to hold that the decree-holder consented to symbolic possession in lieu of actual physical possession. It was held that the executing court was wrong in drawing an inference that the decree-holder was satisfied with mere symbolic possession, merely, because the first execution application was allowed to be dismissed in default. Refusal to entertain a second execution application on that ground was illegal. Non-appearance of the decree-holder on the date fixed by the executing court cannot lead to a conclusion that she was satisfied with symbolic possession in lieu of actual physical possession. Such a consent, if any, has to be given in the executing court, and even if such consent was given, it could not amount to the satisfaction of the decree which was for actual physical possession. Hence, there was no bar to the maintainability of the second execution application.[977]

See also notes under section 11.

[s 47.39] Estoppel

In the case of acquisition of land, the reference court amended its earlier order granting compensation. The order in question has attained finality by reason whereof the original decree stood amended. The executing court in view of the decision, in itself, could not have gone behind the decree. The executing court thus proceeded to pass the impugned judgment on a wrong premise. The executing court keeping in view its limited jurisdiction could not have gone into the question as to whether the reference court was correct in passing the order amending the decree or not. The executing court did not have any jurisdiction to go into the said question. A decree passed by a competent court of law can be suitably amended. A decree, so amended on an application filed by the claimant for review thereof becomes final. If the

---

972. Ravti Devi v Khiali Ram, AIR 1967 Del 119; Narayan Chandra v Nath Bank Ltd, AIR 1967 Pat 124 : ILR 44 Pat 87; Nairanjan Das v Liquidator Puri Bank, AIR 1968 Ori 183; Girdharan Parasad v State, AIR 1968 Pat 77; Bijali Bala v Charu Bala, AIR 1969 Pat 21; Sarjug Singh v Bassisut Singh, AIR 1970 Pat 237 : ILR 47 Pat 173; Perraju v Venkamma, AIR 1971 AP 74; Shanker v Sukhai, AIR 1976 All 229.
973. Pushpa v Ganpat Singh, AIR 1977 Raj 216.
974. Piarelal v Bhagwat Prasad, AIR 1969 MP 35.
975. Chandra Choor v Krishnavati, AIR 1969 Pat 251.
976. Shivshankar v Baikunth, AIR 1969 SC 971 : (1969) 1 SCC 718.
977. Ajit Kaur v Mandir Jhok Haridhar, AIR 1989 P&H 194.

state was aggrieved by and dissatisfied therewith it could have taken the matter by filing an appropriate application before the high court. But keeping in view of the fact that the said order was allowed to attain finality, the court could not have permitted the state to reagitate the said question before the executing court by filing an application under section 47 of the CPC or otherwise. In a case of this nature the principle of estoppel by records shall come into play.[978]

[s 47.40] Satisfaction of Decree

Decree sought to be executed was a decree for permanent injunction regarding user of flour mill.

As soon as the possession of the attachakki itself was entrusted back to the decree-holder, there could be no further occasion for violating the decree for permanent injunction which restrained the respondent/judgment-debtor from using the chakhi or from using the power connection for the chakki. Therefore, the entire decree stood satisfied on the delivery of the chakki back to the decree-holder.[979]

In law, where a person having two alternative courses of action which are mutually exclusive, chooses to adopt one and reject the other expressly or impliedly, then he is said to have elected to choose one. He is subsequently precluded from adopting the course which he intended to reject. It is known as the doctrine of election. Like estoppel, it is also a child of equity. It is founded on the principle that one should not be permitted to approbate and reprobate, that is, blow hot and cold at the same time. It has been extended and applied as an aspect of estoppel to prevent a person from falling a victim to what would have otherwise resulted in injustice to him and unfair advantage to the doctrine of approbation and reprobation, which is akin to the law of election and estoppel, applies to those cases where a person has elected to take a benefit otherwise than on merits of the claim. Another criterion for the applicability of the doctrine is that the person receiving the benefit must have a choice between two rights, and after the exercise of the choice, restitution is impossible or inequitable.[980]

For the purposes of the common law doctrine of election, where a person has an unrestricted choice between two mutually inconsistent courses of action which affect his rights, knowledge of the right to elect is a precondition to the making of an effective election, and there can be no knowledge of the right to elect unless the person knows his legal right as well as facts giving rise to those rights.[981]

In a case, where the decree-holder bank had filed an execution proceedings under the CPC and had simultaneously initiated revenue recovery proceedings under section 69 (2) of the Kerala Revenue Recovery Act, 1968 for recovery of Bank debt, it was held by the Kerala High Court Division Bench that proceedings under section 47 of the CPC and under section 69 (2) of the Act are independent of each other in scope and purport and can be simultaneously employed to attain ultimate goal of recovery of the amount. It was not necessary to stop one of the processes to continue with the other.[982]

The Supreme Court on several earlier occasions had considered the applicability of the doctrine of election in legal proceedings. In Bhau Ram's case,[983] a five-judge bench of the Supreme

---

978. Jaya Chandra Mohapatra v Land Acquisition Officer, Rayagada, AIR 2005 SC 4165 : (2005) 9 SCC 123.
979. Shiv Charan Din Dayal Jain v Mohan Lal, AIR 2004 Del 139.
980. Woodroffe & Amir Ali, Law of Evidence, 17th Edn, vol 4, p 5075.
981. Peyman v Lonjani, (1984) 3 All ER 703 : (1985) Ch D 457
982. Syndicate Bank v SS Sheriff, AIR 2007 Ker 189 (DB).
983. Bhau Ram v B Baijnath Singh, AIR 1961 SC 1352 : (1962) 1 SCR 358.

Court was hearing an appeal against a pre-emption decree. The defendant had withdrawn the pre-emption amount deposited in court. A preliminary objection was raised whether the defendant, having taken the benefit from the decree, can challenge the same decree. Mudholkar, J, speaking for the majority view, held that the principle that a person who takes benefit under an order cannot repudiate that part of the order, which is detrimental to him, on the ground that he cannot be allowed to approbate and reprobate, is applicable only to cases where the benefit conferred by the order is something apart from the merits of the claim involved.

In another case,[984] a three-judge bench of the Supreme Court, in a suit for redemption, held that where the mortgage enjoys benefits under a deed, he must also accept the obligations thereunder.

This doctrine came to be noticed by the Supreme Court again in a case under the Securitisation and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002 ("NPA Act") and the Debt Recovery Tribunal Act, 1993 (DRT Act). It was held that NPA Act is additional remedy to DRT Act and together they constitute one remedy. Thus, the doctrine of election does not apply.[985] SH Kapadia J (as he then was), speaking for the Bench, observed as follows:

> In the light of the above discussion, we now examine the doctrine of election. There are three elements of election, namely, existence of two or more remedies; inconsistencies between such remedies and a choice of one of them. If any one of the three elements is not there, the doctrine will not apply. According to American Jurisprudence, 2nd. Vol. 25, page 652, if in truth there is only one remedy, then the doctrine of election does not apply. In the present case, as stated above, the NPA Act is an additional remedy to the DRT Act. Together they constitute one remedy and, therefore, the doctrine of election does not apply. Even according to Snell's Equity (Thirty-first Edition, page 119), the doctrine of election of remedies is applicable only when there are two or more co-existent remedies available to the litigants, at the time of election which are repugnant and inconsistent. In any event, there is no repugnancy nor inconsistency between the two remedies, therefore, the doctrine of election has no application.[986]

Limit of time for execution

[S 48] Execution barred in certain cases.—[Rep. by the Limitation Act, 1963 (36 of 1963), sec. 28 (w.e.f. 1-1-1964).]

The section, prior to its deletion, was as follows:

> 48. (1) Where an application to execute a decree not being a decree granting an injunction has been made, no order for the execution of the same decree shall be made upon any fresh application presented after the expiration of 12 years from—
>
> (a) the date of the decree sought to be executed; or
>
> (b) where the decree or any subsequent order directs any payment of money or the delivery of any property to be made at a certain date or at recurring periods, the date of the default in making the payment or delivery in respect of which the applicant seeks to execute the decree.
>
> (2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed—
>
> (a) to preclude the court from ordering the execution of a decree upon an application presented after the expiration of the said term of twelve years, where the judgment-

---

984. C Beepathumma v VS Kadambolithaya, AIR 1965 SC 241 : (1964) 5 SCR 836.
985. Transcore v UOI, AIR 2007 SC 712 : (2008) 1 SCC 125.
986. Transcore v UOI, AIR 2007 SC 712, p 733 : (2008) 1 SCC 125.

debtor has, by fraud or force, prevented the execution of the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of the application; or

(b) to limit or otherwise affect the operation of Art. 183 of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908.

This section has been repealed by section 28 of the Limitation Act, 1963. In its place, a new provision, Article 136, has been introduced which prescribes "for the execution of any decree (other than a decree granting a mandatory injunction) or order of any civil court" a period of 12 years:

> [987][When] the decree or order becomes enforceable or where the decree or any subsequent order directs any payment of money or the delivery of any property to be made at a certain date or at recurrent periods, when default in making the payment or delivery in respect of which execution is sought, takes place:
>
> Provided that an application for the enforcement or execution of a decree granting a perpetual injunction shall not be subject to any period of limitation.

The period of 12 years prescribed by section 48 is retained under Article 136 and is now the only period of limitation. It is therefore no longer necessary to keep the execution alive by successive applications within three years for complying with the original Article 182.

Those interested in pending proceedings under section 48 as it stood before its deletion are requested to refer to the commentary under that section contained in the earlier edition. The following case decided after the amendment may to such readers be of interest.[988]

Transferees and legal representatives

[S 49] Transferee.—Every transferee of a decree shall hold the same subject to the equities (if any) which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the original decree-holder.

[s 49.1] Equity of Judgment-debtor

This is the same principle as that enacted in section 132 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. A right of set-off is an equity, and if the judgment-debtor has the right to set off a cross decree under O XXI, rule 18, he has this right also against the transferee of the decree-holder.[989] But the question of set-off will arise when the decree will be actually put under execution. The court to which an application for transfer of a decree is made cannot go into the question of equities under this section.[990] The section applies to all decrees including mortgage-decrees.[991] The judgment-debtor is entitled to claim under this section, only those equities which he had against the original decree-holder and not against his transferee, and accordingly, a payment made by him to a transferee from the decree-holder whose transfer was invalid cannot be set up

---

987. Substituted by Act 52 of 1964, section 3 and the Second Schedule, for "Where" (w.e.f. 28-12-1964.)
988. K Ramayya v VK Nageshwarrao, AIR 1969 AP 250; Sita Devi v Anna Rao, AIR 1970 AP 43; Rameswar Sarma v Madan Lal Agarwalla, AIR 1965 Assam 96; LR Goud v Raju Bai, AIR 1971 AP 336; Lalji Raja & Sons v Hanraj Nathuram, AIR 1971 SC 974; K Muniswamappa v P Chennakrishnappa, AIR 1971 Mys 266 : 1 Mys LJ 48; Mitthan Lal v Parwati, AIR 1977 All 236.
989. Kaim Ali v Lakhikant, (1868) 1 Beng LR 23 (FB); Kristo Ramani v Kedarnath, (1889) 16 Cal 619; Sinnu v Santhoji, (1903) 26 Mad 428; Brij Mohan v Manmohan, AIR 1937 All 351 : (1937) All 553.
990. Dutta v Tarubala, AIR 1937 Cal 570.
991. Sheo Prasad v Lall, AIR 1925 Pat 449 : (1924) 4 Pat 120.

against a transferee who has obtained a valid transfer.[992] A company borrowed a loan from the bank, but failed to repay. Consequent upon this, the bank tried to exercise the right of set off in terms of the contractual obligations assumed by the petitioners (company), by transferring the amounts deposited by petitioners in the current account to the loan account. The question arose whether the respondent bank had the right to claim set-off, of the amounts deposited in the current accounts by transferring them to the loan account, in order to realise the loans advanced to the petitioners, which they had failed to discharge. It was held that the matter fell within the domain of the law of contract, and the right of set off claimed by the bank could not be denied on the pretext that the transfer of the amounts in the current account would result in the negation of the activities of the petitioners in publishing the newspapers, weeklies, etc. The enforcement of the doctrine of set off for the amounts to be realised by the bank, cannot be said to be arbitrary or mala fide.[993]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A holds a decree against B for Rs 5,000. B holds a decree against A for Rs 3,000. A transfers his decree to C. C cannot execute the decree against B for more than Rs 2,000.[994]

(ii) A obtains a decree against B for Rs 5,000. B then sues A to recover Rs 2,000. Pending B's suit, C obtains a transfer of A's decree with notice of B's suit. A decree is then passed for B in his suit against A. C applies for execution against B of the whole decree for Rs 5,000. He is not entitled to execute the decree for more than Rs 3,000 as the transfer was taken with notice of B's suit.[995]

The second illustration is the case of Kristo Ramani v Kedarnath,[996] in which it was assumed that the assignee must have notice of the equity. However, it is submitted, that it matters not that the assignee was, unaware of the equity provided it was existing at the time of the assignment;section 132 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, illustration (i) and the case of Mon Mohan Karmakar v Dwarka Nath Karmakar.[997] In the latter case, the court said:

> Under section 49 of the Code the assignee (of a decree) stands in no better position than the assignor and takes it subject to all the equities and defences, subsisting at the time of the assignment, which the judgment-debtor could have asserted against it in the hands of the judgment-creditor, notwithstanding that the assignee may have had no notice thereof.

If the equity is not existing at the time of the assignment there is no right to set-off.[998] The right of a judgment-debtor to ask for a stay of execution under O XXI, rule 29 is an equity which binds the assignee of a decree.[999] An application for stay of execution is maintainable under O XXI, rule 29 even though the decree-holder has assigned his decree in favour of a stranger pending the suit of the judgment-debtor and the assignee is not a party therein. The assignee takes his assignment subject only to the equity in favour of the judgment-debtor under O XXI, rule 29 and it is immaterial that the assignee had no notice of the suit.[1000] It has however, been held by the High Court of Rajasthan that the mere pendency of a suit

---

992. Harjang Singh v Gowardhandas, AIR 1952 P&H 183 : (1951) ILR Punj 475.
993. Canara Bank v Taraka Prabhu Publishers Pvt Ltd, AIR 1991 AP 258 (FB).
994. Kaim Ali v Lakhikant, (1868) 1 Beng LR 23 (FB).
995. Kristo Ramani v Kedarnath, (1889) 16 Cal 619.
996. Kristo Ramani v Kedarnath, (1889) 16 Cal 619.
997. Mon Mohan Karmakar v Dwarka Nath Karmakar, (1910) 12 Cal LJ 312; Daw Aye v U Aye Maung, AIR 1937 Rang 316; Palladugula Suyanarayana v Samayamanthula Nageswara Rao, AIR 1945 Mad 381 : (1946) ILR Mad 30.
998. Nagendra Nath v Haran Chandra, AIR 1933 Cal 865 : (1933) 37 Cal WN 758.
999. Gurushantappa v Nagappa, AIR 1938 Bom 253 : (1938) Bom 263.
1000. Kottayam Orient Bank Ltd v Moosa Rawther, AIR 1959 Ker 402 : 1958 Ker LT 1012 : (1958) Ker LJ 1255.

by the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder is not an equity within this section and that consequently, the assignee of a decree does not take it, subject to any decree that may subsequently be passed in the suit of the judgment-debtor.[1001]

Court-fee is essentially a matter between the State and the person, who comes to the court, as a pauper or otherwise. The person, who raises the question of court-fee, cannot take upon itself the role of the state. It has been held by a Division Bench of the Gauhati High Court that the fact that the decree has been obtained by a person without paying any court-fee or without paying appropriate court-fee, the decree, if validly granted, cannot be held to be in executable or a nullity, particularly, when the bona fide of the person who obtains the decree, is not challenged or is in dispute.[1002]

[S 50] Legal representative.—(1) Where a judgment-debtor dies before the decree has been fully satisfied, the holder of the decree may apply to the Court which passed it to execute the same against the legal representative of the deceased.

(2) Where the decree is executed against such legal representative, he shall be liable only to the extent of the property of the deceased which has come to his hands and has not been duly disposed of; and, for the purpose of ascertaining such liability, the Court executing the decree may, of its own motion or on the application of the decree-holder, compel such legal representative to produce such accounts as it thinks fit.

SYNOPSIS

[s 50.1]	Changes in the Law	808	[s 50.8]	May Apply to Execute the Decree Against the Legal Representatives	812
[s 50.2]	Judgment-debtor Dies	808	[s 50.9]	To which Court Application Should be Made	813
[s 50.3]	Judgment-debtor Applying for Insolvency	809	[s 50.10]	Death of Legal Representative	813
[s 50.4]	Extent of Liability of Legal Representative	809	[s 50.11]	Legal Representative bound by Previous Proceedings	813
[s 50.5]	Legal Representative	810	[s 50.12]	Decree for Injunction	813
[s 50.6]	Before the Decree has been Fully Satisfied	811	[s 50.13]	Application of this Section to Orders	815
[s 50.7]	Before the Decree has been Passed	812

[s 50.1] Changes in the Law

The present section differs from the corresponding section 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, in one respect, viz, that the words "fully satisfied" have been substituted for the words "fully executed".[1003]

[s 50.2] Judgment-debtor Dies

This refers to natural death and not to civil death. If the judgment-debtor becomes a sanyasi. his son is not his legal representative.[1004]

1001. Anupchand v Hira Chand, AIR 1962 Raj 223.
1002. Maya Ram Ghosh v State of Tripura, AIR 2007 Gau 76 (DB) : 2007 AIHC 2169 (Agartala Bench).
1003. See notes below under the head: "Before the Decree has Been Fully Satisfied".
1004. Madho Rao v Gur Narain, AIR 1931 All 306 : (1931) 53 All 529; Sudhamoyee v Bhupendra, AIR 1935 Cal 713.

[s 50.3] Judgment-debtor Applying for Insolvency

Where property of the judgment-debtor is sold by the decree-holder after the judgment-debtor has applied for insolvency, without notice to the official receiver, the sale is a nullity, as the adjudication of the insolvent relates back to the date of his petition and the properties of the judgment-debtor vests in the official receiver from that date.[1005]

[s 50.4] Extent of Liability of Legal Representative

It is well settled that legal representative of judgment-debtors are liable for the debts of the predecessor to the extent of estate acquired by the legal representative from their predecessors.[1006] This section enables a decree-holder to execute his decree against the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor. The property that can be attached is the property of the judgment-debtor found in the hands of the representative, and the property of the representative, from whatever source derived, to the extent of that, which he has wasted out of the assets come to his hands without satisfying the debts of the deceased.[1007]

The liability of a legal representative in execution proceedings is confined to the property of the deceased which has actually come to his hands. If the decree-holder seeks to make the legal representative answerable also for the property of the deceased, which, with due diligence on his part would have come to his hands, his proper remedy is by way of suit against the legal representative, and not by proceedings in execution under this section.[1008] Suit was filed for recovery of money and decreed against appellant's husband. Execution of decree was sought by attaching movable property of the wife after death of the husband-appellant took the plea that she did not inherit any property of her husband and that it was her personal property. Order for attachment and sale without considering the matter and in violation of sections 52–53, is illegal.[1009]

Sub-section (2) of section 50 of the CPC makes it very clear that the legal representative is liable only to the extent of the property of the deceased, which is inherited by him. Appointment of the legal representative on compassionate ground cannot be termed as property inherited from his father. Therefore, attachment of salary cannot be ordered against the said judgment-debtor.[1010]

The extent of the liability of the legal representative is decided by the court executing the decree and the court may call for an account of the property of the judgment-debtor that has come into the hands of the legal representative. The decree-holder must prove in the first instance that some assets have come to the legal representative, and the onus is then shifted to the latter, to show how the assets including rents and profits have been applied.[1011]

A decree-holder is entitled under this section to have the amount of the decree paid out of the assets of the deceased in the hands of the legal representative which have not yet been duly disposed of. Hence, the legal representative is bound to pay to the decree-holder, the full

---

1005. Henry Merien v Official Receiver, Madura, AIR 1935 Mad 907.
1006. Madhukar Sagun Karpe v Institute of Public Assistance, AIR 1998 Bom 201.
1007. Rajrup Singh v Ramgolam, (1888) 16 Cal 1; Chintamoney Dutt v Mohesh Chandra, (1896) 23 Cal 454.
1008. Khushrobhai v Hormazsha, (1887) 11 Bom 727; Saratmani Debi v Batta Krishna, (1908) 35 Cal 1100; Leong Ah Choy v TD Findlay & Sons, Ltd, AIR 1937 Rang 274.
1009. Anmina Poul Choudhary and Biswas v Bank of Baroda, AIR 1991 Ori 115.
1010. Bandaru Srinivassa Rao v Sreyobhilashi Chit Funds, Wyra, AIR 2008 AP 97 : 2008 (1) Andh LD 392.
1011. Raja of Kalahasti v Prayag, (1916) 30 Mad LJ 391.Mohammad Shariff v Mehraj Din, AIR 1934 Lah 106; Lal Behari Prasad v Bindesari Misra, AIR 1934 All 249.

amount of the decree, though there may be other creditors of the deceased, and the assets may not be sufficient to pay them all in full.[1012] On the death of the judgment-debtor in a motor vehicle accident, the amount of compensation awarded by the Accidents Claims Tribunal is payable to his real heirs only. The said amount cannot be said to have been part of the estate of the deceased. It is, therefore, not liable to be attached in execution of the decree against the judgment-debtor, as the asset of the deceased is in the hands of his legal representatives. But when the decree was made personally against one of the legal representatives along with the deceased, the share of the legal representative in the compensation amount would be liable to be attached.[1013] In a case where the decree restrains a judgment-debtor from doing something in his own hand to the detriment of the decree-holder or in derogation of a right claimed by the judgment-debtor to enjoy his own property as an owner, the decree could not be understood as merely personal and not binding on the representatives or assignees of the judgment-debtor in relation to the property in respect of which it is obtained.[1014]

[s 50.5] Legal Representative

The effect of section 50 read with O XXI, rule 22 is that there are two requirements for all execution applications against legal representatives. The first is that the application must be made to the court which passed the decree and the second is that notice of execution must be served on the legal representative. An application for transfer of a decree under section 39 is not sufficient compliance of this section.[1015]"Legal representative" means a person, who, in law, represents the estate of a deceased person, and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased.[1016] Thus, where a judgment-debtor dies and a stranger takes possession of his property, the decree may be executed against the stranger, for he is a "legal representative" within the meaning of this section.[1017] A residuary legatee in possession of the judgment-debtor's estate is his legal representative although letters of administration have not yet been issued to him.[1018] A nominee under an insurance policy has been held to be a legal representative of the deceased policy-holder.[1019] The purchaser of the business of a firm against which a decree has been passed is not the "legal representative" of the firm within the meaning of this section. The decree against the firm cannot, therefore, be executed against the purchaser.[1020] The widow and the daughter of the judgment-debtor remain liable under section 50 of the CPC and the provisions of Hindu Succession Act, 1956 on the death of the judgment-debtor.[1021]

1012. Venkatarangayan v Krishnasami, (1899) 22 Mad 194.
1013. Janaki v Prabhat Finance by Partner, AIR 1986 Mad 273.
1014. Chothy Theyyathan v John Thomas, AIR 1997 Ker 249.
1015. Presidency Industrial Bank v HL Industries, AIR 1969 Bom 84 : 70 Bom LR 373 : 1969 Mah LJ 49.
1016. See section 2, clause (11).
1017. Saratchandra Deb v Bichitranand Sahu, AIR 1951 Ori 22 : (1950) Cut 413. The decision to the contrary in Chatakelan v Govinda, (1894) 17 Mad 186, is no longer law. See note "Legal representative" under section 2(11).
1018. Porosanno Chundra v Kristor, (1877) 4 Cal 342; Chuni Lal v Osmond, (1877) 4 Cal 342; Chuni Lal v Osmond, (1903) 30 Cal 1044.
1019. Rajaram v Mata Prasad, AIR 1972 All 167 (FB).
1020. Harish Chandra Chandpore Co Ltd, (1903) 30 Cal 961; Arbuthnot's Industrials Ltd v Madhu Chetties, (1908) 31 Mad 464.
1021. Raghu Mandala Kasibabu v State Bank of India, AIR 1999 Ori 160.

[s 50.6] Before the Decree has been Fully Satisfied

The corresponding section of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (section 234) provided, in effect, that if a judgment-debtor died before the decree had been "fully executed", the holder of the decree might apply to the court which passed it to execute the same against the legal representative of the deceased. This gave rise to the question as to when a decree could be said to be "fully-executed"? It was held by the High Court of Madras that a decree could not be said to be "fully executed" until the property attached was sold, and that if the judgment-debtor died before sale, his legal representatives ought to be brought on the record; and if the property was sold without the legal representatives being brought on the record, the sale was absolutely void.[1022] On the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that once the property was attached the decree was "fully executed" and that it was not necessary to bring the legal representatives on the record and a sale held in their absence was not void. The latter decisions were based on the ground that once a property was attached, it was in the hands of the law, and the attachment did not abate on the death of a judgment-debtor.[1023] At the same time, there were cases in which it was held that omission to being the legal representatives on the record, did not vitiate the sale, but was at most an irregularity within the meaning of section 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 [now O XXI, rule 90].[1024] It was to remove this conflict of decisions that the words "satisfied" has been substituted in the present section for the word "executed". The effect of this alteration in the language is to supersede the Allahabad decisions in so far as they hold that after attachment, it was not necessary to bring the legal representatives on the record; for a decree cannot be said to be fully "satisfied" merely because the property was attached. The words of the enactment that the "holder of a decree may apply" have led to a further controversy as to whether a sale held without bringing on record the legal representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor was void or voidable. It was held by the Calcutta High Court that such a sale was merely irregular and liable to be set aside under O XXI, rule 90, on proof of substantial injury.[1025] A Full Bench of the Madras High Court has however held that in such a case, the sale is void.[1026] The Patna High Court has also followed this view in a case where this judgment-debtor died after the publication of the sale proclamation and no notice of the execution was, given to his legal representative.[1027] The Calcutta High Court has, in a later case,[1028] followed the Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court, observing that its earlier decision given in Tharangini's case cannot be considered to be right in view of the decision of the Privy Council in Raghunath Das's case.[1029] The question has since been considered by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court[1030] which has held that the omission to bring the legal representatives on record rendered the sale a nullity. That is also the view taken 1022. Ramasami v Bagirathi, (1883) 6 Mad 180; Groves v Administrator-General, (1899) 22 Mad 119.

---

1023. Sheo Prasad v Hira Lal, (1890) 12 All 440 (FB); Abdur Rahman v Shankar, (1895) 17 All 162; Stowell v Ajudhia Nath, (1884) 6 All 255.
1024. Aba v Dhondu Bai, (1895) 19 Bom 276; Net Lall v Sheikh Kareem, (1896) 23 Cal 686; Bepin Behary v Sosi Bhusan, (1913) 18 Cal WN 766.
1025. Jagadish v Bama Sundari, (1919) 23 Cal WN 608; Tarangini v Raj Krishna, (1927) 32 Cal WN 418.
1026. Kanchamalai v Shahaji, AIR 1936 Mad 205 (FB) : (1936) 59 Mad 461; Faizuddi v Razia Begum, AIR 1942 Cal 436 : (1942) 2 Cal 262 : (1942) 46 Cal WN 631 : 75 Cal LJ 368.
1027. Ajab Lal Dubey v Hari Chaaran Tewari, AIR 1945 Pat 1 (FB) : (1944) 23 Pat 528.
1028. Faizuddin Talukdar v Razia Begum, 75 Cal LJ 368.
1029. Raghunath Das v Sundar Das Khetri, (1915) 42 Cal 72.
1030. Smt Shanti Devi v Khandu Bala Dasi, AIR 1961 Cal 336 : 65 Cal WN 171; Rajilakshmi v Bonomali, AIR 1955 Cal 573.

by the High Courts of Kerala[1031] and Rajasthan,[1032] which have observed that the words "may apply" meant only that the decree-holder may elect to proceed against the legal representatives or not and that when he does elect to proceed against them, he must take proceedings against them under this section and that in that context the word "may" mean "shall". Thus, the law may be taken to be well settled that a sale held without bringing on record the legal representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor is a nullity. But where an order has been made bringing the legal representatives on record and the sale is held, that is not liable to be attacked as a nullity on the ground that the order as to representation is erroneous. And where there are several legal representatives and only some of them are brought on record, the sale will be binding on all of them.[1033]

[s 50.7] Before the Decree has been Passed

A decree against a person who has died pending the suit without his legal representatives being brought on the record is a nullity and cannot be executed against the legal representatives.[1034] But a decree passed by the Privy Council in ignorance of the death of a respondent was held not to be a nullity.[1035] In such a case, it has been held that the decree of the Privy Council may be executed under this section against the property of the judgment-debtor, in the hands of his legal representatives.[1036]

[s 50.8] May Apply to Execute the Decree Against the Legal Representatives

Where execution proceedings have been commenced against a judgment-debtor, they can be continued after his death by substituting the name of the legal representative in place of that of the judgment-debtor in the application for execution already on the files of the court. It is not necessary to file a fresh application for execution under O XXI, rule 11.[1037] At the same time notice should be given to the legal representative under O XXI, rule 22. If such notice has been served on the legal representative, the order substituting his name can be made ex parte.[1038] The Madras High Court has held that if execution is necessary against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, the decree-holder has no option but to proceed under this section or to present a fresh application for execution.[1039] It has been held that legatees who have taken possession of their legacies, are legal representatives against whom execution can be taken under this section.[1040]

1031. Kolappa v Krishna, AIR 1962 Ker 144 : (1961) Ker LJ 1231 : (1961) Ker LT 1013; Chacko Piley v Iype Varghese, AIR 1956 TC 147; Fernandez v Madhavi, AIR 1955 TC 92 : 1955 Ker LT 46.
1032. Mubarak Begum v Sushil Kuar, AIR 1957 Raj 154.
1033. Sathruhan Prasad v Sudip Narain, AIR 1955 Pat 408, following the Privy Council decision in Mallikarjuna v Narahari, 25 Bom 337 : 27 IA 216; Mahadeo v Shantilal, AIR 1957 Bom 170; Hardaya Devi v Fideen, AIR 1962 All 125; but See Chacko Piley v Iype Varghese, AIR 1956 TC147. See further section 65 notes under the heading "Sale when void and when voidable" and section 52 notes under the heading "Decree against wrong person as heir and legal representative".
1034. Radha Prasad v Lal Saheb, 17 IA 150; Jungli Lall v Laddu Ram, (1919) 4 Pat LJ 240; Seshamma v Venkata, AIR 1924 Mad 713 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 235; Elisa v A Dass, AIR 1992 Mad 159.
1035. Deonandan v Janki Singh, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 314; Sri Chandra Chur v Mst Shyam, AIR 1932 Pat 261 : (1932) 11 Pat 445.
1036. Chandra Chur v Shyam, AIR 1932 Pat 261 : (1932) 11 Pat 445.
1037. Purshottam v Rajbai, (1910) 34 Bom 142; Bhagwan Das v Jugal Kishore, (1920) 42 All 570; Shankar v Hiralal, (1931) 33 Bom LR 585; Premabai v Juvandas, AIR 1936 Bom 546 : (1936) 38 Bom LR 977; Komalavalli v Kunju Pillai, AIR 1954 TC 26. See O XXII, rule 12.
1038. Nachiamma v Subramanian, AIR 1928 Rang 40 : (1928) 5 Rang 775.
1039. Kanchamalai v Shahaji, AIR 1936 Mad 205 (FB) : (1936) 59 Mad 461.
1040. Natesa Sastri v Sundaram Chettiar, AIR 1953 Mad 623.

[s 50.9] To which Court Application Should be Made

The application to execute the decree against a legal representative of the judgment-debtor should be made to the court which passed the decree.[1041] But this is only a question of procedure and if the court to which the decree is sent for execution, makes the order that is an irregularity which may be waived.[1042] The appellate court ought not to interfere where the merits of the case are not affected by the irregularity.[1043] Section 50 of the CPC deals with execution of decrees of all kinds including that of permanent injunction. Further, the court stated that section 50 of the CPC would also be attracted read with O XXI, rule 32 of the CPC.[1044]

[s 50.10] Death of Legal Representative

If the legal representative of a judgment-debtor against whom execution has been taken out under this section dies before the decree has been fully executed, the decree-holder may execute the decree against the legal representative, of that legal representative to the extent of the assets of the original judgment-debtor that may have come into his hands.[1045]

[s 50.11] Legal Representative bound by Previous Proceedings

The legal representative is bound by orders passed in execution against the deceased judgment-debtor. A obtains a decree against B. A then transfers the decree to C. C applies for execution against B, and an order is made for execution after notice to A and B as provided by D as, rule 16, [Code of Civil Procedure, 1882], section 232. A then dies, and his legal representative D is brought on the record under this section. The order for execution having been passed in A's lifetime, D cannot object to execution on the ground that the transfer to C was fraudulent.[1046]

[s 50.12] Decree for Injunction

An injunction obtained against a defendant, restraining him from obstructing plaintiff's ancient rights, may, on the death of the defendant, be enforced under this section, against his son as his legal representative, by procedure under O XXI, rule 32.[1047] Similarly, a decree for an injunction against a manager and representative of a joint Hindu family can be enforced after his death against a son who represents the joint family.[1048] But such an injunction cannot be enforced under this section against a purchaser of the property from the defendant, for an

---

1041. Hirachand v Kasturchand, (1894) 18 Bom 224; Seth Shapurji v Shankur, (1895) 17 All 431; Swaminatha v Vaidyanath, (1905) 28 Mad 466; Sham Lal v Modhusudam, (1895) 22 Cal 558; Begam v Bulaqi Shah, AIR 1926 Lah 34; Manjulabai v Pandurang, AIR 1933 Bom 215 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 443; Official Trustee v Basdeo Bhagat, AIR 1937 Pat 239; Damodarlalji v Basant Lal, AIR 1952 Pat 333 : (1948) 27 Pat 848; Prasadi v Gulam, AIR 1951 Pat 618.
1042. Jang Bahadur v Bank of Upper India, AIR 1928 PC 162 : 55 IA 227; Sham Lal v Madhusudan, (1895) 22 Cal 558; Sri Chandra Chur v Shyam, AIR 1932 Pat 261 : (1932) 11 Pat 445; Mathu Karuppan v Shellani Achi, AIR 1938 Rang 385 : (1938) Rang 335; Punjab Co-op Bank v Bikramlal, AIR 1959 Punj 71 : (1958) Punj 2430; SB Mills v UOI, AIR 1965 Pat 52 : (1964) BLJR 212.
1043. Debendra Nath v GA Aratoon, AIR 1941 Pat 139; Srimathi Nilawwa v Virupaxappa, AIR 1959 Mys 99.
1044. Ramesh Kumar v Anuj Kumar, C.R. No. 67/2019, decided on 7 September 2019 (High Court of Himachal Pradesh, Shimla).
1045. Jafri Begam v Saira Bibi, (1900) 22 All 367; Raghu Mandala Kasibabu v SBI, AIR 1999 Ori 160.
1046. Mulchand v Chhagan, (1886) 10 Bom 74; Liladhar v Chaturbhuj, (1899) 21 All 277.
1047. Sakarlal v Parvatibai, (1902) 26 Bom 283; Amritlal v Kantilal, AIR 1931 Bom 280 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 266. Code of Civil Procedure 1882, section 260.
1048. Ganesh v Narayan, AIR 1931 Bom 484 : (1931) 55 Bom 709.

injunction does not run with the land. The remedy of the decree-holder is to bring a fresh suit for an injunction against the purchaser,[1049] when the decree is one restraining the owner of the property from blasting rocks in his property on a finding that such blasting would injuriously affect the adjacent property of the decree-holder. When once a decree is passed, it is obvious that the defendant in the suit, judgment-debtor, would be precluded from carrying on blasting operation in his property. To say that when he is succeeded by the others, they would not be bound by the restrain relating to the enjoyment of the particular property is to derogate from the principle of the public policy that there shall be no second litigation in respect of the same right and the same property. It cannot be the policy of law that every time an assignment of the decree schedule property take place, the decree-holder should institute a fresh suit against the assignee, so as to prevent them from disobeying the decree obtained by the decree-holder against the original owner of the property.[1050] The Bombay High Court has held that an injunction can be enforced against a person who has purchased while execution proceedings are pending, by virtue of the doctrine of lis pendens.[1051]

In execution of a decree for perpetual injunction, the liability of the legal representatives of the judgment-debtors is limited to the extent of interference which was restrained through such decree. It is only such legal representatives who defy the decree that can be proceeded against.[1052]

In Muthukaruppa Pillai v Ganesan,[1053] a question arose with respect to executability of a decree for injunction where the plaintiff had filed a suit for restraining the defendant-appellant from interfering with her rights as Hakdar and Pujari. The Supreme Court laid down that the legal representatives of decree holder can execute decree for permanent injunction relating to the property or right which is heritable and partible. In such situations, it would be open to the decree holder to execute decree against the successor of interest of judgment-debtor also.

In a subsequent case, the question before the Supreme Court was executability of decree for permanent injunction against the legal representatives of judgment-debtor. Relying on Muthukaruppa Pillai v Ganesan,[1054] it was held that the executing court could execute the decree of perpetual injunction against the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor. The court held that the right in a property which is heritable and partible would enure not only to the benefit of the legal heir of decree-holders but also would bind the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor. It also held that when a judgment-debtor dies before the decree has been satisfied, it can be executed against legal representatives. Section 50 is not confined to a particular kind of decree. Decree for injunction can also be executed against legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor. The maxim "actio personalis moritur cum persona"(a personal right of action dies with the person)is limited to certain class of cases and when the right litigated upon is heritable, the decree would not normally abate and can be enforced by LRs of decree-holder and against the judgment-debtor or his legal representatives. It was further held that it would be against the public policy to ask the decree-holder to 1049. Dayashbai v Bapalal, (1902) 26 Bom 140; Vithal v Sakharam, (1899) 1 Bom LR 854; Jamsetji v Hari Dayal, (1908) 32 Bom 181.

---

1050. Chothy Theyyathan v John Thomas, AIR 1997 Ker 249. See notes to section 47, "Representatives No (6)—Purchaser of Property".
1051. Krishnabai v Savlaram, AIR 1927 Bom 93 : (1927) 51 Bom 37.
1052. Kalpuri Ellamma v Nellutla Venkata Lakshmi, 2008 (72) All Ind Cas 669.
1053. Muthukaruppa Pillai v Ganesan, (1995) Supp 3 SCC 69.
1054. Muthukaruppa Pillai v Ganesan, (1995) Supp 3 SCC 69.

litigate again against the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor when the cause and injunction survives.[1055]

[s 50.13] Application of this Section to Orders

This section is applicable to orders which are executable as decrees.[1056]

Procedure in execution

[S 51] Powers of Court to enforce execution.—Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the Court may, on the application of the decree-holder, order execution of the decree—

(a) by delivery of any property specifically decreed;

(b) by attachment and sale or by the sale without attachment of any property;

(c) by arrest and detention in prison; [1057][for such period not exceeding the period specified in section 58, where arrest and detention is permissible under that section];

(d) by appointing a receiver; or

(e) in such other manner as the nature of the relief granted may require:

[1058][Provided that, where the decree is for the payment of money, execution by detention in prison shall not be ordered unless, after giving the judgment-debtor an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be committed to prison, the Court, for reasons recorded in writing, is satisfied—

(a) that the judgment-debtor, with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the execution of the decree,—

(i) is likely to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(ii) has, after the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed, dishonestly transferred, concealed, or removed any part of his property, or committed any other act of bad faith in relation to his property, or

(b) that the judgment-debtor has, or has had since the date of the decree, the means to pay the amount of the decree or some substantial part thereof and refuses or neglects or has refused or neglected to pay the same, or

(c) that the decree is for a sum for which the judgment-debtor was bound in a fiduciary capacity to account.

Explanation.—In the calculation of the means of the judgment-debtor for the purposes of clause (b), there shall be left out of account any property which, by or under any law or custom having the force of law for the time being in force, is exempt from attachment in execution of the decree.]

1055. Prabhakara Adiga v Gowri, AIR 2017 SC 1061 : (2017) 4 SCC 97 : 2017 (3) Scale 32.
1056. Abdul Fatha v Mohd Jabbar, (1956) 2 Mad LJ 475.
1057. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 21 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1058. Inserted by Act 21 of 1936, section 2.

SYNOPSIS

[s 51.1]	State Amendment	816
[s 51.2]	High Court Amendment	816
[s 51.3]	Choice of Appropriate Mode of Execution	816
[s 51.4]	Constitutionality	817
[s 51.5]	Enforcing Decree and its Satisfaction: Distinction	817
[s 51.6]	Execution of Decree —Writ not Proper Remedy	818
[s 51.7]	Simultaneous Execution	818
[s 51.8]	Section 51, Clause (B)	819
[s 51.9]	Clause (C)—Arrest and Detention	819
[s 51.10]	Arrest of Guarantor	820
[s 51.11]	Clause (D)	821
[s 51.12]	Receiver in Execution Proceedings	821
[s 51.13]	Receiver of Properties Outside the Local Jurisdiction	823
[s 51.14]	Receiver of Future Maintenance	823
[s 51.15]	Appeal	823
[s 51.16]	Clause (E)	823
[s 51.17]	Decree for the Payment of Money	824
[s 51.18]	Lease of the Judgment-debtor's Land	824
[s 51.19]	Proviso	824
[s 51.20]	Explanation	829
[s 51.21]	Operation of Section Subject to any Special or Local Law	830
[s 51.22]	Application of the section to Orders passed under the Banking Companies Act, 1949	830
[s 51.23]	State Amendment in Uttar Pradesh	831

[s 51.1] State Amendment

Uttar Pradesh Amendment.—After clause (b) the following clause (bb) was added by Uttar Pradesh Act 24 of 1954:—

"(bb) by transfer other than sale, by attachment or without attachment of any property".

[s 51.2] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—In clause (b) omit the words "or by sale without attachment" between the words "sale" and "of any".

In the proviso omit the words "for reasons recorded in writing" after the words "the Court" and before the words "is satisfied".

Add the proviso—

"Provided also that the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta shall have no power to order execution of a decree by attachment and sale of immovable property or by appointing a receiver in respect of such property." vide Cal. Gaz., Pt. I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 51.3] Choice of Appropriate Mode of Execution

The various modes mentioned in this section are not open to the executing court in every case. The court ought to be guided by the procedure laid down in the CPC and must resort to the method appropriate to each case.[1059] It is for the decree-holder to choose in which of the several modes mentioned in the section, will he execute the decree, but his option is subject to the provisions of the CPC and to the discretion of the court.[1060] If the mode of procedure provided by the law at the time when execution is sought is different from that prevalent when the decree was passed, by reason of an alteration effected in the law in the meantime, the altered law must be followed. The decree-holder's right to execute the decree under section 51

1059. Anandi Lal v Ram Sarup, AIR 1936 All 495 (FB) : (1936) All LJ 605; Munni Lal v Nawal Kishore, AIR 1961 P&H 547; Ram Lochan v Mahadeo Prasad, AIR 1970 All 544 : (1970) All LJ 687.
1060. Umakant v Renwick & Co Ltd, AIR 1953 Cal 717 : 58 Cal WN 683.

is subject to the rules for the time being in force. Section 51 itself provides that it is subject to the prescribed conditions and limitations.[1061]

The Andhra Pradesh High Court has held that the decree, be it of any court, including the Apex Court, can be subjected to execution and enforced by different modes, may be under the provisions of O XXI, rule 35 or section 144 or section 151 of the CPC depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case, and the imperative need to give quietus to the litigation expeditiously and forever.[1062]

Section 51 of the CPC makes it explicit that arrest and detention of the judgment-debtor is one of the modes of execution of the decree. Once the decree-holder satisfies the court that the judgment-debtor has sufficient means but has neglected to discharge the debt, the court cannot dismiss the execution petition on the ground that the decree-holder has alternative remedy of getting properties of the judgment-debtor attached. The decree-holder can choose any of the modes available to him under section 51 of the CPC.[1063]

Under O XXI, rule 64 makes provision for sale of attached property, while rule 66 takes in cases covered by rule 64 and also decrees where attachment is not necessary. Therefore, the specific mention of attachment of property in rule 64 would not take away the application of rule 66 to decrees for execution of which no attachment is necessary.[1064]

[s 51.4] Constitutionality

Imprisonment of a judgment-debtor in execution cannot be ordered unless the conditions given in section 51 are satisfied. Hence, the section does not violate Article 21 of the Constitution of India.[1065]

[s 51.5] Enforcing Decree and its Satisfaction: Distinction

A distinction has to be drawn between the mode of enforcing decree on one hand and actual satisfaction thereof; sending a person to prison is a "mode of enforcement". It is not a mode of satisfaction of the decree. The whole purpose of detaining a person in civil prison is to compel a person liable to obey the mandate of a decree who refused to comply with the terms of the decree without satisfactory cause. The satisfaction is to be recorded as per the requirement of section 51 CPC. Merely because it appeared to the court that there is no possibility to satisfy the decree, is not equivalent to the "satisfaction" statutorily required under section 51 read with O XXI rule 37 of the CPC to be recorded by the court before proceeding to resort to arrest and detention of the judgment debtor.[1066] The purpose of sentencing him to prison is not to wipe out his liability of comply with the decree. A sentence of prison or detention of a person in civil prison, is not a substitute for compliance of the decree. It is not a mode of discharging or satisfying a decree. The compliance of the decree can only be sought by resorting to these penal actions. The liability or obligation flowing from the decree cannot be taken to have been discharged by detaining a person liable to comply with the decree, in prison. At the cost of

---

1061. Mahadev Prasad v Ram Lochan, AIR 1981 SC 416 : (1980) 4 SCC 354.
1062. Pentakota Krishna Bhagwan v Alla, AIR 2007 AP 2008 : 2007 (3) Andh LT 103.
1063. Gudiwada Munemma v Jawardhal, 2007 (1) Civil Court Cases 332 : 2006 (6)Andh LT 587.
1064. PK Kuruvilla v The Corp Bank, 2008 (1) Ker LT 604 (DB).
1065. Jolly George Varghese v Bank of Cochin, AIR 1980 SC 470 : (1980) 2 SCC 360 : (1980) 2 SCJ 358; Subhash Chand Jain v Central Bank of India, AIR 1999 MP 195.
1066. Mohinder Singh v Amrit Singh Zora Singh Merchants & Commission Agents, (2019) 196 Punj LR 689.

repetition, it may be stated that it is only a mode or method of implementation of a decree and/or mandate flowing therefrom. No other view is possible.[1067]

[s 51.6] Execution of Decree —Writ not Proper Remedy

Petition seeking writ directing respondent to give all assistance to petitioner in taking over management of institutions in pursuance of the decree of a civil court is not maintainable. A decree passed by the civil court must be passed in terms of the provisions contained in the CPC. The writ petition is not the appropriate remedy therefor.[1068]

[s 51.7] Simultaneous Execution

Simultaneous execution, both against the property and person of the judgment-debtor, is allowed under O XXI, rule 30.[1069] Under the CPC, there is no statutory provision against a number of execution proceedings continuing concurrently. Section 51 of the CPC gives an option to the creditor of enforcing the decree either against the person, or the property of the debtor; and nowhere has this been laid down that the prosecution against the person of the debtor shall not be allowed unless and until the decree-holder has exhausted his remedy against the property.[1070] For conditions and limitations as to arrest and detention, section 58, clause (c) of the operative part of this section has been amended so as to bring it in harmony with the limitations and conditions laid down now in section 58. But the court has discretion under O XXI, rule 21, to refuse simultaneous execution and to allow the decree-holder to avail himself of only one mode of execution at a time.[1071] The privy council has said that "the difficulties of a litigant in India begin when he has obtained a decree",[1072] and the court is not justified in refusing execution against the person on the ground that the decree-holder should first proceed against the property.[1073] But the Calcutta High Court has said that there may be circumstances which would justify such a refusal. Execution should be refused against the person when the decree-holder has a mortgage on the property of the judgment-debtor which would yield a large surplus. If realised in execution, but which prevents the judgment-debtor from raising money on the property.[1074] The court has power under this section, to order delivery of movable property and also to direct conditional attachment of other properties.[1075]

In Subrata Roy Sahara v UOI,[1076] the Apex Court dealt with the scope of sections 51, 55 and 58 that permit arrest and detention of a person to enforce compliance with court order imposing financial liability. The court stated:

> A perusal of Section 51 CPC leaves no room for any doubt that for the execution of a decree for payment of money an executing court may order the arrest and detention of the judgment-debtor. Section 55 CPC lays down the manner and modalities to be followed while executing an order of arrest or detention. A perusal of Section 58 CPC postulates the detention of a judgment-debtor for up to six weeks for the recovery of a meagre amount

---

1067. Yashodabai Ganesh Naik Gaunekar v Gopi Mukund Naik, AIR 2003 Bom 77.
1068. Swamy Atmananda v Swami Bodhananda, AIR 2005 SC 2227 : (2005) 3 SCC 734 : 2005 (4) Scale 116 : 2005 (11) JT SC 379.
1069. Venkappa v Lakshmikant, AIR 1956 Hyd 7 : (1955) ILR Hyd 797.
1070. Shyam Singh v Collector, District Hamirpur, (1993) Supp 1 SCC 693.
1071. AK Subramania v A Ponnuswami Chettiar, AIR 1957 Mad 777 : (1957) 1 Mad LJ 208.
1072. Court of Wards v Maharajah Coomar Ramaput, (1872) 14 Moo Ind App 605, p 612 : 17 WR 159 PC.
1073. Hargobind v Hakim Singh, AIR 1926 Lah 110 : (1926) 6 Lah 548.
1074. Mono Mohan v Upendra Mohan, AIR 1935 Cal 127 : (1935) 38 Cal WN 1085.
1075. Umakant v Renwick & Co, AIR 1953 Cal 717 : 58 Cal WN 683.
1076. Subrata Roy Sahara v UOI, AIR 2014 SC 3241 : (2014) 8 SCC 470 : 2014 (6) Scale 257.

of less than Rs 5000. Where the amount is in excess of Rs 5000, the provision postulates detention for up to three months. Interestingly, the first proviso to Section 58(1) CPC clearly brings out the purpose of the person's detention. It provides for the concerned person's release on the satisfaction of the money decree even before the duration for which he had been ordered to be detained. But the second proviso to Section 58(1) CPC provides that such an order of detention would not be revoked "without the order of the Court". Another interesting aspect pertaining to the detention of an individual for the execution of a money decree is contained in Section 58(2) CPC, which provides that a person who has been ordered to be arrested and detained (in the course of execution of a money decree) and has been released from jail, would not be treated as having been discharged from his debt. In other words, the detention of a judgment-debtor in prison (for the execution of a money decree), would not liberate/free him from the financial liability which he owes to the decree-holder. It is therefore apparent, from the provisions of CPC, that a court can order for the arrest and detention of a person, even for the enforcement of a paltry amount of Rs 2000 (and also for recovery of amounts in excess thereof).

[s 51.8] Section 51, Clause (B)

The principle underlying clause (b) of the section is that if the property sought to be attached is within the limits of the court's jurisdiction, the court can attach and sell the property. The fact that the place of business of the judgment-debtor company is outside its jurisdiction or that the dividend on its shares is payable only in a place outside its jurisdiction is not material.[1077] The words "attachment and sale" in the clause are to be read disjunctively.[1078] Therefore, attachment of the property is neither necessary nor an essential step in the process of realisation of the decretal amount by sale of the property.[1079] Accordingly, where property is sold without attachment or under an invalid attachment, it is only a case of irregularity, and the sale is not void.[1080]

[s 51.9] Clause (C)—Arrest and Detention

Section 51, CPC, provides that one of the modes of the execution of a decree is "arrest and detention" of the judgment-debtor in civil prison. The proviso to this section restricts the power of the executing court to direct the arrest and detention of the judgment debtor in execution of the decree for payment of money. The object of the proviso is to afford protection to indigent and honest debtors. Therefore, mere non-payment of the amount of the decree is not enough to send the judgment-debtor to prison. But if the conduct of the judgment-debtor is dishonest or contumacious, he is liable to be arrested and detained. The judgment-debtor is not protected if there is element of bad faith in his conduct. If he has the means to pay and if he still refuses or neglects to honour his obligation under the decree, he becomes liable to imprisonment under section 51, CPC. In short, honest judgment-debtors must be protected and dishonest ones should be punished.[1081]

On a combined reading of sections 51(c) and 58 of the CPC, it has been held, that in the execution of a decree of prohibitory injunction under O XXI, rule 32, the judgment-debtor cannot be detained in a civil prison for more than three months and he cannot be detained more than once. Even otherwise, the matter is left to the discretion of the court, and it would

---

1077. MAA Raoof v KG Lakshmipathi, AIR 1969 Mad 268 : (1968) 2 Mad LJ 34.
1078. Amulya Chandra Roy v Kumar Pasupati Nath Malia, AIR 1951 Cal 48 : 55 Cal WN 385 (FB); Narasingh Dutt v Ram Pratap, AIR 1961 All 436.
1079. Karnataka Bank v K. Shamanna, AIR 1972 Mys 321; Krishnamukhatal v Bhagwan, AIR 1974 Guj 1.
1080. Rahim Bux v Samlulla & Sons, AIR 1963 All 320.
1081. Prakash Bhagwani v Sammati Food Products Pvt Ltd Sagar, AIR 2002 MP 127.

be a sound exercise of discretion to treat the judgment-debtor on par with the other judgment-debtors and the detention cannot exceed the period of three months. In the instant case, the judgment-debtor had already been detained for a period of three months. The order of the court for his detention, till he obeyed the decree, was held to be contrary to the provisions of sections 51 and 58 of the CPC, read with O XXI, rule 32, besides being arbitrary.[1082] Before detention in prison can be ordered, the court must be satisfied that the judgment-debtor has or had, since the decree, the means to pay. Otherwise, the order may be vitiated by non-application of mind.[1083]

Mere inability to pay debt and satisfy the degree is no ground to detain the judgment-debtor in civil prison. Where there is attempt by the judgment-debtor to evade rigours of the decree by fraudulently seeking to transfer property to third party, issuance of warrant of arrest is proper.[1084] If proper procedure has followed as contemplated under the act before the passing of the arrest order, then the arrest order does not require any interference.[1085]

In a case of execution of recovery certificate under the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1961, where the respondents having means to pay, refused, and neglected to pay the decretal amount and did not even bother to reply to the notice of show-cause, the notice was made absolute and warrant of arrest directed to be issued against them.[1086]

Where an employee under suspension is paid subsistence allowance and accepts the same, it cannot be said that he was a man without means to pay the decretal amount. Therefore, having accepted to discharge his liability, if he has failed and neglected to do so knowingly and deliberately, the petition for his arrest is not liable to be dismissed.[1087]

When the judgment-debtor categorically disclosed in his counter-affidavit in the Execution Petition, about his salary particulars and expressed in unequivocal terms, his willingness to have his salary attached. This conduct cannot either be called as "mala fide" or "deliberate refusal" or "negligence" on the part of the judgment-debtor.

If from the counter-affidavit filed by the judgment-debtor, it could be seen that he has been drawing substantial amount towards his salary, the same can be attached for the realisation of the decretal amount, instead of resorting to an extreme step of ordering the arrest of the judgment-debtor.[1088]

[s 51.10] Arrest of Guarantor

Where the petitioner, as a guarantor, accepted the terms and conditions of loan granted to the principal borrower and suffered a composite decree, he could not contend that the judgment-debtor/principal borrower should be directed to sell mortgaged property first and for recovery of balance amount, if any, to proceed against principal borrower and guarantor. the evidence showed that despite having means the petitioner/guarantor evaded payment of 1082. Dodha Narayana v Velli Reddemma, AIR 1990 AP 147.

---

1083. Pundlik v Maharastra State Finance Corp, AIR 1992 Bom 48.
1084. Jagdish Prasad Sharma v Standard Brands Ltd, (2006) 135 DLT 608 : 2007 (50) All Ind Cas 771.
1085. G-Tech Stone Ltd v BFIL Finance Ltd, 2020 (4) CTC 770 : (2020) 3 Mad LJ 845 : LNIND 2019 MAD 8954; see also, Rupesh v Sardar, M.P. No. 460/2020, decided on 18 February 2020. (Madhya Pradesh High Court (Indore Bench)).
1086. Greater Bombay Co-op Bank v Satguru Construction, 2007 (6) AIR Bom R 447 : 2007 (3) Bom CR 707.
1087. Velraj v Muthiah, AIR 2008 Mad 239 : (2008) 5 Mad LJ 1307 (Madurai Bench).
1088. K Vijayakumar v N Gururaja Rao, AIR 2004 AP 435.

decretal amount, so the order directing arrest of petitioner or guarantor cannot be said to be without jurisdiction.[1089]

[s 51.11] Clause (D)

Refusal or neglect envisages capacity to pay but deliberate non-payment, merely because judgment-debtor possesses immovable property, order of detention in civil prison cannot be made for his failure to pay.

It is open to the decree-holder to file a petition for attachment and sale of the immovable property. The decree-holder, in this case, has not taken recourse to those provisions. It is obvious that he is utilising the provisions of O XXI, rule 38, of the CPC merely as a lever to force payment without taking recourse to the proceedings for attachment and sale of the immovable property. The petition appears to be wholly mala fide.[1090]

[s 51.12] Receiver in Execution Proceedings

The appointment of a receiver in execution proceedings is a form of equitable relief which is granted on the ground that there is no effective remedy by execution at law.[1091] Such a receiver has all the powers under O XL, rule 1. The effect of the appointment of a receiver is to prevent the judgment-debtor from collecting amounts due from the garnishee. Payment made by the garnishee to the judgment-debtor would not operate as a discharge and he would still continue to be liable to pay to the receiver. Where the decree-holder is appointed as the receiver he collects the debts not as his own money, but as the officer of the court. Therefore, he cannot appropriate that money towards money due to him by the judgment-debtor;[1092] but this should not be resorted to, in order to circumvent a specific legal bar. So, an order appointing a receiver in respect of the provident fund of a railway employee was discharged.[1093] The Supreme Court has now held that the provident fund standing to the credit of a retired government servant cannot be attached in view of section 2(a) of the Provident Fund Act, 1925, nor a receiver appointed for the same.[1094] and likewise, it has been held that when there is a legal bar to the attachment of a property, as for example, the salary of a private employee before it becomes payable, it cannot be got over by the appointment of a receiver.[1095] No proceedings, by way of attachment or appointment of a receiver, can be taken against properties which vest in the Custodian of Evacuee Property as the same is prohibited by section 17 of the Evacuee Properties Act, 1950.[1096] The appointment of a receiver in execution is, therefore, not a matter of right, and a proper case must be made out, to justify the exercise by the court, of its discretion to make the appointment.[1097] The 1089. Ch Sankara Reddy v Andhra Bank, AIR 2006 AP 319.

---

1090. Ganesa Nadra v K Chellathai Ammal, AIR 1989 Mad LJ 8.
1091. Pursattamdas v Baijnath, AIR 1941 Cal 240; Re Shephard, Atkins v Shephard, (1889) 43 Ch D 131; Saileshwar Lakhaiyar v Kanti Kumar Sinha, AIR 1965 Pat 238; Dhirendra Nath Sen v Smt Santasila Debi, AIR, 1969 Cal 406.
1092. Arumugha Thevar v Palaniammal, AIR 1973 Mad 426 : (1973) 1 Mad LJ 111.
1093. Dominion of India v Ashutosh Das, AIR 1950 Cal 212.
1094. The UOI v Hira Devi, AIR 1952 SC 227 : (1952) SCR 765 : 1952 SCJ 326.
1095. Vasant Shamrao Khot v Jagannath Ganesh Jambotkar, AIR 1955 Bom 450 : (1955) ILR Bom 589 : 57 Bom LR 416.
1096. Custodian of Evacuee Property v Simla Banking and Industries Co, AIR 1951 P&H 434 : (1951) ILR Punj 306; Abdul Kaliq Khan v Custodian of Evacuee Property, AIR 1954 Hyd 674.
1097. Pramatha Nath Malia v HV Low And Co, AIR 1930 Cal 502 : (1930) 57 Cal 964; Hemendra Nath Roy Chowdhury v Prokash Chandra Ghosh, AIR 1932 Cal 189 : (1932) 59 Cal 205.

discretion is regulated by the provisions of O XL, rule 1, and clause (a) of that rule has been altered to allow the court to appoint a receiver after decree.[1098] The court must be satisfied that the appointment of a receiver is likely to benefit both—the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor—rather than a sale of the attached property, and for this reason, a receiver has been appointed to realise an attached decree;[1099] to realise a debt attached in execution of a decree;[1100] to collect the rents of an attached property;[1101] and to realise a decree for maintenance charged upon immovable property.[1102] The court can, on the application of the decree-holder of a decree on a simple mortgage, appoint a receiver for collecting the rents and profits from the hypothecation for the benefit of the decree-holder.[1103] Again, the court must be satisfied that the decree is likely to be realised within a reasonable time from the attached properties so that the judgment-debtor may not be burdened with property while he is deprived of the enjoyment of it.[1104]

Execution of decree by appointing a court receiver is a mode of execution provided in section 51. A receiver cannot be appointed just for the asking. It is within the discretion of the court and this discretion has to be judiciously exercised in a fit case. No decree-holder can transfer his responsibility to have the decree executed upon the shoulders of a court officer for no reason whatsoever.[1105]

In Ma Mya v Ma Mi Kye,[1106] a third share of certain promissory notes had to be realised in execution and the Privy Council said that the right method of working out the decree was by the appointment of a receiver. Again, in Nawab Bahadur v Kernanai Bank,[1107] the Privy Council upheld the appointment of a receiver to collect the rents and profits of properties which had been settled upon the Nawab of Murshedabad and his lineal descendants by the Murshedabad Act 15 of 1891, although the receiver was liable to be superseded by the Secretary of State in exercise of a power reserved under the Act to apply the rents and profits for the maintenance of the position and dignity of the Nawab. It has been held that even if property is not liable to be attached and sold by reason of a section in a statute, a receiver can be appointed to liquidate a decree from the profits of the property.[1108]

The appointment of a receiver to take charge of the, judgment-debtor's property is an exceptional remedy and when there is admittedly ample property of the judgment-debtor available for satisfaction of the decree, there is no good reason to appoint a receiver. Besides, when execution proceedings are to be transferred to the collector, a receiver cannot be appointed.[1109]

1098. Shambhu Nath v Balmukund Dikshit, AIR 1931 Oudh LJ 307 : (1932) 7 Luck 203; Hemendra Nath Roy Chowdhury v Prokash Chandra Ghosh, AIR 1932 Cal 189 : (1932) 59 Cal 205.
1099. Pratap Singh v Delhi and London Bank, (1908) 30 All 393.
1100. Toolsa Goolal v John Antone (1887) ILR 11 Bom 448.
1101. Maung Thein v SA Firm, AIR 1925 Rang 318 : (1925) 3 Rang 235.
1102. Hemanginee Dassee v Kumode Chander Dass, (1899) 26 Cal 441.
1103. Onkarlal Radha Kishan v VS Rampal, AIR 1961 Raj 179 : (1961) 1 Raj 9.
1104. Hemendra Nath v Prokash Chandra, AIR 1932 Cal 189 : (1932) 59 Cal 205.
1105. Ge Countrywide Consumer v Ganesh Jagannath Thanekar, AIR 2008 Bom 4 : 2007 (3) All MR 526.
1106. Ma Mya v Ma Mi Kye, AIR 1929 PC 246 : (1929) 7 Rang 388.
1107. Nawab Bahadur v Kernanai Bank, AIR 1931 PC 160 : 58 IA 215.
1108. Manohar Singh v Hakim Riazuddin, AIR 1934 Nag 605; Mohammad Sharif v Bougleon, AIR 1938 Lah 458.
1109. Firm Narain Dass, Gulab Singh v Patiala Durbar, AIR 1940 Lah 345.

[s 51.13] Receiver of Properties Outside the Local Jurisdiction

The court may appoint a receiver of property outside the local limits of its territorial jurisdiction. The principle by which the action of a court in effecting sales in execution is confined to property situate within its territorial jurisdiction is prima facie not applicable to a sale by a receiver which need not necessarily be a sale by public auction as distinct from private treaty.[1110] If, according to the law of an Indian state, it was not shown that the son could not be made liable for the debts of his father, in respect of property in his hands, liable under Hindu law for the debts of the father, a receiver can be appointed of the property in the state. Though the court cannot, in such a case, empower the receiver to take possession of the property, it can direct the son in possession of the property, to hand over the property to the receiver.[1111]

[s 51.14] Receiver of Future Maintenance

The Privy Council has held that though a right to future maintenance cannot be attached [section 60(1) (n)], the court may, in a proper case, eg, where provision is made for the maintenance of the judgment-debtor out of the income of villages, appoint a receiver for realising the rents, and paying there out to the judgment-debtor a sum sufficient for his maintenance and the balance to the decree-holder.[1112] The Bombay High Court doubts whether the property in the Privy Council decision was really covered by the expression "a right of future maintenance" and holds that property which is, at law, unattachable cannot be realised by equitable execution.[1113]

The Madras High Court has followed the Privy Council decision and appointed a receiver of future maintenance;[1114] but in an earlier decision, it had held that a receiver could not be appointed, as a right of future maintenance cannot be attached.[1115] The Lahore High Court had, by way of equitable execution, appointed a receiver of a house in which the judgment-debtor had a right of residence, though he had no power to transfer the same.[1116]

[s 51.15] Appeal

A obtains a decree against B. By consent of parties, C is appointed receiver to take charge of certain properties for the execution of the decree. A then applies to the court for the discharge of C as receiver, but the application is refused. The order was one relating to "execution" within the meaning of section 47, and was therefore, then appealable.[1117] An order appointing a receiver in execution is one falling in substance within O XL, rule 1, and is as such appealable under O XLIII, rule 1(s).[1118]

[s 51.16] Clause (E)

This is a residuary clause and comes into play only when the decree cannot be executed in the modes provided in clauses (a)–(d).[1119] But when the property is attachable, the court,

---

1110. Pramatha Nath Malia v HV Low and Co, AIR 1931 Cal 174.
1111. Sunder Singh v Lala Ganga Ram, AIR 1938 Lah 93 : (1938) Lah 305.
1112. Rajindra Narain v Sundara Bibi, AIR 1925 PC 176 : 52 IA 262 : ILR 47 All 384.
1113. Secretary of State for India v Bai Somi, AIR 1933 Bom 350 : (1933) 57 Bom 507.
1114. Secretary of State v Venka, AIR 1926 Mad 565 : (1926) 49 Mad 567.
1115. Palikandy Mammad v Krishnan Nair, (1917) 40 Mad 302.
1116. Tikka Sant Singh v Sain Das Chawla, AIR 1937 Lah 433 (the house had been let to a tenant).
1117. Maharaja Sir Rameshwar Singh v Babu Hitendra Singh, (1918) 3 Pat LJ 513.
1118. Moideen Batcha v Sulaiman Sahib, AIR 1956 Mad 163.
1119. Murarilal v Nawal Kishore, AIR 1961 P&H 547.

under this clause, in the absence of any specific provision or form, can evolve a prohibitory order suitable to the nature of the clause.[1120] However, the clause does not authorise a court to read into the decree, a supplementary or alternative relief which is not in it, nor does it enable the court to give a mandatory direction to remove something which was not in existence at the time of the decree.[1121] Thus, where a decree in a suit for redemption directs the defendant-mortgagee to deliver to the plaintiff mortgagor the documents of title relating to the mortgaged property, but does not provide for an alternative relief, the court has no power under this clause to award damages in execution.[1122] This conclusion might have been arrived at on the simple ground that a court executing a decree has no power to add to the terms of a decree.

[s 51.17] Decree for the Payment of Money

A decree for the payment of arrears of alimony is a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this section.[1123]

[s 51.18] Lease of the Judgment-debtor's Land

The Allahabad High Court recently held that an executing court is bound by methods laid down in section 51, and that as the power to lease is not included in the power to sell property, lease can only be granted under conditions prescribed in section 72 and section 68 read with Schedule III of the CPC.[1124] The view of the Lahore High Court was to the contrary.[1125]

[s 51.19] Proviso

The proviso, together with the explanation added by section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1936 restricts the power of the court to direct the arrest of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree for the payment of money.

Its provisions are mandatory and must be strictly complied with. No order for arrest should be made unless the court is satisfied for reasons to be recorded in writing that the judgment-debtor should be committed to prison for one of the reasons set out therein.[1126] According to the Madras High Court, the inhibition contained in section 51, proviso, applies only to an order for detention in prison and not to order for arrest of the judgment-debtor. Therefore, where, in the proceedings for execution of a money decree, on the day the matter was called, the judgment-debtor was absent and the court acting on the affidavit filed by the decree-holder, found that the judgment-debtor had sufficient income, the order of the court directing arrest of the judgment-debtor would be valid.[1127]

1120. Champarun Sugar Co Ltd v Haridas Mundhra, AIR 1966 Cal 134 : 69 Cal WN 815.
1121. Evuru Venkata Subbayya v Srishti Veerayya, AIR 1969 AP 96.
1122. Marath Sivaraman Nair v Seshu Pattar, AIR 1922 Mad 299 : (1922) 42 Mad LJ 356 : (1922) 42 Mad LJ 365.
1123. Jessie Grant Khambatta v Mancherji CKhambatta, AIR 1941 Bom 17 : (1940) 42 Bom LR 945.
1124. Bhagwati Singh v L Kashi Narain, AIR 1938 All 290 (FB).
1125. Punjab National Bank Ltd v Shamsher Singh, AIR 1936 Lah 696; Datar Kaur v Ram Rattan, AIR 1920 Lah 456 (FB) : (1920) 1 Lah 192.
1126. Parmanandaswami v Shunmugam Pillai, AIR 1949 Mad 822 : 1949 Mad WN 194; SK Kuttalalingam Pillai v SVN Chinnakannu Pillai, AIR 1952 Mad 18 : (1951) 2 Mad LJ 588; Bansidhar v Pribhu Dayal, AIR 1954 Raj 1; Madhavan Nair, and Muthu Pathar v Mani Rao, AIR 1956 Mad 580; T Kunhiraman v Pootheri Illath Madhavan Nair, AIR 1957 Mad 761 : (1957) 2 Mad LJ 28; Paramananda v Maheshwar Panda, (1960) ILR Cut 33.
1127. KN Gangappa v AM Subramanya Mudaliar, AIR 1988 Mad 182.

In execution of a decree for prohibitory injunction, the judgment-debtor cannot be detained for more than three months and for more than one time. Section 58 applies to all decrees. This is evident from section 51 which uses the expression "execution of a decree". There is absolutely no reason to prescribe an unlimited period in the case of a decree for prohibitory injunction.[1128]

Under the provisions of O XXI, rule 30; O XXI, rule 32 and O XXXIX, rule 2A, for the breach of a decree for prohibitory injunction, the judgment-debtor cannot be detained for more than three months and for more than one time, according to the Andhra Pradesh High Court.[1129] The Andhra Pradesh High Court in the above case dissented from the Gujarat decision to the contrary. The Gujarat High Court had taken the view that in the case of decree for prohibitory injunction, no time limit is prescribed. According to the Andhra Pradesh High Court, however, section 51(c) read with section 58 lays down a limit of three months in the case of all decrees, subject to the further limits laid down in the section regarding money decree.[1130] The restrictions mentioned in section 51 of the CPC as to arrest and detention, apply also where the decree is against the husband for maintenance. In particular, the wife, decree-holder, has to satisfy the court that the husband has means to pay. The executing court can also act on the presumption that the husband has the means, but the husband should be given an opportunity to rebut the presumption.[1131]

In execution of a decree by arresting the judgment-debtor, the burden is on the decree-holder to show that the judgment-debtor was resorting to unfair means for avoiding payment. In a case, where the judgment-debtor of a money decree was once arrested and thereafter released after recording his undertaking about repayments, it was held that this fact itself was no ground for his re-arrest. It was also held that the fact that he was pursuing the profession of a doctor or that he was proprietor of a hospital, by itself does not ipso facto lead to an inference that he has sufficient means to pay decree-debt.[1132]

The Explanation to section 51 of the Code will show that in calculation of the means of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of clause (b) of the Proviso, any property which is exempted from attachment in execution of the decree either by law or by custom having the force of law shall be left out. Thus where execution of a money decree is sought by arrest and detention and salary is shown as the means of the judgment-debtor, an enquiry is necessary as to what is the attachable portion of the salary in terms of section 60 of the Code.[1133]

The enquiry prescribed under O XXI, rule 40(1) of the Code is not an empty formality. Mandatory duty is cast upon the decree-holder to establish as to incapacity of the judgment-debtor to pay the decretal amount and to establish intentional evasion to satisfy the decree. Acceptance of affidavit of the decree-holder in preference to objection of judgment-debtor for issuance of warrant of arrest is erroneous.[1134]

The object of detaining a judgment-debtor in a civil prison is not to punish him for any crime but for enabling the decree-holder to realise the money decreed in his favour, and for the purpose of achieving this alone, the conditions in the proviso have been formulated. It is some contumacious conduct on the part of the judgment-debtor and not mere inability to pay,

---

1128. Dodla Narayana v Velti Reddemma, AIR 1990 AP 147.
1129. Dodla Narayana v Velti Reddemma, AIR 1990 AP 147, p 151, para 7.
1130. Prabhat Bai v Aravind Kumar, AIR 1987 Guj 160.
1131. Pankaj Mahakud v Tara Mahakud, AIR 1992 Ori 199.
1132. Tamil Nadu Mereantile Bank v N Poulose, (2007) 1 Ker LJ 238.
1133. S Balamurli v K Vikramanunni, AIR 2007 Ker 280 : (2007) 3 Ker LJ 112.
1134. BS Ashok v Investment Trust of India Ltd, 2010 (2) AIR Kar R 396.

which renders him liable to be arrested. Though at a particular point of time the conditions of the proviso might have been satisfied, yet if the order passed by the court has not been taken advantage of or not given effect to within a reasonable time, the position of the judgment-debtor might so change that the conditions set out in the proviso would be considered as no longer satisfied.[1135] The conditions in the proviso are a mandate to the court and are intended to protect debtors who cannot pay for reasons beyond their control. Whether the judgment-debtor appears or not, the court must satisfy itself whether materials on record bring the case within any of the clauses of the proviso;[1136] but it has also been held that the conditions as to the existence of the grounds specified in the proviso and the court, recording its reasons, apply not to an order for arrest but to an order for detention in prison which represents a later and a different stage in the proceedings.[1137] Under the new proviso, an arrest cannot be ordered unless there has been some contumacious conduct on the part of the judgment-debtor. Mere inability to pay does not justify an arrest.[1138] Where the judgment-debtor having other claims to meet, utilised the money for satisfying them, he cannot be held to have neglected to pay the same to the decree-holder.[1139]

According to the Madras High Court, before making an order for the arrest and detention of judgment-debtor, the court should, in suitable cases first order payment by instalments.[1140] After hearing the judgment-debtor, the court must be satisfied that the judgment-debtor was acting dishonestly or with bad faith. Clause (b) of the proviso to section 51 deals with a situation where a judgment-debtor, having the means to pay the amount of the decree or some substantial part thereof, refuses or neglects to pay the same. By means of explanation to the proviso, property which cannot legally be attached in execution of a decree, is directed to be counted out, for the purpose of ascertaining the means or capacity of the judgment-debtor, to pay the amount of the decree. Section 51 does not authorise the execution of money decree by arrest of the judgment-debtor, except where the judgment-debtor acts in bad faith. There can be no legal or constitutional objection for execution of a decree by arrest and detention of an individual judgment-debtor, who deliberately refuses or neglects to pay a decretal amount while possessing the capacity to pay.[1141] An order for arrest cannot be passed, merely on the allegation that the income of the judgment-debtor was rupees seventy thousand, when there is no supporting proof on the record, of such income. Where the judgment-debtor is in a position to pay the amount in instalments, such a course should be adopted by the court before making an order of committal to prison on the first application. The mere fact that the judgment-debtor pays by instalments, does not mean that he has the means to pay the entire amount immediately. Similarly, the mere fact that he possesses immovable property, does not justify an order of detention in civil prison on his refusal to pay.[1142] Judgment-debtor was 1135. Gopichand v Brahmo Devi, AIR 1968 Del 101 : (1967) 69 Punj LR 328; but see also Ulahannan Job v The Prudential Trust, Vaikom, AIR 1964 Ker 16 : (1964) 2 Ker 200.

---

1136. Jogendra Missir v Ramnandan Singh, AIR 1968 Pat 218 : 46 ILR Pat 1142.
1137. Pattaramaiah v Haji Ibrahim Essack & Sons, AIR 1959 Mys 94; dissenting from T Kunhiraman v Poothen Illath Madhavan Nair, AIR 1957 Mad 761 : (1957) 2 Mad LJ 28; Madhusudan Prabhakar Chitale v Trimbak Vyankatesh Joshi, AIR 1961 Bom 23 : (1960) ILR Bom 523 : 62 Bom LR 599; N Ramachandra Iyer v Thomas Mathai, AIR 1966 Ker 65; WM Singh v A Debota, AIR 1973 Gau 84 : (1973) Assam LR 104; N Mudalidar v PJAM & Co, AIR 1972 Mad 292; PG Ranganatha Padayachi v The Mayavaram Financial, AIR 1974 Mad 1.
1138. Prabhu Dayal v Bhondu Mal, AIR 1938 Lah 692.
1139. Ch Harpal Singh v Lala Hira Lal, AIR 1955 All 402.
1140. VP Madhavan Nambiar v Chaldean Syrian Bank Ltd, AIR 1955 Mad 409; approved in V Ganesa Nadar v K Chellathai Ammal, AIR 1989 Mad 8.
1141. JJ Shankar v WM Ismail, AIR 1981 AP 336.
1142. V Ganesa Nadar v K Chellathi Ammal, AIR 1989 Mad 8.

working in a bank and was having land in which he was raising tobacco crop. He purchased cloth on credit. There was failure to pay the amount of credit. Decree against him can be enforced by directing arrest and detention in civil prison of judgment-debtor, if he neglects or refuses to pay the decretal amount without any reasonable explanation. Every judgment-debtor is not immune from arrest. There can be no legal or constitutional objection for execution of a decree by arrest and detention of an individual judgment-debtor who deliberately refuses or neglects to pay a decretal amount while possessing the capacity to pay.[1143] Simple default by the judgment-debtor, in payment of the decretal amount to the decree-holder, is not enough for the executing court to order his arrest. The decree-holder must prove that the judgment-debtor was having enough funds to pay the decretal amount.[1144] According to the Madras High Court, the court, before making an order for the arrest and detention of judgment-debtor, should in suitable cases, first order payment by instalments.[1145] Mere non-payment does not mean refusal or neglect to pay. "Refusal" implies that a request was made to the judgment-debtor at the time when he had the means to pay and the judgment-debtor declined to make any payment. "Neglect to pay" also connotes that when the judgment-debtor could have paid, he just omitted to pay, owing to his negligence or carelessness. It may be that the judgment-debtor may have had other claims to satisfy or more urgent necessities to meet. He cannot then be said to have neglected to pay.

Where the son and brother of the judgment-debtor filed a suit against him claiming certain property as their own and obtained an injunction staying its sale, it cannot be said that the judgment-debtor had obstructed the execution of the decree.[1146] The onus of proof is on the decree-holder to establish that the judgment-debtor has sufficient means to pay the debt.[1147] Where the judgment-debtor is in possession of a house which he owns, the normal presumption is that he is able to pay by sale or mortgage of that house. But there must be evidence to show that apart from his owning the house, he is in possession of it and is in a position to realise substantial cash by its sale, mortgage or other encumbrance.[1148] "Refusal" or "neglect" envisages capacity to pay, coupled with deliberate non-payment. Merely because judgment-debtor possesses immovable property, an order of detention in civil prison cannot be made for his failure to pay.[1149] A director of a company occupies a fiduciary position; so he can be arrested in execution of a decree which the company had obtained against him for loss caused by his negligence.[1150] In a proceeding instituted for the arrest of the guarantor in civil prison, the guarantor is not entitled to raise the plea that he has no means to pay the decree debt. Being the guarantor, he is in a fiduciary capacity to pay the account to the decree-holder, which is the first requirement of clause (c) of proviso to section 51. Every judgment-debtor, whether he is

---

1143. JJ Shankar v WM Ismail, AIR 1981 AP 336.
1144. KAlRmRm Alagappan v Rajaguru & Co, AIR 1985 Mad 353.
1145. VP Madhavan Nambiar v Chaldean Syrian Bank Ltd, AIR 1955 Mad 409; approved in V Ganesa Nadar v K Chellathai Ammal, AIR 1989 Mad 8.
1146. BMatha Gowder v MS Kada Gowder, AIR 1954 Mad 81; Paramananda v Maheshwar Panda, (1960) ILR Cut 33; Prahlad Dalsukhrai v Maganlal Muljibhai Tewar, AIR 1961 Bom 142.
1147. Atta Karim v Mt Bibi Habibai Soghra, AIR 1951 Pat 355; Jugal Kishore v Pralhad Rai, AIR 1939 Pat 22; RM Jassawala v Amulya Chandra Dutta, AIR 1940 All 494; Ch Harpal Singh v Lala Hira Lal, AIR 1955 All 402; Paramananda v Maheshwar Panda, (1960) ILR Cut 33; VP Madhavan Nambiar v Chaldean Syrian Bank Ltd, AIR 1955 Mad 409 : (1955) 2 Mad LJ 121, where it is observed that the question was not one of strict proof but of prima facie inference; but see IK Merchants Ltd v Indira Prakash Karnani, AIR 1973 Cal 306; Kesava Pillai Karunakaran Pillai v Ouseph Joseph, AIR 1977 Ker 27 : (1976) 2 Ker 92.
1148. VKS Sivam v Thirupathiswami, AIR 1972 Mad 9 : (1971) 2 Mad LJ 396.
1149. V Ganesa Nadar v K Chellathai Ammal, AIR 1989 Mad 8.
1150. MA Malik v VS Thiruvengadaswami, AIR 1950 Mad 208.

a principal debtor or a mere guarantor or a surety, has the said obligation to the decree-holder in accordance with the nature and circumstance in each case.[1151] Under section 51, proviso (c), where a decree is passed against a director of a company for loss caused by him as director (to the company), the director can be arrested, because he occupies a fiduciary position.[1152] A partner failing to pay money in his hands and received by him on account of partnership is not liable as a person acting in a fiduciary capacity. In Prem Ballabh v Mathura Datt,[1153] the respondent as the managing partner was liable to render accounts of the partnership assets in his hands. On taking of the accounts, it was found that he overdrew the partnership account, and a decree was passed against him. No fraud or clandestine dealing was alleged or proved. It was held that the decree was not for a sum which he was bound to account in a fiduciary capacity and therefore condition (c) of the proviso did not apply. Order for arrest without recording reasons, therefore, would be regarded as being without jurisdiction, even if made for the second time.[1154] It has been held that an order of committal to prison should not be made on the first application for execution and that the judgment-debtor should, in the first instance, be directed to pay the amount by instalments.[1155] For instances in which the judgment-debtor was held liable to be arrested on the ground that he was bound in a fiduciary capacity to pay the amount, see the cases noted below.[1156]

The words "fiduciary capacity" mentioned in proviso (c) to section 51, has not been defined in the Code or in the General Clauses Act or in Family Courts Act. The relationship between husband and wife can be described as fiduciary relationship. In execution of a money decree against husband, the husband stands in fiduciary capacity in relation to the wife, because the wife walks into the matrimonial home with cash, ornaments and articles belonging to her and entrusts the same to her husband.[1157] Relying on dictionaries, Law Lexicons and precedents to ascertain the precise scope of the expression "bound in a fiduciary capacity to account," the Division Bench of Kerala High Court observed as follows:

> 29. The above discussions lead us to the conclusion that husband and wife relationship can be held to be a fiduciary relationship. It also follows that in respect of cash, ornaments and articles brought by the wife to the matrimonial home and entrusted to the husband, he is bound in a fiduciary capacity to account to the wife whenever she makes a demand. Elements of trust are involved in such relationship and in the entrustment of cash/ ornaments/articles. We do not, in these circumstances, have any hesitation to agree that proviso (c) to s 51 of the CPC squarely applies and the pleas which may be available under cls (a) and (b) of s 51 of the CPC shall not be available to a judgment-debtor, if the case falls within cl (c).[1158]

When the decree for the payment of money is passed jointly and severally against two or more defendants, there is no question of one being a personal debtor and the other a surety. Both are equally liable for the entire amount and the decree-holder is entitled to realise the amount from any of them. If the decree-holder wants personal execution, and when his 1151. V Velayudhan v State Bank of India, AIR 1989 Ker 38.

---

1152. Tussidas Mundhra v Official Liquidator, AIR 1983 Cal 403; MA Malik v VS Thiruvengadaswami Mudaliar, AIR 1950 Mad 208 : (1949) 2 Mad LJ 604 followed.
1153. Prem Ballabh Khulbe v Mathura Datt Bhatt, AIR 1967 SC 1342.
1154. Kotha Venkatasubba Rao v Majeti Sreeramulu, (1948) 2 Mad LJ 648; Venkatasubba Rao v Sreeramulu, AIR 1949 Mad 470.
1155. VP Madhavan Nambiar v Chaldean Syrian Bank Ltd, AIR 1955 Mad 409 : (1955) 2 Mad LJ 121; Khemchandra v Budh Singh, AIR 1961 Raj 243 : (1960) Raj 1355.
1156. Ambadi v Balan, AIR 1959 Ker 273 : (1958) Ker LT 801; Prem Ballabh Khulbe v Mathura Datt Bhatt, 1967 AIR 1342 : 1967 SCR (2) 298; Mathura Dutt v Prem Ballabh, AIR 1961 All 19.
1157. Sunitha KK v AS Ramesh, AIR 2010 Ker 184 : 2010 (3) Ker LT 501 (DB).
1158. Sunitha KK v AS Ramesh, AIR 2010 Ker 184 : 2010 (3) Ker LT 501 (DB), p 191.

allegations for that purpose are denied, it is for him to satisfy the court, that conditions for ordering personal execution are there. When the person carries on a business, it does not automatically follow that the business is profitable and that the person carrying on the business has the means to satisfy the decree.[1159]

When the decree is for payment of money jointly and severally against two or more defendants, there is no question of one being a personal debtor and the other a surety. Both are equally liable for the entire amount and the decree-holder is entitled to realise the amount from any of them. It cannot be said that in a money decree, personal execution could be ordered against a person without affording him an opportunity to show cause why he should not be committed to the civil prison and when he shows cause, without the requisite satisfaction, simply on the ground that he is a surety. The execution court is concerned only with the liability under the decree and is to see whether personal execution could be had against them. It is the decree-holder who wants personal execution; when his allegations for that purpose are denied, it is for him to satisfy the court that conditions for ordering personal execution are there. What is required to be proved is that the judgment-debtors have, or had, since the date of the decree, the means or capacity to pay off decree amount or some substantial portion of it and they refused or neglected to pay. When a person carries on a business, it does not automatically follow that business is profitable and there are means.[1160] The fact that order for detention may not serve the purpose of realising the decretal money, would not be sufficient. The legislative intent is clear. The purpose was to act as deterrent to all others and to provide an absolute civil liability for those who were found guilty and a decree passed in respect of the money in fiduciary capacity.[1161]

In order to satisfy whether the judgment-debtor has got means to pay the decree amount, filing of affidavit alone is not sufficient. It has got to be proved by adducing evidence both orally and documentary. It is only on the basis of the documents filed and the oral evidence adduced, the court can come to the conclusion whether the judgment-debtor got the means to pay the decree amount or not.[1162] In a case, the executing court after issuing show cause, did not hold any inquiry as contemplated of clause (1) of rule 40 of O XXI nor has complied the conditions laid down in proviso to section 51, so as to record his reasons after its satisfaction for detaining or sending the judgment-debtor in civil prison. Therefore, the order passed without filing the mandatory provisions were not sustained, and were accordingly quashed.[1163]

[s 51.20] Explanation

As by reason of section 168A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, property of the judgment-debtor other than the defaulting tenure or holding cannot be attached and sold in execution of the rent decree, the value of such other property cannot be taken into account in estimating the means of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of determining the question as to whether the judgment-debtor can be arrested.[1164]

1159. D Viswanathan v The Karnataka Bank Ltd, AIR 1988 Ker 274.
1160. D Viswanathan v The Karnataka Bank Ltd, AIR 1988 Ker 274.
1161. Jolly George Verghese v The Bank of Cochin, 1980 AIR 470 : (1980) 2 SCC 360 : (1980) 2 SCR 2 913.
1162. P Azeez Ahmad v State Bank of India, AIR 1995 Mad 194.
1163. Subhash Chand Jain v Central Bank of India, AIR 1999 MP 195.
1164. Praful Chandra Ghosh v Naresh Chandra Bose, AIR 1946 Cal 498 : (1946) 50 Cal WN : (655) : 81 Cal LJ 302.

[s 51.21] Operation of Section Subject to any Special or Local Law

By virtue of section 4 of the CPC, this section must be read subject to any conditions or limitations which may be prescribed by any local or special law. Sections 58A and 59 of the Madras Estates (Abolition and Conversion into Ryotwari) Act, 1946, which ensure for the landholder, immunity from arrest, in execution proceedings are a special law, within the meaning of section 4 of the CPC, and have accordingly the effect of overriding this section.[1165] By virtue of section 17 of the Evacuee Property Act, as amended in 1951, the decree-holder is debarred from proceeding in any manner, against any property, declared as evacuee property or deemed to be such, in execution of a decree.[1166] Section 51 of the CPC is not applicable to issue of warrant of arrest under section 281 of Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950.[1167]

The Supreme Court has held that attachment of property made in an execution does not get determined when an order of stay is passed under section 4 of the Tamil Nadu Indebted Agriculturists (Temporary Relief) Act, 1975. The stay under the Act was only in relation to further proceedings in pursuance of the attachment, that is, sale of the attached property. It was held that sale of the attached property made during the period of stay is void.[1168]

Raveendran J speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case observed as follows:

> The execution application of the appellant was closed on 15-02-1975 in view of Section 4 of the Debt Relief Act staying execution against agriculturists. The stay of further proceedings in execution under section 4 of the Debt Relief Act was only for a specified limited period. The proviso to section 4 clearly implied that any attachment made in such stayed execution proceedings shall continue to be in affect, by providing that the Court will have to pass if necessary the orders for custody or preservation of the attached property during the pendency of the stay under the Debt Relief Act. Therefore the enactment of the Debt Relief Act did not determine the attachment. What was stayed or kept in abeyance during the period when the statutory stay of execution operated, was not the attachment, but the further proceedings in pursuance of the attachment, that is, sale of the attached property. On the expiry of the moratorium period under the Debt Relief Act on 17-10-1979, the decree holder became entitled to continue the execution by proceeding with the sale.[1169]

[s 51.22] Application of the section to Orders passed under the Banking Companies Act, 1949

Under section 45H of Banking Companies Act, 1949, the high court has power to execute an order passed under that Act, as if it were a decree, in the modes prescribed in this section.[1170] The bank account of the judgment-debtor was attached by the executing court. The order was passed on the assumption of an erroneous entry in the bank account, showing credit in the account of judgment-debtor, while in fact there was no such amount. The erroneous entry was corrected by the bank when detected. In such circumstances, the order of the executing court to the bank to pay the decretal amount is not sustainable as the decree is against the judgment-debtor and not the bank.[1171]

1165. Seetharama Rao v Raja Kumar, AIR 1961 AP 399.
1166. Abdul Kaliq Khan v Custodian of Evacuee Property, AIR 1954 Hyd 674.
1167. TN Mathur v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1993) Supp 1 SCC 722; Ram Narain Aggarwal v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1983) 4 SCC 276.
1168. CS Mani(Dead) By Lr v B Chinnasamy, AIR 2010 SC 3600 : (2010) 9 SCC 513.
1169. CS Mani(Dead) By Lr v B Chinnasamy, AIR 2010 SC 3600, p 3604 : (2010) 9 SCC 513.
1170. Dhakuria Banking Corp Ltd v Sm Surabala Debi, AIR 1953 Cal 610.
1171. Indian Overseas Bank v Darbara Singh, (1997) 11 SCC 338.

[s 51.23] State Amendment in Uttar Pradesh

In section 51, after clause (b), the following shall be added as a new clause (bb):

"(bb) by transfer other than sale, by attachment or without attachment of any property."[1172]

[S 52] Enforcement of decree against legal representative.—(1) Where a decree is passed against a party as the legal representative of a deceased person, and the decree is for the payment of money out of the property of the deceased, it may be executed by the attachment and sale of any such property.

(2) Where no such property remains in the possession of the judgment-debtor and he fails to satisfy the Court that he has duly applied such property of the deceased as is proved to have come into his possession, the decree may be executed against the judgment-debtor to the extent of the property in respect of which he has failed so to satisfy the Court in the same manner as if the decree had been against him personally.

SYNOPSIS

[s 52.1]	Scope of the Section	831	[s 52.6]	Out of the property of the deceased	834
[s 52.2]	Plea of Absence of Assets	833	[s 52.7]	Decree Against Wrong Person as Heir and Legal Representative	835
[s 52.3]	Lis Pendens	833
[s 52.4]	Costs	834	[s 52.8]	Decree Against Executor who has not Intermeddled or Proved	836
[s 52.5]	Legal representative	834

[s 52.1] Scope of the Section

Section 50 provides for a case where a decree has been passed against a party and the party dies before the decree is fully satisfied and the decree is sought to be executed against his legal representative. The present section provides for a case where the decree is passed against the legal representative of a deceased person. In the latter case, the legal representative is the judgment-debtor.[1173] If such a decree is for payment of money out of the property of the deceased, the section allows the decree to be executed against the property of the deceased in the hands of the legal representative,[1174] but so long as it remains in his hands. In a suit by a vendee for refund of consideration against the legal representatives of the vendor on the ground that the vendor had no subsisting title, the legal representatives are liable to refund only out of the assets of the deceased vendor in their hands.[1175] If the executor or administrator against whom the decree is passed, hands over the property to the legatee or heirs, the property cannot be redeemed in execution; a separate suit would be necessary.[1176] In order that the section may apply, the decree must not only be against the legal representative, but it must also be for the payment of money out of the property of the deceased.[1177] The form in which the decree is drawn up is not the relevant criterion. So long as the decree in substance directs payment out of the property, it is sufficient.[1178] Where the defendant dies pending the suit and 1172. Uttar Pradesh Act 24 of 1954, section 2 and Schedule, Item 5, Entry 4 (w.e.f 30-11-1954).

---

1173. Birdichand v Badasaheb, AIR 1927 Bom 52 : (1927) 28 Bom LR 1322.
1174. Champaklal Rupchand v Rayachand Thakorbhai, AIR 1932 Bom 522 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 1005.
1175. Susila Dei v Sridhar Rautray, AIR 1970 Ori 89 : (1970) ILR Cut 911.
1176. Satkari Banerjee v Sushil Kumar Mukherjee, AIR 1951 Cal 577.
1177. Lalji Kunverji v Bhatia Dungershi Jivandas, AIR 1974 Guj 42.
1178. Rani Brijraj Kumari v Manoranjan Prasad Singh, AIR 1947 Pat 365 : (1946) 25 Pat 550; Pannalal v Mst Naraini, AIR 1952 SC 170 : 1952 SCR 544.

his legal representative are brought on record, it is essential that the decree should be passed against them. It was accordingly held that a decree passed against the deceased defendant and not the legal representatives was bad and inexecutable.[1179] It is not, however, competent for the court to pass a decree against the legal representatives so as to make them personally liable.[1180] A decree which merely states that the money is recoverable from the assets of the deceased without specifying in whose hands they are, is invalid and inexecutable.[1181] The court has no discretion to limit the decree that a particular item of the deceased's property should be first proved against.[1182] Whether a decree, passed against a judgment-debtor is sought to be executed under section 50 against his legal representatives, or whether the decree itself has been passed under this section against the legal representatives, the extent of their liability is the same. They are liable only for what has come into their hands as assets of the deceased and not duly accounted for.[1183] But in so far as the property of the deceased which has come into the hands of the legal representative has not been "duly" applied by him, the decree may be executed against the legal representative as if the decree was to that extent passed against him personally. An executor or administrator under the Indian Succession Act, 1925, section 323, is bound to pay the creditors of the deceased "equally and rateably"; if he fails to do so, he cannot be said to have applied the assets "duly" within the meaning of this section, and he will be personally liable to the extent to which he has not done so. To ascertain whether the assets have been duly applied, the court of execution may direct an inquiry into the accounts of the executor or administrator.[1184] The executor or administrator may show that he is not liable, as he has duly applied the property of the deceased which has come into his possession. This, in English law, is called the plea of plene administravit. In an Allahabad case[1185] Ashworth J differing from Mukerji J held that the plea could be raised in the suit itself. If the executor or administrator has paid a legacy and left no assets for the payment to the decree-holder, the latter has also his remedy under section 361 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, and may require the legatee to refund. But this remedy must be exercised by suit, and the decree-holder cannot, in execution of a decree against the executor or administrator, attach property which he has parted with, to a specific legatee.[1186]

Sections 50 and 52 apply in two different situations. Section 52 applies where the defendant dies during the pendency of the suit and his legal representatives are brought on record and decree is passed against them. Under section 50 the decree is passed against the original debtor and the decree is sought to be executed against his legal representatives. Therefore, under section 50 the burden is on the decree-holder to show that the property in question has come into the hands of the legal heirs. But under section 52 the burden is on the legal representatives to show that they have not received the property from the deceased. Thus, in the case of a money decree passed against a person who was dead at the time of execution, it was for the legal representative/wife to show that she has not received property attached by Bank from her deceased husband.[1187]

1179. Andi Vasudevan of Azhikkakathu v Bhagavathipillai Vasudevan, AIR 1963 Ker 263.
1180. Jayavanth Rai v Narsing Sakaram, AIR 1923 Bom 414.
1181. Madhavan v Choorppa, AIR 1934 Mad 562 : (1934) Mad WN 800.
1182. Chekka Suryanarayana, Receiver of RB Pydah Venkatachalapati Estate v Ynumala Rajyalakshmi Devi Amma, AIR 1950 Mad 407 : 1950 1 Mad LJ 192.
1183. Chandravathi Bai v Chaganlal, (1960) II R 2 AP 449; Venkatachal v Umayal Achi, AIR 1958 Mad 395.
1184. Daw Toke v Maung Ba Han, AIR 1927 Rang 127 : (1927) 5 Rang 44.
1185. Tamiz Bano v Nand Kishore, AIR 1927 All 459 : (1927) 49 All 645.
1186. Jaychandra v Satischandra, AIR 1930 Cal 762 : (1931) 58 Cal 170; Gocoolee Chandra v Machantosh, (1879) 4 Cal 897; Debi Prosanna Ghose v Indra Narain Pal, AIR 1941 Cal 27 : (1941) 45 Cal WN 78.
1187. Smt Sandhya Sisodiya v Syndicate Bank, AIR 2007 MP 228 : 2007 (52) All Ind Cas 528 (Gwalior Bench).

If the legal representative is the heir of a deceased Hindu or Mahommedan, every payment by the heir on account of debt due by the deceased would be a due application of the assets, whether the debts were paid rateably or not. There is no analogy between the case of an executor or administrator governed by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1925 and of an heir as a legal representative under the Hindu or Mahommedan law.[1188] Section 52 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 adumbrates that a money decree passed against the legal representative of the deceased defendant, out of the property of the deceased in his hands, may be executed by attachment or sale of that property. If the legal representative fails to satisfy the court that he duly applied the property to discharge the debt, or the court is not satisfied of his so doing, the court would proceed against the legal representative personally and to apply the property by sale to satisfy the decree debt. At the time when the application for passing the final decree is filed, it is enough if the legal representative are impleaded, all or any of the legal representative or one of the legal representatives of the deceased defendant-judgment-debtor to represent the estate of the deceased. If the death of the defendant takes place-pending passing of final decree, they may be brought on record under section 151 of the CPC or under O I, rule 10 of the CPC.[1189]

[s 52.2] Plea of Absence of Assets

The suit is not the stage at which the question whether the deceased has left behind assets can be gone into. It is a matter which must be appropriately determined in execution proceedings.[1190] And where the decree passed under section 52 specified certain properties as the assets of the deceased, the decree-holder was held not barred from proving at the stage of execution, that other assets of the deceased had not come into the hands of the legal representatives and from proceeding against them.[1191] The burden is on the decree-holder to prove that the assets of the deceased have come into the hands of the legal representatives,[1192] and then it is for the latter to account for them.[1193] If they fail to satisfy the court that they have applied the property of the deceased, they are personally liable to the extent of the property in respect of which they so fail.[1194] The mere fact that the legal representatives of the deceased are parties to the decree which is against the assets of the deceased, does not render them personally liable in the absence of an order of the court to that effect.[1195]

[s 52.3] Lis Pendens

If it could be read from the objections that the objectors had purchased the property much before the institution of the suit and their vendor, so also they themselves were not joined as parties to the suit. If such was the objection, then application of section 52 of the Transfer

---

1188. Veerasokkaraju v Papiah, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 792; Haji Saboo Sidick v Ally Mahomed, (1906) 30 Bom 27.
1189. Ratna Alias Ratnavati(Smt) v Syndicate Bank, (1995) 1 SCC 407.
1190. Mohinuddin v Sayeed Unissa, (1961) 2 AP 350 : (1961) 1 AP WR 241 : (1961) AP LT 213; Tamiz Bhano v Nand Kishore, AIR 1927 All 459 : (1927) 49 All 645; Motoram v Daw, AIR 1934 Rang 196; Ranjit v Narmadid, AIR 1931 Ngp 173.
1191. Mohinduddin v Syed Unnissa, (1961) 2 AP 350 : (1961) 1 AP WR 241 : (1961) AP LT 213.
1192. Venkatachalam Chettiar v Umayal Achi, AIR 1958 Mad 395 : (1958) 2 Mad LJ 26 : 71 LW 126; Lakshmilal v Onkarlal, AIR 1955 Raj 33.
1193. Chandravath Bai v Chaganlal, (1960) ILR 2 AP 449.
1194. Lakshmi Lal v Onkarlal, AIR 1955 Raj 33; Venkatachalam Chettiar v Umayal Achi, AIR 1958 Mad 395 : (1958) 2 Mad LJ 26 : 71 LW 126; Amir S/O Shaikh Rustom Musalman v Saidanbai W/O Babu Alias Jan, AIR 1960 MP 68.
1195. Subramania v Ramabadra, AIR 1956 TC 88.

of Property Act, 1882 was patently illegal. The order passed by the learned executing court cannot be allowed to stand, as not only it is contrary to law but the same is contrary to the facts. The order passed by the executing court was accordingly quashed.[1196] Revision petition was filed to assailed the orders on the ground that the salaries of the petitioners were attached in execution filed against the legal heirs of deceased Smt. Sumitra. The court dismissed the revision petition and denied the protection under section 50(2) CPC as deceased Smt. Sumitra died during the pendente lite and the petitioners were duly brought on record as her legal representatives.[1197]

[s 52.4] Costs

It has been held that when a suit is decreed against a legal representative with costs, the liability is only to pay the costs out of the assets of the deceased unless the decree otherwise provides.[1198]

[s 52.5] Legal representative

"Legal representative" means a person who, in law, represents the estate of a deceased person, and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased, and, where a party sues or is sued in a representative character, the person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued.[1199]

Where a legal representative is sued on the ground that he has intermeddled with the estate, it is for the plaintiff to establish that the property belonged to the deceased.[1200] A decree obtained against one representative without any inquiry as to who are the legal representatives of the deceased, cannot bind the other legal representatives who are not made parties. Doctrine of "substantial representation" cannot be invoked in such a case.[1201]

As to how far a decree passed against one of several Mahommedan heirs binds the other heirs, see the undernoted case.[1202]

(As to the liability of Hindu sons for their father's debts see section 53 below, the Bombay Hindu Heirs Relief Act, 1886, and the observations in the judgment of the Full Bench in Jamburao v Annappa.[1203])

[s 52.6] Out of the property of the deceased

The expression "property" includes the income of immovable property though it cannot be both attached and sold.[1204] Income from a hereditary office in a temple requiring personal services is not property of the deceased' within this section.[1205] A decree was passed against a

---

1196. Ram Kumar Tiwari v Deenanath, AIR 2002 Chhat 1.
1197. Shiksha v Chirtrander Kumar (2020) 197 Punj LR 386.
1198. Sardar Ram Singh v Khirodhan Devi, AIR 1963 Pat 151.
1199. Dinamoni Chaudhurani v Elahatdut Khan, (1904) 8 Cal WN 843. See section 2(11) and notes.
1200. Sheonarayan Harlal Maheshwari v Kanhaiyalal Devidin, AIR 1948 Ngp 168.
1201. Upperi Janaki v Balakrishnan Nambiyar, AIR 1981 Ker 52.
1202. L Ram Charan Lal v Mt Hanifa Khatun, AIR 1932 All 591 : (1932) 54 All 796.
1203. Jamburao Satappa Kochari v Annappa Ramchandrappa Kabbur, (1940) 42 Bom LR 1066, p 1076.
1204. Kadiveluswami Nayagar v The Eastern Development Corp, AIR 1924 Mad 530 (FB) : (1924) 47 Mad 411; Manzur Hussain v Ram Rattan, AIR 1936 Lah 236; Shahanshah Begum v Akbar Hussain, AIR 1938 Oudh 45 : (1938) 13 Luck 689; Mt Phool Kunwar v Rikhi Ram, AIR 1935 All 261.
1205. Karunambal Ammal v Chellaya Gurukkal Alias, AIR 1952 Mad 114 : (1951) 2 Mad LJ 395 : 64 LW 845 : 1951 Mad WN 729.

Hindu widow as the legal representative of her deceased husband and made realisable from the husband's estate in her hands. In order to defeat the execution, the widow made a fictitious gift of a house belonging to her husband, in favour of a person. It was held that the decree could be executed against the house.[1206] This right of the creditors of an ancestor to proceed against his assets in the hands of his heirs is lost if the assets are transferred by the latter for consideration and without notice of the creditors' claim; and the right is not revived even if the transfer is set aside on the insolvency of the heir under the provisions of the insolvency law.[1207] In one case, this section was invoked by a decree-holder to make the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor liable to account for the profits received by them from out of the properties of the deceased in their hands and to make them available for satisfaction of the decree under O XXXIV, rule 6.[1208]

In a case the original defendant expired during the pendency of the suit. The legal representatives were not brought on record in the execution proceedings but in the original proceedings itself. It was held by the Karnataka High Court that the deceased defendant had one-third share in the suit schedule property and a charge has been created under the judgment and decree on the said property. Therefore, the decree-holder in executing the said decree against the legal representatives of the deceased is bound to proceed for recovery of money out of the property of the deceased.[1209]

Where the decree does not impose a liability on a Hindu widow personally, she can take the plea in execution that her personal property cannot be attached. Even where the decree purports to impose her personally liable, she can assail that part of the decree in appeal.[1210] In an Andhra Pradesh case for the recovery of a decretal debt, the decree-holder brought to sell the "Matruka" property of her late husband for the satisfaction of her decretal debt. The sale was confirmed and possession was delivered to the auction purchaser. The plaintiffs claimed to be the children of the judgment-debtor through his second wife. They subsequently came to know that the decree-holder did not deliberately bring them on record, in the execution proceedings. Their case was that the entire execution proceedings after the death of the judgment-debtor were vitiated by fraud and collusion and the sale was not binding on their shares. The plaintiff who claimed to be legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor, did not apply to be impleaded as such. The auction-purchaser was not a party to the proceedings and was a bona fide purchaser, not in collusion with the judgment-debtor or the decree-holder. It was held that the court sale, under which the auction purchaser had purchased the suit property, was valid and binding, even in respect of the shares of the plaintiff and was not liable to be set aside.[1211]

[s 52.7] Decree Against Wrong Person as Heir and Legal Representative

A decree obtained against an executor or administrator of the estate of a deceased person is a decree against the estate of the deceased. A decree against a karnavan as representative of the deceased binds the estate; and this is so even though there has been a disposition by Will of which the plaintiff was not aware;[1212] but a decree obtained against the heir of a deceased Hindu or Mahommedan as his legal representative, is not a decree against the estate of the

---

1206. Ram Piari v Diwan Shib Ram, AIR 1934 Lah 659.
1207. P Chettyar v T Chettyar, AIR 1934 Rang 162 : (1934) 12 Rang 602.
1208. Allahabad Bank v RSA Singh, AIR 1976 All 447.
1209. BS Ashok v Investment Trust of India : 2010 (2) AIR Kar R 396.
1210. Laxmidhar Sahu v Padmini Tripathi, AIR 1991 Ori 9.
1211. Chekuri Venkataraju v Kazi Nazeeruddin, AIR 1983 AP 431 (DB).
1212. Kolaremathu Ama v Madhavi, AIR 1928 Mad 243 : (1927) Mad WN 894.

deceased even if the decree provides for the payment of the decretal amount of the property of the deceased in the hands of such heir. The question has largely been discussed whether a decree obtained against some of the legal representative or against persons wrongly believed to be legal representatives, is binding on the estate of the deceased. It was held in some cases that a decree obtained by the creditor of a deceased Hindu against a wrong person as his heir cannot be executed against the estate of the deceased, in the hands of the rightful heir;[1213] and that if the property of the deceased was sold in execution of the decree against a wrong person as heir, the auction- purchaser may be dispossessed by the rightful heir.[1214] The Calcutta High Court has held that if a plaintiff sues in good faith a person who appears to him to be the proper legal representative, the decree binds the estate of the deceased.[1215]

Likewise, where the plaintiff, in ignorance of a will left by the deceased, sued the heirs as legal representatives, it was held that in the absence of fraud or collusion, the estate was bound although under the will other persons were entitled to represent the estate. The High Court of Orissa has held likewise where the decree was against a person who was in possession ascertaining a claim to succeed the estate.[1216] This decision was approved by the Madras High Court in Shanmugham v Govindaswamy,[1217] where it was held that when the decree-holder bona fide impleaded a person in possession as the legal representative of the deceased defendant, the decree passed against him, bound all the legal representatives. On the question whether a decree obtained against some of the legal representatives binds the estate, the preponderance of judicial opinion is that it does, provided, however, that the plaintiff acted bona fide[1218] and was no fraud or collusion. This conclusion is based on the theory of substantial representation.[1219] This rule will not apply to cases where there is fraud or collusion or where there are circumstances indicating that the trial was not fair or real or where it is found that the absent heir had a special defence which was not and could not be tried.[1220] This would be the position even when a wrong legal representative is brought on record[1221] or where a decree is passed without the legal representatives having been brought on record but the estate is adequately represented by others.[1222]

[s 52.8] Decree Against Executor who has not Intermeddled or Proved

A creditor or a deceased debtor cannot sue a person named as executor in the will of the deceased, unless he has either administered, that is, intermeddled with the estate, or proved the Will. Whether a decree is obtained against such person and property belonging to the estate of the deceased is sold in execution of the decree, the sale does not bind the estate.

[S 53] Liability of ancestral property.—For the purposes of section 50 and section 52, property in the hands of a son or other descendant which is liable under

---

1213. Kaliappan v Somanna, AIR 1927 Mad 197.
1214. Amarchand And Anr v Paramanand, AIR 1934 All 474.
1215. Bibuti Bhusan Ray v Naredra Narayana Ghose, AIR 1951 Cal 228.
1216. Snat Chandra Deb v Bichitrananda Shahu, AIR 1951 Ori 212 : (1951) ILR Cut 413.
1217. Shanmugham v Govindaswamy, AIR 1961 Mad 428 : 73 LW 640.
1218. M Metilda v Kunjiram, AIR 1969 Ker 149.
1219. Daya Ram v Shyam Sundari, AIR 1965 SC 1049.
1220. Mohd Sulaiman v M Ismail, AIR 1966 SC 792 : (1966) 1 SCR 937.
1221. Shanmugham v Govindaswamy, AIR 1961 Mad 428 : 73 LW 640; Amarchand v Paramanand, AIR 1934 All 474; Jharu v Pardhan, AIR 1937 Lah 277; Krishnavathi v Gunga, AIR 1941 Pat 299; Bibuti Bushan Roy v Narendra Narayan, AIR 1951 Cal 228; Mst Karam Kaur v Marwal Chand, AIR 1933 Lah 350; Chacko Pyle v Iype Varghese, AIR 1956 TC 147.
1222. Manjappa v R Bhandary, AIR 1968 Mys 202 : (1967) 2 Mys LJ 192.

Hindu law for the payment of the debt of deceased ancestor, in respect of which a decree has been passed, shall be deemed to be property of the deceased which has come to the hands of the son or other descendant as his legal representative.

SYNOPSIS

[s 53.1] Scope of the Section 837
[s 53.2] Hindu Law 839
[s 53.3] Decree 839
[s 53.4] Property in the Hands of a Son 839
[s 53.5] Liability of Ancestral Property in Execution Proceedings 840
[s 53.5.1] Money Decree against Father: Execution after his Death: Partition 840
[s 53.5.2] Attachment in Execution of Money Decree against Father: Death of the Father Before Sale 841
[s 53.5.3] Mortgage Decree Against Father: Death of Father Before Sale 842
[s 53.5.4] Decree Against Sons for Father's Debt for Payment out of Ancestral Property 842
[s 53.6] Debt of a Deceased Ancestor 842

[s 53.1] Scope of the Section

This section enacts a rule of procedure and its operation is attracted only when the son is under a liability under the Hindu Law. It does not, by itself, create or take away any substantive right.[1223] It has no application when the ancestor against whom a decree has been passed, is still alive.[1224] It has been designed to enlarge the class of property liable for execution under sections 50 and 52 by deeming certain property to have come into the hands of the legal representative as property of the deceased, which, in fact, has not done so. The class of property to which the section is applied is property in the hands of a son or other descendant of the deceased, which may not have descended to him from the deceased ancestor, but which under the Hindu Law, would be liable for the payment of his debt. It is, thus, descriptive of the class of property, which can be reached in execution and does not limit the nature of the debt for which execution can be levied.[1225] It has been enacted to enforce the recognised rule of the Hindu Law, namely, that members of a joint Hindu family may not escape the payment out of joint family property, of any debt incurred and decreed against their father before his death, provided that such debt is not tainted by immorality. The Bombay High Court, at one time, held that the section was restricted to this case only and was limited to money decrees and to property which a son had taken by devolution or succession and not by survivorship.[1226] This decision was later on overruled by a full bench of that court.[1227] The Madras High Court had, however, given the section a wider scope and held that it included all cases where property, which is liable under Hindu law for the payment of a debt of a deceased ancestor has come into the hands of a son, or other descendant. Therefore, a decree passed against a father, as manager of a joint Hindu family, for the recovery of property was enforced in execution against a son who had taken the property by survivorship.[1228] The Privy Council has held that section 53 is not limitative but descriptive, and is intended merely to enforce a recognised rule of Hindu

---

1223. Pannalal v Narayani, AIR 1952 SC 170 : (1952) SCJ 211.
1224. Bijaj Rai Singh v Ram Padarnath, AIR 1936 Oudh 139.
1225. Rao Bhimsingh v Shersingh, AIR 1948 PC 1 : 74 IA 247 : (1947) 52 Cal WN 109 : 50 Bom LR 1.
1226. Chunilal v Bai Mani, (1918) 42 Bom 504. Approved in Dwarka Das v Krishna Kishore, AIR 1921 Lah 34 : (1921) 2 Lah 114, and Jagannath v Moti Lal, AIR 1923 All 539 : (1923) 45 All 455.
1227. Jamburao v Annapa, AIR 1941 Bom 23 : (1841) Bom 177 : 42 Bom LR 1066 (FB).
1228. Meyappan v Meyappan, AIR 1924 Mad 571 : (1924) 40 Mad LJ 471; Shankerrao Deshmukh v Vinayak, AIR 1951 Ngp 307 : (1950) Nag 806.

Law that a son is liable to pay the debt of his father which is not tainted by illegality or immorality.[1229] Section 50 is not limited to the execution of decrees for debt, but applies to all decrees. If section 53 is considered to be not descriptive but limitative and confined to a decree for debt, and if a joint son is not considered to be the legal representative of his father under section 50, a decree for possession or a decree other than a decree for a debt obtained against a father in a joint Hindu family, would not be enforceable in execution against the son, who is joint with his father and is brought on the record as his legal representative. In this case, the Bombay High Court held that a decree for an injunction passed against a father as manager of a joint Hindu family could be executed against a son who had taken the family property by survivorship. In the previous case,[1230] such an execution was refused and the son who had taken joint family property by survivorship, was held not to be the legal representative of his father; but this case was overruled by a full bench of that court[1231] and goes against the decision of the judicial committee in Rao Bhimsing's case above on the ground that the decree was against the father personally, and not as representing the family. In the case of money decree, if the decree is against a coparcener personally, it cannot be executed after his death, against another coparcener who has taken the property by survivorship, if he is neither a son nor grandson but a nephew, who is under no obligation to pay the debt of the deceased.[1232]

The High Court of Bombay has held that the son of a Hindu, where there has been no appointment of an executor or administrator, in law, represents the estate of his father and is, therefore, his legal representative within the meaning of section 2(11) of the CPC.[1233] The Privy Council has also held that the son coming into an impartible ancestral estate of a Mitakshara family is a legal representative of his father who was the last holder.[1234] Hence, where there is an allegation that the estate of the father is in the hands of the son, the son is liable to have a decree passed against him for the father's debt, to be recovered only out of any assets of the father which may have come into his hands and are not duly accounted for. However, where there is a decree against both the father and son, but it is executed only against the father, the son's interest in the joint family property proceeded against, will not be affected.[1235]

This section assumes the existence of a debt; hence, where in a suit against the father on a mortgage of ancestral property, the sons are not impleaded but are brought on record after the death of the father after the preliminary decree and are not allowed to raise the question regarding the binding nature of the debt, the sons are not precluded from disputing the existence of the debt itself in a separate suit.[1236]

This section was first enacted in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 and a controversy then arose whether it applied to pending execution proceedings. It was held in Inderjit v Arshad Ali,[1237] that it did, whereas in Gummurthi Naidu v Varadappa Chetty,[1238] a different view was taken. The question is not one which is likely to arise for decision hereafter, but on principle when once it is held that the section enacts a rule of procedure and on that there has been no

---

1229. Rao Bhimsingh v Shersingh, AIR 1948 PC 1 : 74 IA 247 : (1947) 52 Cal WN 109 : 50 Bom LR 1: Ganesh v Narayana, AIR 1931 Bom 484 : (1931) 55 Bom 709.
1230. Chunilal v Bai Mani, (1918) 42 Bom 504.
1231. Jamburao v Annapa, AIR 1941 Bom 23 (FB) : (1940) 42 Bom LR 1066.
1232. Jagannath v Moti Lal, AIR 1923 All 539 : (1923) 45 All 455.
1233. Jamburao v Annappa, AIR 1941 Bom 23 (FB) : (1940) 42 Bom LR 1066.
1234. Rao Bhimsingh v Shersingh, AIR 1948 PC 1 : 74 IA 247 : (1947) 52 Cal WN 109 : 50 Bom LR 1.
1235. RK Iyengar v T Pillai, AIR 1971 Mad 303.
1236. Lakshamadu v Ramudu, AIR 1939 Mad 687.
1237. Inderjit v Arshad Ali, 4 IC 492.
1238. Gummurthi Naidu v Varadappa Chetty, (1911) 2 Mad WN 386.

dispute, the conclusion is inescapable that it must apply to pending proceedings. The Kerala High Court has, on this principle, held that the section is applicable to decrees passed before the CPC, was extended to the area in question.[1239]

[s 53.2] Hindu Law

The expression Hindu Law would include in its ambit, the modern legislation on Hindu law. It should not be considered as only Hindu law prevailing before the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

[s 53.3] Decree

The section is not limited to money decrees but applies to all decrees.[1240]

[s 53.4] Property in the Hands of a Son

This includes the undivided share of the son in the joint family property which is held by himself and other coparceners.[1241] But it will not include the watan property that is in the hands of the son, having regard to the provision in section 5 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, 1874.[1242] It is, however, otherwise if the decree for money had been obtained against the watandar father and his son during the life-time of the father.[1243] Where a provident fund that is standing to the credit of a deceased judgment-debtor is paid to his dependent minor son under section 4(1) of the Provident Funds Act 19 of 1925, the amount so paid is not part of the assets of the father.[1244] This section applies in the case of the sons of a judgment-debtor only, and not in the case of his brother,[1245] or mother,[1246] or father[1247] or uncle.[1248] The judgments mentioned herein are all prior to the coming in force of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, hence, will not be applicable in present circumstances. Where a suit on a mortgage by the father was filed against the sons and the grandsons but was dismissed against the latter, it was held that the interest of the grandsons in the joint property was not liable to attachment under the decree.[1249]

If the father dies leaving sons and also his own father and subsequently the father's father dies, it was held that the decree could not be executed against the ancestral property in the hands of the sons.[1250] This view has been dissented from, in the under mentioned case.[1251]

1239. Gopalakrishna v Subramanaya Iyer, (1961) Ker LJ 901 : (1961) Ker LT 1126.
1240. Rao Bhimsingh v Sher Singh, AIR 1948 PC 1 : 74 IA 247 : (1947) 52 Cal WN 109 : 50 Bom LR 1; Ganesh v Narayan, AIR 1931 Bom 484 : (1931) 55 Bom 709; Meyappan v Meyappan, AIR 1924 Mad 571 : (1924) 46 Mad LJ 471.
1241. Malak Chand v Hira Lal, AIR 1935 Oudh 510 (FB) : (1935) 11 Luck 449; Phagu Mal v Dhani Ram, AIR 1934 All 101; Chotey Lal v Ganpat Rai, AIR 1934 All 590 : 150 Ind Cas 411.
1242. Vithaldas v Shrinivasrao, AIR 1934 Bom 116 : (1934) 58 Bom 218; Ramabai v Government of Bombay, (1941) 43 Bom LR 232.
1243. Vishwanath v Keshavbhat, AIR 1934 Bom 119 : (1934) 58 Bom 273.
1244. Thaj Mahomed Saib v Balaji Singh, AIR 1934 Mad 173 : (1934) 57 Mad 440.
1245. Sheo Gopal v Firm Ganesh Dass Ram Gopal, AIR 1937 Oudh 327 : (1938) 13 Luck 241; Veerappa Chettiar v Ramaswami Iyer ILR 27 Mad 106; Narasinbhat v Chenappa ILR 2 Bom 479.
1246. Govindamma v Bullemma, AIR 1962 AP 243 : (1962) 1 Andh WR 151 : (1962) 1 Andh LT 240; affirming Govindamma v Bullemma, AIR 1957 AP 47.
1247. Jaganath Prasad v Sitaram, (1888)ILR 11 All 302.
1248. Narasinbhat v Chenappa, ILR 2 Bom 479.
1249. Raja Ram v Raja Baksh, AIR 1938 PC 7 : (1938) 13 Luck 61 : 40 Bom LR 277.
1250. Binda Prasad v Raja Ballabh, AIR 1926 All 220 : (1926) 48 All 245.
1251. Devi Das v Jada Ram, AIR 1933 Lah 857 : (1934) 15 Lah 50.

The expression "other descendant" shall include heirs as mentioned in the Schedule to the Hindu Succession Act, 1956.

[s 53.5] Liability of Ancestral Property in Execution Proceedings

Under the Hindu Law, when a son or grandson takes any ancestral property by survivorship, he is bound to pay out of such property, all debts of his ancestor, not incurred for immoral or illegal purposes. In the case of a decree against a Hindu father, there was a conflict of decisions under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 as to the procedure for enforcing this liability. The section settles this question of procedure.[1252] We proceed to consider the subject under the following four heads:

[s 53.5.1] Money Decree against Father: Execution after his Death: Partition

A and his sons B and C constitute a joint Hindu family owning an ancestral house. D obtains a decree against A for Rs 5,000. A dies and on his death, B and C take the ancestral property by survivorship. D, whose remedy is not confined to the one-third share of the father,[1253] applies for execution of the decree against B and C by attachment and sale of the whole of the family house. Is he entitled to do so or must he institute a fresh suit against B and C to recover the debt? According to the procedure prescribed by the CPC, D should bring B and C on the record as the legal representatives of A under section 50, and then apply under that section to the court which passed the decree to execute it against B and C to the extent of the ancestral property come to their hands. The words in section 50 are, "to the extent of the property of the deceased which has come to his [legal representatives] hands." According to the present section, the ancestral property in the hands of B and C, being liable under Hindu law for the payment of A's debts, is deemed, for the purposes of section 50, to be the property of the deceased which has come to the hands of B and C as the legal representatives of A. If B and C object that the debt in respect of which the decree was passed was tainted with immorality, the question is one "relating to the execution of the decree" between the decree-holder and the "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of section 47, and it should be determined by the court executing the decree.[1254] This coincides with the view taken by the High Courts of Bombay and Calcutta under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.[1255] According to the Madras and Allahabad decisions under that Code, a decree against a Hindu father could not be executed against ancestral property in the hands of the sons, even to the extent of the father's interest in the property, and the only remedy of the decree-holder was to institute a regular suit against the sons. This view proceeded on the ground that the question whether the debts were tainted with immorality was not one that could be gone into in execution proceedings, and that the sons were not the "legal representatives" of their father so far as the ancestral property was concerned within the meaning of section 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (now replaced by Code of Civil Procedure, 1908).[1256] These decisions are no longer law.[1257]

1252. Shiekh Karoo v Rameshwar, AIR 1923 Pat 143 : (1921) 6 Pat LJ 451.
1253. Narayan v Sagunabai, AIR 1925 Bom 193 : (1925) ILR 49 Bom 113.
1254. Ramanand v Chhotey Lal, AIR 1923 All 124 : (1922) 20 All LJ 969.
1255. Umed v Goman Bhaiji, (1896) ILR 20 Bom 385; Shivram v Sakharam, (1909) 33 Bom 39; Amar Chandra v Sebak Chand, (1907) 34 Cal 642; Hanmant v Ganesh, (1919) 43 Bom 612, p 626.
1256. Rani Varma v Koman, (1882) 5 Mad 223; Ariavedu v Doraisami, (1888) 11 Mad 413; Peraiyan v Seetharama, (1904) 27 Mad 243 (FB); Venkatarama v Senthivelu, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 265; Lachmi Narain v Kunji Lal, (1894) ILR 16 All 449; Jagannath v Sita Ram, (1889) ILR 11 All 302; Narsingha v Lalji, (1901) ILR 23 All 206.
1257. Bhadri Venkataswami v Mandi Tata Reddy, AIR 1947 Mad 162 : (1947) ILR Mad 463.

[s 53.5.1.1] Partition.—

Under Hindu Law, the son, meaning thereby, a male descendant within three decrees, is under a pious obligation to discharge, out of his share in the joint family properties, the debts of his father which are neither illegal nor immoral even though they are not for purposes binding on the family. Being a substantive obligation, it is not destroyed by a partition taking place subsequent to the contracting of the debt.[1258] But judicial opinion was divided on the question as to the mode in which this obligation could be enforced after partition. It was held by the High Courts of Patna[1259] Nagpur[1260] and Bombay[1261] that after partition, the creditor could not execute a decree obtained against the father alone against the shares allotted to the sons on partition but that he must file a suit against him on the debt and execute the decree passed therein against the properties that fell to their share. The decisions of the Madras High Court on the question were conflicting. In Venkatanarayana v Somaraju,[1262] it was held by a full bench that where a partition takes place after a suit is filed against the manager or father, the decree could be executed against the joint family properties which are allotted to the coparcener or son as the suit must be taken to have been laid against the manager or father, in a representative capacity. But the preponderance of authority was in favour of the view that as the power of the father to represent must come to an end on division, a decree passed, thereafter, could not be executed against the properties in the hands of divided members.[1263] The controversy has now been set at rest by the decision of the Supreme Court in Pannalal v Mst Narayani,[1264] wherein it has been held that a decree obtained against the father cannot, after partition, be executed against the shares allotted to the sons.

[s 53.5.2] Attachment in Execution of Money Decree against Father: Death of the Father Before Sale

All the High Courts are agreed that where the father dies after attachment of the ancestral property, the proceedings in execution can be continued against the sons.[1265] And the Privy Council has accepted this view.[1266] The Supreme Court has also now reaffirmed it.[1267] In fact, having regard to the provisions of the present section, a separate suit against the sons would be barred by section 47.

1258. Pannalal v Narayanisupra; Jakati v Borkar, AIR 1959 SC 282 : [1959] SCR 1384 : (1959) SCJ 719.
1259. Atul Krishna v Lal Nanaji, AIR 1935 Pat 275 (FB) : (1935) 14 Pat 732.
1260. Govindaram Dwarkadas v Nathanmal, AIR 1937 Ngp 45 : (1938) ILR Nag 10; Jai Narain v Sonaji, AIR 1938 Ngp 24 : (1938) ILR Nag 136.
1261. Surajmal v Motiram, AIR 1940 Bom 22.
1262. Venkatanarayana v Somaraju, AIR 1937 Mad 610 (FB) : (1937) ILR Mad 888 : (1937) 2 Mad LJ 251; followed in Venkataratna v Venkatasubbiah, AIR 1950 Mad 136 (1949) 2 Mad LJ 539.
1263. Tirumalaimuthu v Subramanya, AIR 1937 Mad 458 : (1937) 1 Mad LJ 243; Kuppan Chettiar v Masa Goundan, AIR 1937 Mad 424 : (1937) 1 Mad LJ 249; Official Receiver v Seshiah, AIR 1941 Mad 262 : (1940) 2 Mad LJ 860; Ramanathan v Ramanathan, (1949) 2 Mad LJ 751.
1264. Pannalal v Mst Narayani, AIR 1952 SC 170 : (1952) SCR 544 : 1952 SCJ 211. For later decisions; Suryanarayana v Ganesulu, AIR 1954 Mad 203; Chinnaramiah v Venkan Raju, AIR 1954 Mad 864 : (1954) ILR Mad 834 : (1954) 2 Mad LJ 176; Kumaji Sarimal v Devadatan, AIR 1958 AP 216; Padmavathi v Manilal, AIR 1959 Bom 141.
1265. Sivagiri Zamindar v Teruvengada, (1884) 7 Mad 339; Lachmi Narain v Kunji Lal, (1894) 16 All 449; Peary Lal v Chandi Charan, (1906) 11 Cal WN 163.
1266. Rao Bhimsingh v Shersingh, AIR 1948 PC 11 : (1947) ILR Nag 830 : 74 IA 247 : (1947) 52 Cal WN 109 : 50 Bom LR 1.
1267. Jakati v Borkar, AIR 1959 SC 282 : (1959) SCR 1384 : (1959) SCJ 719.

[s 53.5.3] Mortgage Decree Against Father: Death of Father Before Sale

Where a decree is obtained against the father for sale of ancestral property mortgaged by him, and he dies before sale, the proceedings in execution may be continued against the sons. But the sons, not being parties to the suit, are entitled to raise, in execution proceedings, such questions as they could have raised if they had been made parties.[1268] They can dispute the factum of the debt, or they can show that the debt was incurred for immoral purposes and is not, therefore, binding on the property.[1269] But the Lahore High Court has held that the son is not entitled in the case of a mortgage decree to object in execution proceedings that the debt is immoral and not binding on him.[1270]

[s 53.5.4] Decree Against Sons for Father's Debt for Payment out of Ancestral Property

In such a case, the decree-holder may proceed to execute the decree by attachment and sale of the ancestral property come to the hands of the sons. The proceedings would be under section 52. The expression "Property of the Deceased" in that section would be construed in the light of the present section. In fact, section 53 is an explanation to sections 50 and 52, explaining the meaning of the expression "property of the deceased".

It will be seen that, under the present CPC, a creditor can follow the property in the hands of the sons or grandsons in execution not only in cases (b), (c) and (d), but also in case (a).

The four heads set forth above, refer to decree for the debt of a deceased ancestor, but as already stated, the section is not limited to such decrees, but includes all decrees against a deceased ancestor.

[s 53.6] Debt of a Deceased Ancestor

As to debts for which a Hindu son or grandson is liable, see Pannalal v Naraini.[1271]

[S 54] Partition of estate or separation of share.—Where the decree is for the partition of an undivided estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the Government, or for the separate possession of a share of such an estate, the partition of the estate or the separation of the share shall be made by the Collector or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in this behalf, in accordance with the law (if any) for the time being in force relating to the partition, or the separate possession of shares, of such estates.

SYNOPSIS

[s 54.1] High Court Amendment 843
[s 54.2] Alteration in the Section 843
[s 54.3] Partition by Collector 843
[s 54.4] Application of the Section..... 844
[s 54.5] For the Separate Possession of a Share of such an Estate..... 845
[s 54.6] Partition 846
[s 54.7] Addition of Party after Preliminary Decree 846
[s 54.8] Jurisdiction of court to Control Collector's Action..... 847
[s 54.9] Estate..... 848
[s 54.10] Estate Assessed to the Payment of Revenue..... 848
[s 54.11] Limitation..... 848

1268. Chander Pershad v Sham Koer, (1906) 33 Cal 676; Umamaheswara v Singaperumal, (1885) 8 Mad 376, Hira Lal v Parmeshar, (1899) 21 All 356.
1269. Ramkrishna v Vinayak, (1910) 34 Bom 354; Indar Pal v Imperial Bank, (1915) 37 All 214.
1270. Shio Das v Karam Chand, AIR 1934 Lah 438 : (1934) 15 Lah 772.
1271. Pannalal v Naraini, AIR 1952 SC 170 : (1952) SCR 544.

[s 54.1] High Court Amendment

Karnataka.—Forsection 54, substitute the following section:—

"S. 54. Partition of estate or separation of share

Where the decree is for the partition of an undivided estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the Government or for the separate possession of a share of such an estate, the partition of the estate or the separation of the share of such an estate shall be made by the court in accordance with law if any, for the time being in force relating to the partition or the separate possession of shares and if necessary on the report of a revenue officer, not below the rank of Tahsildar or such other person as the court may appoint as commissioner in that behalf" [CPC (Karnataka Amendment) Act, 1995 (Act 36 of 1998), section 2 (w.e.f. 1-2-2001)]

[s 54.2] Alteration in the Section

The word "Government" was substituted for the words "the Crown" by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

[s 54.3] Partition by Collector

Under section 54 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, the collector can effect partition of an estate assessed to payment of land revenue.[1272]

This section is a reproduction of section 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 with a few verbal alterations. Where a decree has been passed for partition or for separate possession of a share of an estate of the description mentioned in this section, the proper authority to effect the partition or to deliver possession of the share is the collector; the court has no power to do so.[1273] Section 54 does not talk about a final decree. All that is required of a civil court in a case for partition of an undivided estate assessed to payment of land revenue of government or for the separate possession of a share in such an estate is to pass a preliminary decree and declare the rights of the parties and give direction for such partition or separation to be made by the collector. Thereafter, the execution is to be effected by the collector. The civil court, after passing such a preliminary decree for partition, becomes functus officio and has no jurisdiction to act in any manner thereafter so as to pass a final decree or deliver possession to a party in accordance with such decree.[1274] But the partition intended to be left to the collector is one which has some impact upon the revenue and the revenue records. If a decree does not direct a share in one or more survey numbers to be separated, there is no reason why the work of allotment of the entire survey number assessed to payment of revenue to a particular party should be left to the collector.[1275] But aliter where the collector refuses to effect partition.[1276]

In a suit for partition, once the court passes the decree declaring shares of the parties in an undivided estate assessed to the payment of revenue to the government and orders division and separate possession of such estate in accordance with the shares so declared, then the court is enjoined to direct such partition or separation be effected by the collector or any Gazetted Officer subordinate to collector deputed by him in that behalf. Further, in order to give meaningful effect to such declaration and direction issued in terms of section 54 read with O XX, rule 18(1) of the CPC, the court is further enjoined to send the relevant

---

1272. Chandmal Dogarmal Shelot v Shantilal Valchand Shelot, AIR 2003 Bom 445.
1273. Gendmal Amolakchand v Laxman Tanba, AIR 1945 Ngp 86 : (1944) ILR Nag 852; Abdul Ali v Mirza Vigar Ali Beg, AIR 1949 Oudh 37 : (1947) 23 Luck 77; Dattatraya v Mahadaj, (1892) 16 Bom 528.
1274. Bhagwan Singh v Babu Shiv Prasad, AIR 1974 MP 12.
1275. Ragha v Ramji, AIR 1974 Guj 36.
1276. Sevakram Motiram v Chunilal Bhagchandra, AIR 1951 Ngp 359.

papers to the concerned collector or Gazetted Officer. Once the papers are transmitted to the revenue officer, the court passing the decree for partition under O XX, rule 18(1) of the CPC becomes functus officio in relation to the decree for partition passed by it and all further proceedings for the execution of such decree are to be carried out by the concerned revenue officer. The civil court is not the executing court for the purpose of execution of the decree for partition of the estate which is subject to the assessment for payment of revenue to the government. Being so, the question of approaching the civil court under section 47 of the CPC, with grievance regarding non-compliance of such decree or acts in contravention thereof or in violation of law by the revenue officer in the course of execution of such decree does not arise at all. Certainly, the provisions of O XXI would not be attracted in such cases as the execution of a decree is not by the civil court. Being so, neither the provisions of section 47 nor those of O XXI of the CPC can be of any help in such cases. Further, the matters pertaining to the execution of such decrees cannot be dealt with under the exercise of inherent powers under section 151 of the CPC. Undoubtedly, therefore, it can be said that the grievance relating to refusal of the revenue officer to execute the decree and therefore, direction for the execution to be carried out in terms of the decree, i.e., as per the declaration of shares under O XX, rule 18 of the CPC can be entertained by the civil court in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction to pass order under section 151 of the CPC for compliance of the said declaration, i.e., for execution of the decree in accordance with the terms thereof. Therefore, in cases of contravention of provisions of law or transgression of law or non-enforceability of the decree for partition on account of events occurring subsequent to the passing of such decrees or in relation to the similar such grievances, the limited control which can be exercised by the civil courts can be only by way of an independent suit. The bar for suit under section 47 of the CPC could be applicable only in cases where the question can be determined by the court executing the decree. Once it is clear that the civil court is not the court executing the decree for partition of the estate which is subject to the assessment for payment of revenue to the government, the bar provided under section 47 of the CPC for an independent suit by the parties to the decree cannot come in the way of the party approaching the court with such suit regarding the grievance in relation of the execution of the partition decree.[1277]

In a partition suit pertaining to agricultural lands in the State of Maharashtra, the execution of decree is to be performed by Collector or his subordinate officer according to the provisions of section 85 of Maharashtra Land Revenue Code, 1965 and rules 5, 6, 7 of the Maharashtra Land Revenue (Partition of Holdings) Rules 1967. The civil court after passing the decree becomes functus officio so far putting the decree-holder in actual physical possession of the property. The provisions of O XXI, rule 35 of the CPC do not apply in case of possession of agricultural land.[1278]

[s 54.4] Application of the Section

If a decree is for the partition of an undivided estate assessed to the payment of revenue to government, the section requires that the partition should be carried out by the collector. In a case decided by a full bench of the High Court of Calcutta, there was a dictum to the effect that the section only applies to a decree which directs distribution of revenue as well

---

1277. Prakash Nathyaba Bhosale v Laxman Ganaba Bhosale, AIR 2003 Bom 41.
1278. Arun Ashruba Mhaske v Atmaram Dattu, 2007 (4) Mah LJ 157 : (2007) 5 All MR 167.

as a division of land.[1279] This case has been followed by the Patna High Court.[1280] There is, however, nothing in the section which so limits its operation. In Abdul Razak v Shreenath Ghosh,[1281] Chief Justice Rankin said:

> It is idle to say that it is open to the plaintiff to insist that it be carried out by a commissioner under the civil court merely because he has not asked for partition of the revenue. Whether he has asked for partition of the revenue or not, if he has a right to the partition of an undivided estate, his right is to a complete partition and it is certainly the right of any other party to object to an incomplete partition which would leave his interest at the mercy of the plaintiff, if the plaintiff makes default in paying his share.

It has been held by the Nagpur High Court that a civil court is not competent to effect partition of revenue paying property if the parties to the suit had not specifically asked for separation of the liability of each of them, as regards payment of land revenue, but if the collector refuses to make a partition of the revenue paying property, the civil court can do so.[1282] Where the share to be divided is assessed to land revenue, the same shall be done by the deputy commissioner or an officer authorised by him and not by the court or by the commissioner appointed by the court.[1283] Where the decree in question was not a decree for partition simpliciter but under the decree, the partition was to take effect only if the judgment-debtor failed to pay the amount within the stipulated period, it was necessary for the court to see as to whether the clause as to partition had become operative before sending the papers to the deputy commissioner for partition under section 54 of the CPC. The order sending records to deputy commissioner for effecting partition without hearing the purchaser from judgment-debtor was improper. It also violates the principles of natural justice.[1284]

The section does not apply to the partition of a mouza which is part of a revenue paying estate.[1285] In such a case, the object of the suit is not to have the parent estate divided into several separate estates, but only to divide the lands of the mouza among persons who are jointly interested in them.[1286]

[s 54.5] For the Separate Possession of a Share of such an Estate

These words refer to the case of a man whose right is to the possession of an aliquot portion or share of the whole estate considered as one. In such a case, the partition is made by the collector, as it is the duty of the collector to see that the proper share of the revenue is put upon the particular land or share of land.[1287] This section does not bar the jurisdiction of a civil court to effect a partition of a revenue paying estate where no separate allotment of the revenue is asked for, and this applies also to proceedings before the arbitrators.[1288] A person on whom any 1279. Jogadeshwari v Kailash Chandra, (1879) 24 Cal 725 (FB).

---

1280. Radha Kishan v Bhola, AIR 1934 Pat 365 : (1934) ILR 13 Pat 637; Priyanath Roy v Sreedhar Chandra Roy, AIR 1945 Cal 28 : (1945) Cal WN 223.
1281. Abdul Razak v Shreenath Ghosh, AIR 1931 Cal 93 : (1931) 58 Cal 122; Fulchand v Vaman Rao, AIR 1951 Hyd 86 : (1951) ILR Hyd 436; Pratap Singh v Karpal Singh, 3 Pepsu LR 173.
1282. Sewakram v Chunnilal, AIR 1951 Ngp 359 : (1951) ILR Nag 558.
1283. Ramakrishnacharya v Sreenivasacharya, AIR 1989 Kant 30 (DB).
1284. Krishnabai v Krishna Rao Janantaro Desai, AIR 1995 Ker 172.
1285. Debi Singh v Sheo Lall Singh, (1889) 16 Cal 203; Jogadeshwari v Kailash Chandra, (1897) 24 Cal 725 (FB); Roy Kiran v Rama Nath, AIR 1931 Cal 104 : (1931) 34 Cal WN 895; Srinivasathathachar v Srinivasathathachar, AIR 1933 Mad 259 : (1933) 56 Mad 443.
1286. AIR 1933 Mad 259 : (1933) 56 Mad 443; Abdul Razak v Shreenath Ghosh, AIR 1931 Cal 93 : (1931) 58 Cal 122.
1287. KV Srinivasathathachar v Naravalur Srinivasathathachar, AIR 1933 Mad 259 : (1933) 56 Mad 443; Abdul Razak v Sreenath Ghosh, AIR 1931 Cal 93 : (1931) 58 Cal 122.
1288. Tikaram v Hansraj, AIR 1954 Ngp 241.

interest has devolved on account of transfer during the pendency of any suit, or a proceeding can participate in the execution proceedings even though his name may not have been shown in the decree, preliminary or final. The collector may proceed to make allotment of properties in an equitable manner instead of rejecting his claim for such equitable partition on the ground that he has no locus standi. A transferee from a party of a property which is the subject matter of partition, can exercise all the rights of the transferor. Since a party can ask for an equitable partition, a transferee from him can also do so.[1289]

[s 54.6] Partition

The term "partition" in this section, is not confined to a mere division of the lands in question into the requisite parts, but includes the delivery of the shares to their respective allottees.[1290]

In a suit for possession filed by daughters claiming shares in the property of their father, when separate partitions are not claimed, the decree in such a case would be hit by section 54 and would be inexecutable in absence of identification of separate shares of parties in the suit land.[1291]

[s 54.7] Addition of Party after Preliminary Decree

It will not be permissible to add a party to a suit for partition after the preliminary decree if the addition requires the preliminary decree to be reopened to enable the party to reagitate matters decided under the preliminary decree because such matters became final. He can, however, be added if he has no objection to come on record subject to matters decided under the preliminary decree. It would be permissible to add him as party if he wants equities to be settled in his favour, as this has to be done under the final decree and the matter is still open after preliminary decree. He cannot however be allowed to be added if he wants to contest the whole suit on merits.[1292]

If the petitioners do not want to reopen the decree and they are accepting the decree as it is and they only want equities to be settled in their favour they can be added as parties to the deukhast proceedings.[1293]

In a suit for partition of a Joint Hindu Family property, where death of one of the parties to the suit occurs subsequent to the passing of the preliminary decree, shares of other parties thereby many change. Under such circumstances, the court can pass subsequent preliminary decree or amend the preliminary decree already passed. Such order making variation in shares is a decree in itself which would be appealable.[1294]

1289. Khemchand Shanker Choudhary v Vishnu Hari Patil, (1983) 1 SCC 18; Anandi Devi v Mahendra Singh, AIR 1997 Pat 7.
1290. Parbhudas v Shankarbhai, (1887) 11 Bom 662.
1291. Eknathbuwa Gyanoba Bharati (deceased by LR) v Shesbabai Laxman Buwa, 2009 (3) AIR Bom R 208 : (2008) 6 All MR 762 (Aurangabad Bench).
1292. Mannubai Nandgopal Pande v Shriprasad Nandlal Pande, (1979) Mah LJ 252; Chandmal Dongarmal Shelot v Shantilal Valchand Shelot, AIR 2003 Bom 445.
1293. Chandmal Dongarmal Shelot v Shantilal Valchand Shelot, AIR 2003 Bom 445.
1294. Kusum Dashrath Kharmare v Popat Madhav Gangarde, (2008) 1 Mah LJ 267 : (2008) 1 All MR 576 (Aurangabad Bench).

[s 54.8] Jurisdiction of court to Control Collector's Action

Where a decree relates to an estate of the kind mentioned in this section, it should not only declare the rights of the several parties interested in the property, but should direct the actual partition or separation to be made by the collector or any Gazetted Officer subordinate of the collector deputed by him in that behalf.[1295] Where a decree is sent by the civil court to the deputy commissioner for execution, the latter can delegate the function to his gazetted assistant; but the gazetted assistant cannot further delegate that function to the tehsildar. Proceedings taken by the tehsildar under such a delegation are without jurisdiction and void. The mere fact that the petitioner had a concern in the holding of the auction proceedings and had not protested against it, is not of any consequence at all. Therefore, the high court could not refuse to interfere with the impugned proceedings of the tehsildar, which were without jurisdiction.[1296] When a party to a decree, which has been sent to the collector under section 54 dies, or becomes insolvent or transfers his interest pendente lite, the collector need not send back the case to the court. Section 54 can be so construed that the collector will act in accordance with the law (if any) for the time being in force, relating to the partition or the separate possession of shares.[1297] After a decree for partition is passed under this section, the court has nothing further to do with it by way of execution.[1298] This section places the execution of the decree entirely in the hands of the collector. But if the collector contravenes the decretal command of the court, or transgresses the law for the time being in force, relating to partition, his action is subject to the control and correction of the court which passed the decree and sent it to him for execution.[1299] In such a case, the aggrieved party should proceed by an application under section 47, and not by a separate suit.[1300] Even where directions for partition have been given to the collector, by the court, if the partition has not been made or commenced, the court can recall the record, if it has been wrongly transmitted or directed.[1301] Where a collector has made a partition, there is nothing to prevent him from reversing the partition for mistake or other causes, before he has passed final orders and returned the proceedings to the court.[1302] An order directing partition by the collector is not a preliminary decree within O XX, rule 18. It is, so far as the court is concerned, a final decree and an order transmitting the papers to the collector is ministerial and not judicial and not appealable.[1303] It is competent to the collector to himself entertain an application for partition after a civil court passes a decree.[1304]

It has been held that, an objection that the collector has made an unequal partition is no ground for interference by the court with the order passed by the collector.[1305] But in a Madras case, where all the parties objected to a partition effected by the collector on the ground that

---

1295. Manjundappa v Sonnappa, AIR 1965 Mys 73; Rupan Rai v Subh Karan, (1919) 41 All 207; Asman Singh v Tulsi Singh, (1917) 2 Pat LJ 221.
1296. Putta Kamaiah v State of Karnataka, AIR 1990 Kant 79.
1297. Khem Chand v Vishnu, AIR 1983 SC 124 : (1983) 1 SCC 18. See O xx, rule 18.
1298. Ningappa Balappa v Abashkhan Gouskhan, AIR 1956 Bom 345.
1299. Dev Gopal v Vasudev, (1888) 12 Bom 371 : 376; Ganoji v Dhondu, (1890) 14 Bom 450; Purshottam v Balkrishna, (1904) 28 Bom 238; Ramchandra v Krishnaji, (1916) 40 Bom 118 : 124–25; Timmana v Govind, AIR 1926 Bom 258 : (1926) 28 Bom LR 523.
1300. Gendamal Amolakchand v Laxman Tanba, AIR 1945 Ngp 86 : (1944) ILR Nag 852; Krishnaji v Damodar, (1903) 5 Bom LR 648.
1301. NR Patil v Kariappa, AIR 1965 Mys 46.
1302. Krishnaji v Damodar, (1903) 5 Bom LR 648.
1303. Narasu v Narayanan, AIR 1959 Mys 233 : 1958 Mys 718.
1304. Prabudayal v Sub-Divisional Officer, Karvi, AIR 1958 All 673.
1305. Venkataraghava v Venkata Hanumantha, AIR 1945 Mad 336 (FB) : (1946) ILR Mad 10; Dev Gopal v Vasudeo, (1888) ILR 12 Bom 371; Shrinivas v Gurunath, (1891) 15 Bom 527; Bhimangauda v Hanmat, (1918) ILR 42 Bom 689.

it was unequal, the court held that it had power to entertain the objection.[1306] The section in any case does not exclude the right of superior revenue authorities to examine and correct any decision or order of the collector in exercise of their appellate or revisional powers.[1307]

From the statutory definition though relating to payment of court-fees, it appears that engagement with the government by the estate holder is required to determine the payment of revenue and in absence of such engagement the estate must be separately assessed with revenue. The land or immovable property rateably assessed for revenue is not the estate as contemplated under section 54 of the CPC.

The individual land or immovable property enjoyed separately or jointly subject to payment of statutory revenue is not covered by the provision of section 54 of the CPC.[1308]

[s 54.9] Estate

The word "estate" is here used in its ordinary sense.[1309] Sheri lands, that is lands held under a lease from government for a fixed period, come within the terms of this section as revenue-paying lands[1310] but isolated plots of land which fall short of being the share of a co-sharer of a mahal do not.[1311] A raiyatwari-holding has been held not to be an "estate" within the meaning of the section.[1312]

[s 54.10] Estate Assessed to the Payment of Revenue

This section refers to estates assessed to revenue in one lump sum for the whole estate, and not to estates, like the ordinary paddy land holding in Burma, which are assessed at acre-rates.[1313] A mouza is generally part of a revenue paying estate, but is not itself an estate assessed to the payment of revenue.[1314] The words "estate assessed to the payment of land revenue"do not cover lands which have been built upon and become houses or factories.[1315]

[s 54.11] Limitation

Where the application for issuance of precepts to the collector, for effecting partition of shares in agricultural land accessed to the payment of land revenues as per shares indicated in the decree was dismissed merely because the application has been made almost after 45 years of the passing of the decree, the court would be considered to have committed serious error of law and jurisdiction and the order dismissing the application was liable to be set aside. The principle of equity made basis, for the order, could not be made applicable when law of limitation does not bar making such an application beyond any period. The law of limitation has to be read as provided in the statute, and it does not spring from the common law of the country or principle of equity. The application filed by the applicant for issuance of precept to 1306. Chinna v Krishnavanamma, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 435.

---

1307. Paygonda v Jingonda, AIR 1968 Bom 198 : 69 Bom LR 579.
1308. Ranjit Kumar Chakraborty v Jiban Chandra Chakraborty, AIR 2001 Gau 73.
1309. Secretary of State v Nundan Lall, (1884) 10 Cal 435.
1310. Dattatraya v Mahadaji, (1892) 16 Bom 528.
1311. Ram Dayal v Megu Lal, (1884) 6 All 452; Ram Khelawan v Sriram, AIR 1952 All 191.
1312. Muttuvayyangar v Kudalalagayyanagar, (1883) 6 Mad 97; Muttuchudambar v Karupa, (1884) 7 Mad 382.
1313. Maung Po Nyn v Ma Saw Tin, AIR 1926 Rang 80 : (1927) Rang 206.
1314. Abdul Razak v Shreenath Ghosh, AIR 1931 Cal 93 : (1931) 58 Cal 122; Roy Karan v Rama Nath, AIR 1931 Cal 104 : (1931) 34 Cal WN 895.
1315. Rameswarnath v Jageshwarnath, AIR 1953 P&H 250 : (1954) ILR Punj 372.

the collector for effecting partition of the decree, being not an application for an execution of a decree, is not covered by any provisions contained in Limitation Act, 1963.[1316]

Arrest and Detention

[S 55] Arrest and detention.—(1) A judgment-debtor may be arrested[1317] in execution of a decree at any hour and on any day and shall, as soon as practicable, be brought before the Court, and his detention may be in the civil prison of the district in which the Court ordering the detention is situate, or, where such civil prison does not afford suitable accommodation, in any other place which the [1318][State Government] may appoint for the detention of persons ordered by the Courts of such district to be detained:

Provided, firstly, that for the purpose of making an arrest under this section, no dwelling-house shall be entered after sunset and before sunrise:

Provided, secondly that no outer door of a dwelling-house shall be broken open unless such dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto, but when the officer authorised to make the arrest had duly gained access to any dwelling-house, he may break open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe the judgment-debtor is to be found:

Provided, thirdly, that if the room is in the actual occupancy of woman who is not the judgment-debtor and who according to the customs of the country does not appear in public, the officer authorised to make the arrest shall give notice to her that she is at liberty to withdraw, and, after allowing a reasonable time for her to withdraw and giving her facility for withdrawing, may enter the room for the purpose of making the arrest:

Provided, fourthly, that, where the decree in execution of which a judgment-debtor is arrested, is a decree for the payment of money and the judgment-debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest to the officer arresting him, such officer shall at once release him.

(2) The [1319][State Government] may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare that any person or class of persons whose arrest might be attended with danger or inconvenience to the public shall not be liable to arrest in execution of a decree otherwise than in accordance with such procedure as may be prescribed by the [1320][State Government] in this behalf.

(3) Where a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money and brought before the Court, the Court shall inform him that he may apply to be declared an insolvent, and that he [1321][may be discharged] if he has not

---

1316. Ramrathibai v Suraj Pal, AIR 1995 Bom 445; Sanna Palaiah v Soncha Boraiah, AIR 1998 Kant 87.
1317. No displaced person is liable to arrest or imprisonment in execution of any decree for the recovery of any debt: see section 30, Displaced Persons (Debts Adjustment) Act 70 of 1951. See also section 29 of Army Act, 1950 and Air Force Act, 1950, section 29 of Navy Act, 1957.
1318. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO, 1950.
1319. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO, 1950.
1320. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO, 1950.
1321. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 3 of 1921, section 2, for "will be discharged".

committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of the application and if he complies with the provisions of the law of insolvency for the time being in force.

(4) Where a judgment-debtor expresses his intention to apply to be declared an insolvent and furnishes security, to the satisfaction of the Court, that he will within one month so apply, and that he will appear, when called upon, in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested, the Court [1322][may release] him from arrest, and, if he fails so to apply and to appear, the court may either direct the security to be realized or commit him to the civil prison in execution of the decree.

SYNOPSIS

[s 55.1]	High Court Amendment	850	[s 55.7]	Sub-section (4): Expresses his Intention to Apply to be Declared Insolvent	852
[s 55.2]	Changes Introduced by the Section	850	[s 55.8]	Sub-section (4): Within one month	852
[s 55.3]	Arrest of Judgment — Debtor	851	[s 55.9]	Sub-section (4): Discharge of Surety	852
[s 55.4]	Breaking Open of Outer Door	851	[s 55.10]	Realisation of Security	853
[s 55.5]	Sub-section (2)	851
[s 55.6]	Sub-section (4): Insolvency After Order for Arrest	851

[s 55.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—In clause (1) insert the words "Calcutta or" after the words "Civil prison of" and before the words "the district in which"; and omit clauses (3) and (4), vide Cal Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 55.2] Changes Introduced by the Section

This section corresponds with section 336 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882—except in the following particulars:

(i) Any outer door of a dwelling-house may now be broken to effect the arrest of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree. But the dwelling house must be in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor.[1323]

(ii) The security under sub-section (4) must not only be for the filing by the judgment-debtor of a petition in insolvency, but also for his appearance, when called upon, in any proceeding, upon the application in insolvency or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested.[1324]

(iii) A power has been conferred on the local government to exempt certain persons from arrest [see sub-section (2)].

(iv) The words "Provincial Government" in sub-sections (1) and (2) were substituted for the words "Local Government" and the words "Official Gazette" in sub-section (2) were substituted for the words "local Official Gazette" by para 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of India Laws) Order 1937.

1322. Substitued by CPC (Amendment) Act 3 of 1921, section 2, for "shall release".
1323. See sub-section, (1), proviso, (2).
1324. See notes below: "Discharge of surety."

[s 55.3] Arrest of Judgment — Debtor

Where the decree holder stated that judgment-debtor was owner of valuable land, the statement of another witness corroborated the version of the decree holder but the judgment debtor, without filing documents relating to said land, gave an evasive reply by stating that he cultivated the same land as the lessee, so the executing court without believing his version, directed for his arrest, the said finding of executing court could not be interfered with in revision.[1325]

[s 55.4] Breaking Open of Outer Door

The outer door may be broken open where a dwelling house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor, and he refuses or prevents access thereto. But this does not authorise him the breaking open of the outer door of a dwelling house merely because the judgment-debtor is to be found in that house.

[s 55.5] Sub-section (2)

The sub-section is intended to cover the cases of certain persons or classes of persons whose summary arrest might, as in the case of railway servants, be attended with danger or inconvenience to the public.

[s 55.6] Sub-section (4): Insolvency After Order for Arrest

If a judgment-debtor against whom an order for arrest has been made, is adjudicated insolvent without a protection order, the adjudication does not prevent his arrest, and the court of execution must require the judgment-debtor to give security under the latter part of sub-section (4), that he will appear when called upon in any proceeding in insolvency or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested.[1326]

Where a judgment-debtor, apprehending his arrest in connection with execution of decree, filed an application under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, it was held by Andhra Pradesh High Court that such application would be premature in view of the specific provision of section 55(3) of the Code.[1327]

In case of execution of a money decree, the duty of the court to inform the judgment-debtor that he may apply to be declared insolvent arises only after the judgment-debtor is arrested and brought before the court. Thus, where the arrest of the judgment-debtor did not take place on the date on which arrest warrant was issued, section 52 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920 is not attracted and consequently pendency of Insolvency petition filed to adjudicate the judgment-debtor as insolvent would not affect the execution proceedings.[1328]

1325. K Munir Athnam v D Bhaskar Naidu, AIR 2006 (NOC) 1124 (AP) : (2006) 3 Andh LD 486.
1326. MVLA Vishwanathan v Abdul Majid, AIR 1925 Rang 305 : (1925) ILR 3 Rang 187.
1327. Elluri Venkata Sai Surya Prakasa Rao v Guttikonda Srirama Murthy, 2007 (1) Andh LD 152.
1328. Vaddireddy Venkatata Subba Reddy v Narapureddy Kalyanamma, 2008 (6) Andh LT 673 : 2009 (75) All Ind cas 866 : (2008) 6 Andh LD 585.

[s 55.7] Sub-section (4): Expresses his Intention to Apply to be Declared Insolvent

This expression of intention is equivalent to a statement made to the judgment-creditor by the judgment-debtor of an intention to suspend payment of his debts. It is, therefore, an act of insolvency as defined in s 9 of the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act, 1909.[1329]

[s 55.8] Sub-section (4): Within one month

The court has no power to extend the period of one month for applying for adjudication. Section 148 does not apply to such a case.[1330] The word "month" is introduced into this section by way of defining the obligation of the surety. The intention expressed is to be declared insolvent and not to he declared insolvent at the end of a month provided nothing does turn up.[1331]

[s 55.9] Sub-section (4): Discharge of Surety

Sub-section (4) makes it clear that where a security bond is passed in the terms of that sub-section, that is, where a surety undertakes:

(i) that the judgment-debtor will within one month apply to be declared an insolvent; and

(ii) will appear, when called upon, in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested, the security will be realised when there is a failure to comply with either condition.[1332] The surety, however, is not released by the mere filing by the judgment-debtor of the petition in insolvency; the security continues until a final order is made on the petition.[1333] A bona fide petition is a sufficient compliance with the condition of the bond. When a bona fide petition was presented within one month but was rejected as not being in proper form, and a fresh petition was presented later and the debtor was adjudged insolvent, the surety was discharged.[1334] A security-bond furnished for the appearance of the judgment-debtor is in the nature of a continuing guarantee and when the surety produces the judgment-debtor before the court and requests to be absolved from further liability under the bond, the court should not refuse to grant the prayer,[1335] but he cannot be discharged unless he has fully carried out his undertaking.[1336]

A surety under this section is discharged by the death of judgment-debtor before breach of either of the two conditions mentioned above.[1337] But the death of the judgment-debtor after the first condition has failed, namely, the undertaking to apply to be declared an insolvent within one month, cannot affect the surety's liability with regard to that condition.[1338] A surety

---

1329. Kishore Khanna v Netherlands Trading Society, AIR 1930 Cal 555 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 401.
1330. Narasinha v Rangachari, AIR 1926 Mad 689 : (1926) 50 Mad LJ 477.
1331. Kishore v Netherlands Trading Society, AIR 1930 Cal 555 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 401.
1332. Woriur Commercial Bank v Kaja Maroop, AIR 1923 Mad 1081 : (1926) 52 Mad LJ 523.
1333. Abdul v Mistri, AIR 1922 Bom 340 : (1922) ILR 46 Bom 702; IV Colato v U Aung Din, AIR 1936 Rang 168 : (1936) 14 Rang 190.
1334. Channappa v Yellappa, AIR 1931 Bom 444 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 820.
1335. Siraj-ud-din v Guranditta Mal, AIR 1934 Lah 962.
1336. Sankaranarayana v Peranisiram, AIR 1942 Mad 101.
1337. Krishnan v Ittiman, (1901) 24 Mad 637; Nabin Chandra v Mirtunjoy, (1914) ILR 41 Cal 50.
1338. Makanji v Bhukandas, AIR 1924 Bom 428 : (1924) ILR 48 Bom 500.

is also discharged if the execution proceedings are struck off,[1339] or dismissed for default of appearance even though they are subsequently restored,[1340] but not if liability had already accrued under the bond by a breach of either of the two conditions before the proceedings were struck off.[1341] If the court makes an erroneous order discharging a surety, the decree-holder may apply for revision of the order, but cannot treat it as a nullity.[1342] When a person executes a surety-bond, undertaking to produce a judgment-debtor in the court on a particular day, the mere fact that the judgment-debtor is suffering from fever on that day does not absolve the surety from liability, when the illness is not so serious as to render his appearance in court physically impossible.[1343]

Sub-section (4) provides that if the judgment-debtor fails to apply or to appear, the court may either direct the security to be realised or commit the judgment-debtor to prison. This is an alternative and not a concurrent remedy. It does not mean that the court can proceed both against the surety and the judgment-debtor. If the surety is proceeded against and the amount is recovered from him, the judgment-debtor is committed to jail, in execution. If the judgment-debtor is committed to jail, the position is just the same as if the surety had never come forward.[1344] But the mere fact that the judgment-debtor is rearrested,[1345] or that a warrant is issued against him, is not sufficient of itself to discharge the surety.[1346]

[s 55.10] Realisation of Security

See section 145.

See O XXI, rule 40 (proceedings on appearance of judgment-debtor in obedience to notice or after arrest).

A woman cannot be arrested or detained in civil prison under O XXXVIII, rule 1 (arrest before judgment). If under section 56 of the CPC, the court cannot order the arrest or detention, in civil prison, of a woman in execution of a decree for the payment of money, it cannot certainly order her arrest in a suit filed for the recovery of money, where a decree is yet to be passed.[1347]

[S 56] Prohibition of arrest or detention of women in execution of decree for money.—Notwithstanding anything in this Part, the Court shall not order the arrest[1348] or detention in the civil prison of a woman in execution of a decree for the payment of money.

1339. Lalji v Oodya, (1887) 14 Cal 757.
1340. Kali Ram v Umrao Singh, AIR 1934 Lah 92.
1341. Dedhraj v Mahabir, (1920) 5 Pat LJ 417.
1342. Nageshar v Gudrimal, AIR 1933 All 382 : (1933) 55 All 548.
1343. Re Kumarswamy Reddiar, AIR 1938 Mad 530.
1344. Raghubir Singh v Maharul Huque, AIR 1942 Pat 506 : (1942) 21 Pat 644; Makanji v Bhukandas, AIR 1924 Bom 428 : (1924) 48 Bom 500.
1345. Channappa v Yellappa, AIR 1931 Bom 444 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 820; explaining a dictum in Makanji v Bhukandas, AIR 1924 Bom 428 : (1924) 48 Bom 500.
1346. Makanji v Bhukandas, AIR 1924 Bom 428 : (1924) 48 Bom 500.
1347. Chelsea Mills v Chorus Girl, AIR 1991 Del 129.
1348. No displaced person is liable to arrest or imprisonment in execution of any decree for the recovery of any debt: see section 30, Displaced Persons (Debts Adjustment) Act 70 of 1951. See also section 29 of Army Act, 1950 and Air Force Act, 1950, section 29 of Navy Act, 1957.

[s 56.1] Security for Costs

This section provides that a woman shall not be arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money. At the same time, if the plaintiff is a woman and her suit is for the payment of money, she may be required to give security for the defendant's costs.[1349]

In the case of Cyril Britto v UOI,[1350] a Division Bench of the Kerala High Court specifically rejected the contention that section 56 of the CPC, which protects women from arrest or detention in execution of money decree is ultra vires Arts. 14 and 15 of the Constitution of India.

The constitutional validity of section 56 was challenged before the Bombay High Court being against Articles 14 and 15 of the Constitution.[1351] Upholding the validity, the Bombay High Court held that the court taking into consideration the object of such provision, the classification between men and women is quite reasonable, and the classification has sufficient nexus with the object.

[S 57] Subsistence allowance.—The [1352][State Government] may fix scales, graduated according to rank, race and nationality, of monthly allowances payable for the subsistence of judgment-debtors.

Subsistence allowance (O XXI, rule 39).

[s 57.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Substitute the words "The high court may, subject to the approval of the State Government" for "The State Government may". Omit the word "monthly" between the words "of" and "allowances" vide Cal. Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[S 58] Detention and release.—(1) Every person detained in the civil prison in execution of a decree shall be so detained,—

(a) where the decree is for the payment of a sum of money exceeding [1353][[1354][five thousand rupees], for a period not exceeding three months, and]

[1355][(b) where the decree is for the payment of a sum of money exceeding two thousand rupees, but not exceeding five thousand rupees, for a period not exceeding six weeks]:

1349. See O XXV, rule 1(3).
1350. Cyril Britto v UOI, AIR 2003 Ker 259.
1351. Shrikrishna Eknath Godbole v UOI, PIL No. 166/2016, decided on 21 October 2016 (Bombay High Court)
1352. Substituted for "Provincial Government" by AO 1950.
1353. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 22, for words "fifty rupees, for a period of six months, and", (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1354. Substituted for "one thousand rupees" by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999, section 5 (46 of 1999) (w.e.f. 1-7-2002) vide Notification. S.O. 603(E), dated 6 June 2002.
1355. Substituted for "(b) where the decree is for the payment of a sum of money exceeding five hundred rupees, but not exceeding one thousand rupees, for a period not exceeding six weeks"; by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999), section 5 (w.e.f. 1-7-2002).Earlier clause (b) was inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 22 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

Provided that he shall be released from such detention before the expiration of the [1356][said period of detention]—

(i) on the amount mentioned in the warrant for his detention being paid to the officer in charge of the civil prison, or

(ii) on the decree passed against him being otherwise fully satisfied, or

(iii) on the request of the person on whose application he has been so detained, or

(iv) on the omission by the person, on whose application he has been so detained, to pay subsistence allowance:

Provided, also, that he shall not be released from such detention under clause (ii) or clause (iii), without the order of the Court.

[1357][(1A) For the removal of doubts, it is hereby declared that no order for detention of the judgment-debtor in civil prison in execution of a decree for the payment of money shall be made, where the total amount of the decree does not exceed [1358][two thousand rupees].]

(2) A judgment-debtor released from detention under this section shall not merely by reason of his release be discharged from his debt, but he shall not be liable to be re-arrested under the decree in execution of which he was detained in the civil prison.

SYNOPSIS

[s 58.1]	Alteration in the Section	855	[s 58.4]	Interim Protection Order	857
[s 58.2]	Period of Detention in Jail	856	[s 58.5]	Contempt of court	857
[s 58.3]	Re-arrest	857	[s 58.6]	Satisfaction of Decree	857

[s 58.1] Alteration in the Section

In clause (a) of sub-section (1), the words "fifty rupees for a period of six months and" were replaced by "one thousand rupees, for a period not exceeding three months" by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977). By subsequent amendment by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999, vide its section 5, the words "one thousand rupees" were replaced by "five thousand rupees". This amendment was effective from 1 July, 2002.

By the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999, vide its section 5, the words "two thousand rupees" in sub-section (1A) were inserted in place of 'five hundred rupees'.

In clause (b) of sub-section (1), the words "five hundred rupees" have been replaced by "two thousand rupees", and the words "one thousand rupees" by "five thousand rupees" by section 5 by the said Amending Act of 1999.

The amended section is enforceable from 1 July 2002. It shall not apply to or affect any person detained in the civil prison, in execution of the decree before the commencement of the amended provision.

1356. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 22, for certain words (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1357. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 22 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1358. Substituted for "five hundred rupees" by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999) (w.e.f. 1-7-2002) vide Notfication SO 603(E), datet 6 June 2002.

The effect of the amended provision is that a person could be detained in the civil prison in execution of a decree for payment of money, provided that the amount of money decree is exceeding Rs 2000. The period of detention is dependent upon the amount of decree. Where the amount of money decree is exceeding Rs 2000 but not exceeding Rs 5000, the imprisonment cannot exceed six weeks. Where the amount of money decree is exceeding Rs 5000, the period of imprisonment cannot exceed three months.

[s 58.2] Period of Detention in Jail

The section as it stood prior to its amendment, by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 provided that the period of detention shall be:

(i) six months the amount of the decree exceeded Rs 50; and

(ii) six weeks in any other case.

The words were thus such that the court had no discretion to fix shorter periods than those prescribed in the section.[1359] The Amending Act of 1976, first raised the limit to Rs 1000 and secondly, provided that where it does not exceed Rs 500 no detention in civil prison shall be ordered. Furthermore the words "not exceeding three months" and "not exceeding six weeks" gave discretion to the court to order detention for any period not exceeding the maximum provided in the section. The amended sub-section (1A) clarified that no detention can henceforth be ordered where the total amount of the decree does not exceed Rs 500. According to the Patna High Court, the amended sub-section (1A) applies even to pending cases, that is, to applications filed when the unamended section was in force but which were pending on 10 September 1976 when the amended section came into force.[1360] Where, however, the decretal amount is more than Rs 500, but does not exceed Rs 1000, the maximum period of detention is six weeks. Where the amount of the decree exceeds Rs 1000, the period of detention cannot exceed three months.[1361] A judgment-debtor who has been arrested and detained in civil prison in execution of a decree payable in instalments cannot again be arrested in execution of the same decree in respect of subsequent instalments, as there is only one decree, though payable by instalments.[1362]

It is a settled position of the law that under section 58 CPC, the person cannot be detained in the custody for period of more than three months in execution of money decree exceeding Rs 5000. Such person has to be released as quickly as possible unless the custody of such person is required in other case. Such person cannot be re-arrested for execution of decree under subsistence and furthermore, such release cannot discharge the person from his debt.[1363]

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that under no circumstances a person can be detained in a civil prison for execution of a decree beyond a period of three months. Since the law sanctions detention only up to three months, detention beyond this period would be violative of Article 21 of the Constitution of India. Moreover, section 58(2) specifically lays down that such release would not be construed as discharge of his debts; it will not affect the

---

1359. Subudhi v Singi, (1890) ILR 13 Mad 141.
1360. Matal Chamar v Phagu Rai, AIR 1978 Pat 143.
1361. Pundlik v Maharastra State Finance Corp, AIR 1992 Bom 48.
1362. Dhanalakshmi Ammal v Krishnamurthi, AIR 1951 Mad 756 : (1951) 1 Mad LJ 515 : 64 LW 259 : (1951) Mad WN 200.
1363. Yogesh v Vellangallur Kurries Pvt. Ltd, OP(C). No. 2816 of 2019, decided on 19 November 2019 (Kerala High Court).

interests of the decree-holder. In any case, it is open to the decree-holder to initiate appropriate proceedings for attachment of the properties of the judgment-debtor.[1364]

[s 58.3] Re-arrest

The immunity of judgment-debtor from a second arrest depends not only upon his having been arrested, but upon his having been detained in jail under the arrest. Thus, where a judgment-debtor, while acting as a pleader in court, was arrested and discharged on the ground that he was exempt from arrest under section 642 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (now section 135 CPC, 1908), it was held that he was liable to be re-arrested in execution of the same decree against him.[1365] Similarly, where a judgment-debtor was arrested, but was liberated without having been sent to jail, owing to non-payment of subsistence money, it was held that he was liable to be re-arrested in execution of the same decree.[1366] Sub-section (2) refers to release from detention in jail and not to release from detention in the court house.[1367]

[s 58.4] Interim Protection Order

A is arrested and committed to jail in execution of a decree against him. While in jail he files his petition in insolvency, and obtains an interim protection order for one week, and is thereupon released from jail. He then applies for a further protection order, but his application is refused. Is A liable to be re-arrested in execution of the same decree? The Calcutta High Court has held that he is not liable to be re-arrested, on the ground that a judgment-debtor once discharged from jail, cannot be arrested a second time in execution of the same decree.[1368] On the other hand, the High Court of Bombay has held that A is liable to be re-arrested, as the only cases in which a judgment-debtor is exempt from re-arrest are those specified in this section, and that release under an interim protection order is not one of them.[1369] The Calcutta decisions, it is submitted, are not correct.

[s 58.5] Contempt of court

This section does not apply to cases of imprisonment for contempt of court.[1370]

[s 58.6] Satisfaction of Decree

The question, which arises whether the debt can be said to have been discharged merely because the judgment-debtor has been detained in civil prison for a full term. Section 51 of the CPC merely prescribes different modes for achieving an object. If the object is the realisation of dues, this object cannot be said to have been achieved merely because the judgment-debtor was detained in civil prison. It is for this reason, there is provision in sub-section (2) of section 58

1364. Samiran Sen v Arpita Sen, AIR 2009 Cal 229 : (2008) 4 Cal LT 508.
1365. Rajendra v Mohun, (1896) 23 Cal 128.
1366. H Raham v Ram Sahai, (1904) 26 All 317.
1367. Kesar Singh v Karam Chand, AIR 1937 Lah 253.
1368. Re Bolye Chund, (1893) 20 Cal 874; Judah v Secretary of State for India, (1886) 12 Cal 445.
1369. Shamji v Poonja, (1902) 26 Bom 652; Suraj Din v Mahabir Prasad, (1911) 33 All 279.
1370. Martin v Lawrence, (1879) 4 Cal 655.

of the CPC that a judgment-debtor released from detention shall not, merely by reason of his release, be discharged from his debt.[1371]

[S 59] Release on ground of illness.—(1) At any time after a warrant for the arrest of a judgment-debtor has been issued the Court may cancel it on the ground of his serious illness.

(2) Where a judgment-debtor has been arrested, the Court may release him if, in its opinion, he is not in a fit state of health to be detained in the civil prison.

(3) Where a judgment-debtor has been committed to the civil prison, he may be released therefrom—

(a) by the State Government on the ground of the existence of any infectious or contagious disease, or

(b) by the committing Court, or any Court, to which that Court is subordinate, on the ground of his suffering from any serious illness.

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this section may be re-arrested, but the period of his detention in the civil prison shall not in the aggregate exceed that prescribed by Section 58.

Attachment

[1372][S 60] Property liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree.—(1) The following property is liable to attachment[1373] and sale in execution of a decree, namely, lands, houses or other buildings, goods, money, bank-notes, cheques, bills of exchange, hund is, promissory notes, Government securities, bonds or other securities for money, debts, shares in a corporation and, save as hereinafter mentioned, all other saleable property, moveable or immoveable belonging to the judgment-debtor, or over which, or the profits of which, he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, whether the same be held in the name of the judgment-debtor or by another person in trust for him or on his behalf:

Provided that the following particulars shall not be liable to such attachment or sale, namely:—

(a) the necessary wearing-apparel, cooking vessels, beds and bedding of the judgment-debtor, his wife and children, and such personal ornaments as, in accordance with religious usage, cannot be parted with by any woman;

(b) tools of artisans, and, where the judgment-debtor is an agriculturist, his implements of husbandry and such cattle and seed-grain as may, in the opinion of the Court, be necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood as such, and such portion of agricultural produce or of any class of agricultural

---

1371. Santosh Kumar Mode v Adaita Ballav Satpathy, AIR 1992 Ori 29; Padmanna Rajkrishna Sugar Works Ltd v Land Reforms Commr, UP, AIR 1969 SC 897; Malli K Dhanlakshi v Malli Krishnamurthy, AIR 1951 Mad 756.

1372. For amendments to section 60, in its application to East Punjab, see the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, 1934 (Punjab Act 7 of 1934), section 35, as amended by Punjab Acts 12 of 1940 and 6 of 1942.

1373. For immunity from attachment see Army Act, 1950, section 28; Air Force Act, 1950, section 28 and Navy Act, 1957, section 20.

produce as may have been declared to be free from liability under the provisions of the next following section;

(c) houses and other buildings (with materials and the sites thereof and the land immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment) belonging to [1374][an agriculturist or a labourer or a domestic servant] and occupied by him;

(d) books of account;

(e) a mere right to sue for damages;

(f) any right of personal service;

(g) stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of the Government [1375][or of a local authority or of any other employer], or payable out of any service family pension funds notified [1376] in the Official Gazette by [1377][the Central Government or the State Government] in this behalf, and political pensions;

[1378][(h) the wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind[1379][];];

[1380][(i) salary to the extent of [1381][the first [1382][[1383][one thousand rupees]] and two-thirds of the remainder] [1384][in execution of any other than a decree for maintenance]:

[1385][Provided that, where any part of such portion of the salary as is liable to attachment has been under attachment, whether continuously or intermittently, for a total period of twenty-four months, such portion shall be exempt from attachment until the expiry of a further period of twelve months, and, where such attachment has been made in execution of one and same decree, shall, after the attachment has continued for a total period of twenty four months, be finally exempt from attachment in execution of that decree;]]

[1386][(ia) one-third of the salary in execution of any decree for maintenance;]

[1387][(j) the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Air Force Act, 1950 (45 of 1950), or the Army Act, 1950 (46 of 1950), or the Navy Act, 1957 (62 of 1957), applies;]

1374. Subs by CPC (Amendment) Act, 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977), for the words "an agriculturist".
1375. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act, 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1376. For such notification, see Gazette of India, 1909, Pt I, p 5.
1377. Substituted by the A.O. 1937, for "the G.G. in C."
1378. Substituted by Act 9 of 1937, section 2, for clauses (h) and (i). The amendments made by that section have no effect in respect of any proceedings arising out of a suit instituted before 1 June 1937, see Act 9 of 1937, section 3.
1379. The words "and salary, to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary" omitted by Act 5 of 1943, section 2.
1380. Substituted by Act 5 of 1943, section 2, for clause (i) and proviso.
1381. Substituted by Act 26 of 1963, section 2, for "the first hundred rupees".
1382. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 23, for "two hundred rupees and one-half the remainder" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1383. Substituted for "four hundred rupees" by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999 (46 of 1999), section 6 (w.e.f. 1-7-2002) vide Notification. SO 603(E), dated 6 June 2002.
1384. Inserted by the CPC (Amendment) Act 66 of 1956, section 6 (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).
1385. Substituted for old proviso by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1386. Inserted by the CPC (Amendment) Act 66 of 1956, section 6 (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).
1387. Substituted by the CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

(k) all compulsory deposits and other sums in or derived from any fund to which the Provident Funds Act, [1388][1925 (19 of 1925)], for the time being applies in so far as they are declared by the said Act not to be liable to attachment;

[1389][(ka) all deposits and other sums in or derived from any fund to which the Public Provident Fund Act, 1968 (23 of 1968), for the time being applies, in so far as they are declared by the said Act as not to be liable to attachment;

(kb) all moneys payable under a policy of insurance on the life of the judgment-debtor;

(kc) the interest of a lessee of a residential building to which the provisions of law for the time being in force relating to control of rents and accommodation apply.]

[1390][(l) any allowance forming part of the emoluments of any [1391][servant of the Government] or of any servant of a railway company or local authority which the [1392][appropriate Government] may by notification in the Official Gazette declare to be exempt from attachment, and any subsistence grant of allowance made to [1393][any such servant while under suspension;]

(m) an expectancy of succession by survivorship or other merely contingent or possible right or interest;

(n) a right to future maintenance;

(o) any allowance declared by [1394][any Indian law], to be exempt from liability to attachment or sale in execution of a decree; and,

(p) where the judgment-debtor is a person liable for the payment of land-revenue, any movable property which, under any law for the time being applicable to him, is exempt from sale for the recovery of an arrear of such revenue.

[1395][Explanation I.—The moneys payable in relation to the matters men- tioned in clauses (g), (h), (i), (ia), (j), (l) and (o) are exempt from attachment or sale, whether before or after they are actually payable, and, in the case of salary, the attachable portion thereof is liable to attachment, whether before or after it is actually payable].

[1396][Explanation II.—In clauses (i) and (ia),] "salary" means the total monthly emoluments, excluding any allowance declared exempt from attachment under the provisions of clause (l), derived by a person from his employment whether on duty or on leave.

1388. Substituted by Act 9 of 1937, section 2, for "1897".
1389. Inserted by the CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1390. Substituted by Act 9 of 1937, section 2, for clause (l).
1391. Substituted by Act 5 of 1943, section 2, for "public officer".
1392. Substituted by the A.O. 1937, for "G.G. in C."
1393. Substituted by Act 5 of 1943, section 2, for "any such officer or servant".
1394. Substituted by A.O. 1937, for "any law passed under the Indian Councils Acts, 1861 and 1892".
1395. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 23, for Explanation 1 (w.e.f 1-2-1977).
1396. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act, 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977) for the words "Explanation 2—in clauses (h) and (i)".

[1397][Explanation [1398] [III].—In clause (l) "appropriate Government" means—

(i) as respects any [1399][person] in the service of the Central Government, or any servant of a [1400][Railway administration] or of a cantonment authority or of the port authority of a major port, the Central Government;

[1401][];

(iii) as respects any other servant of the Government or a servant of any other [1402][] local authority, the State Government.

[1403][Explanation IV.—For the purposes of this proviso, "wages" includes bonus, and "labourer" includes a skilled, unskilled or semi-skilled labourer.

Explanation V.—For the purposes of this proviso, the expression "agriculturist" means a person who cultivates land personally and who depends for his livelihood mainly on income from agricultural land, whether as owner, tenant, partner or agricultural labourer.

Explanation VI.—For the purposes of Explanation V, an agriculturist shall be deemed to cultivate land personally, if he cultivates land—

(a) by his own labour, or

(b) by the labour of any member of his family, or

(c) by servants or labourers on wages payable in cash or in kind (not being as a share of the produce), or both.]

[1404][(1A) Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, an agreement by which a person agrees to waive the benefit of any exemption under this section shall be void].

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed [1405][]to exempt houses and other buildings (with the materials and the sites thereof and the lands immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment) from attachment or sale in execution of decrees for rent of any such house, building, site or land, [1406][].

[1407][]

SYNOPSIS

[s 60.1]	State Amendments	862	[s 60.4]	Subsequent Amendments in Sub-section (1) Prior to Amending Act, 1976	867
[s 60.2]	High Court Amendment	866
[s 60.3]	Changes Introduced in Previous Law in 1908	866	[s 60.5]	Amendments in Sub-section (2) Prior to Amending Act, 1976	869

1397. Inserted by the A.O. 1937.
1398. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 23, for "3" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1399. Substituted by Act 5 of 1943, section 2, for "public officer".
1400. Substituted for "a Federal Railway" by AO, 1950.
1401. Clause (ii) omitted by the AO, 1948.
1402. The word "railway or" omitted by AO, 1950.
1403. Inserted by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1404. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 23 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
1405. he letter and brackets "(a)" repealed by Act 10 of 1914, section 3 and Sch II.
1406. The word "or" repealed by Act 10 of 1914, section 3 and Sch II.
1407. Clause (b) repealed by Act 10 of 1914, section 3 and Sch II.

[s 60.6] Changes Made by the Amendment Act, 1976 869
[s 60.7] Changes Made by the Amendment Act, 1999 870
[s 60.8] In Execution of a Decree 870
[s 60.9] Saleable Property 870
[s 60.9.1] Government Grant Containing Prohibition Against Alienation 873
[s 60.9.2] Security Deposit 873
[s 60.9.3] Land Assigned for Maintenance 873
[s 60.9.4] Non-transferable Office ... 873
[s 60.9.5] Service of a Public Nature 874
[s 60.9.6] Chhotanagpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1896 874
[s 60.9.7] Restraint Upon Anticipation 874
[s 60.9.8] Right of Residence 874
[s 60.9.9] Right of a Patentee 874
[s 60.9.10] Burmese Marriage Property 874
[s 60.9.11] Interest of Tenant of a Non-residential Premises ... 875
[s 60.10] "Property" 876
[s 60.11] Coparcenary Property 876
[s 60.12] Disposing Power 876
[s 60.12.1] Trustee of a Charity 877
[s 60.12.2] Life Interest 877
[s 60.12.3] Bonus Sanctioned by Railway Company 877
[s 60.12.4] Delivery to Post Office 877
[s 60.12.5] Auctioneer 877
[s 60.12.6] Life Policy 877
[s 60.13] "Debts" 878
[s 60.14] Clause (a): Cooking Vessels 880
[s 60.15] Clause (a): Ornaments 880
[s 60.16] Clause (b): Tools of Artisans 880
[s 60.17] Clause (b): Implements of Husbandry 881
[s 60.18] Clause (c): Houses Occupied by Agriculturists 882
[s 60.19] Clause (e): Right to Sue for Damages 884
[s 60.20] Clause (f): Right of personal service 885
[s 60.21] Clause (g): Gratuity Allowed by Government or Local Authority or any Other Employer 885
[s 60.22] Stipends Payable Out of Service Family Pension Fund Notified in the Official Gazette 886
[s 60.23] Political Pensions 886
[s 60.24] Private Pensions 887
[s 60.25] Clause (h): Wages of Labourers 887
[s 60.26] Clause (i): Salary 888
[s 60.27] Salary of Private Servant — Explanation I: The moneys payable in relation to matters exempt from attachment or sale 889
[s 60.28] Clause (j) 889
[s 60.29] Clause (k): Compulsory Deposits in Provident Funds 890
[s 60.30] Clause (kb) 892
[s 60.31] Interest of a Lessee in a Residential Building 892
[s 60.32] Clause (l): Allowances of a government servant 892
[s 60.33] Clause (m): Expectancy of Succession etc. 893
[s 60.34] Clause (n): Right to Future Maintenance 893
[s 60.35] Objection that Property is not Liable to Attachment and Sale: When to be Raised 894
[s 60.36] Waiver: Sub-section (1A) 895
[s 60.37] Explanations: (I) – (VI) 895
[s 60.38] Application of the Section 895
[s 60.39] Crown Debts 896
[s 60.40] State Amendment 896

[s 60.1] State Amendments

Andhra Pradesh.—(1) The following amendments were made by CPC (Andhra Pradesh) (Andhra Area) Amendment Act, 1950 (34 of 1950), section 2 (w.e.f. 2-1-1951).

In its application to the Andhra area of the State of Andhra Pradesh in clause (g) of the Proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 60, after the words "stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of the Government" insert the words "or of a local authority".

(2) In its application to the Telangana area of the State of Andhra Pradesh in the proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 60 :

(i) after clause (g) insert the following:—

(gg) pension granted or continued by the Central Government, the Government of the pre-Reorganisation Hyderabad State or any other State Government on account of past services or present infirmities or as a compassionate allowance;

(ii) after Explanation 2 insert Explanation 2A which is same as below with the addition of "clause (gg) or" after "under the provisions of" [Andhra Pradesh Act 18 of 1953 (w.e.f. 2-12-1953)].

(3) In its application to the whole State in the proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 60.

(i) after clause (k) insert the following:—

(kk) amounts payable: under policies issued in pursuance of the rules for the Andhra Pradesh Government Life Insurance and Provident Fund and the Hyderabad State Life Insurance and Provident Fund:"

(ii) After Explanation 2 insert the following:—

Explanation 2A.—Where any sum payable to a Government servant is exempt from attachment under the provisions of clause (kk), such sum shall remain exempt from attachment notwithstanding the fact that owing to the death of the Government servant it is payable to some other person".

(Andhra Pradesh Act 11 of 1953 and Act 10 of 1962).

(4) The following amendments were made by Andhra Pradesh Act 24 of 1979, section 2 (dated 17 September 1979)

(i) In the proviso to section 60(1) after clause (kk) insert as under:—

(kkk) amounts payable under the Andhra Pradesh State Employees' Family Benefit Fund Rules;

(ii) In Explanation 2A, for the expression "clause (kk) " substitute the expression "clauses (kk) and (kkk) ".

Delhi.—As in Punjab.

Gujarat.—The following amendments were made by CPC (Bombay Amendment) Act, 1948 (Bom Act 60 of 1948), section 2, dated 30 November 1948.

In sub-section (1) of Section 60:—

(a) after clause (g) of the proviso, the following new clause shall be inserted namely:—

"(gg) stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of a local authority", and

(b) in Explanation 1, after the brackets and letter "(g)" the brackets and letters "(gg)" shall be inserted.

Haryana.—Same as in Punjab.

Himachal Pradesh.—(1) The following amendments were made by Himachal Pradesh Act, 31 of 1978, section 21, dated 1 April 1979.

Amendments are the same as in Punjab, with the following modifications:—

(i) in sub-section (4) words "as defined in the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900" not included.

(ii) Sub-section (5) not taken.

(iii) Sub-section (6) numbered as (5).

(2) (i) The following amendments were made by CPC (Himachal Pradesh Amendment) Act 6 of 1956.—

In sub-section (1) at the end of (c), insert the following:—

or compensation paid for such houses and buildings (including compensation for the materials and the sites and the land referred to above) acquired for a public purpose;

(ii) after clause (c) insert the following:—

(cc) compensation paid for agricultural lands belonging to agriculturists and acquired for a public purposes;"

Karnataka.—In its application to the Karnataka area, in the proviso to sub-section (1) after clause (p) insert:—

(pp) where the judgment-debtor is a servant of the State Government who has insured his life under the rules in force relating to the Official Branch of the Karnataka Government Life Insurance Department,—

(1) in the case of insurance effected prior to the ninth day of May, 1911, the whole of the bonus payable or paid thereunder to such servant, or in the event of his death to his nominee or other person or persons entitled to such bonus under the said rules; and

(2) in the case of insurance effected on or after the ninth day of May, 1911, and such insurance is compulsory, then the bonus in respect of the compulsory premia payable or paid to such servant, or in the event of his death to his nominee or other person or persons entitled to such bonus under the said rules." [Civil Procedure Code (Mysore Am), Act 14 of 1952 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951)].

Kerala.—The following amendments were made in its application to the State of Kerala.

(1) In its application to the State of Kerala including the Malabar district, in clause (g) of the Proviso to sub-section (1), after the words "stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of the Government" insert the words "or of a local authority"—CPC (Kerala Amendment) Act, 1957 (13 of 1957), section 3 (w.e.f. 1-10-1958). This amendment was made prior to the amendments made by the Contract Act 104 of 1976, section 23.

(2) In its application to the State of Kerala, in section 60(1), in the proviso after clause (g) insert as under:—

> (gg) all moneys payable to the beneficiaries under the Family Benefit Scheme for the employees of the Government of Kerala". [Vide Kerala Act 1 of 1988, section 2 (w.e.f. 5-1-1988]

Maharashtra.—In its application to the Hyderabad area of the State of Bombay, see the amendment in Andhra Pradesh (vide Hyderabad Act II of 1953 adapted by Bom (H) ALO 1956 and Bom AO 1957).

[Civil Procedure Code (Bom Am) Act 60 of 1948; (Hyderabad Am) 11 of 1953 as amended by Maharashtra Act 6 of 1965].

The following amendments were made by Maharashtra Act 65 of 1977, section 6, dated 19 December 1977.

In its application to the State of Maharashtra in section 60, in sub-section (1), in the proviso—

(a) after clause (g) insert clause (gg), namely:—

"(gg) in the Hyderabad area of the State of Maharashtra, any pension granted or continued by the Central Government or the Government of the former State of Hyderabad or any other State Government, on account of past services or present infirmities or as a compassionate allowance, which is not covered by clause (g);"

(b) After clause (kb), clause (kbb), be inserted as under:—

"(kbb) the amounts payable under the policies issued in pursuance of the Rules for the Hyderabad State Life Insurance and Provident Fund, which are not covered under clause (ka) or (kb)."

Explanation.—Where any sum payable to a Government servant is exempt from attachment under this clause or clause (gg) such shall remain exempt from attachment, notwithstanding the fact that owing to the death of the Government servant the sum is payable to some other person;."

Punjab.—[Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act 7 of 1934, section 35 as amended by Punjab Acts 12 of 1940, 6 of 1942 and 14 of 1960].—

(a) In sub-section (1) in the Proviso:—

(i) In cl (c), for the words "occupied by him" the following words shall be deemed to be substituted, viz.:— "not proved by the decree-holder to have been let out on rent or lent to persons other than his father, mother, wife, daughter, daughter-in-law, brother, sister or other dependants or left vacant for a period of a year or more".

(ii) After clause (c) the following clauses shall be deemed to be inserted, viz:—

(cc) Milch animals, whether in milk or in calf, kids, animals used for the purposes of transport of draught cart and open spaces or enclosures belonging to an agriculturist and required for use in case of need for tying cattle, parking carts, or stacking fodder or manure:

(ccc) one main residential-house and other buildings attached to it (with the material and the sites thereof and the land immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment) belonging to a judgment-debtor other than an agriculturist and occupied by him:

Provided that the protection afforded by this clause shall not extend to any property specifically charged with the debt sought to be recovered".

(b) After sub-section (2) the following sub-sections shall be deemed to be inserted, viz:—

(3) Notwithstanding any other law for the time being in force an agreement by which a debtor agrees to waive any benefit of any exemption under this section shall be void.

(4) For the purposes of the section the word "agriculturist" shall include every person whether as owner, tenant, partner or agricultural labourer who depends for his livelihood mainly on income from agricultural land as defined in the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900.

(5) Every member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, and every member of a scheduled caste shall be presumed to be an agriculturist until the contrary is proved.

(6) No order for attachment be made unless the court is satisfied that the property sought to be attached is not exempt from attachment or sale".

Rajasthan.—In sub-section (1) of Section 60 in the Proviso:—

(i) In clause (b) after the word "agriculturist" insert the words "his milch cattle and those likely to calve within two years" [Rajasthan Act 19 of 1958, w.e.f. 18-4-1958].

(ii) after clause (k), insert the following:—

(kk) moneys payable under Life Insurance Certificates issued in pursuance of the Rajasthan Government Servants Insurance Rules, 1953.

(iii) after Explanation 3 insert the following:

Explanation 4.—Where any money payable to a Government servant of the State is exempt from attachment under the provision contained in clause (kk), such money shall remain exempt from attachment notwithstanding the fact that owing to the death of a Government servant it is payable to some other person". (Rajasthan Act 16 of 1957).

Tamil Nadu.—The following amendments were made by CPC (Madras Amendment) Act, 1950 (34 of 1950), section 2 (w.e.f. 2-1-1951) and Madras Act No 22 of 1957, section 3, dated 18 December 1957 and Madras (A.T.) ALO, 1961 w.e.f. 1-4-1960.

In its application to the State of Madras including the Kanyakumari district and the Schencottah taluk of the Tirunelveli district, and the added territories the amendment made in Section 60 is the same as that of Kerala.

Union Territory (Chandigarh).—The following amendments were made by Punjab Reorganisation Act, 1966 (31 of 1966), section 88, dated 1 November 1966.

In its application to the Union Territory of Chandigarh amendments in the section are the same as in Punjab.

Union Territory (Pondicherry).—The following amendments were made by Pondicherry (Extension of Laws) Act, 1968 (26 of 1968), section 3(i) and Schedule, Part II (w.e.f. 5-9-1968).

In its application to the Union Territory of Chandigarh amendments in the section are the same as in Tamil Nadu.

Uttar Pradesh.—[Civil Procedure Code (UP Am) Act, 35 of 1948, section 2 (w.e.f. 28-8-1948)].—Add the following Explanation (1A) after Explanation 1 in sub-section (1) —

Explanation (1A).—Particulars mentioned in clause (c) are exempt from sale in execution of a decree whether passed before or after the commencement of the C P Code (United Provinces Amendment) Act, 1948, for enforcement of a mortgage of charge thereon".

[s 60.2] High Court Amendment

Calcutta High Court.—The following modifications were made by Calcutta Gazette, dated 27 April 1967, Pt I, section 757.

In its application to all the suits or proceedings in the Court of Small Causes, Calcutta, in section 60 add the provision after sub-section (1) "provided that nothing in this section shall be taken as conferring on the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta, any jurisdiction to attach and sell immovable property in execution of a decree—

Provided also that this section shall, so far as the court mentioned in the last preceding proviso is concerned, apply only to decrees obtained in suits instituted after the 31 May 1937, and the law applicable to suits instituted up to that date shall be the law which was here before in force in that court.

[s 60.3] Changes Introduced in Previous Law in 1908

This section corresponds with section 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 except in the following particulars:

(i) In clause (a), the words "cooking vessels", "beds", and "and such personal ornaments as, in accordance with religious usage, cannot be parted with by any woman", were added. See notes below.

(ii) The latter portion of clause (h) relating to agricultural produce is new.

(iii) Clause (c) stood as follows in section 266 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882: "The materials of houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by agriculturists."

(iv) In clause (g), the words "or payable out of any service family pension fund notified in the Gazette of India by the Governor-General in Council in this behalf" were added.

(v) Clause (h) was newly inserted. It is now reproduced in clause (1) with some modifications.

(vi) In clause (i), the words "or allowances equal to salary" and "while on duty" were added. See notes below.

(vii) Clause (k) is new. See notes below.

(viii) In clause (1), the words "whether payable in moneys or in kind" were newly inserted. The clause is now clause (h) with some additions.

(ix) The alterations in sub-section (2), clause (a), correspond with the alterations in sub-section (1), clause (c).

[s 60.4] Subsequent Amendments in Sub-section (1) Prior to Amending Act, 1976

(i) In clause (g) the words "pensioners of the Crown" and "the Central Government or the Provincial Government" were substituted for the words "pensioners of the Government" and "the Governor-General in Council" by para 3 and sch 1 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Orders 1937, and the words "Official Gazette" were substituted for the words "Gazette of India" by para 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order 1937. By the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950, the word "Government" took the place of the word "Crown" and the word "State" was substituted for the word "Provincial".

(ii) Clause (h) as enacted in 1908 ran thus:

> "Allowances (being less than salary) of any public officer or of any servant of a railway company or local authority while absent from duty."

This provision, with certain modifications, has been transferred to clause (1) by the Code of Civil Procedure, (Second Amendment) 1937. In its place by the said Act, clause (1) was transferred as cl (h) with the addition of words "and salary to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary." The original clause (1) ran thus:

> "...the wages of labourers and domestic servants whether payable in money or in kind."

The words "and salary, to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary" were, however, omitted by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1943.[1408]

(iii) Clause (i) has been subjected to various amendments from time-to-time—

(a) By Act 26 of 1923, the words "twenty rupees" and "forty rupees" that existed in the clause as it stood in 1908 were replaced by the words "forty rupees" and "eighty rupees". Act 9 of 1937 raised the limit of exemption to the "first hundred rupees and one half of the remainder" of the salary, and by Act 26 of 1963 the words "the first two hundred rupees" were substituted for the words "first hundred rupees".

(b) Clause (i) with the amendment made by Act 26 of 1923 so far as it is relevant here ran thus:

> ...the salary or allowances equal to salary of any such public officer or servant as is referred to in clause (h), while on duty,'to the extent of—

(i) the whole of the salary, where the salary does not exceed forty rupees monthly;

(ii) forty rupees monthly, where the salary exceeds forty rupees and does not exceed eighty rupees monthly; and

(iii) one moiety of the salary in any other case.

The clause was re-cast by Act 9 of 1937.

(c) By Act 20 of 1925, a proviso was added to clause (i). It ran thus:

> "Provided that where the decree-holder is a society registered or deemed to be registered under the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912, and the judgment-debtor is a member of the society, the provisions of sub-clauses (i) and (ii) shall be construed as if the word "twenty"

1408. See notes headed "clause (h)" below.

were substituted for the word "forty" wherever it occurs and the word "forty" for the word "eighty"."

This proviso was dropped when this clause was amended and re-enacted by Act 9 of 1937.

(d) A new proviso was added by Act 9 of 1937 with a view to see that a judgment-debtor is not continuously oppressed.

(e) By section 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act (V of 1943), the present clause and proviso were substituted for the old clause and proviso.

(f) Word "Government" has been substituted for the word "Crown" by Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

(g) By the Amendment Act 66 of 1956, the words "in execution of any decree other than a decree for maintenance" were inserted in the clause and a fresh clause (i-a) was added.

4. Clause (j) was amended by the Amending Act 35 of 1934 and the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order 1937. The clause originally ran thus:

"...the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Indian articles of war apply."

The words "the Naval Discipline Act as modified by" were omitted by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950, and the section 10 of Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951, the words and figures "the Army Act, 1950" were substituted for the words and figures "the Indian Army Act 1911, or the Burma Army Act." The words "The Air Force Act, 1950, or" were inserted by Act 66 of 1956.

5. In clause (k) the year of the Provident Funds Act now in force is given. The amendment was made by Act 9 of 1937.

6. (a) Clause (1) was enacted by Act 9 of 1937 — It deals with the question of allowances. The original clause which dealt with the question was clause (h) of the CPC as enacted in 1908. The present clause requires a notification by the appropriate government before exemption can be claimed.[1409]

(b) In this clause (1), the words "appropriate Government" were substituted for the words "Governor-General in Council" by para 3 and sch 1 of the "Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order 1937, read with the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Supplementary Order 1937. So also, the words "Official Gazette" were substituted for the words "Gazette of India" by para 4 of the said Order of 1937. For the words "public officer' and any such officer or servant' the words "Servant of the Crown" and "any such servant" respectively were substituted by section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1943, word "Government" has been substituted for the word "Crown" by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

7. In clause (o) the words "any Indian law" were substituted for the words "any law passed under the Indian Councils Acts 1861 and 1892", by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order 1937.

8. The explanation to sub-section (1) was numbered as explanation 1 and the words "and in the case...actually payable" were added by the Amending Act 9 of 1937, with effect from 1 June 1937. The words "servant of the Crown" were substituted for the words "public officer" by section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1943, and the word "Government" has been substituted for the word "Crown" by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

---

1409. See note as to clause (k) above.

9. Explanation 2 is new. It was added by Act 9 of 1937. It explains the word "salary" used in clauses (h) and (i). It took effect from 1 -6-1937.

10. Explanation 3 was added by para 3 Sch 1 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order 1937. By section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1943, in clauses (i) and (ii) the word "person" was substituted for the words "public officer" and in clause (iii), the words "the servants of the Crown" were substituted for the words "public officer". Clause (ii) was omitted by Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order, 1948. By the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950, the words "a Railway Administration" were substituted for the words "a Federal Railway" and in clause (iii), the words "railway or" which appeared before "local authority", are omitted and the word "Government" is substituted for the word "Crown".

[s 60.5] Amendments in Sub-section (2) Prior to Amending Act, 1976

This sub-section, as it stood in 1908; comprised of two clauses (a) and (b), and clause (h) was repealed by Act 10 of 1914, Sch 11. The Amendment Act, 1976 does not make any changes in this sub-section.

[s 60.6] Changes Made by the Amendment Act, 1976

(i) Clause (c) to the proviso to sub-section (1) has been amended so as to extend the exemption from attachment and sale to houses and other buildings belonging to not only an agriculturist but also to a labourer or a domestic servant.

(ii) Clause (g) to the proviso to sub-section (1) has been amended so as to extend the exception to stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of a local authority or any other employer.

(iii) Clause (i) has been amended to enlarge the exception as to salary to the extent of "the first four hundred rupees and two thirds of the remainder. The new proviso to clause (i) does away with the distinction between judgment-debtors who are government servants or railway employees and other salaried judgment-debtors.

(iv) Clause (j) has been substituted so as to extend to all persons to whom the Navy Act, 1957 applies.

(v) The new clause (kb) extends the exception from attachment, to moneys payable under life insurance policies.

(vi) The new clause (kc) exempts from attachment, interest of tenants in a residential building governed by rent Acts.

(vii) Explanations (I) and (II) are altered in consonance with changes carried out in clauses (g), (h), (i), (ia), (k), (l), and (o).

(viii) Explanations (IV) (V) and (V1) define the expressions "wages", "labourer", "agriculturist" and when such an agriculturist "shall be deemed to cultivate land personally".

(ix) Sub-section (IA) has been added so as to render an agreement waiving the benefit of any of the exceptions under sub-section (1) void.

[s 60.7] Changes Made by the Amendment Act, 1999

In clause (i) of proviso to sub-section(1), the words "four hundred rupees" have been replaced by "one thousand rupees" by section 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999. The amendment which came in to effect from 1 July 2002 does not exempt salary from attachment to the extent mentioned in clause (i) of the section 60 before the commencement of amended provisions.

[s 60.8] In Execution of a Decree

The expression "decree", in this section, refers to a money-decree, and not a mortgage decree, for, attachment is not necessary in mortgage decrees. The result is that the exemptions from attachment and sale contained in the proviso to this section do not apply to a mortgage decree for sale.[1410] Provisions of section 60(1) proviso and section 60(1A), do not apply to a mortgage decree. Execution of a mortgage decree in regard to a residential house is not barred by section 60(1A), which prohibits waiver of the exemption.[1411] A mortgage decree itself directs the sale. No attachment is necessary. Hence, properties exempt under section 60(1) proviso, can be sold pursuant to the final decree for sale. As no attachment is necessary, no scope exists either for invoking section 60(1) main part, or for considering exemption under section 60(1) proviso.[1412] Section 60(1) does not apply to a sale held in revenue recovery proceedings.[1413] In section 60(1)(c), proviso the words "attachment or sale" really contemplate the case of attachment and sale. In the proviso "or" should be read as "and", since the latter word is the word used in the main part. In a mortgage decree there is no question of attachment. Hence, the exemptions from attachment do not apply to a mortgage decree.[1414] Wherein order is made for the payment of a fictitious sum without giving any opportunity to any person against whom the order is made, to show cause against the passing of such an order for the said sum, the order is a nullity. When a decree for order is illegal, any sale held in execution of such a decree or order and confirmed cannot be set aside on the ground that it was illegal when the sale is in favour of third party. But where a decree or order is a nullity, it will be deemed to have no existence at all and any sale held in execution of any decree or order must also be held to be null and void.[1415]

[s 60.9] Saleable Property

Subject to the proviso to sub-section (1), all saleable property which belongs to the judgment-debtor may be attached and sold in execution of a decree against him. The equity of redemption of a mortgagor in mortgaged property is "saleable property" within the meaning of this section, and is, therefore liable to be attached and sold in execution of a decree against

---

1410. Mubarak v Ahmad, AIR 1924 All 328 (FB) : (1924) ILR 46 All 489; Alla Baksh v Cheeram, AIR 1945 Lah 123 : 47 Punj LR 107.
1411. KK Lakshmi v State Bank of Travancore, AIR 1988 Ker 311.
1412. Nabisa Beevi v Manager, Canara Bank Nagarcoil, AIR 1984 Mad 249.
1413. State of Punjab v Dina Nath, AIR 1984 SC 352 : (1984) 1 SCC 137.
1414. Lavnan v Subanna, AIR 1988 Kant 40; Rewali v Chiranjilal, AIR 1944 Lah 29 followed.
1415. Surinder Nath Kapoor v UOI, (1988) Supp SCC 626.

him.[1416] If transfer of a particular property is prohibited by law, it cannot be attached, because it is not saleable property. Hence, a tenancy right whose transfer is prohibited by section 14(1)(b), Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, cannot be attached.[1417] The legislature never contemplated in section 15(1) of Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947 that the lessee of a non-residential premises cannot transfer and assign the interest in the lease hold rights. Thus, where the notification was issued permitting transfer of interest of the lessee in the business premises under proviso to section 15(1) of Bombay Rent Act, the goodwill and tenancy rights in such premises would be saleable property over which the lessee would have disposing power and therefore, they would be liable to attachment and sale under section 16 of the CPC and section 15(1) of Bombay Rent Act would be no bar.[1418] A preliminary decree for the realisation of unpaid consideration on a mortgage bond is attachable under this section.[1419] The share of a partner in a partnership business is "saleable property", and can be attached and sold in execution of a decree obtained against him by his creditor.[1420] A preliminary decree for accounts in a suit for dissolution of partnership and accounts[1421] as also a preliminary decree in favour of the judgment-debtor in a suit for accounts[1422] is attachable. The right to claim specific performance of a contract to sell land is also attachable and saleable.[1423] Similarly, a right to purchase shares or even an option to do so is a right to property. The benefit under such a contract does not become non-assignable by a condition that certain consideration has to be paid for such purchase. That being so, such a right is attachable.[1424] A life-interest in trust funds is attachable and saleable in execution of a decree against the life-tenant.[1425] Similarly, a vested remainder can be attached and sold in execution of a decree against the remainderman.[1426] The beneficial interest of the party, in which the judgment-debtor has no legally transferable interest or the judgment-debtor in a deed of trust can be attached if it is vested but not if it is contingent.[1427] The interest of a member of a Kshatriya tarwad is liable to attachment and sale as it is partible under the law.[1428] The expression "saleable property" connotes that the property in question is saleable by court auction at a compulsory sale. Such a connotation implies that the concerned property is capable of being transferred. Consequently, the property in which the judgment-debtor has no legally transferable interest or the transfer of which is prohibited by any law for the time being in force, cannot be sold in court auction and is not a saleable property. On this principle, the Bombay High Court in Harsukh Jadhavji Joshi v Ramesh H Shah[1429] held that under section 29(2) of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960, and the bye-laws of the housing society in question, a member of such society was a tenant of premises allotted to him and as such had no saleable interest or disposing power without the consent of the society. Any attachment and sale of such interest in execution of a decree

---

1416. Parashram v Govind, (1897) 21 Bom 226.
1417. Belrex India Ltd v Shinghal Electric Co, AIR 1983 Del 430.
1418. Union Bank of India v Mitter Sain Rup Chand, AIR 1995 Bom 371(DB).
1419. Ismail v Johri Mal, AIR 1937 All 652.
1420. Jagat Chunder v Iswar Chunder, (1893) 20 Cal 693, see O XXI, rule 49.
1421. Ratanshi v Tricumji, AIR 1940 Pat 107 : (1940) 18 Pat 698.
1422. Mono Mohan v Kali Kinkar, AIR 1935 Cal 751.
1423. Rudra v Krishna, (1887) 14 Cal 241.
1424. Champaran Sugar Co. v Haridas, AIR 1966 Cal 134 : 69 Cal WN 815.
1425. Abdul Latef v Doutre, (1889) ILR 12 Mad 250.
1426. Annaji v Chandrabai, (1893) ILR 17 Bom 503; Matimala v Surendra Nath, AIR 1936 Cal 802.
1427. Rajes Kanta Roy v Srimathi Shanti Debi, AIR 1957 SC 255 : (1957) SCR 77 : 1957 SCJ 197 : 1957 SCA 440.
1428. Bank of New India v Ponnamma, AIR 1961 Ker 105 : (1960) ILR Ker 906.
1429. Harsukh Jadhavji Joshi v Ramesh H Shah, AIR 1974 Bom 87 : (1973) 75 Bom LR 649.

passed against such a member by a third person was illegal. In appeal,[1430] the Supreme Court, reversing the high court, held that a flat in a tenant co-partnership housing society was liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree against a member in whose favour or for whose benefit it has been allotted by the society, that the right to occupy such a flat assumed significant importance and acquired, under the law, a stamp of transferability in furtherance of the interest of commerce and that in the absence of unambiguous and clear legal bar it would not be in the interest of commerce to impose a ban on its saleability. It further held that there was no absolute prohibition either in the Act or the rules or in the bye-laws against transfer of interest of a member and that though the flat was owned by the society, the allottee had a right or interest to occupy the same and that there was nothing in section 31, showing that the right to occupy, which was a right which can be sold in auction, was not attachable in execution proceedings. Though there were certain restrictions under section 29(2), and bye-law 71D, they were not such that their breach would render the transfer void. It is submitted that this decision requires reconsideration since—

(i) it fails to take into consideration various aspects relating to the rights of such building societies both under the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912 and the bye-laws made thereunder;

(ii) the fact that, the society is, and remains, even after allocation of a flat to its member, the owner of such a flat;

(iii) that though the allottee-member can transfer the occupancy rights in such a flat, such right is not absolute and is limited in that the society has, in certain circumstances, under its own rules, to which the member and his right to transfer is subject to, the right to refuse to accept the transferee as its member. These rights of such a society, which was not before the court, have not been adequately considered and so also the consequences following from the judgment on a large number of such societies. The judgment does not consider the question as to what would happen to the execution sale, if the society for valid reasons were to refuse, under its rules, to accept the auction-purchaser as its member. Such a situation would involve such a society into litigation to prevent which is the principal object of the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912. In view of the impact of the judgment on a number of such societies, the court ought at least to have given a chance to the society to be heard before it gave the judgment affecting its right. The adjudication of an Indian citizen as insolvent in a foreign state does not affect the rights of the decree-holder to attach and sell his immovable properly in this country.[1431] The fact that the property attached is the only source of livelihood does not exempt it from attachment.[1432]

The word "saleable", in this section means saleable by auction at a compulsory sale under the orders of the court. It has no references to property made non-transferable by an agreement between the parties to a transaction. It has, accordingly, been held that a condition in a permanent lease that the landlord would re-enter if the tenant made any transfer of the land demised, does not make the land unsaleable in execution. The lease forbids a sale by the tenant, but does not prevent a sale by the court.[1433] Likewise, when the law allows the transfer of a property subject to certain restrictions or under certain conditions, it can be attached

---

1430. Ramesh H Shah v Harsukh J Joshi, AIR 1975 SC 1470 : (1975) 2 SCC 105 : 1975 SCR 270; Vrajlal v Pandya v Dr Jaswant Shivlal, AIR 1977 Guj 131.
1431. Lakhpat Rai v Atma Singh, AIR 1962 P&H 228 : (1961) ILR 2 Punj 166.
1432. Harisingh v Chandasingh, AIR 1968 Bom 380 : 70 Bom LR 95 : (1968) Mah LJ 352.
1433. Keshab v Ajahar, (1914) 19 Cal WN 1182; Golak Nath v Mathuranath, (1893) 20 Cal 273.

and sold[1434] but if the prohibition by the statute is absolute, as for example, in the case of evacuee property under the provisions of Punjab Evacuees (Administration of Property) Act, 1947, then the property be attached or sold;[1435] however, when the property is not alienable by a coercive process of law, it has been held that the court can hardly be deemed to have jurisdiction to attach it.[1436] Country liquor is "saleable" property within the meaning of this section, though the permission of the collector may be necessary to the sale under the Abkari Act.[1437]

[s 60.9.1] Government Grant Containing Prohibition Against Alienation

When a government grant contains a prohibition against alienation of an estate and the power of voluntary transfer is thus taken away, and the judgment-debtor is only entitled to enjoy profits during his life-time, the decree-holder can proceed only against the profits and not against the estate.[1438]

[s 60.9.2] Security Deposit

Money or other valuable security deposited as security for the due performance of duty by a servant with his master, may be attached in execution of a decree against the servant, but the attachment will be subject to the lien which the master has upon the deposit, and the deposit cannot be sold until the same is at the disposal of the servant free from the lien of the master at the expiration of the period of employment.[1439] Security deposit made by the appellant to England for the costs of the respondent can be attached, as the appellant has the power of disposal over the same for his benefit.[1440]

[s 60.9.3] Land Assigned for Maintenance

Where land was assigned to a Hindu widow for her maintenance with a proviso against alienation, it was held that she had no saleable interest in the usufruct.[1441]

[s 60.9.4] Non-transferable Office

A religious office is not saleable property.[1442] Similarly, the right of managing a temple, of officiating at the worship conducted in it, and of receiving the offerings at the shrine, is not saleable.[1443] The right to officiate at funeral ceremonies is also not saleable.[1444] The property of a temple cannot be sold away from the temple. But there is no objection to the sale of the right,

---

1434. Direndranath Chandra v Satish Chandra, AIR 1956 Pat 4; Niresh Chandra v Paresh Chandra, AIR 1959 Ass 61.
1435. Aminchand v Nashan Begum, AIR 1954 P&H 235; Sheik Mohd Din v Thakar Singh, AIR 1952 P&H 428 : (1952) ILR Punj 546.
1436. Ramchandra v Sukhdeo, AIR 1935 Ngp 133.
1437. Purshottam v Balvant, (1908) 10 Bom LR 13.
1438. Ganjhu Upendra Singh v Ganjhu Meghanath Singh, AIR 1939 Pat 598 : (1939) ILR 18 Pat 370.
1439. Karuthan v Subramanya, (1886) 9 Mad 203.
1440. Province of Bengal v Bholanath Sen, AIR 1950 Cal 174 : (1949) 54 Cal WN 322.
1441. Diwali v Apaji, (1886) 10 Bom 342; Gulab Kuar v Bansidhar, (1893) 15 All 371; Bansidhar v Gulab Kuar, (1894) 16 All 443.
1442. Kuppa v Dorasami, (1883) ILR 6 Mad 76; Narasimma v Anantha, (1882) ILR 4 Mad 391; Rangasami v Ranga, (1893) ILR 16 Mad 146; Mancharam v Pranshankar, (1882) ILR 6 Bom 298.
1443. Durga Bibi v Chanchal, (1882) ILR 4 All 81; Rama Varma v Ramannayar, (1882) ILR 5 Mad 89; Rajah Vurmah v Ravi Vurmah, (1876) ILR 1 Mad 235 : 4 IA 76; Gnanasambanda Pandara Sannadhi v Velu Pandaram, (1900) ILR 23 Mad 271 : 27 IA 69; Srimati v Ratanmani, (1897) 1 Cal WN 493; Shailojanund v Peary, (1902) ILR 29 Cal 470.
1444. Jhummun v Dinooath, (1871) 16 WR 171.

title and interest of the servant of a temple in land belonging to the temple which he holds as remuneration for his service, the interest sold being subject in the hands, of the alienee to determination by the death of the original holder, or by his removal from office for failure to perform the service.[1445] Crops standing on properties which constitute emoluments of archaka service are liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree.[1446]

[s 60.9.5] Service of a Public Nature

Land burdened with the performance of a service of a public nature, eg land held on Swastivachakam service tenure, is inalienable, and cannot be attached.[1447]

[s 60.9.6] Chhotanagpur Encumbered Estates Act, 1896

Land released from management under the Chota Nagpur Estates Act, 1896, is under section 12A of that Act inalienable during the life-time of the holder without the sanction of the commissioner. Without such sanction it cannot be attached and sold.[1448]

[s 60.9.7] Restraint Upon Anticipation

The income of property subject to a restraint upon anticipation accruing due after the date of the judgment, cannot be attached in execution of a decree against the separate property of a married woman passed under section 8 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1874.[1449]

[s 60.9.8] Right of Residence

The right of a widow under the Hindu law to reside in her husband's family house is a purely personal right and cannot be transferred. Such right cannot be attached in execution as it is not "saleable" property,[1450] even if the right has been asserted by her by obtaining a decree in a subsequent suit against the creditor purchaser of the house.[1451]

[s 60.9.9] Right of a Patentee

See the case under noted.[1452]

[s 60.9.10] Burmese Marriage Property

The interests of parties to a Burmese Buddhist marriage in the marriage property is an indeterminate interest and not saleable within the meaning of this section.[1453] Under section 10 of the Employees Provident Funds and Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1952, the amount standing to the credit of a member in the fund is immune from attachment. This immunity is

---

1445. Lotlikar v Wagle, (1882) 6 Bom 596; Bishen Chand v Nadir Hossein, (1888) 15 Cal 329 : 15 IA 1.
1446. Kutumba Rao v Govardhanam, AIR 1957 AP 349 : (1957) Andh LT 219 : (1957) 1 Andh WR 139; Kesavacharyulu v Venugopalasami, AIR 1956 AP 109.
1447. Anjaneyalu v Sri Venugopala, AIR 1922 Mad 197 : (1922) 45 Mad 620.
1448. Khitanarain v Surju, AIR 1931 Pat 364 : (1931) ILR 10 Pat 582.
1449. Goudkoin u.Vencatesa, (1907) 30 Mad 378.
1450. Salakshi v Lakshmayee, (1908) 31 Mad 500.
1451. Karuppahi v Singaravelu, AIR 1935 Mad 848. For other kinds of property which cannot be alienated, see Transfer of Property Act, 1882, section 6.
1452. Radha Kissen v Hira Lal, AIR 1939 Cal 283 : (1938) 2 Cal 618.
1453. Ma Paing v Maung Shwe Hpan, AIR 1927 Rang 274 : (1927) 5 Rang 478.

available, even to a fund managed under a scheme framed by the organisation under the act.[1454] There was unimpeachable evidence that a widow was residing in a part of a building, with her children. The decree-holder was not establishing that the widow was residing elsewhere or, that the property in dispute was in the possession of any person other than the widow. Objection under section 47, to the effect that being a residential house, it could not be attached in execution of a decree, was upheld.[1455]

[s 60.9.11] Interest of Tenant of a Non-residential Premises

Section 56 of Maharashtra Rent Control Act, 1999 leaves no manner of doubt that it enables the tenant to claim or receive any sum of any consideration, as a condition of the relinquishment, transfer or assignment of his tenancy of any premises. It indicates that the tenant has a disposing power in respect of the interest in the tenancy in the non-residential premises for his own benefit either by surrendering it to the landlord for any sum or consideration or transfer or assign the tenancy for consideration. Clause (kc) appended to the proviso of sub-section (1) of section 60, CPC prohibits the attachment and sale of interest of the lessee of a residential building to which the Maharashtra Rent Control Act, 1999 applies the Rent Control Act applies but the said prohibition is not applicable to the interest of a tenant of a non-residential premises to which the Act applies and therefore, it can safely be held that the interest of the tenant in the non-residential premises to which the Act of 1999 applies is attachable and saleable in execution of the decree against the tenant.[1456]

It is a settled position of the law that under section 58 CPC that the person cannot be detained in the custody for period of more than three months in execution of money decree exceeding Rs 5000. Such person has to be released as quickly as possible unless the custody of such person is required in other case. Such person cannot be re-arrested for execution of decree under subsistence and furthermore, such release cannot discharge the person from his debt.[1457]

Section 56 of Maharashtra Rent Control Act, 1999, gives a valuable right and creates a further interest in respect of premises let to a tenant. In view of section 56 of the 1999 Act a fortiorari tenancy rights of a tenant constitute saleable property and give tenants a disposing power in respect thereof and the same are, therefore, liable to be attached and sold in execution of a decree. Tenancy rights thus can be attached and sold in execution of a decree. However, this cannot affect the rights of the landlords/head tenants in any manner, for the right of a tenant under section 56 of the 1999 Act can only be exercised with the consent of the landlord. In execution of a decree against the tenant-sub-tenant, the court cannot force an unwilling landlord/head tenant to enter into such an agreement. But if such an agreement is entered into by the landlord or head tenant with a tenant or sub-tenant as the case may be, the consideration received by the latter is liable to be attached and sold. Further, if the landlord and/or the head tenant is willing to enter into an agreement as contemplated in sections 26 and 56, it would be possible for the executing court to force the tenant or sub-tenant to enter into an agreement contemplated therein. Needless to say, the executing court at that stage would not confirm the agreement, sale, assignment or transfer unless it is satisfied that the same was reasonable, fair and genuine. In this regard, such a sale would be no different from a sale of any other property.[1458]

1454. Tata Iron & Steel Co v Bir Singh, AIR 1982 Pat 130.
1455. Pushpamala Jain v Bank of Baroda, AIR 1990 P&H 28.
1456. TES Pvt Ltd v Indian Chemicals, AIR 2004 Bom 198 (FB).
1457. Yogesh v Vellangallur Kuries Pvt Ltd, OP(C). No. 2816 of 2019, decided on 19 November 2019 (Kerela High Court).
1458. VL & F Co v PB and M Works Pvt Ltd, AIR 2003 Bom 217.

[s 60.10] "Property"

A sues B for partnership accounts. The question of accounts is then referred to arbitration with the consent of the parties. Before the award is made, X, a creditor of A, applies for attachment of the "rights and interest" of A in the award. The attachment cannot be allowed for the expectant claim under an inchoate award is not "property" within the meaning of this section.[1459] Money paid into court, as a fine in a criminal case against a judgment-debtor is, after the order imposing the fine is set aside, attachable under this section, as money belonging to the judgment-debtor even before the issue of a refund certificate.[1460] Money deposited by a judgment-debtor, voluntarily, in another suit is liable to attachment though such attachment has to abide the result of that suit.[1461] Where the judgment-debtor acquired certain bhoomidari rights, and on her death, her adopted son succeeded to them, those rights were the assets of the deceased and were liable to be attached in execution of a decree against the deceased.[1462] An annuity payable to a deity under the UP Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 in lieu of the zamindari property is liable to he attached in execution of a decree against the deity.[1463]

The doors and windows of a building cannot be separately attached. for they have no separate existence as property.[1464] An unascertained right in unascertained property could not be the subject of attachment.[1465]

[s 60.11] Coparcenary Property

A creditor having a decree against a Hindu father alone, can attach and sell in execution thereof, the interest of the sons in the joint Hindu family property, on the principle of pious obligation of the sons to discharge the liability of the father. Even if the decree is against the father alone and whether the sons are represented by the father or not, the judgment-creditor can proceed to execute the decree against the son's interest in the joint family property unless the debt is held to be avyavaharika.[1466] But, if there has been a partition between the father and the sons, a decree obtained thereafter against the father cannot be executed against properties which have fallen to the shares of the sons, even though the debt in respect of which the decree was passed was contracted before the partition.[1467]

[s 60.12] Disposing Power

A property may not belong to a judgment-debtor, and yet he may have a disposing power over it exercisable for his own benefit. In such cases, the property is liable to attachment and sale, subject to the proviso to this section.

1459. Syud Taffuzzool v Raghoonath, (1871) 14 Moo Ind App 40.
1460. Harnam Singh v Salig Ram, (1912) PR No 91318.
1461. M Kasiyya v J Pullayya, AIR 1974 AP 220.
1462. Kishan Singh v Babu Singh, AIR 1973 All 196 : (1973) All LJ 280.
1463. Sarup Lal v Radha Manoharji, AIR 1975 All 18.
1464. Peru v Ronu, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 164.
1465. Bebee Tokui v Davod, (1856) 6 Moo Ind App 510.
1466. Kanchan v Babu Bhai, AIR 1967 Raj 184 : (1967) Raj LW 290.
1467. Pannalal v Mst Narain, AIR 1952 SC 170 : (1952) SCR 544 : 1952 SCJ 211; Kuppuswami v Rangaswami Gounder, AIR 1962 Mad 383 : (1962) 2 Mad LJ 132 : 75 LW 144.

[s 60.12.1] Trustee of a Charity

A trustee of a religious endowment has no disposing power over the corpus of the trust estate exercisable for his own benefit; hence the corpus cannot be attached.[1468]

[s 60.12.2] Life Interest

Where under a compromise with a reversioner, a Hindu widow was allowed to keep certain property for her life, and she agreed not to alienate it, and on her death, the property was to pass to the reversioner, it was held that she had no disposing power over the property.[1469] In the case of an impartible zamindari, if a junior member is given a specified share in profits in lieu of maintenance during his life-time, unless the right to receive profits corresponds to joint ownership in the property, it has been held that the right is purely personal and is not capable, of being attached.[1470]

[s 60.12.3] Bonus Sanctioned by Railway Company

A bonus sanctioned by a railway company, to its servant, is virtually a gift which must be completed either by a document or by actual payment as required by section 123 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. A railway company sanctioned a bonus to A, and the amount was forwarded to the district paymaster of the company for payment to A. Before the amount was paid to A, it was attached in the hands of the paymaster by a creditor of A. It was held that the amount could not be attached, for the gift was not complete, and A had, therefore, disposing power over the money.[1471]

[s 60.12.4] Delivery to Post Office

A sends a cover containing currency notes to the post office for delivery to B, the addressee. Can the cover be attached while it is still in the Post Office by a creditor of B? It has been held that it can be attached, the reason given being that the cover is in the disposing power of B. When once the letter has been posted, the property in it becomes vested in the addressee.[1472]

[s 60.12.5] Auctioneer

An auctioneer has no disposing power over the whole of the sale proceeds of goods sold by him, but only over that portion of it which represents his commission. Hence, the whole of the sale proceeds in the hands of an auctioneer cannot be attached in execution of a decree against him but only so much of it as represents his commission.[1473]

[s 60.12.6] Life Policy

Where a married man effects a policy on his own life, and the policy is expressed on the face of it to be for the benefit of his wife, or of his wife and children or any of them, then, in

---

1468. Bisen Chand v Nadir Hossein, (1888) 51 Cal 329 : 15 IA 1.
1469. Basangowla v Irgowdati, AIR 1923 Bom 276 : (1923) 47 Bom 97.
1470. Ramchandra v Sukhdeo, AIR 1935 Nag 133.
1471. Janki Das v East Indian Railway, (1884) 6 All 634; Natha v Schiller, AIR 1924 Bom 88 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 599.
1472. Narasimhulu v Adiappa, (1890) 13 Mad 242.
1473. Smith v Allahabad Bank, (1901) 23 All 135.

cases to which the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, applies, the simple declaration on the face of the policy that the policy is for the benefit of his wife or children amounts to a trust for them, and the policy cannot be attached by his creditors [see section 6 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1874]. But in cases to which that Act does not apply, such a declaration is not sufficient to create a trust, and the insured has a disposing power over the policy for his own benefit, and the policy may be attached by his creditors, unless it has been assigned as provided by section 130 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, or a trust has been declared in respect thereof as provided by section 5 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882. But, where the policy is not expressed to be for the benefit of the wife or children, and they are simply named as the persons who are to receive the amount in case of the prior death of the assured, there is no trust created and the amounts continue to belong to the assured and can be attached.[1474] There was a conflict of opinion as to whether section 5 of the Act applied to Hindus, for it was held by the High Court of Madras that it did,[1475] and by the High Courts of Bombay,[1476] and Calcutta,[1477] that it did not. But the Act has been amended (see Act 13 of 1923), and the provisions of that section are made applicable to policies of insurance effected by Hindus, Mahommedans, Sikhs or Jains in Madras after 31 December 1913 (being the year of the Madras decision), and in other parts of British India after 1 April 1923; but nothing contained in the amending Act is to affect any right or liability which has accrued or been incurred under any decree of a competent court passed before 1 April, 1923. The word "property" is used in the widest possible sense and includes properties belonging to the coparceners of a joint Hindu family over which the father and the manager has a disposing power.[1478] Money deposited in court can be attached but the attachment will be subject to the result of the suit.[1479]

[s 60.13] "Debts"

Debts are expressly mentioned in the section, and they are liable to attachment and sale. A debt is an obligation to pay a liquidated (or specified) sum of money.[1480] Money that has not yet become due, does not constitute a debt, for there is no obligation to pay that which has not yet become due. The word "debt", in this section, means an actually existing debt, that is, a perfected and absolute debt. Rent, which has not become due, is not a debt and cannot be attached.[1481] A sum of money which might, or might not, become due, or the payment of which depends upon contingencies which may or may not happen, is not a debt.[1482] A money-claim that has already become due is a debt, and it may be attached as such, though it may be payable at a future day; but a money-claim accruing due is not a debt and cannot be attached. The attachment must operate at the time of the attachment and not be anticipatory so as to fasten on a claim that may ripen into a debt at some future time.[1483] A debt for the purpose of being attachable need not have become payable. For instance, a bond which has not

---

1474. Ramballav v Gangadhar, AIR 1956 Cal 275.
1475. Balamba v Krishnayya, (1914) 37 Bom 483 (FB).
1476. Shankar v Umabai, (1913) 37 Bom 471.
1477. Eshami Dasi v Gopal, (1914) 18 Cal WN 1335; Krishna v Mst. Promila, AIR 1928 Cal 518 : (1928) 55 Cal 1315.
1478. Muthulal Agarwal v The Trustees of Provident Fund of Tin Plate Co. AIR 1956 SC 675 : (1956) SCC 336 : (1956) SCR 100 : (1956) SCJ 406.
1479. Joseph's Tile Works v Kottayam Bank, AIR 1953 TC 21.
1480. Webster v Webster, (1862) 31 Bea v 393.
1481. Lachman v Jarundan, AIR 1928 All 193 : (1928) 50 All 507.
1482. Haridas v Barodo Kishore, (1900) 27 Cal 38.
1483. Syud Jaffurzool v Ragbeenath, (1871) 14 Moo Ind App 40, p 50; Sher Singh v Sri Ram, (1908) 30 All 246.

matured and which will become payable after some time, is a debt which can be attached and sold.[1484] So also, it has been held that a debt due to the judgment-debtor under a promissory note is attachable even though the note has been endorsed to a benamidar, who holds it in trust.[1485] But, it would be otherwise if the endorsement was made bona fide in favour of a third party. A contractor to the military authorities entered into an arrangement with a bank. The arrangement was that the bank would finance him against his bills for supplies under the contract. The contractor executed an irrevocable power of attorney in favour of the bank, authorising the bank to receive payment of the bills. The contractor made out a bill on the authorities and delivered the same to the bank for collection, with the endorsement that the amount under the bill should be paid to the bank. The bank duly sent the bill for payment, but before it could receive payment, a judgment-creditor in execution of a money-decree, attached it. The attachment was held not to be valid on the ground that the power of attorney coupled with the endorsement on the bill, amounted to an equitable assignment of the fund by way of security.[1486] The word "debts" includes a share of debts.[1487] A mere right to receive profits, the profits not having yet accrued due, is not attachable.[1488] The right to receive profits in future, unless it is incidental to the ownership of property, is incapable of being attached and sold.[1489] But a decree directing an inquiry into, mesne profits can be attached and sold.[1490]

A debt that is enforceable, only by a foreign court, is not liable to attachment under this section.[1491]

ILLUSTRATIONS

(i) A delivers goods to his agent, B, for sale.B sells the goods, and receives the sale proceeds. The sale proceeds in the hands of B constitutes a "debt" due to A, and they may, therefore, be attached while in B's hands in execution of a decree against A, Madho Das v Ramji.[1492]

(ii) A is bound under a deed to pay a monthly allowance to B for B's maintenance. C, who holds a decree against B, attaches, in August, the allowance for September. The attachment is not valid, for the allowance can only be attached as a "debt" and the allowance for a debt due to B at the time of attachment in August: Haridav v Barbda Kishore.[1493]

(iii) A agrees to sell his property to B for Rs 2,000 to be paid to A on the execution of the conveyance. The purchase-money payable to A is not a 'debt' owing to him by B until the conveyance is executed, Hence, its cannot be attached before the execution of the conveyance in execution of a decree against A, Ahmaduddin v Majlis Rai.[1494] But once the sale is completed, the amount representing the purchase-money may be attached in the hands of B, and it does not make any difference that the whole is payable in one sum or by instalments or in the shape of periodical payments; Harshankar v Baijnath.[1495]

(iv) Maintenance allowance that has already become due, "private" pensions that have already become due, and the wages of private servants [other than those mentioned in clause (h)] that have already become due are "debts" within the meaning of this section, Kasheeshuree v Greesh

1484. Bansi Lal v Mohammad Hafiz, AIR 1939 Pat 77 : (1939) ILR 17 Pat 706.
1485. Venkatarama v Valli Akkal, AIR 1935 Mad 181 : (1935) 58 Mad 693.
1486. Bharat Nidhi Ltd v Takhatmal, AIR 1969 SC 313 : (1969) 1 SCR 595.
1487. Upendra Mohan v Malini Mohan, AIR 1937 Cal 199 : (1937) 2 Cal 48.
1488. Jagarnath v Kishen, (1867) 7 WR 266; Sher Singh v Sri Ram, (1908) 30 All 246; Nawab Khajeh Habibula v Kaviraj, AIR 1929 Cal 352 : (1928) 33 Cal WN 282 : 121 Ind Cas 751.
1489. Ramchandra v Sukhdeo, AIR 1935 Ngp 133.
1490. Prasanna Kumar v Asutosh Roy, AIR 1914 Cal 60 : (1914) 18 Cal WN 450.
1491. Ghanshamlal v Bhansali, (1881) ILR 5 Bom 249.
1492. Madho Das v Ramji, (1894) ILR 16 All 286.
1493. Haridav v Barbda Kishore, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 38; Nilkunto v Hurro, (1978) 3 Cal 414.
1494. Ahmaduddin v Majlis Rai, (1881) ILR 3 All 12.
1495. Harshankar v Baijnath, (1901) ILR 23 All 164. As to attachment of right to claim specific performance, see note above : "Saleable property".

Chunder; (maintenance)[1496] Bhoyrub v Madhub Chunder;[1497] Ayyavayyar v Virasami;[1498] Devi Prasad v Lewis.[1499] But arrears of maintenance payable under the order of a criminal court are not liable to attachment as a debt, if the right to receive maintenance is only a personal right created by the order, Giribala Dasi v Nirmalabala.[1500]

(v) A agrees to advance Rs 5,000 to B on a mortgage of B's property. B advances Rs 3,000 only. C, who holds a decree against B, seeks to attach the balance, of Rs 2,000 payable by A to B as a debt due by A to B. C cannot attach the balance, for it is not a debt due by A to B. It is clear that if A fails to pay the balance, B is not entitled to specific performance, and his only remedy against A is by way of damages for non-payment of the balance, Phul Chund v Chand Mal;[1501] Sewa Singh v Milki Singh.[1502]

As to the mode in which a debt may be attached, see O XXI, rule 46; and O XXI, rule 79.

[s 60.14] Clause (a): Cooking Vessels

This clause should be liberally interpreted. Cooking vessels are not only vessels in which food is actually cooked, but also vessels necessary for cooking operations, such as a thali and a Gagra.[1503]

[s 60.15] Clause (a): Ornaments

Ornaments on the person of a Hindu wife, forming part of her stridhan, cannot be attached in execution of a decree against the husband, even though the Hindu law concedes him a personal right of user.[1504] The mangalsutra, a neck ornament which is worn by a Hindu married woman during the life-time of her husband without ever removing it, is also exempted from attachment.[1505] A dress or a personal clothing intended for wearing is wearing apparel, whether used or new. If a new apparel is kept for use at a future date, it is nonetheless a wearing apparel.[1506]

[s 60.16] Clause (b): Tools of Artisans

In Ramachandra Ayyar v Sesha Ayyangar,[1507] it was observed:

> The word 'artisan' has a well-recognised meaning and is roughly synonymous with craftsman or mechanic.

See also the under mentioned cases for the meaning of the word artisan.[1508] This clause should be liberally construed. Even tools of complicated character such as those of a goldsmith would fall within the proviso,[1509] as also a lathe, a drilling machine and a weeding machine.

1496. Kasheeshuree v Greesh Chunder, (1866) 6 WR Mis 64 (maintenance).
1497. Bhoyrub v Madhub Chunder, (1880) 6 CLR 19 (private pensions).
1498. Ayyavayyar v Virasami, (1898) 21 Mad 393.
1499. Devi Prasad v Lewis, (1908) 31 All 304 (wages of private servants).
1500. Giribala Dasi v Nirmalabala, AIR 1935 Cal 578 : (1935) 62 Cal 404 : 157 IC 1089.
1501. Phul Chund v Chand Mal, (1908) ILR 30 All 252.
1502. Sewa Singh v Milki Singh, AIR 1936 Lah 727 : (1936) 17 Lah 270 : 164 IC 258.
1503. Bindeshari v Banshi Lal, AIR 1932 All 344 : (1932) 54 All 399.
1504. Tukaram v Gunaji, (1871) 8 BHC (AC) 129.
1505. Appana v Tangamma, (1885) 9 Bom 106.
1506. Hiralal v Harison, AIR 1974 Pat 39.
1507. Ramachandra Ayyar v Sesha Ayyangar, AIR 1943 Mad 523 : (1943) 1 Mad LJ 414 : 56 LW 301.
1508. Nihal Singh v Siri Ram, AIR 1939 Lah 388 (FB); Karan Chand v Official Receiver, Simla, AIR 1938 Lah 936 : (1934) 15 Lah 26; Maniklal v Ramesh Chandra, AIR 1955 Cal 290 : 59 Cal WN 466; Kanhaiyalal v Sunder Lal, AIR 1957 Raj 353.
1509. Punnavanam v Muthuswami Achari, AIR 1962 Mad 444.

too, operated by electric power.[1510] Nor is it necessary that they should actually be in use at the time of the attachment. It is sufficient if they can be used when required.[1511] Sewing machines in a tailor's shop are exempt from attachment under this proviso.[1512] Mechanical tools are covered by section 60(1), proviso (b) of the CPC (case law reviewed).[1513] The following have been held not to be artisans: a surgeon or doctor,[1514] a musician,[1515] a firm.[1516] A person who does not himself use the lathe machines is not an "artisan" (even assuming that lathe machines are tools), if the machines are actually used only by his employees. In Bindeshari v Banchilal,[1517] an extended meaning was given to the word "artisan" as including a person who works in the production of commodities, and it was held that a soap boiler who practiced the art of making soap was an artisan and the paraphernalia of his soap factory were the tools of an artisan. So also, utensils used for making sweetmeats were held to be tools of an artisan.[1518] But these decisions were dissented from by the Madras High Court in Ramachandra Ayyar v Sesha Ayyangar and Punnavanam v Muthuswami Achari and by the Rajasthan High Court in Kanhayalal v Sunderlal, wherein it was held that a halwai was not a mere artisan, but more a shopkeeper who purchased commodities and processed them and that accordingly utensils used by him for preparing sweetmeats were not exempt from attachment under this proviso.

[s 60.17] Clause (b): Implements of Husbandry

Charaks, kadhais, and planks of timber used by an agriculturist for extracting sugar juice from sugarcane which he has grown on his field, and for turning into jaggery, are implements of husbandry, within the meaning of clause (b), and are exempt from attachment.[1519] It has been held that a motor tractor cannot be said to be an implement of husbandry. It is not indispensable to agriculture.[1520] It was however held in Dwarka v Meerut Municipality,[1521] that even a tractor used for large-scale agricultural operations fell within this proviso but this decision had been dissented from by the High Court of Madhya Pradesh which has held that engines and pumps installed for running a flour mill are not implements exempt from attachment under this proviso.[1522] The High Court of Madras also has held that an oil engine used as a quick mode of drawing water from a well is not indispensable to an agriculturist to cultivate his land and is not accordingly exempt from attachment. The ground on which the high court so held, was that the principle underlying clause (b) is that artisans who depend for their livelihood on the tools which they possess or the implements of husbandry which they, as agriculturists, require to earn, their livelihood should alone be exempted and that the word "livelihood" in the clause connoted the idea of means of living or subsistence.[1523] The question arises whether the pump set is an "implement of husbandry" belonging to an agriculturist and exempt from attachment and sale under sub-clause (b) of section 60(1). The Supreme

---

1510. Harjiram v Ghanshaym, AIR 1972 Raj 62.
1511. Kanhaiyalal v Sunder Lal, AIR 1957 Raj 353.
1512. Ahmed Sayeed v Kanizak, AIR 1941 All 157 : (1941) All 278.
1513. Harjiram v Ghanshyam Das, AIR 1972 Raj 62 (case law reviewed).
1514. Karamchand Sood v Official Receiver, AIR 1938 Lah 936 : ILR 15 Lah 26 : 34 PLR 809.
1515. Manikyam v Manikamma, AIR 1942 Mad 4 : (1941) 2 Mad LJ 671 : 1941 Mad WN 783.
1516. Champaklal v Swastik Bharat Kala Kendra, AIR 1960 Bom 276 : 61 Bom LR 1356.
1517. Bindeshari v Banchilal, AIR 1932 All 344 : (1932) 54 All 399.
1518. Mahabir v Raghunandan, AIR 1935 All 848 : (1935) All LJ 1011.
1519. Lakshman v Narhari, AIR 1924 Bom 294 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 1211.
1520. Saligram v Sheopratap, AIR 1939 Ngp 3 : (1939) ILR Nag 355.
1521. Dwarka v Meerut Municipality, AIR 1958 All 561.
1522. Mathra Bai v Kanhaiyalal, AIR 1959 MP 375; Saligram v Swaran Pratap, AIR 1939 Ngp 3 : (1939) ILR Nag 355.
1523. Aruamugha v Marappa, AIR 1973 Mad 46 : (1972) 2 Mad LJ 145.

Court, despite having an opportunity in the above noted matter, decided not to pronounce a finding on the above subject, hence, the conflicting High Court judgments would prevail in the respective area.[1524]

[s 60.18] Clause (c): Houses Occupied by Agriculturists

The term "agriculturist" includes persons engaged in cultivating the soil for remuneration, although they may have no interest in the soil either as proprietor or tenant.[1525] It means a small holder who tills the soil and cultivates it and not a large landed proprietor, even though his sole income is from land.[1526] The term means a person who personally engages himself in tilling the soil and whose livelihood depends upon the proceeds derived from that tillage of the soil. The true test is whether a man personally engages in tilling and whether this occupation is essential to his maintenance.[1527] In Pattabhirama Rao v Venkatasubbamma,[1528] it was held that a person might be an agriculturist even though he cultivated the lands, not personally, but through labourers, if he maintained himself from the income therefrom. In Chandravathi Tewari v UP Government,[1529] a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court held on a review of the authorities that whether a person was an agriculturist depended not on whether the income from the lands was the main source of his livelihood but whether his main occupation was agriculture, i.e., tilling the lands or directing or supervising agricultural operations. An agriculturist does not cease to be one when he is unable to cultivate his land in a year of scarcity.[1530] The meaning of the word "agriculturist" in this provision came up for consideration before the Supreme Court in Appasaheb v Bhalchandra,[1531] and it was held that before a person could claim to be an agriculturist "he must at least show that he was really dependent for his living on tilling the soil and was unable to maintain himself otherwise." It was accordingly held that a person who had a substantial income from lands other than those cultivated by him as home farm lands and also cash allowances, was not an agriculturist and that a building constructed by him was not within the exemption. In the case of a minor, if it is shown that his main income is derived from agriculture, it is immaterial that his lands are cultivated by labourers engaged for that purpose. Such a minor is an agriculturist.[1532] The Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (now replaced CPC, 1908), section 266, exempted from attachment only the materials of houses occupied by agriculturists. But it was held that even a house occupied by an agriculturist could not be attached provided it was occupied by an agriculturist as such,[1533] that is to say, it was

---

1524. Shanti Devi v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1997) 8 SCC 22.
1525. Devare v Vaikunt, (1917) 41 Bom 475.
1526. Hanmuntrao v Dhunaraj, AIR 1948 Bom 229 : (1947) ILR Bom 687 : 49 Beng LR 867; Muthu Venkatarama v Official Receiver, AIR 1926 Mad 350 : (1926) 49 Mad 227; Balwant Singh v Anjaman Imadad, AIR 1939 Lah 40; but see observations in Gowardhendas v Mohanlal, AIR 1938 Ngp 366 : (1938) ILR Nag 461.
1527. Nihal Singh v Siri Ram, AIR 1939 Lah 388 (FB); Parvata Neni v Official Receiver, Masulipatam, AIR 1937 Mad 551 (FB) : (1937) ILR Mad 777; Mst Araz Bibi v Mubarak Ali, AIR 1938 All 85 : (1937) All LJ 1314.
1528. Pattabhirama Rao v Venkatasubbamma, AIR 1952 Mad 807 : (1952) 1 Mad LJ 291.
1529. Chandravathi Tewari v UP Government, AIR 1961 All 183 : (1961) 1 All 141 : (1961) All LJ 88.
1530. Pukh Raj v Prabha, AIR 1970 Raj 108 : (1969) Raj LW 495.
1531. Appasaheb v Bhalchandra, AIR 1961 SC 589 : (1961) 2 SCR 163 : (1961) 1 SCA 735 : (1962) 2 SCJ 563; Keshav Nandan v Bank of Bihar, AIR 1977 Pat 185.
1532. P Bachubhai v Lalita, AIR 1972 Guj 31, p 33.
1533. Radhakisan v Balwant, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 530; Bank of Chettinad v Ko San Ok, AIR 1933 Rang 227 : (1933) 11 Rang 372; Radha Krishna v Maiku, AIR 1936 Oudh 155.

occupied by him bona fide for the purposes of agriculture.[1534] The burden of proving that it was so occupied, lies on the agriculturist-debtor and it must be proved by him in execution proceedings.[1535] The exemption extends after the death of the agriculturist, to his representative occupying the house in good faith as an agriculturist.[1536] If, under a deed of settlement, the settlee had only the right to enjoy the income of the house, without any power to alienate it and after his death the house was to go to his heirs absolutely, the right conferred on the settlee was not attachable in execution of a decree for maintenance of his wife; but a receiver can be appointed to collect the rent and thus satisfy the decree.[1537] If, however, a money-decree was passed against a person, who was not an agriculturist, and his non-ancestral house was attached during his life-time, and the house was on his death inherited by his son, who occupied it as an agriculturist, it was held that the house could not be released from attachment.[1538]

The right under the above provision is a personal right available to an agriculturist or a labourer or a domestic servant. It is neither heritable nor alienable. It can be enforced only during the life time of the person who is entitled to claim the right and after the death of the person concerned, the said right ceased to exist.[1539] But if, by a consent decree, an agriculturist agrees in consideration of time being given to him that his house may be attached and sold on default in payment of the decretal amount, the house may be attached and sold on default,[1540] for the privilege is one that may be waived.[1541] According to the High Court of Andhra Pradesh, the protection under section 60(1) proviso (c) cannot be waived. The protection given to the agriculturist against attachment of his residential house, is based upon high public policy of the state as any interruption of agricultural operations is against the national interests and it may lead to fall, in agricultural production. Such policy of the state cannot be defeated and any waiver of such a right is opposed to public policy.[1542] It is submitted that the Andhra view is the correct view.

If a house occupied by an agriculturist is specifically mortgaged, it is not protected from sale in execution of a decree upon the mortgage. Clause (c) does not prohibit the sale of property specifically mortgaged, though it may be occupied by an agriculturist as such, unless he is prohibited by law from mortgaging or selling it.[1543]

Under this clause, the main residential building and all other buildings attached to it, would be within the exemption. When the whole building is used for residential purposes, the 1534. Jivan v Hira, (1888) 12 Bom 363; Mirza v Jhenda Ram, AIR 1930 Lah 1034 : (1931) 12 Lah 367; Basavayya v Official Receiver, AIR 1960 AP 458.

---

1535. Pandurang v Krishnaji, (1904) 28 Bom 125; Jamna Prasad v Raghunath, (1913) 35 All 307; Mirza v Jhenda Ram, AIR 1930 Lah 1034 : (1931) 12 Lah 367; Matu Ram & Sons v Eligin Mills Co, AIR 1974 Del 205.
1536. Radhakisan v Balvant, (1883) 7 Bom 530; Badri Chandra v Indrajit, AIR 1932 All 508 : (1932) 54 All 736.
1537. S. Chenchulakshmi v A. Subramanian, AIR 1972 Mad 348 : (1972) 1 Mad LJ 206.
1538. Hirda Ram v Mohammad Din, AIR 1936 Lah 895; Balde v Singh v Sher Singh, AIR 1939 Lah 556; Gurparshad v Kishen Chand, AIR 1938 Lah 608; Buraj Ban Krishna Behari, (1953) Raj 759 : (1954) Raj LW 241.
1539. Parbathy Antherjanam v Indian Bank, AIR 1996 Ker 159.
1540. Uzir v Haradeb Das, (1920) 24 Cal WN 575.
1541. Ganga Bishun v Jagmohan, AIR 1927 Pat 233 : (1927) 6 Pat 254; Ramadin v Seth Sheodutt, AIR 1938 Nag 544; Ganpatrao v A.V Zinzarde, AIR 1948 Ngp 392 : (1948) ILR Nag 530.
1542. Duggirala Balurama Krishnayya v Arukapudi Jagannadhan Rao, AIR 1983 AP 136 (DB).
1543. Bhagwandas v Kashibai, (1880) 4 Bom 25; Bhola Nath v Kishori, (1912) 34 All 25; Mubarak v Ahmad, AIR 1924 All 328 (FB) : (1924) 46 All 489; Khemchand v Melaram, AIR 1955 J&K 33; Santha Kumari v Suseeladevi, AIR 1969 AP 355; Kochumariam v KV Co., AIR 1974 Ker 78.

fact that there is a shop in the ground floor, will not take it out of the exemption.[1544] What is contemplated is actual possession. A house which is dilapidated and unoccupied and not used for agricultural purposes is not exempt.[1545] The exemptions enumerated in section 60 are applicable to proceedings by way of attachment and sale by the official receiver in exercise of powers vested in him under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920.[1546] Exemption under section 60(1)(c) is available to an individual and not to their legal heirs.[1547] It has been held that the special provisions in favour of agriculturists do not offend Article 14 or Article 15 of the Constitution.[1548]

The Amendment Act, 1976, has extended the benefit now to a labourer and a domestic servant. Both terms "labourer" and "domestic servant" are used in their ordinary meaning and not in any technical sense. A house or a building belonging to and occupied by a labourer or a domestic servant would have the benefit of this clause. The court, in an execution proceeding for the realisation of decretal amount by selling the immovable property (viz residential house), found that the judgment-debtor was not an agricultural labourer, but was only a mason by profession. Still, the refusal of the benefit of section 60(1), proviso (c) to the judgment-debtor was unjustified. Initially, the burden is on the judgment-debtor to show that he is entitled to the benefits of section 60. But, once he has discharged his burden and the decree-holder adduces evidence that the judgment-debtor is not an agricultural labourer, but is only a mason, the finding given by the lower court must be accepted. A mason by virtue of the nature of the work that has been done by him, can be termed as a skilled labourer. Therefore, the judgment-debtor, who is mason and who is residing in his own residential house, is entitled to claim that his residential house is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree, in view of section 60(1) (c) read with Explanation IV to the proviso.[1549]

[s 60.19] Clause (e): Right to Sue for Damages

"Mesne-profits" are in the nature of damages, and the right to sue for mesne-profits is a right to sue for "damages". Such a right cannot, therefore, be attached and sold in execution of a decree against the person entitled to the right. Thus, if A is entitled to claim mesne-profits from B for wrongful dispossession of his lands, A's right to claim mesne-profits from B cannot be attached and sold in execution of a decree against A. If the right is attached and sold and purchased by X, X is not entitled to sue B for the mesne-profits, the sale to him being void.[1550] An insolvent's right to sue for contribution is not a right or property, under this clause, exempting it from vesting in the official receiver under section 28(5) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920.[1551] For the test of "mere right to sue for damages" see Bansigopal v PK Banerji.[1552]

1544. Aga Jaffer Ali v Radha Kishen, AIR 1951 Punj 433; Brij Mohan Lal v Bakshi Ram, AIR 1975 P&H 214.
1545. Channu v Khem Karan, AIR 1961 All 566.
1546. Basavayya v Official Receiver, AIR 1960 AP 458.
1547. Subramanian v Chellapandi, CRP (MD) No. 1817 of 2011 and M.P. (MD) No. 1 of 2011, decided on 3 January 2020 (Madras High Court).
1548. Rura Ram v Gurbachna, AIR 1954 P&H 254.
1549. Challa Ramaiah v Desu Guruvaiah, AIR 1989 AP 56.
1550. Shyam Chand v Land Mortgage Bank, (1883) 9 Cal 695.
1551. Surannamukhi v Virupakshmma, AIR 1969 AP 23.
1552. Bansigopal v PK Banerji, AIR 1949 All 433. As to a decree for mesne-profits, see note 410, section 75.

[s 60.20] Clause (f): Right of personal service

A vritti is a right to receive certain emoluments as a reward for personal service, and is, therefore, exempt from attachment and sale.[1553] But a priest's share in the utpat or net balance of the offering to a deity may be attached and sold.[1554] The birt maka brahmani, or right to officiate as a priest at the funeral ceremonies of Hindus dying within a particular district is a right of personal service and cannot therefore be attached.[1555] Jatri bahis, which merely contain the names and addresses of pilgrims who are clients of the judgment-debtor and which are of use to him to perform personal service to the pilgrims are not attachable.[1556] Gangaputras occupy sites on the bank of the Ganges where they erect wooden platforms for the use of pilgrims who bathe there and from whom they receive offerings. This right to offerings is a right of personal service and cannot be attached; but the right of occupancy of the sites and wooden platforms are attachable.[1557] A pala or turn of worship is by custom alienable to persons within a limited circle and is attachable.[1558] Where the khadim's share in the offerings of the shrine was by custom allowed to be sold among the khadims themselves, it was held that the right to such a share was liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree but that the right should be sold only to a khadim.[1559] In the absence of any custom to the contrary or connection between the shares of the offerings of a temple and the right to officiate as a priest thereof, the shares cannot be said to be emoluments attached to the office and are liable to attachment and sale.[1560] Money due to a firm of managing agents is not for personal service and so can be attached.[1561] The right of the judgment-debtor to receive offerings in the Kalkaji temple, Delhi, was held to be exempt from attachment under this proviso as no custom sanctioning transfer was established.[1562]

[s 60.21] Clause (g): Gratuity Allowed by Government or Local Authority or any Other Employer

The gratuity referred to in this section is a bonus allowed by government to its servants in consideration of past service. It may be allowed to one who is not a "pensioner" or it may be allowed to a pensioner in addition to his pension. In either case, it is exempt from attachment.[1563] The amount earned by a deceased employee (judgment-debtor) which has become payable to his legal representative, is not exempt from attachment. The amount had lost the character of gratuity, as it is now payable to the legal representatives of the employee. Once the employee dies, it cannot be held that the department holds the money in trust for the legal representatives.[1564] Gratuity amount due from the Postal Department to the heirs of 1553. Ganesh v Shankar, (1886) 10 Bom 395; Govind v Ramkrishna, (1888) 12 Bom 366; Rajaram v Ganesh, (1899) 23 Bom 131.

---

1554. Digamber v Hari, AIR 1927 Bom 143 : (1927) 29 Bom LR 102; followed in Muhammad Ali v Muhammad Nazi, AIR 1934 Lah 57 : (1934) 15 Lah 136.
1555. Durga Prasad v Shambhu, (1919) 41 All 656.
1556. Lachman v Baldeo, AIR 1922 Pat 556 : (1922) 1 Pat 619.
1557. Ganpat v Kashmiri Bank, AIR 1929 Oudh 444 : (1930) 5 Luck 206.
1558. Haridas v Charu Chandra, AIR 1933 Cal 757 : (1933) 60 Cal 1351.
1559. Muhammad Ali v Muhammad Nazi, AIR 1934 Lah 57 : (1934) 15 Lah 136.
1560. Nand Kumar v Ganesh Das, AIR 1936 All 131 : (1936) 58 All 457.
1561. Purasattamdas v Baijnath, AIR 1941 Cal 240.
1562. Har Parshad v Prem Singh, AIR 1952 P&H 138.
1563. Bawan Das v Mul Chand, (1884) 6 All 173; Muhammad v Carlier, (1882) 5 Mad 272 (decided under the Code of 1877 which did not include "gratuities").
1564. Sathyavathy v Bhargavi, AIR 1991 Ker 377 (DB).

a deceased judgment-debtor is within this proviso and cannot be attached.[1565] The exemption, now, applies also to stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of a local authority or of any other employer. Gratuity payable to an employee under the Payment of Gratuity Act, 1972 would now be exempt from attachment and sale.

[s 60.22] Stipends Payable Out of Service Family Pension Fund Notified in the Official Gazette

For notifications issued under this clause [i.e. clause (g)], see General Statutory Rules and Orders, vol III.

[s 60.23] Political Pensions

All pensions of a political nature payable directly by the Government of India are political pensions. A pension which the Government of India has given a guarantee that it will pay by a treaty obligation contracted with another sovereign power is a political pension.[1566] Khandan allowance granted under the Tonk Khandan Rules is political pension and exempt from attachment.[1567] Arrears of political pension due to a pensioner and lying in the hands of government at the time of his death do not lose their character of political pension by reason merely of the pensioner's death. The character of the fund remains unchanged so long as it remains unpaid in the hands of government and it is not liable to attachment in the hands of government in execution of a decree against the deceased. But once the fund has passed out of the hands of government into the hands of the legal representative of the deceased, it may be attached like any other portion of the deceased's estate.[1568] Where the amount is disbursed and it goes into a bank account it would retain its original character until the amount is withdrawn from the bank account or converted into any other assets or investment. This carry over period would be relatively short and the readdressed would be as to whether the disbursement is still intact in its original form. If that is so, it could still be identifiable in its original status and the immunity would carry over.[1569]

A grant of a zamindari by government as a reward for past services rendered by a person to government is not a pension, but a gift, and may, therefore, be attached in execution of a decree against the grantee. The word "pension" in this section implies periodical payments of money by government.[1570] Cis-sutlej jaghirs have been held to be exempt from attachment under this proviso.[1571] Allowances granted to the Candyan pensioners of Ceylon,[1572] to the members of the family of the King of Oudh[1573] to the members of the Mysore family,[1574] and

---

1565. Subramanya Iyer v Hyder, AIR 1955 Mys 419; Calcutta Docklalous Board v Sandhya Mitra, (1985) 2 SCC 1.
1566. Bishambar v Imdad Ali, (1891) 18 Cal 216 : 17 IA 181; Muthusami v Prince Alagia, (1903) 26 Mad 423; Shiv Narain Singh v Munilal, AIR 1934 Lah 881; Achhru Mal v Balwant Singh, AIR 1937 Lah 178 : (1937) Lah 415; Raja Babhadar Singh v Shankar Das, AIR 1937 Lah 211.
1567. Abdul Bais Khan v Budh Singh, AIR 1973 Raj 201.
1568. Valia v Anujani, (1903) 26 Mad 69.
1569. Vigneshwar v Ganga Bai Kom Narayan Bhatt Prasad, AIR 1997 Kant 149.
1570. Lachmi Narain v Makund, (1904) 26 All 617; Nawab Bahadur v Kernani Bank, AIR 1931 PC 160 : 58 IA 215 : ILR 59 Cal 1; Bhiwaji Chunilal v Raje Chamshing, AIR 1948 Ngp 194 : (1947) ILR Nag 616.
1571. Harnam Singh v Ramji Das Pohlumal, AIR 1951 P&H 225.
1572. Muthusami v Prince Alagia, (1903) 26 Mad 423.
1573. Bisambar Nath v Imdad Ali, (1891) 18 Cal 216 : 17 IA 181.
1574. Mahamed v Mohamed, (1867) 7 WR 169.

to the descendants of the Nawab of Carnatic,[1575] or paid by a foreign State by an arrangement with the Government of India to a deposed Maharaja,[1576] are instances of political pensions. Compensation paid to Jagirdars when their estates were abolished and taken over by government[1577] and compensation paid to displaced persons[1578] are not political pensions. The view expressed by the High Court of Madhya Pradesh in Usman Ali Khan v Sagarmul,[1579] that privy purse given to a prince on the merger of his state in the Union of India was not a political pension was reversed by the Supreme Court in appeal[1580] on the ground that the periodical payment of money by the Government of India to a ruler of a former Indian State as privy purse was made on political considerations and under political sanctions and not under a right legally enforceable in any municipal court. Such a payment was strictly a political pension and the use of the expression "privy purse" instead of the expression "pension", being due to historical reasons, was immaterial.

[s 60.24] Private Pensions

Private pensions, as distinguished from government pensions, are not exempt from attachment and they may be attached either as "debts" or as "property belonging to the judgment-debtor" within the meaning of this section. But they neither constitute "debts" nor "property belonging to the judgment-debtor" until they have become due and payable. Hence, they cannot be attached before they have become due and payable. Pensions granted by railway companies to their servants were held to be private pensions.[1581]

[s 60.25] Clause (h): Wages of Labourers

A "labourer" is a person who earns his daily bread by personal manual labour, or in occupations which require little or no art, skill or previous education.[1582] Thus, persons who agree to spin cotton and to receive a certain amount of money for a certain quantity of cotton spun by them are labourers, and their wages cannot be attached.[1583] A weaver in a textile mill is a labourer within this proviso[1584] but not a clerk.[1585] A winch man working under the Calcutta Dock Labour Board is not a labourer since before he could be engaged he had to undergo training prescribed by section 21 of the Calcutta Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Scheme.[1586] The old provision only applied to the wages of labourers and domestic servants and there was no provision to exempt the salary of a person in private employment. It was observed in the under mentioned case[1587] that from the collection of words used in the clause, it was arguable that the word "salary" in the clause was intended to mean salary of labourers and domestic servants only. It has, however, been held that though the latter part of the clause should have been the subject of a separate clause, yet on a consideration of the entire section, 1575. Mahomed v Comandur, (1869) 4 MHC 277.

---

1576. Dongarchand v Madho Singh, AIR 1927 Mad 604 : (1927) 50 Mad 711.
1577. Ambsingh v Jathamal, AIR 1961 Raj 473 : (1961) Raj LW 429.
1578. KB Co-op Credit Bank v NS Verma, AIR 1962 Bom 121.
1579. Usman Ali Khan v Sagarmul, AIR 1962 MP 320.
1580. Usman Ali Khan v Sangarmal, AIR 1965 SC 1798.
1581. Bhoyrub v Madhub Chunder, (1880) 6 CLR 19.
1582. Mniswami v Viswanatha, AIR 1957 Mad 773 : (1957) 2 Mad LJ 400 : 70 LW 701.
1583. Jechand v Aba, (1881) 5 Bom 132.
1584. Mansuri Ibrahim Mohamed v Kantilal Balabhai, AIR 1956 Bom 276.
1585. Manilal v Mohan Lal, AIR 1945 Bom 102 : (1945) ILR Bom 899.
1586. Bhikari Behara v Dhanapatee, AIR 1970 Cal 176 : 73 Cal WN 943.
1587. Janendra Kumar v Akash Chandra, AIR 1938 Cal 325.

there is no doubt that the clause protects from attachment, salary of all persons in receipt of it other than public officers and servants of a railway company or local authority, so far as the protection goes.[1588] These questions do not, now, arise as the subject of wages of domestic servants and labourers has been put in a separate clause.

There is a conflict of judicial opinion on the question whether wages include bonus declared and payable to labourers. One view is that bonus is, as held by the Supreme Court,[1589] a payment contingent on the earning of profits and is ex gratia and it is therefore not wages, and is liable to attachment.[1590] As against this, it has been held that bonus might be impressed with the character of wages either by statute or by agreement of parties, that, in such cases, it cannot be attached and the question must be decided on a consideration of the facts of each case.[1591] On consideration of the definition of gratuity in different enactments, and the board analogy of the term with bonus, gratuity, payable on retirement, to a labourer has been held to be "wages";[1592] so also bonus.[1593]

[s 60.26] Clause (i): Salary

The clause applies to all salaries and is not confined to salaries of any particular category or categories of persons. The Amendment Act, 1976, has increased the exempt amount from the first two hundred and one half of the remainder to the first four hundred[1594] rupees and two-thirds of the remainder. The proviso to the clause gives additional protection. So far it applied only to government officers, railway employees and employees of a local authority. As now amended, it applies to all employees. The salary can be attached only partially, since it is exempt to the extent of the first four hundred rupees and two-thirds of the remainder. In view of this exemption it was held that a public officer could not be required to pay into court, a part of his salary as a condition precedent to his being adjudged insolvent.[1595]

The exemption did not occur in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859 (now replaced by CPC. 1908). Hence the salary of the persons mentioned in the clause was attachable to the extent of the whole as "debt". It was, therefore, not attachable until it had become due.[1596] Under the subsequent Codes of 1877, 1882 and the present Code of Civil Procedure 1908, the salary to the extent to which it is attachable, may be attached in advance.[1597] Originally, the object of the exemption appears to be to enable an officer to maintain himself and his family in a position suitable to his rank. Now the object is human consideration. But as regards the portion of the salary that is attachable, it not a valid reason for refusing that the attachment, if allowed, would not leave the judgment-debtor enough to live on.[1598] A member of a provincial 1588. Re Hormusji Jomshedji, AIR 1939 Sau 134.

---

1589. Muir Mills Co. Ltd v Suit Mills, AIR 1955 SC 170 : (1955) 1 SCR 1991 : 1955 SCJ 214 : 1955 SCA 321; Meenakshi Mills Ltd v Workmen, AIR 1958 SC 153 : 1958 SCA 440.
1590. Munisami v Visvanatha, AIR 1957 Mad 773 : (1947) 2 Mad LJ 400 : 70 LW 701; Sheo Dutt Singh v Ali Mohamad, 63 Cal WN 207; Muhamad v Rucky, AIR 1962 Ker 63.
1591. Jeevanlal v Ramtuji Bhaji, AIR 1945 Bom 119; Harji Malla v Karsanji, AIR 1954 Sau 19; Nathamal Sucheti v Dasarath, AIR 1959 Mys 96 : (1958) ILR Mys 132.
1592. Badlu Prasad v Tirjuji Sitaram, AIR 1965 MP 42.
1593. Ganpathia v Swaminatha, AIR 1969 Mad 440 : (1969) 2 LLJ 159; P Krishna Rao v Thimmakkan, AIR 1970 Mad 135 : (1969) 2 Mad LJ 241; Gopalan v Angamali Chit Fund, AIR 1977 Ker 120.
1594. Now "one thousand" as per Amending Act, (46 of 1999).
1595. Jahar Ali v Mushardan, AIR 1930 Pat 326 : (1930) ILR 9 Pat 304.
1596. Om Prakash Gupta v United Provinces, AIR 1951 All 205; Tejram v Kusaji, (1870) 7 BHC (AC) 110.
1597. Beard v Egerton, (1883) 6 Mad 179; Bhoyrub v Madhub Chunder, (1880) 6 CIR 19.
1598. Debi Prasad v Lewis, (1918) 40 All 213.

legislative assembly was held not to be a public officer and therefore O XXI, rule 48 would not apply to him.[1599]

This clause does not apply to arrears of salary.[1600] Dearness allowance has been held to be part of salary and should be taken into account in calculating the attachable amount.[1601] But it would be otherwise where there is a statutory provision specifically exempting it from attachment.[1602] The deductions made on account of provident fund under the Provident Funds Act, 1925 as also under the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1960 (now replaced by Income Tax Act, 1961) by way of advance income tax should be made from the non-attachable portion of the salary.[1603] But the deduction of amount towards repayment of temporary advance taken from General Provident Fund is not exempt and cannot be excluded from attachment of salary.[1604] It has been held that when, salary has become exempt from attachment under the proviso to this clause, it would not be legal to appoint a receiver therefore as that would be defeating the policy underlying it.[1605] Even where a part of the attachable portion of the salary has been under attachment for 24 months, the prescribed exemption applies.[1606] A comparison of section 60, prior to amendment and after amendment, would show that in so far as attachment beyond 24 months is concerned, there is no change, though the extent of salary which can be attached under the provision now in force is more, which is, in fact, beneficial to the decree-holder. Therefore, in so far as attachment beyond 24 months is concerned, there is no difference in the provision as it existed at the time when the rule came in force, and the provisions now applicable in that behalf.[1607]

[s 60.27] Salary of Private Servant — Explanation I: The moneys payable in relation to matters exempt from attachment or sale

Prior to its recent amendment, a distinction was made between particulars mentioned in clauses (g). (h), (i), (j), (l) and (o) and salary of a person other than that of a servant of the government, railway company or local authority in that the former were exempt from attachment or sale whether before or after they were actually payable and the latter only when lit was actually payable. In view of this distinction, it was held that the salary of a private servant to the extent allowable could be attached a debt and hence it would not be attached before it had become due.[1608] This distinction has now been done away with by the amended Explanation (I). Hence it can be attached in advance and before it has become due.

[s 60.28] Clause (j)

The pay of soldiers and followers of the Indian Army is under section 28 of the Army Act, 1950 and is exempt from attachment.

1599. Satyapriya Bannerjee v Kundanmull, AIR 1939 Cal 428 : (1939) 1 Cal 523.
1600. UOIv Hira Devi, AIR 1952 SC 227 : (1952) SCR 7655 : 1952 SCJ 326 : 1952 SCA 323; Divisional Accounts Officer v Radha Kissen, AIR 1959 Cal 666 : (1958) Cal LJ 208.
1601. Srinivasan v Padmasini Ammal, AIR 1957 Mad 622; Champa Devi v Sat Narain, 74 Punj LR 211.
1602. Pashupatinath v Gomi Shankar, AIR 1956 Pat 159 : ILR 34 Pat 406.
1603. Ibid; Superintendent, RMS Division, Calcutta v Co-op Society, Howrah, AIR 1944 Cal 135 : (1944) 2 Cal 137; but see Municipal Corp of Rangoon v Ram Behari, AIR 1939 Rang 432.
1604. Florence Mabel RJ v State of Kerala, AIR 2001 Ker 19.
1605. Kasiprasad v AA D'Cruz, AIR 1958 Cal 19 : 61 Cal WN 740.
1606. Biman Kumar v Commercial Engineering Corp Ltd, AIR 1983 Cal 45 (DB).
1607. Ibid.
1608. Ayyavayyar v Virasami, (1898) 21 Mad 393; Debi Prasad v Lewis, (1909) 31 All 304; Ramgopal v Misrilal & Sons, AIR 1953 Mys 127 : (1954) ILR Mys 5.

[s 60.29] Clause (k): Compulsory Deposits in Provident Funds

The expression "compulsory deposit" is defined in section 2(a) of the Provident Funds Act, 1925 as being a subscription to, or deposit in, a provident fund which, under the rules of the Fund, is not, until the happening of some specified contingency, repayable on demand otherwise than for the purpose of the payment of premium in respect of a policy of life insurance, and includes, etc. By section 3 of the Act it is provided that a compulsory deposit in any government or Railway Provident Fund shall not be liable to attachment under any decree or order of any civil, revenue or criminal court in respect of any debt or liability incurred by the subscriber or depositor. A compulsory deposit cannot be attached so long as it retains the character of compulsory deposit. Thus contribution to the funds under the Employees State Insurance and Employees Provident Fund Act, though not mentioned in the clause should be given the benefit of exemption.[1609] An objection to attachment of compulsory deposit can be made by the garnishee.[1610] This also applies to the provident fund of any institution to which the provisions of the Act have been extended.[1611] A deposit which when it was made, was a "compulsory deposit," continues to retain that character so long as it remains in the hands of the railway company. Portion of salary to be paid as compulsory deposit in Provident Fund does not assume the character of compulsory deposit until the deposit is actually made.[1612] It does not lose that character though the employee may have ceased to be in the service of the company by retirement, resignation or dismissal, and though he may have become entitled in that event to be paid the amount due to his credit in the provident fund. It has been held by the Supreme Court that provident fund remaining unpaid to the subscriber after his retirement retains its character as a compulsory deposit and cannot be attached nor could a receiver be appointed therefore.[1613] In a case, the Supreme Court has further held that so long as the provident fund dues are not paid to the government employees on retirement or otherwise, the government is a trustee in respect of them and has, as such, an interest in maintaining an objection in the court against attachment.[1614] It makes no difference that the amount had been transferred from the provident fund account to a miscellaneous account.[1615] But once it is paid out by the company on the happening of any of the above events, it loses the character of "compulsory deposit" and it may be attached in the hands of the party to whom it has been paid.[1616] Where a subscriber to the Railway Provident Fund elected to be governed by the Provident Funds Rules and requested payment in sterling and by bank draft in a bank in England and the Railway Administration drew thereupon cheques in favour of 1609. Behudoor v Pasupathy, AIR 1973 Ker 175 : (1973) 1 LLJ 516.

---

1610. MSM Railway v Chengali Syedali, AIR 1950 Mad 402.
1611. Mai Dan v Imperial Bank of India, AIR 1936 Lah 694; Krityanand v Saileswar, AIR 1937 Pat 22 : (1936) 15 Pat 779.
1612. Superintendent, RMS Division, Calcutta v RMS Division Co-op. Credit Society Ltd, Howrah, AIR 1944 Cal 135.
1613. UOI v Hira Devi, AIR 1952 SC 227 : [1952] SCR 765 : (1952) SCJ 326 : (1952) SCA 323; Taj Mahamad v Balaji, AIR 1934 Mad 173 : ILR 57 Mad 440; Abdul Wahidkhan v Remy Charles, AIR 1965 Mys 303.
1614. UOI v JC Fund and Finance, AIR 1976 SC 1163.
1615. Iswardas v Gregory, AIR 1955 Cal 509 : 96 Cal LJ 126.
1616. Veerchand v BB and CI Railway, (1905) 29 Bom 259; Sett Mamna Lal v Gainsford, (1908) 35 Cal 641; Hindley v Joy Narain, (1919) 46 Cal 962; Secretary of State v Raj Kumar, AIR 1923 Cal 585 : (1923) 50 Cal 347; Devi Prasad v Secretary of State, AIR 1924 All 68 : (1923) 45 All 554; Official Assignee of Madras v Mary Dalgains, (1903) 26 Mad 440; Nagindas v Ghelabhai, (1920) 44 Bom 673 (insolvency of railway servant); Gauri Shankar v RJ De Cruz, AIR 1927 Oudh 22 : (1926) 1 Luck 313 (insolvency of railway servant); Walchand v Williams, AIR 1935 Bom 396 : (1935) 59 Bom 517; Joseph Benjamin Bonjour v Official Assignee, AIR 1956 Mad 283; Central Bank v MV Rao, AIR 1949 Cal 144 : (1945) 1 Cal 277.

the Reserve Bank with instructions to convert them into sterling and to transmit the amounts to be subscriber's bank in England, it was held that the Reserve Bank was the agent of the Railway Administration and not of the subscriber and therefore the monies remained under the control of the Railways as Provident Fund money and was exempt from attachment.[1617] The same principle applies to the case of an optional subscriber who cannot, under the rules, demand payment of his deposits at his option.[1618] Under section 3(2) of the Provident Funds Acts 1925 any sum standing to the credit of a subscriber vests on his death in the dependent to whom it is payable under the rules of the Fund; it cannot therefore be attached as assets of the deceased.[1619] Gratuity payable to government pensioner cannot be attached, even in enforcement of an order relating to maintenance. Even if the pensioner has not raised the objection, the attaching creditor cannot get the benefit of the attachment.[1620]

Annual contribution of an employee to the Provident Fund cannot be deducted from the salary, for calculating the attachable portion of the salary.[1621]

Exemption of Provident Fund amount from attachment under section 60(1)(k) is available, only so long as the amount is in the hands of the trustees. The exemption does not survive after the amount is received by the employee entitled to the same.[1622]

A sum standing to the credit of a subscriber under a benefit fund scheme which the company may or may not pay, in its uncontrolled discretion, is not a debt which can be attached.[1623]

A compulsory deposit is not liable to be attached under the Criminal Law (Amendment) Ordinance 1944, its provisions being subject to section 60(1).[1624] The Supreme Court has held that contributions to a Provident Fund in which the subscriber has, under the rules, a present interest and over which he has not divested himself of his power of control are not exempt from attachment under this proviso.[1625] Monies payable under an insurance policy on the life of the judgment-debtor are totally exempt from attachment and sale, irrespective of whether the policy matures during the life-time of the assured or whether the money is payable after his death.[1626]

Under the new clause (ka), deposits in funds to which the Public Provident Fund Act, 1968 applies and which are, under that Act, exempted from attachment are under this section also exempt. So also, the moneys payable under an insurance policy on the life of the judgment-debtor. Under another new clause (kc) the interest of a tenant of a residential building, to which a Rent Act applies, is saved from attachment, such interest being a personal interest of a statutory tenant. The proviso to section 60(1) of the CPC enumerates the properties that are not liable for attachment. As per clause (1), allowances forming part of the emoluments notified by the government in the Official Gazette to be exempt from attachment is not attachable. It is not disputed that the government has notified that dearness allowance, city

---

1617. UOI v Radha Kissen, AIR 1969 SC 762 : (1969) 1 SCC 225.
1618. Jagannath v Tara, AIR 1924 Pat 524 : (1924) 3 Pat 74.
1619. Thaj Mahomed v Balaji, AIR 1934 Mad 173 : (1934) 57 Mad 440.
1620. Rangamma v CS Appaji Murthy, AIR 1989 NOC 52 (Kant).
1621. Kausalay Devi v Parveen Bankers, AIR 1980 Ker 148.
1622. Madhavan Nambiar v Syndicate Bank, AIR 1991 Ker 367.
1623. Jiwan Hansraj v Irrawaddy Flotilla Co, AIR 1933 Rang 23 : (1933) 11 Rang 116.
1624. NK Banerji v State of Bihar, AIR 1961 Pat 384.
1625. Muktilal v Trustees of the Provident Fund of the Tin Plate Co of India Ltd, AIR 1956 SC 336 : (1956) SCR 100.
1626. Federal Bank Ltd v Indira Devi Kunjamma, AIR 1986 Bom 101.

contributory allowance and house rent allowance are exempt from attachment. Therefore, the said amount must be excluded in deciding the attachable portion of the salary.[1627]

[s 60.30] Clause (kb)

The legislative object behind this exemption protected under proviso (kb) to section 60(1), CPC, is that the money payable under the policy of insurance of life of a policy holder is intended to give some security to his heirs and legal representatives. Such legislative object, cannot, in any way be diluted, merely because the policy amount sought to be attached is that of the judgment debtor or otherwise; as otherwise, the intention of the legislature to provide security to the legal representatives of the policy holder would be defeated.[1628]

Proviso (kb) to section 60(1) CPC, no doubt, exempts all money payable under the policy of insurance under the life of the judgment debtor, but the policy amount under life insurance scheme only confers a right not on the policy holder but on his legal representatives. Therefore, moneys payable under the insurance policy of a judgment debtor are entirely exempted from the attachment and sale, irrespective of the circumstances as to whether the insurance policy matures during the life time of the assured or the moneys become payable after the death of the judgment debtor.[1629]

[s 60.31] Interest of a Lessee in a Residential Building

Section 60 of the CPC, sets out the properties which are not liable to attachment and sale. The exclusion of properties refers specifically to residential premises under section 60(1) (kc) and not to premises used for non-residential purposes.[1630]

[s 60.32] Clause (l): Allowances of a government servant

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, it had been held that, in the absences of any specific provision, allowances (being less than salary) of a public officer, while absent from duty, stood on the same footing as the salary of a public officer while on duty and were exempt from attachment, only to the extent to which salary was exempt, and no more. Thus, where an officer was on sick leave on half pay which was Rs 150, it was held that the decree-holder could attach, only Rs 75.[1631] In 1908, when the new CPC was enacted, clause (h), as it then stood, was enacted so that the whole of Rs 150 was exempted from attachment. The present clause makes the exemption depend upon the terms of a notification by the appropriate government and by Explanation 2, any allowance declared exempt from attachment, is excluded from the definition of the term salary. A plain reading of the provisions of section 60(1)(l) shows that in order that an allowance forming part of the emoluments be exempt from attachment, two conditions must be satisfied viz.:

(i) allowance must be payable to a government servant or servant of a railway company or a local authority; and

---

1627. AB Sasidharan v KCT S Sadhaka Sangham, AIR 1995 Ker 153.
1628. Regional Manager, LIC of India v John Bosco, AIR 2002 Mad 348.
1629. Regional Manager, LIC of India v John Bosco, AIR 2002 Mad 348; Sarbiti Devi v Usha Devi, AIR 1984 SC 346.
1630. Union Bank of India v Mittersain Rup Chand, AIR 1995 Bom 371 (DB).
1631. Beard v Egertton, (1883) 6 Mad 179.

(ii) the said allowance must be exempted from attachment by the appropriate government by issue of an appropriate notification in the Official Gazette, or must be a subsistence grant or allowance to any such servant.[1632]

The Explanation (1) inserted by Act 14 of 1976 states that the money payable in relation to the matters mentioned in clauses (g), (h), (i), (ia), (j), (l) and (o) are exempted from attachment or sale whether before or after they are actually payable. In other words, the amounts payable, namely, subsistence grant or allowance payable to the person under suspension till it is in the hands of the employer is exempt. The words used is "actually payable" and not "paid". Therefore, there is a clear indication that the above amounts in the hands of the employer is exempted from attachment.[1633]

[s 60.33] Clause (m): Expectancy of Succession etc.

The interest, which a Hindu reversioner has in the immovable property of a deceased Hindu, on the death of the deceased's widow, is "an expectancy of succession by survivorship"; in other words, it is an interest expectant on the widow's death to which the reversioner can only succeed if he survives the widow.[1634] The interest in the pre-empted property of a successful pre-emptor who has not yet paid the pre-emptive price fixed by his decree, is a merely contingent interest which cannot be attached.[1635] But the interest which a coparcener has in money awarded to him on partition, is a vested interest although payment is deferred.[1636] It has been held by the Privy Council that the words "or other merely contingent or possible right or interest" in this sub-clause, cannot be construed as applying only to such possible rights or interest as are ejusdem generis with an expectancy of succession by survivorship, that is to say, with a spes successionis.[1637] A contingent interest, though transferable, is not attachable; it is only vested interests that can be attached.[1638] Thus, where a certain portion of purchase price in respect of a house was left reserved, till certain conditions were satisfied, the liability to pay the reserved balance becomes attachable, once those conditions are satisfied.[1639]

[s 60.34] Clause (n): Right to Future Maintenance

If A is entitled to a monthly maintenance allowance under an agreement, the allowance cannot be attached until after it has become due.[1640] It cannot be attached prospectively, that is, before it has become due.[1641] So long as maintenance granted under section 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 is not realised it continues to be a right of future maintenance.[1642] In other words, arrears of maintenances may be attached, but not the right to future maintenance. Where the judgment-debtor was entitled under his father's will to a monthly allowance and it was claimed to be for maintenance, it was held that the decree-holder was entitled to attach 1632. AB Vorkady v United Bank of India, AIR 1996 Kant 79.

---

1633. Velraj v Muthiah, AIR 2008 Mad 239 : 2008 (5) Mad LJ 1307.
1634. Ram Chunder v Dhurmo, (1871) 15 WR 17 (FB); Anandibai v Rajaram, (1898) 22 Bom 984; Pestonji v Patrick, AIR 1936 Sau 65.
1635. Gorak Singh v Sidh Gopal, (1906) 28 All 383. See O XX, rule 14.
1636. Alagirisami v Lakshmanan, AIR 1926 Mad 371 : (1926) 50 Mad LJ 79.
1637. Pestonji v Anderson, AIR 1939 PC 6 : (1939) Bom 36.
1638. Rajes Kanta Roy v Srimathi Shanti Debi, AIR 1957 SC 255 : (1957) SCR 77.
1639. Basant Lall v Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1978 All 436.
1640. Kasheeshuree v Greesh Chunder, (1866) 6 WR 64 Mis; Bala Prasad v Ajodhya Prasad, AIR 1952 Pat 78.
1641. Haridas v Baroda Kishore, (1900) 27 Cal 38; Asad Ali Haidar Ali, (1911) 38 Cal 13; Palikandy v Krishnan, (1917) 40 Mad 302.
1642. Shiela Rani v Durga Parshad, AIR 1965 P&H 79 : (1964) ILR 2 Punj 477 : 66 Punj LR 1111.

what had fallen due and become arrears, but not future allowances and that portion; only of the allowances which could be referred to maintenance was exempt and not the excess.[1643] A hereditary grant of an allowance of paddy out of the melwaram of certain land is not a right to future maintenance so as to be exempt from attachment under this section.[1644] Where a person holds villages under a deed, which provides that he is to hold them and receive the profits in lieu of maintenance without power of transfer, the interest of such person in the village is a right to future maintenance.[1645] So also, allowances directed to be paid to beneficiaries under a deed of Wakf were held to be maintenance not liable to be attached.[1646] Where a widow made a gift of all the properties inherited by her, from her husband to her daughters and they, in turn, settled some properties on her for maintenance, it was held that they could not be attached.[1647] Likewise, when properties allotted for maintenance are transferred, subject to an obligation to maintain the transferor, it was held that they could not be attached.[1648] But the grant of a heritable estate to a Khorposhdar in lieu of maintenance is liable to attachment in the absence of the proof of a special custom that his right was not absolute.[1649] But an annuity is not a "right to future maintenance," and it may be attached and sold.[1650] An annuity payable under the UP Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 is not exempt from attachment.[1651]

[s 60.35] Objection that Property is not Liable to Attachment and Sale: When to be Raised

A obtains a decree against B, and applies for execution of the decree by attachment and sale of certain property belonging to B. The property is attached and sold, and purchased by C. B then applies to the court to set aside the sale on the ground that the property was not liable to attachment and sale. Can the application been entertained? It has been held that if B was a party to the order for sale, or was aware of it and did not appeal against it, he is precluded from questioning the propriety of the order after the sale, and he cannot therefore impeach the sale. A judgment-debtor who might have raised objection prior to the sale, but who has refrained from doing so, and who might have appealed against the order for sale, has no right after the sale has been carried out to prefer an objection that the property sold was not legally saleable.[1652] It has been held that; the judgment-debtor can raise this objection that the properties are exempt from attachment under this section at any time before sale[1653] but it is well-settled that the objection is not open when the sale has been confirmed.[1654] But if 1643. Chittoory Venkataraju v Thermmana Satiraju, AIR 1954 Mad 946 : (1954) 2 Mad LJ 324; but see Official Receiver v Venkayya, AIR 1960 AP 353 : (1959) 2 Andh WR 524 : (1959) Andh LT 931.

---

1644. Ashfaq Md Khan v Nazir Bamma, AIR 1942 Oudh 410 : (1942) 18 Luck 147; Vaidyanatha v Eggia, (1907) 30 Mad 297; Province of Orissa v Rangamma, AIR 1950 Ori 220.
1645. Rajindra Narain v Sunderara Bibi, AIR 1925 PC 176 : (1925) 52 IA 262; Bansidhar v Gulab Kuar, (1894) 16 All 443, in appeal from Gulab Kuar v Bansidhar, (1893) 15 All 371 (Hindu widow).
1646. Zahinuddin Hussain v Chokkey Lal, AIR 1952 All 662.
1647. Sampato Kuer v Dulhein Mukha Debi, AIR 1960 Pat 360.
1648. Official Receiver v Venkayya, AIR 1960 AP 353 : (1959) 2 Andh WR 524 : (1959) Andh LT 931.
1649. Ramprasad v Motiram v Surya Rao, AIR 1957 AP 215.
1650. Sundar Bibi v Raj Indar, AIR 1921 All 120 : (1921) 43 All 617; Chunni Lal v Jai Gopal, AIR 1936 Lah 55 : (1936) 17 Lah 378.
1651. Sarup Lal v Radha Manoharji, AIR 1975 All 18. See note to section 51 : "Receiver of future maintenance".
1652. Ramchaibar Misra v Bechu Bhagat, (1885) 7 All 641; Umed v Jas Ram, (1907) 29 All 612; Pandurang v Krishnaji, (1904) 28 Bom 125; Dwarkanath v Tarini Sankar, (1907) 34 Cal 199; Lala Ram v Thakur Prasad, (1918) 40 All 680; Sabha Ram v Kishan Singh, AIR 1931 All 112 : (1930) 52 All 1027 : 133 IC 478; Mahadeo v Khanderao, AIR 1939 Bom 526 : (1939) ILR 41 Bom LR 1166; but see Ram Chandar Singh v Sarupa, AIR 1939 Lah 103 : (1939) Lah 103.
1653. Kannan v Govindan, (1960) ILR 2 Ker 234 : (1962) Ker LJ 668 : (1962) Ker LT 675.
1654. Ramanlal v Shantilal, AIR 1961 All 178.

B was not aware of the proceedings in attachment of the property, or of the proceedings in connection with the sale thereof, the application to set aside the sale may be entertained even after the sale is confirmed.[1655] The same rule applies where a sale effected by the collector is sought to be set aside on the ground that the property was not ancestral and therefore could not legally be sold by the collector.[1656] Right to object to attachment and right to object to sale are independent of each other. The proviso uses the word "or" the frequent debtor can object even after court has directed issue of warrant. Constructive res judicata does not apply in such a case.[1657]

[s 60.36] Waiver: Sub-section (1A)

On the question whether it was open to the judgment-debtor to waive the benefit of the exemptions under the proviso to sub-section (1), the authorities were divided; some holding that they could be waived[1658] and some taking the view that they could not be.[1659] This conflict has, by enacting sub-section (IA), been resolved in favour of the latter view that no such waiver is legal and valid.

[s 60.37] Explanations: (I) – (VI)

In a case to which the provisions of the Amending Act of 1937 did not apply, it was held that there was nothing which restricted the word "salary" to an emolument which was payable monthly or that it had reference to the emolument payable to a man holding a permanent or a semi-permanent employment.[1660] The expression "salary" as defined by Explanation II means the total monthly emoluments excluding allowances exempt from attachment under clause (1). The allowances exempt under clause (1) are first to be deducted from the total emoluments for the purpose of arriving at the salary. That would be the salary out of which, under clauses (i) and (ia), one-third is to be excluded if the decree in execution is one for maintenance.[1661] Dearness and house rent allowances are to be excluded from total emoluments for the attachable portion of the salary.[1662]

Explanations II to VI are definitions which are intended for clarification.

[s 60.38] Application of the Section

This section enacts a rule of procedure. It was accordingly held that a creditor who had obtained a decree prior to the coming into force of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 on 25 January 1950 in Rajasthan, could, in execution, attach the salary of a judgment-debtor

---

1655. Durga Charan v Kali Prasanna, (1899) 26 Cal 727.
1656. Daulat Singh v Jugal Kishore, (1900) 22 All 108; see section 69 and Sch III to the Code of Civil Procedure 1908.
1657. Ram Singh v Bherulal, AIR 1982 MP 95.
1658. Rajendra Kanwar v Chetanlal, AIR 1940 Lah 65; Uzir Biswas v Hara Dev, AIR 1920 Cal 424; Chittarmal v Ramdevi, AIR 1927 Pat 233; Mahadeo v Dhamukal, AIR 1946 All 432; Bala Prasad v Ajodhya Prasad, AIR 1952 Pat 78 : ILR 30 Pat 1146.
1659. Subramanya v Satyanathan, AIR 1942 Mad 391 : (1942) ILR Mad 640 : 203 IC 200; MSM Rly v Rupchand, AIR 1950 Bom 155 : (1950) Bom 185; Ram Naresh v Ganesh Mistri, AIR 1952 All 680; Indesry v Parasuram, (1961) Raj LW 261.
1660. Bansi Lal v Mohammad Hafiz, AIR 1939 Pat 77 : (1939) 17 Pat 706.
1661. Kasturi Radhakrishna Murty v K Lakshminarasamma, AIR 1972 AP 256.
1662. Kaushalya Devi v Praveen Bankers, AIR 1980 Ker 148; AB Sasidharan v Kootukadu Cherupuskas, AIR 1995 Ker 152; Central Government Compilation of Treasury Rules, vol 1, rule 225, note 2, referred to.

only to the extent provided in this section.[1663] On the same principle, it was held that further proceedings in an execution petition which had been filed in 1951 but were pending till 1956, could be taken, only in accordance with proviso (i) as amended in 1956.[1664] But a single judge of the Allahabad High Court has, in Sheo Baran Singh v Mohan Lal,[1665] taken a contrary view and has observed that the Amendment Act 36 of 1963 which raised the exemption limit of salary from Rs 100 to Rs 200 was not retrospective in as much as clauses (a) to (i) of section 60(1) were not procedural and that they conferred substantial rights on judgment-debtors protecting certain classes of property from attachment. On this reasoning, the high court rejected the judgment-debtor's contention that on the enactment of the Amendment Act, attachment of his salary which was above Rs 100 but below Rs 200, which was levied before the amendment, should be lifted.

[s 60.39] Crown Debts

Debts due to the state have no priority under this section.[1666]

[s 60.40] State Amendment

Andhra Pradesh.—In its application to the Andhra area of the State of Andhra Pradesh in clause (g) of the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 60, the words of a local authority' shall be inserted after the words "stipends and gratuities allowed to the pensioners of the Government"—Code of Civil Procedure (Andhra Pradesh) (Andhra Area) Amendment Act, 1950.

Note.—The title of Madras Amendment Act (XXXIV of 1950) has thus been amended by the Andhra Pradesh Act (IX of 1961).

In its application to the whole of the State of Andhra Pradesh, in the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 60—

(i) after clause (k) the following clause shall be inserted, namely:

(kk) amounts payable under policies issued in pursuance of the rules for the Andhra Pradesh Government Life Insurance and Provident Fund.

(ii) after explanation 2, the following explanation shall be inserted, namely:

Explanation 2A.—Where any sum payable to a government servant, is exempt from attachment, under the provisions of clause (kk), such sum shall remain exempt from attachment notwithstanding the fact that owing to the death of the government servant it is payable to some other person.'—Code of Civil Procedure (Andhra Pradesh) Telengana Area, Amendment Act (XI of 1953) originally the Code of Civil Procedure (Hyderabad Amendment) Act (XI of 1953). This Act has been amended and extended to the entire State of Andhra Pradesh by the Code of Civil Procedure (Andhra Pradesh Unification and Amendment) Act (X of 1962).

The following amendment were made by Andhra Pradesh Act 24 of 1979, section 2 (dated 17 September 1979):

(i) In the proviso to section 60(1) after clause (kk) insert as under—

(kkk) amounts payable under the Andhra Pradesh State Employees Family Benefit Fund Rules;"

(ii) In Explanation 2A, for the expression "clause (kk)" substitute the expression "clauses (kk) and (kkk)."

1663. Abdul Gafur v Ram Narain, AIR 1951 Raj 926.
1664. Pralhad v Mst Sakhu Bai, AIR 1961 Bom 142.
1665. Sheo Baran Singh v Mohan Lal, AIR 1968 All 147.
1666. Murli Tahilram v Asomal & Co, AIR 1955 Cal 423 : 59 Cal WN 701.

In its application to the Hyderabad area of the State of Andhra Pradesh in the proviso to sub-section (i) of section 60—

(i) after clause (g) the following clause shall be inserted, namely:

(gg) pension granted or continued by the Central Government, the Government of Hyderabad or any other State Government on account of past services or present infirmities or as a compassionate allowance, and;

(ii) in Expln 2A, for the word, brackets and letter "clause (kk)" the words, "brackets and letters" clause (gg) or clause (kk)' shall be substituted—Andhra Pradesh Act (XVIII of 1953), originally the Code of Civil Procedure (Hyderabad Second Amendment) Act (18 of 1953).

Gujarat—In sub-section (i) of section 60—

(a) after clause (g) of the proviso, the following new clause shall be inserted, namely:

(gg) stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of a local authority.

(b) in Explanation I, after the brackets and letter "(g)" the brackets and letters "(gg)" shall be inserted.

Himachal Pradesh—In section 60, sub-section (1).

(i) at the end of clause (c), add the following words, namely:

or compensation paid for such houses and buildings (including compensation for the materials and the sites and the land referred to above) acquired for a public purpose; and

(ii) after clause (c) insert the following, namely:

(cc) compensation paid for agricultural lands belonging to agriculturists and acquired for a public purpose;

[Code of Civil Procedure (Himachal Pradesh Amendment) Act, 1956 (6 of 1956), section 2 w.e.f. 17-5-1956].

Karnataka (previously Mysore)—In its application to the State of Karnataka except Bellary district, in the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 60 after clause (p), the following clause shall be added, namely:

(pp) where the judgment-debtor is a servant of the State Government who has insured his life under the rules in force relating to the Official Branch of the Mysore Government Life Insurance Department—

(i) in the case of insurances effected prior to the ninth day of May 1911, the whole of the bonus payable or paid thereunder to such servant, or in the event of his death to his nominee or other person or persons entitled to such bonus under the said rules; and

(ii) in the case of insurance effected or after the ninth day of May 1911, and such insurance is compulsory, then the bonus in respect of the compulsory premium payable or paid to such servant, or in the event of his death to his nominee or other person or persons entitled to such bonus under the said rules.

—Code of Civil Procedure [Mysore Amendment Act (XIV of 1952) (w.e.f. 1-4- 1951)].

Kerala—In clause (g) of the proviso to sub-section (1), after the words "stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of the Government", insert the words "or of a local authority"—Kerala Act 13 of 1957, section 3.

Maharashtra—In sub-section (1) of section 60—

(a) after clause (g) of the proviso, the following new clause shall be inserted, namely:

(gg) in the Hyderabad area of the State of Maharashtra, any pension granted or continued by the Central Government or the Government of the former

State of Hyderabad or any other State Government, on account of past services or present infirmities or as a compassionate allowance, which is not covered by cl (g);

Maharashtra Act No. LXV of 1977, section 6(a);

(b) in its application to the Hyderabad area of the State of Bombay—after clause (kb), insert the following:

(kbb) the amounts payable under the policies issued in pursuance of the Rules for the Hyderabad State Life Insurances and Provident Fund, which are not covered under clause (ka) or (kb).

Explanation: Where any sum payable to a Government servant is exempt from attachment under this clause or clause (gg), such sum shall remain exempt from attachment, notwithstanding the fact that owing to the death of the Government servant the sum is payables to some other person;

Maharashtra Act No. LXV of 1977, section 6(b).

Punjab and Haryana—In its application to the State of Punjab including the Pepsu area thereof as it was immediately before 1 November 1956—

(a) In sub-section (1), in the proviso:

(i) In clause (c), for the words "occupied by him" the following words shall be deemed to be substituted, viz.:

not proved by the decree-holder to have been let out on rent or let to persons other than his father, mother, wife, son, daughter, daughter-in-law, brother, sister or other dependants or left vacant for a period of a year or more.

(ii) After clause (c), the following clauses shall be deemed to be inserted, viz:

(cc) milch animals, whether in milk or in calf, kids, animals used for the purposes of transport or draught cart and open spaces or enclosures belonging to an agriculturist and required for use in case of need for tying cattle parking carts or stacking fodder or manure;

(ccc) one main residential house and other buildings attached to it (with the material and the sites thereof and the land immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment) belonging to a judgment-debtor other than an agriculturist and occupied by him: provided that the protection afforded by this clause shall not extend to any property specifically charged with the debt sought to be recovered.

Vide Punjab Acts VII of 1934, XII of 1940 and VI of 1942 and Act XLIV of 1960.[1667]

(b) After sub-section (2), the following sub-sections shall be deemed to be inserted, viz.:

(3) Notwithstanding any other law for the time being in force an agreement by which a debtor agrees to waive any benefit of any exemption under this section shall be void.

(4) For the purposes of this section the word "agriculturist" shall include every person whether as owner, tenant, partner or agricultural labourer who depends for his livelihood mainly on income from agricultural land as defined in the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900.

(5) Every member of a tribe notified as agricultural under the Punjab Alienation of Land Act 1900, and every member of a scheduled caste shall be presumed to be an agriculturist until the contrary is proved.

(6) No order for attachment shall be made unless the court is satisfied that the property sought to be attached is not exempt from attachment or sale.

1667. Vide Bhan v Kapoor Chand, AIR 1967 P&H 53 : (1966) HR 2 Punj 400 : 68 Punj LR 591; Yogesh Sharma v Devi Dayal Jain, AIR 1977 Del 270.

Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, VII of 1934, section 35 (as amended by Punjab Acts 12 of 1940 and 6 of 1942 and 44 of 1960).

For decisions on the Punjab amendment, see the under mentioned cases.[1668] Section 60 of the CPC applies to attachment and sale in execution of a decree of a civil court only and has no application to an attachment and sale under any other statute unless made expressly applicable thereto. The Punjab Land Revenue Act contains a complete code providing for the modes and machinery for recovery of arrears of revenue. There is no provision in this Act which makes the provisions of section 60, of the CPC applicable to attachment, and sale for recovery of revenue under the Act, nor is there any provision in the Act corresponding to clause (ccc) of the proviso to section 60(1), CPC. The properties, if any, which are exempt from attachment and sale in revenue recovery proceedings under the said Act, would be only such properties, as are so exempted by the said Act.[1669]

Rajasthan—In the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 60—

(i) in clause (b), after the word "agriculturist", the words "his milch cattle and those likely to calve within two years" shall be inserted.

— Rajasthan Act XIX of 1958.

(ii) after clause (k), insert the following:

(kk) moneys payable under Life Insurances certificates issued in pursuance of the Rajasthan Government Servants Insurance Rules 1953;

(iii) after expln 3, insert the following explanation:

Explanation IV—Where any money payable to a Government servant of the state is exempt from attachment under the provision contained in clause (kk), such money shall remain exempt from attachment notwithstanding the fact that owing to the death of a Government servant it is payable to some other person.

— Rajasthan Act XVI of 1957.

Tamil Nadu—In its application to the State of Madras including the Kanyakumari district and Shencottah taluk of the Tirunelveli district, and the added territories the amendment made in section 60 is the same as that of Kerala — Code of Civil Procedure (Madras Amendment) Act 1950, section 2 (wef 2 January, 1951) and Madras Act XXII of 1957, section 3 (18 December, 1957) and Mad (AT) ALO, 1961 [wef 1 April 1960].

Uttar Pradesh—Add the following Explanation 1A after Explanation 1 in section 60, sub-section (1):

*Explanation 1*A—Particulars mentioned in clause (c) are exempt from sale in execution of a decree whether passed before or after the commencement of the Code of Civil Procedure (United Provinces) (Amendment) Act, 1948, for enforcement of a mortgage or charge thereon.

—Code of Civil Procedure (UP) (Amendment) Act, 1948 (UP Act XXXV of 1948), section 2 (28 August, 1948).

The following allowances payable to any public officer in the service of the UP Government shall be exempt from attachment by order of a court, namely:

1668. Agha Jafar Ali Khan v Radha Kishan, AIR 1951 P&H 433; Firm Ganga Ram v Firm Jai Ram, AIR 1957 P&H 293 : (1957) ILR Punj 1558; Sampat Kumar v Nathu Ram, AIR 1958 P&H 326 : (1958) ILR Punj 1445; Narain Devi v Durga Devi, AIR 1959 P&H 324 : 61 Punj LR 219; Ram Lal v Piaral Lal, AIR 1973 SC 2124 : (1973) 2 SCC 192.

1669. State of Punjab v Dina Nath, (1984) 1 SCC 137; Kiran Bala v Surinder Kumar, AIR 1996 SC 2094 : (1996) 4 SCC 372.

(i) All kinds of travelling allowances.

(ii) All kinds of conveyance allowances.

(iii) All allowances granted for meeting the cost of

(a) uniform; and

(b) rations.

(iv) All allowances granted as compensation for higher cost of living in localities considered by Government to be expensive localities including hill stations.

(v) All house rent allowances.

UP Govt (Judicial Department) Notification No 2156 VII-362 dated 17 January 1941.

(vi) All allowances granted to provide relief against increased cost of living.

UP Govt (Judl) Dept Notification No 2692/Vll dated 15 July 1949.

Union Territory (Chandigarh)—In its application to the Union Territory of Chandigarh, amendments in the section are the same as in Punjab—Punjab Reorganisation Act, 1966, section 88 (1 November 1966).

Union Territory (Pondicherry)—In its application to the Union Territory of Pondicherry, amendment in the section is the same as in Tamil Nadu-Pondicherry (Extension of Laws) Act, 1968, section 3(i) and Schedule, Pt 11 (w.e.f. 5-9-1968).

[S 61] Partial exemption of agricultural produce.—The State Government [1670][* * *] may, by general or special order published in the Official Gazette, declare that such portion of agricultural produce, or of any class of agricultural produce, as may appear to the State Government to be necessary for the purpose of providing until the next harvest for the due cultivation of the land and for the support of the judgment-debtor and his family, shall, in the case of all agriculturists or of any class of agriculturists, be exempted from liability to attachment or sale in execution of a decree.

[s 61.1] Be Exempted from Liability to Attachment or Sale

These words are wide enough to include agricultural produce which has been hypothecated.[1671]

[S 62] Seizure of property in dwelling-house.—(1) No person executing any process under this Code directing or authorizing seizure of moveable property shall enter any dwelling-house after sunset and before sunrise.

(2) No outer door of a dwelling-house shall be broken open unless such dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto, but when the person executing any such process has duly gained access to any dwelling-house, he may break open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe any such property to be.

1670. The words "with the previous sanction of the G.G. in C" omitted by Act 38 of 1920, section 2 and Sch I, Pt I.

1671. See section 60, clause (b). As to attachment of agricultural produce, see O 21, rules 44–45. As to sale of such produce, see O 21, rules 74–75.

(3) Where a room in a dwelling-house is in the actual occupancy of a woman who, according to the customs of the country, does not appear in public, the person executing the process shall give notice to such woman that she is at liberty to withdraw; and, after allowing reasonable time for her to withdraw and giving her reasonable facility for withdrawing, he may enter such room for the purpose of seizing the property, using at the same time every precaution, consistent with these provisions, to present its clandestine removal.

SYNOPSIS

[s 62.1] High Court Amendment 901
[s 62.2] Changes introduced in the section 901
[s 62.3] Dwelling-house..... 901

[s 62.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—In sub-rule (2) omit the words "unless such dwelling house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto", after the words "be broken open" and before the words" but when the person".

Add the proviso after sub-rule (2)—

Provided that the Court may, after service of such notice as it thinks proper, direct the breaking open of an outer door of a dwelling-house in possession of the judgment-debtor who prevents access thereto vide Cal Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 62.2] Changes introduced in the section

This section corresponds with section 271 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, except that the prohibition against breaking open any outer door of a dwelling-house has been relaxed where the dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor.[1672]

[s 62.3] Dwelling-house

A shop or a godown is not a "dwelling-house" within the meaning of this section.[1673]

[S 63] Property attached in execution of decrees of several Courts.—(1) Where property not in the custody of any Court is under attachment in execution of decrees of more Courts than one, the Court which shall receive or realise such property and shall determine any claim thereto and any objection to the attachment thereof shall be the Court of highest grade, or, where there is no difference in grade between such Courts, the Courts under whose decree the property was first attached.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to invalidate any proceeding taken by a Court executing one of such decrees.

[1674][Explanation.—For the purposes of sub-section (2), "proceeding taken by a Court" does not include an order allowing, to a decree-holder who has purchased property at a sale held in execution of a decree, set-off to the extent of the purchase price payable by him.]

1672. See note to section 55 : "Breaking open of outer door".
1673. Damodar v Ishwar, (1879) ILR 3 Bom 89.
1674. Inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act 104 of 1976, section 24 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

SYNOPSIS

[s 63.1]	High Court Amendment	902	[s 63.6]	"Is under attachment"	905
[s 63.2]	Changes Introduced in the Section	902	[s 63.7]	Decrees of more courts than one	905
[s 63.3]	Object of the Section	902	[s 63.8]	This Section Cannot be Controlled by Section 38	906
[s 63.4]	Application of the Section	902
[s 63.5]	Sub-section (2)	903	[s 63.9]	Rateable distribution	906

[s 63.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Add as sub-section (3)—

(3) For the purposes of this section the Court of Small Causes of Calcutta shall be deemed to be of the same grade as a district court. vide Cal Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 63.2] Changes Introduced in the Section

This section corresponds with section 285 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 except for the following particulars:

(i) The words "is under attachment" have been substituted for the words 'has been attached'. (See notes below, under the head "Is under attachment").

(ii) Sub-section (2).[1675]

[s 63.3] Object of the Section

The object of this section is to prevent different claims arising out of the attachment and sale of the same property by different courts; in other words, it is to prevent confusion in the execution of decrees.[1676] The principle underlying this section is the principle of convenience, of avoiding multiplicity of proceedings and of fair distribution and not the principle of exclusion.[1677]

[s 63.4] Application of the Section

A attaches certain property in execution of a decree obtained by him against B in the small causes court at Surat. The same property is subsequently attached by C in execution of a decree obtained against B in the court of the subordinate judge at Surat. The court of the subordinate judge is a court of higher grade than the small causes court, and it is, therefore, the proper court under this section for deciding objections to the attachment, for determining claims made to the property, and for ordering the sale thereof and receiving the sale proceeds.[1678]

The section does not require that the higher court should have appellate or revisional jurisdiction over the other court. It has reference only to the gradation of courts. The subordinate court is a court of higher grade in relation to the court of the district munsif.[1679] In Rajasthan, the court of the civil judge is of a grade higher than that of the additional munsif.[1680]

1675. See notes below.
1676. Ram Narain v Mina, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 46; Bykant Nath v Rajendro Narain, (1886) 12 Cal 333.
1677. Surendra Kumar v Jamini Kumar, AIR 1936 Cal 723 : (1937) 1 Cal 391; Ramchandra v Digambar Tejiram, AIR 1960 Bom 230 : (1960) ILR Bom 8 : 61 Bom LR 1665 (FB).
1678. Turmuklal v Kalyandas, (1895) 19 Bom 127; Ballu Ram v Raghubar, (1894) 16 All 11; Govidbux v Azim Khan, AIR 1963 Raj 224.
1679. Gouri Shankar v Kasi Prasad, AIR 1957 Cal 648 : 61 Cal WN 725.
1680. Daulat Singh v Karni Dan, AIR 1968 Raj 296.

The section casts upon the court of the higher grade, the duty of distributing the sale proceeds and thereby, in effect, executing not only its own decree but the decree of the inferior courts, irrespective of the fact that applications for execution of the decrees are not made to the court of the higher grade but are made to the courts of the lower grade before the receipt of the assets.[1681] In a case to which this section applies, the receipt of assets by one of the courts contemplated in the section, amounts to a constructive receipt of assets by each of such courts.[1682] Decree-holder obtained attachment before judgment, in respect of certain immovable property. But he did not proceed against that property in execution proceedings. It was held, that he would not be entitled to call in aid section 63, for claiming rateable distribution when the assets were brought to sale in another court.[1683]

[s 63.5] Sub-section (2)

This sub-section was added in 1908. It declares in effect that a proceeding in execution shall not be deemed to be invalid merely because it was taken by a court which, having regard to sub-section (1), ought not to have taken it. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, there was a conflict of decisions on the question whether the rule contained in section 285 of that Code [now sub-section (1)] was a rule of procedure only or whether it affected jurisdiction. The High Courts of Calcutta,[1684] Bombay,[1685] and Madras,[1686] held that the rule was merely a rule of procedure, and did not oust the jurisdiction of the inferior court in proceedings in execution of its own decree. On the other hand, the High Court of Allahabad held that the section affected jurisdiction, that is to say, it took away the jurisdiction of the inferior court in the several matters specified in the section.[1687] The result was that where a sale was effected by a court of lower grade in a case where it ought to have been effected by a court of higher grade, the sale according to the Calcutta, Bombay and Madras decisions, was not for that reason invalid, but, according to the Allahabad decisions, it was absolutely void as one made without jurisdiction. Sub-section (2) gives effect to the Calcutta, Bombay and Madras decisions.[1688] The term "court" here means a court to which the CPC applies. The Registrar of Co-operative Societies is not a court, although an attachment order passed by him has the same effect as the one by a civil court.[1689]

There is yet another point which may be considered in the form of an illustration. A obtains a decree against B in the court of a subordinate judge. In execution of the decree, certain property belonging to B is attached by the subordinate judge's court. C obtains a decree against B in a district court. The same property is then attached by the district court in execution of C's decree. The property is sold by the subordinate judge in execution of A's decree, although the 1681. Dhirendra Rao v Virbhadrappa, AIR 1935 Bom 176 (1935) 59 Bom 310; Thanmull v KKrishnaswami, AIR 1935 Mad 988.

---

1682. Thanmull v Krishnaswami, AIR 1935 Mad 988; Simla Banking & Industrial Co Ltd, Lahore v Indo-Swiss Trading Co. Ltd, Calcutta, AIR 1938 Lah 754.
1683. K Suryavati v Suryakantam, AIR 1984 AP 227.
1684. Bykant Nath v Rajendro Narain, (1886) 12 Cal 333; Ram Narain v Mina, (1898) 25 Cal 46; Gopi Chand v Kasimunneesa, (1907) 34 Cal 836.
1685. Abdul Karim v Thakordas, (1898) 22 Bom 88; Turmuklal v Kalyandas, (1895) 19 Bom 127; Patel Naranji v Haridas, (1894) 18 Bom 458.
1686. Kunhayan v Ithukutti, (1899) 22 Mad 295.
1687. Chiranji v Jawahir, (1904) 26 All 538; Har Prasad v Jagan Lal, (1905) 27 All 56; Durpati v Bibi Ramrach Pal, (1909) 31 All 527.
1688. Srinivasachariar v Appavoo, AIR 1924 Mad 889 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 720; Giris v Sri Krishna, AIR 1924 Cal 168 : (1923) 38 Cal LJ 266; Veeraya v Veeraraghavayya, AIR 1961 AP 298 : (1961) 1 Andh WR 218.
1689. Profulla Chandra v Calcuttal Credit Corp, AIR 1965 Assam 21.

proper court to sell the property is the district court, and it is purchased by X. Subsequently, the same property is sold by the district court in execution of C's decree, and it is purchased by Y. Which of the two purchasers has the better title? According to the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Bykant Nath v Rajendra Narain,[1690] X, the first purchaser, would take an indefeasible title:

(i) if the sale was held by the subordinate judge's court in ignorance of the attachment by the district court; and

(ii) the purchase was made by X without notice of the attachment by the district court; but if the sale was held by the subordinate judge's court after notice of the attachment by the district court, or the property was purchased by X with notice of that attachment, the purchase of X would be liable to be defeated by the purchase of Y.

According to the decision of the Bombay High Court in Abdul Karim v Thakordas,[1691] it was quite enough to give an indefeasible title to X if he purchased without notice of the attachment by the district court. The Bombay court did not regard any notice which the inferior court may have of the attachment by the superior court as of any consequence, for the simple reason that the jurisdiction of a court cannot depend upon notice. A similar view was taken by the Madras High Court.[1692] Under the present section, it seems X would take an indefeasible title to the property, whether or not he or the subordinate judge's court had notice of the attachment by the district court.

The result, therefore, is that where property is under attachment by two courts of different grades and the property is sold by the court of lower grade in contravention of the provisions of sub-section (1), the sale is not thereby rendered invalid, though the court selling the property and the purchaser at the court of sale may be aware of the irregularity. The course to be adopted by the court of higher grade in such a case is to accept the sale made by the lower court, and to call for the proceeds of the sale and to distribute them rateably amongst all the decree-holders.[1693] Where both the courts are subordinate to the district court, the procedure, according to the Bombay High Court,[1694] is for the party interested to apply to that court to have the sale proceeds transferred to the court of higher grade; according to the Calcutta High Court,[1695] the court of higher grade should move the district court for that purpose. The Bombay High Court has held that it is competent to the petitioner to apply to the court of higher grade for a transfer of the sale proceeds to that court and that court is competent to make the order.[1696] If the court of the lower grade has given the decree-holder leave to bid and set-off, that according to the Calcutta High Court, is a proceeding which is saved by sub-section (2) and the assets available for rateable distribution are the balance of purchase money after such set-off.[1697] But the other High Courts have taken the view that though the sale itself is valid, the rights of the other decree-holders for rateable distribution under section 73 are not affected by sub-section (2) and the amount of set-off might be required to be produced for distribution 1690. Bykant Nath v Rajendra Narain, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 333.

---

1691. Abdul Karim v Thakordas, (1898) 22 Bom 88.
1692. Kunhayan v Ithukutti, (1899) 22 Mad 295.
1693. See Bykant Nath v Rajendra Narain, (1896) 12 Cal 333; Patel Naranji v Haridas, (1894) 18 Bom 458 : 463; Nilkanta v Gosto, (1919) 46 Cal 64; Karupan v Somasundaram, AIR 1927 Mad 67 : (1926) 51 Mad 661; Surendra v Jamini, AIR 1936 Cal 723 : (1936) 40 Cal WN 1307.
1694. (1894) ILR 18 Bom 458.
1695. Nilkanta Rai v Gosto Behari Chatterjee, (1919) ILR 46 Cal 64.
1696. Deekappa v Chanbasappa, AIR 1925 Bom 420 : (1925) 49 Bom 655.
1697. Ahinath v Nipal Chandra, AIR 1937 Cal 55.

among the decree-holders.[1698] The legislature has now resolved this conflict by enacting the new Explanation which provides that the expression "proceeding taken by a court" does not include an order allowing to a decree-holder set-off to the extent of the purchase price payable by him and thereby accepting the view taken by the majority of the high courts.

If the same property is attached by a munsif and by a subordinate judge and is then sold by the munsif to X, the sale is valid. But, if after the sale, the decree-holder in the subordinate judge's court applies to that court for sale, the question arises whether X is entitled to apply to the subordinate judge under section 47 to stop the sale on the ground that the title to the property has passed to him. According to the Madras High Court, he is, the reason given being that he is the "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of section 47.[1699] According to the Calcutta High Court, he is not, the reason given being that he is not the "representative" of the judgment-debtor.[1700] The question of such an auction-purchaser being a representative or not, can no longer arise in view of the new explanation II to section 47 where under, such a purchaser is deemed to be a party to the suit in which the decree has been passed.

[s 63.6] "Is under attachment"

These words have been substituted for the words "has been attached" to make it clear that the provisions of this section do not apply unless there are two or more attachments existing at the same time.[1701] This section is attracted only when there is more than one attachment, in execution of a decree. An attachment before judgment does not become one in execution of a decree, until a decree is passed and an application for execution is filed. Where, in execution of a decree, a garnishee produced money in the court of the district munsif, who, acting under this section sent the same to the court of the subordinate judge who had passed an order for attachment before judgment. Of the amount, it was held that this section had no application and that the district munsif should have paid the amount to the decree-holder who had obtained the garnishee order.[1702] Where property, which is under attachment, in execution of a decree of a superior court is sold by a court of lower grade in execution of a charge decree, this section can have no application as there is no question of more than one attachment and the sale will be valid; and the superior court cannot pass an order transferring the sale proceeds to itself for distribution among the decree-holders.[1703]

[s 63.7] Decrees of more courts than one

This section applies only as between civil courts of different grades or as between revenue courts of different grades. It does not apply where one decree is that of a civil court and another that of a revenue court. Hence, where the same property is attached by a civil court and a revenue court, and it is sold by the revenue court, the purchaser is entitled to the property and it cannot be sold in execution of the decree of the civil court.[1704]

The High Court of Madras has held that even if the decrees are passed by the same court, still this section will apply. The object of the section is to deal with the several attachments, no

---

1698. Meghraj Easwardar v Corp of Madras, AIR 1936 Mad 797 : ILR 59 Mad 1028; Kesara Rao v Moolchand, AIR 1937 Ngp 393 : (1937) ILR Nag 466; Vishnu Ram v Bank of Bihar, AIR 1946 All 291 : (1946) ILR All 346; Ramchandra v Digambar Tejiramsupra, wherein, the previous authorities are discussed.
1699. Srinivasachariar v Appavoo, AIR 1924 Mad 889 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 720.
1700. Mahadeo Lal v Darsan, (1911) 15 Cal WN 542.
1701. Stowell v Ajudhia, (1884) 6 All 255; Fatima Khatun v Ashananda, (1939) 1 Cal 488.
1702. Subramaniam v Pakkiriswami, AIR 1957 Mad 159 : (1957) 1 Mad LJ 9.
1703. Surajben v Raichand, AIR 1963 Guj 140.
1704. Roshan Lal v Muhammad, AIR 1921 Lah 142 : (1921) 43 All 612.

matter whether the decrees passed are by the same court or by different courts. The emphasis is upon the word "attachment" and not upon the word "decrees".[1705]

[s 63.8] This Section Cannot be Controlled by Section 38

Where acting under this section, the decree of the court of the lower grade is called up by the court of the higher grade, the latter court has jurisdiction to sell the attached property. This section, if the facts apply, cannot be controlled or governed by section 38.[1706]

[s 63.9] Rateable distribution

See notes to section 73, "court to which application for execution should be made."

[S 64] Private alienation of property after attachment to be void.—[1707][(1)] Where an attachment has been made, any private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein and any payment to the judgment-debtor of any debt, dividend or other monies contrary to such attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment.

[1708][(2) Nothing in this section shall apply to any private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein, made in pursuance of any contract for such transfer or delivery entered into and registered before the attachment.]

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section, claims enforceable under an attachment include claims for the rateable distribution of assets.

SYNOPSIS

[s 64.1] Changes Introduced in the Section ... 907
[s 64.2] Object of the Section 908
[s 64.3] Where An Attachment has been Made 909
[s 64.4] Attachment before Judgment 910
[s 64.5] Private Transfer 911
[s 64.6] Contract for Sale..... 911
[s 64.7] Private Transfer Void Only as Against Claims Enforceable under the Attachment..... 912
[s 64.8] Contrary to Such Attachment..... 915
[s 64.9] Explanation to the Section: Claims for Rateable Distribution of Assets under Section 73 are Claims Enforceable Under An Attachment..... 916
[s 64.10] Private Transfer under O XXI, Rule 83..... 918
[s 64.11] Mortgage Executed Before But Registered after Attachment, not Affected..... 918
[s 64.12] Attachment Raised and Subsequently Restored..... 918
[s 64.13] Private Sale to Decree-holder 919
[s 64.14] Effect of Striking off Execution Proceedings or of Removing them from the File..... 919
[s 64.15] Effect of Dismissal of Execution in Default 920
[s 64.16] Attachment Does Not Create a Charge 921
[s 64.17] Effect of Order of Adjudication on Attachment..... 921
[s 64.18] Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909 923
[s 64.19] Effect of Winding-up Order on Attachment..... 923
[s 64.20] Sub-section (2)—Concept of Registration 923

1705. Megraj v Corp of Madras, AIR 1936 Mad 797 : (1936) 59 Mad 1028.
1706. Venkata Reddi v Venkataratnam, AIR 1939 Mad 169 : (1939) ILR Mad 248.
1707. Section 64 renumbered as sub-section (1) by CPC (Amendment) Act, 2002 (22 of 2002), section 3 (w.e.f. 1-7-2002) vide Notification. S.O. 604(E), dated 6 June 2002.
1708. Sub-section (2) inserted by CPC (Amendment) Act, 2002 (22 of 2002), section 3 (w.e.f. 1-7-2002) vide Notfication SO 604(E), dated 6 June 2002.

[s 64.1] Changes Introduced in the Section

Section 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 was as follows:

> When an attachment has been made by actual seizure or by written order duly intimated and made known in manner aforesaid, any private alienation of the property attached, whether by sale, gift, mortgage or otherwise, and any payment of the debt or dividend or a delivery of the share, to the judgment-debtor during the continuance of the attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the-attachment.

The section [new sub-section (1)] differs from the corresponding section 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, in the following respects:

(i) The words "by actual seizure or by written order duly intimated and made known in manner aforesaid" after the words "where an attachment has been made" in section 276 have been omitted as being mere surplusage.[1709]

(ii) The words "during the continuance of the attachment", which occurred in section 276, have been omitted, and the words "contrary to such attachment" have been substituted for them.[1710]

(iii) The explanation to the section is new.[1711]

Vide the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002, by section 3, section 64 was renumbered as sub-section (1) wef 1 July 2002 and a new sub-section (2) was inserted in the section. The sub-section (2) inserted by the Act of 2002 is in the nature of an exception to sub-section (1) and provides that nothing in section 64 shall apply to any private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein, made in pursuance of any contract for such transfer or delivery entered into and registered before the attachment. It is relevant to mention here that sub-section (1) of section 64 provides that where an attachment has been made, any private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein and any payments to the judgment-debtor of any debt, dividend or other moneys contrary to such attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment.

The object of section 64 is to prevent fraud on decree-holders and to secure the rights of the attaching creditor against the attached property by prohibiting private alteration pending attachment. Merely passing of an order of attachment does not ipso facto constitute attachment; it must be followed by a procedure laid down in O XXI. Many a times there is a gap between passing of the order of attachment and actual attachment, which allows a dishonest litigant to prejudice the rights of the attaching creditors by transferring the attached property before the order of attachment could be executed. Where the property sought to be attached is transferred and registered after attachment, the order of attachment prevails over the transfer. The difficulty arises where the property sought to be attached is contracted for such transfer or delivery but is entered into before an order of attachment is executed, and the registration of the transfer takes place after order of attachment is executed.

The Supreme Court in Vannarakkal Kallathil Sreedharan v Chandramaath Balakrishnan,[1712] has made the following observations:

> Under a contract of sale entered into before attachment the conveyance after attachment in pursuance of the contract passes on good title in spite of the attachment. ... The

---

1709. Sinnappan v Arunachalam, (1919) 42 Mad 844. See notes below: "Where an attachment has been made."
1710. See notes below "Contrary to such attachment."
1711. See notes below: "Explanation to the Section, etc."
1712. Vannarakkal Kallathil Sreedharan v Chandramaath Balakrishnan, (1990) 3 SCC 291.

agreement for sale indeed creates an obligation attached to the ownership of property and since the attaching creditor is entitled to attach only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, the attachment cannot be free from the obligations incurred under the contract for sale. Though s 64 of the Code of Civil Procedure was intended to protect the attaching creditor, but if the subsequent conveyance is in pursuance of an agreement for sale which was before the attachment, the contractual obligation arising therefrom must be allowed to prevail over the rights of the attaching creditor. The rights of the attaching creditor shall not be allowed to override the contractual obligation arising from an antecedent agreement for sale of the attached property. The attaching creditor cannot ignore the obligation and proceed to bring the property to sale as if it remained the absolute property of the judgment-debtor.

Further the Supreme Court[1713] has observed:

> When the property belonged to the defendant-judgment debtors (vendors) and the sale deed had already been executed by them prior to the attachment before judgment and only its registration remains, then neither the attachment before judgment nor a subsequent attachment or court sale of the property would confer any title by preventing the relation back. The fact that the document of sale had not been registered until after the attachment makes no difference. Even an unregistered document can be received as evidence for purposes mentioned in the proviso to s 49 of the Registration Act. The contention that till registration, the execution, the execution of the sale deed does not confer any rights whatsoever on the vendee cannot be accepted.

The legislature by the insertion of sub-section (2) desired to limit the benefits of the above-mentioned judgments to bona fide transfers. In any transaction for transfer or delivery of the property attached, where the contract is executed and registered before attachment, the mischief of sub-section (1) shall not apply. It shall, however, apply to following situation.

(i) Where the property is transferred and registered after attachment.

(ii) Where the property is transferred before attachment but registration takes place after attachment.

The transactions, which fall in the mischief of sub-section (1), are void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment. In the opinion of authors, this amendment is very fair and protects the interest of bona fide purchasers as well as that of attaching creditors.

[s 64.2] Object of the Section

A sues B for Rs 5,000. B owns a house worth Rs 5,000 and he has no other property. B may sell or mortgage the house notwithstanding the institution of the suit against him and he may sell or mortgage it even after a decree has been passed against him in the suit, and the sale or mortgage in either case will be perfectly valid and pass a good title to the transferee.[1714] But if the property is attached in execution of the decree, any private transfer of the property by B contrary to such attachment shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment.[1715] The object of the section is to prevent fraud on decree-holders,[1716] and to secure intact the rights of the attaching creditor against the attached property by prohibiting private alterations pending attachments.[1717]

1713. Hamda Ammal v Avadiappa Pathar, (1991) 1 SCC 715.
1714. Pullen Chetty v Ramalinga Chetty, (1870) 5 Mad HCR 368.
1715. Devi Sahai v Govindrao, AIR 1965 MP 275; Kusuma Dei v Malati, AIR 1969 Ori 195.
1716. Shivlingappa v Chanbasappa, (1960) 360 Bom 337, p 339.
1717. Dinobundhu v Jogman, (1902) 29 Cal 154 : 29 IA 9; Supreme General Films Exchange Ltd v Brijnath, AIR 1975 SC 1810; PG Munnuswami v PR Panduranga, AIR 1978 AP 47.

It may be noted that by insertion of sub-section (2) vide Amending Act (22 of 2002); the transfer or delivery of property in respect of which there was registered contract before the attachment is immune from the effect of sub-section (1).

[s 64.3] Where An Attachment has been Made

An attachment to render a subsequent alienation invalid must be made in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure. Thus, a promissory note must be attached by actual seizure as provided by O XXI, rule 51, and not by the issue of a prohibitory order. The mere issue of a prohibitory order does not amount to an attachment within the meaning of this section.[1718] The same is the position where an injunction is issued, the breach of which may attract punishment, but does not render a completed sale null and void.[1719]

Where monies were due to a judgment-debtor under a contract entered into with the Public Works Department, the provision of law applicable for attachment of the same is O XXI, rule 52, and not O XXI, rule 46; and, where the court issued a notice under rule 52, requesting the officer to hold them subject to his further orders, the attachment is complete and the subsequent assignment thereof by the judgment-debtor is hit by this section.[1720] Similarly, in the case of immovable property, the attachment to render a subsequent alienation invalid must be made in the manner prescribed by O XXI, rule 54; an order for attachment is not enough.[1721] An attachment made under that rule operates as a valid prohibition against alienation from the date on which the necessary proclamation is made and a copy of the order of attachment is affixed as provided by that rule, and not from the date of the order of attachment.[1722] In Muthiah Chetti v Palanipp,[1723] Lord Shaw said:

> A fascicules of clauses, beginning at Rule 41 of Order XXI and applicable to 'attachment of property' shows in instance after instance that attachment is a real thing, with a variety of real applications suited to the nature of the property to be attached. These instances go to show that under the Code of Civil Procedure in India the most anxious provisions are enacted in order to prevent a mere order of a court from effecting attachment, and plainly indicating that the attachment itself is something separate from the mere order, and is something which is to be done and effected before attachment can be declared to have been accomplished. Their Lordships need not repeat in another form these propositions. The order is one thing, the attachment is another. No property can be declared to be attached unless first the Order for attachment has been issued, and secondly in execution of that order the other things prescribed by the rules in the Code have been done.

Thus where the order for attachment of immovable property was served on the judgment-debtor and his attorney but the writ of attachment was not served by proclaiming it by beat of drum upon the land before the challenged alienation by the judgment-debtor, it was held

---

1718. Subramania v Chokkalinga, AIR 1923 Mad 317 : (1923) 46 Mad 415.
1719. Kusuma Dei v Malati, AIR 1969 Ori 195.
1720. Hemraj v Waman Rao, AIR 1954 MB 378.
1721. Pokhpal Singh v Kanhaiya Lal, AIR 1946 All 438 : (1946) ILR All 788; Nur Ahmad v Altaf Ali, (1878) 2 All 58; Ganga Din v Khushali, (1885) 7 All 709; Satya Charan v Madhub, (1905) 9 Cal WN 693; Ahmad Yar v Bose, AIR 1925 Lah 483 : (1925) 7 Lah LJ 501; Bharat Chandra v Gauranga, AIR 1927 Cal 885 : (1928) 55 Cal 454.
1722. Romanayakudu v Boya, (1919) 42 Mad 565 : 50 IC 261; Sinnappan v Arunachalam, (1919) 42 Mad 844 (FB); Mula Ram v Jiwandaram, AIR 1923 Lah 423 : (1923) 4 Lah 211; Auru Jogulu v Thammanna, AIR 1954 Cut 394; Mahadeo v Janak Singh, AIR 1954 Bom 251 : (1954) ILR Bom 695; Jagannath v Kahabir, AIR 1955 Pat 231; Venkatasubbarao v Krishnayya, AIR 1956 AP 59; Monoharlal v Bengal Immunity Co., AIR 1945 Cal 308 : (1945) 1 Cal 601.
1723. Muthiah Chetti v Palanipp, AIR 1928 PC 139 : (1928) ILR 51 Mad 349 : 55 IA 256; Nabadwipchandra v Loke Nath, AIR 1933 Cal 212 : (1932) 59 Cal 1176.

that the alienation was not affected.[1724] In Mohammad Akbar Khan v Mian Musharaf,[1725] the Privy Council held that where there is ample evidence of an attachment, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it ought to be presumed that all necessary formalities were complied with.[1726] An injunction restraining alienation of property by the judgment-debtor does not operate as an attachment of the same for the purpose of this section.[1727] In an Allahabad case, the executor sued for the recovery of a debt which was due to the estate of the deceased. The court ordered attachment of the property of the judgment-debtor. It was held that attachment before judgment terminates when the suit is dismissed. Transfer during the subsistence of the attachment is void.[1728] Where a suit is restored after setting aside its dismissal, then interim attachments and other interlocutory orders automatically revive. Any sale of attached property, in the meantime, becomes void under this section.[1729]

[s 64.4] Attachment before Judgment

An alienation of property made after attachment before judgment is void to the same extent, as an alienation made after attachment under a decree.[1730] Section 64 is meant to safeguard the interests of the creditor. It applies to attachment before judgment also. As against the attaching creditor, a sale would not be effective, but, if the order of attachment is withdrawn or the claim of the creditor is otherwise satisfied, the sale deed executed, would convey good title to the transferee. Hence, if a person has purchased the property attached before judgment, the transfer is ineffective and void, as against the interest of the creditor purchaser. Petition for release of the disputed property under O XXI, rule 58 is not maintainable.[1731] The attachment, however, must be made in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, and, in the case of immovable property, as prescribed by O XXI, rule 54.[1732] The High Court of Madras has held that an alienation of property, after it is actually attached, pursuant to an order for attachment before judgment, is void under this section, even though the property was not actually attached in pursuance of the order for attachment before judgment, until after the passing of the decree,[1733] the ground stated being that the validity of an order for attachment before judgment does not depend on the time when the property is actually attached. This decision is of doubtful authority.[1734] Where an order of attachment before judgment was made in accordance with Form No 5 and not under O XXI, rule 54(2), and no objection was raised by the defendant to whom notice was issued, it has been held that an objection that the attachment was not made under proper provision of law is not open subsequently as it does not go to the root of jurisdiction and can be waived and accordingly, an alienation made after such attachment was hit by the section.[1735] Non-affixation of notice in revenue office is not material irregularity and the private sale during attachment will be valid only if shown 1724. Monoharalal Bannerjee v Bengal Immunity Co. Ltd, AIR 1945 Cal 308 : (1944) 49 Cal WN 226.

---

1725. Mohammad Akbar Khan v Mian Musharaf, AIR 1934 PC 217 : (1934) 61 IA 371.
1726. See the Indian Evidence Act 1872, section 114.
1727. Ram Lakkan v Mahbood Hasan, AIR 1954 All 422 : (1944) All LJ 118.
1728. Dhan Singh v Bapoo Ram, AIR 1981 All 1.
1729. Nancy Johnydom v Prabhatilal, (1987) 4 SCC 78.
1730. Gann v Jangi Lal, (1899) 26 Cal 531; Shivlal v Taniram, AIR 1928 Bom 444 : (1938) 30 Bom LR 1136; Tarak Nath v Sanat, AIR 1929 Cal 494 : (1929) 57 Cal 274.
1731. Rushi Mahakur v Dibya Shankar, AIR 1988 Ori 145.
1732. Bharat v Gauranga, AIR 1927 Cal 885 : (1928) 55 Cal 545; Venkatasubbarao v Krishnayya, AIR 1956 AP 59.
1733. Venkatasubbiah v Venkata Seshaiya, (1919) 42 Mad 1.
1734. See notes above : "Where an attachment has been made".
1735. Gaya Thakur v Bhagwat Prasad, AIR 1963 Pat 286.

that substantial injustice is caused to purchaser.[1736] Where there is a suit for declaration of title and permanent injunction, sale of property in ignorance of temporary injunction is only voidable and not void.[1737] When a suit is dismissed, an attachment before judgment terminates without any order of the court. If the judgment is reversed on appeal or annulled on review, the judgment does not revive the attachment so as to affect alienation shade before the date of such reversal.[1738] In the under mentioned case, the sale by the judgment-debtor to the third party and the sale by the purchaser to another person (the respondent), were affecting during the substance of the attachment and before the dismissal of execution case, section 64 would render the sale void as against the appellant decree-holder.[1739]

[s 64.5] Private Transfer

[It may be noted that after insertion of sub-section (2) by Amendment Act of 2002, the transfer or delivery of property in respect of which there was registered agreement before the attachment is not void. The following text is therefore indicative of the judicial opinion prior to said amendment.]

The expression "private transfer" means a voluntary sale, gift, or mortgage in contravention of the attachment, and not the enforced execution of a conveyances or assignment in obedience to a decree of a court competent to pass it.[1740] The decree may be one on an award,[1741] even though the matters in difference were referred to arbitration without the intervention of the court.[1742] It is only a private transfer that is avoided by the section. A court sale in execution of a decree declaring a charge and delivery of the property by reason thereto is not hit by the section.[1743] Releasing an easement by the dominant owner to the servient owner is a transfer within the meaning of this section.[1744] Where pending a litigation between A and B as regards a cinema house, X filed a suit against A and obtained attachment before judgment of the house and thereafter A and B agreed to treat it as their partnership property and a compromise decree was passed in those terms, it was held that the agreement and the decree had the effects of transferring an interest in favour of B, and were hit by this section.[1745]

[s 64.6] Contract for Sale

It may be noted that after insertion of sub-section (2) by the Amendment Act of 2002, the transfer or delivery of property in respect of which there was registered agreement before the attachment is not void. The following text is therefore indicative of the judicial opinion prior to said amendment.

1736. Peta Thallamma v Padmallu Gopala Krishna Murthy, AIR 2003 AP 353.
1737. Prana Krushna v Uma Kanta Panda, AIR 1989 Ori 148 (DB).
1738. Dular Singh v Ramchandar, AIR 1934 All 165.
1739. Nancy John Lyndon v Prabhati Lal Choudhary, (1987) 4 SCC 78. See notes to O 38, rule 9.
1740. Imperial Bank of India v Balasubramania, AIR 1945 Mad 412; Qurban Ali v Ashraf Ali, (1882) 4 All 219; Shankari Sitaya v Mudaragaddi, AIR 1924 Mad 610 : (1924) 46 Mad LJ 361; Lakshman v Ramchandra, AIR 1932 Bom 301 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 117.
1741. Saburdas Mahasukram v Gopalji Nandas, AIR 1943 Bom 283 : 45 Bom LR 526; Narayana v Biyari, AIR 1922 Mad 221 : (1922) 45 Mad 103.
1742. Mohomed Afzal Khan v Abdul Rahman, AIR 1932 PC 235 : ILR 13 Lah 702 : 59 IA 405.
1743. Neelacanda v Parameswara Kurup, AIR 1954 Tr & Coch 176 : (1953) ILR Tr & Coch 396.
1744. Kristodhone v Nandarani, (1908) ILR 35 Cal 889.
1745. Ramakanta v Bhagban Ram; AIR 1962 Assam 56.

The Calcutta High Court has held that a contract for sale entered into before an attachment does not create any interest or charge which can prevail over the attachment.[1746] In a previous case,[1747] Woodroffe J held that the contractual obligation prevailed over the attachment. This is the view taken by the High Courts of Bombay[1748] and Nagpur.[1749] In a Madras case,[1750] the learned judges said that it does not seem to be sound sense that when a creditor attaches property, which is subject to a particular obligation, he should be able to override it. The attachment will not override the conveyance made in performance of contract of sale prior to the attachment; but will fasten on any purchase money paid after the attachment.[1751] In Varughese v Ouseph Lonan,[1752] the High Court of Travancore-Cochin has held, dissenting from the view of Cumming J that where the judgment-debtor sells property subsequent to an attachment but pursuant to an agreement entered into prior to the attachment, the sale is valid and the attachment would take effect only on the purchase money paid by the vendee subsequent to the attachment. Where there is a contract for sale, attachment made thereafter does not affect a prior agreement to sell. Attachment could only fasten on the debtor's right to the unpaid purchase money, according to the Kerala High Court.[1753] The Supreme Court has now held that a conveyance executed after attachment, but in pursuance of pre-attachment agreement, passes good title to the property so conveyed. The reasoning was that a contract for sale creates an obligation to sell and the judgment-debtor cannot be relieved of this obligation by the attachment.[1754]

Order of attachment cannot be considered as a bar to register the document. Sale of the subject property, pending the order of attachment is void only as against the claims enforceable under the order of said attachment and not in respect of other claims. Therefore, the sale of the property, which is under attachment, cannot be said to be illegal where the parties to the transaction have nothing to do with the pending proceedings in which the order of attachment was passed.[1755] Sale certificate has to be registered with proper stamping and has to be returned to the petitioners.[1756]

[s 64.7] Private Transfer[1757] Void Only as Against Claims Enforceable under the Attachment

(i) In execution of a decree obtained by A against B, certain property belonging to B is attached. During the pendency of the attachment, B mortgages the property to C.

1746. Tarak Nath v Sanat, AIR 1929 Cal 494 : (1930) ILR 57 Cal 274.
1747. Madan Mohan v Rebati Mohan, (1916) 21 Cal WN 158.
1748. Basappa v Hanmappa, AIR 1939 Bom 492 : (1939) 41 Bom LR 943.
1749. Ghusaram v Parashram, AIR 1936 Ngp 163 : (1936) ILR Nag 172; Durga Prasad v Seetla Prasad, AIR 1940 Oudh 80.
1750. Venkata Reddi v Yellappa Chetti, (1917) 38 IC 107.
1751. Veeraraghavayya v Kamala Devi, AIR 1935 Mad 193 : (1935) 68 Mad LJ 67; Veerappa v Venkatarama, AIR 1935 Mad 872 : (1936) 59 Mad 1. This was also the view of Pearson J in Tarak Nath v Sanat 57 Cal 274, where he disagreed with Cumming J in his interpretation of the judgment of Woodroffe J in Madanmohan v Rebati 21 Cal WN 158.
1752. Varughese v Ouseph Lonan, AIR 1952 Tr & Coch 467 : (1952) Tr & Coch 201.
1753. Narayanan Nair Ramkrishnan Nair v Zacharia Kuriakose, AIR 1991 Ker 152.
1754. KK Sreedharan v C Balakrishnan, (1990) 1 Scale 519 (SC); Handa Amual v Aradippa Patkar, (1991) 1 SCC 715.
1755. Sabapathi Palanisamy v The Sub Registrar, Avinashi, WP No.17901 of 2020, decided on 11 December 2020 (Madras High Court); see also, Karuppanna Gounder v K Manian.
1756. Sabapathi Palanisamy v The Sub Registrar, Avinashi, WP No.17901 of 2020, decided on 11 December 2020 (Madras High Court)
1757. Anund Lall v Jullodhur, (1872) 14 Moo Ind App 543; Dinendronath v Ramkumar, (1881) 7 Cal 107, 118; Swarup Chand v Jankiramayya, AIR 1942 Mad 330 : (1942) 1 Mad LJ 318; Official Receiver, Muzaffarnagar v Chandra Shekhar, AIR 1977 All 77.

The property is then sold in execution of the decree and purchased by D. Here, the mortgage having been made contrary to the attachment is void as against A's claim, and D is entitled to take the property free from the mortgage created by B.[1758] This illustration shows the operation of the section.[1759]

(ii) B's property is attached in execution of a money-decree obtained by A. While the attachment is pending, B sells the property to C, who pays off a mortgage prior to A's suit. The property is then sold in execution and is purchased by D. The sale to C being contrary to the attachment, is void as against D. C may have a right of subrogation to the prior mortgagee, but that does not give him a right to possession as the mortgage was not usufructuary.[1760]

(iii) B's property is attached in execution of a money-decree obtained by A against him. While the attachment is pending, B sells the property to C, and pays, out of the sale proceeds, the amount of the decree into court and the attachment thereupon ceases (see O XXI, rule 55). The sale to C is valid, the decree having been satisfied by payment into court, and there being no claim outstanding which is enforceable under the attachment.[1761] Moreover, an alienation by means of which the decree in execution of which the attachment was made is satisfied can scarcely be regarded as an alienation contrary to the attachment.[1762]

(iv) In execution of a decree obtained by A against B, the properties of the latter were attached. B then sold them to C. The properties were then sold in execution and purchased by D. The title of C cannot prevail against that of D even though he had acquired the interest of the decree-holder prior to sale.[1763]

(v) A obtains a decree against X and attaches his properties in execution. B obtains a decree against X and in execution of his decree attaches the same properties, which are then given as security for the decree by X. B then sells the properties in execution. The sale is not hit by the section, as it is in furtherance of the attachment, as not in enforcement of the security bond.[1764]

(vi) On the same principle, where A attaches B's property in execution of a decree obtained by him against B, and applications are thereafter made by other decree-holders, C, D and E for rateable distribution without attaching the property in execution of their decrees, and subsequently B sells the property to F and pays off A (the attaching creditor), the other decree-holders, namely C, D and E are not entitled to question the alienation to F. In the first place, the alienation can hardly be said to be an alienation contrary to the attachment within the meaning of this section, for the alienation was the means by which the decree in execution of which the attachment was made was satisfied. In the next place, it cannot be said that the claims of C, D and E are "claims for the rateable distribution of assets" within

---

1758. Srinivasa v Vellayan, AIR 1926 Mad 966 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 143.
1759. See note below: "Private sale to decree-holder".
1760. Bijai v Raghunath, AIR 1926 All 734 : (1926) 48 All 698, on appeal Bijai v Rudra, AIR 1929 PC 288 : (1930) 32 Bom LR 144.
1761. Umesh Chunder v Raj Bullub, (1882) 8 Cal 279; Anund Lall v Jullodhur, (1872) 14 Moo Ind App 543 : 550; Abdul Rashid v Gappa Lal, (1898) ILR 20 All 421; Khushalchand v Nandram, (1911) 35 Bom 516; SPLKSM Chettyar v U. Sient, AIR 1932 Rang 103 : (1932) 10 Rang 199.
1762. Annamalai v Palamalai, (1918) 41 Mad 265 : 276 (FB); Mehar Chand v Joti Prasad, AIR 1934 All 1057; Radha Ballabha v Bohra Makhan Lal, AIR 1937 All 641.
1763. Dasarathlal v Ananthkumar, AIR 1951 Ngp 311 : (1951) ILR Nag 416.
1764. Ramaswami v Muthuveerappa, AIR 1958 Mad 531.

the meaning of the explanation to the section, for, to bring section 73 [which provides for rateable distribution] into play, certain conditions are necessary, and one of them is that there should be assets held by the court. In the case, now under consideration, no assets came into the hands of the court at all. Therefore, C, D and E are not entitled to question the alienation by B to F, and the alienation is perfectly valid.[1765]

(vii) A decree-holder, though entitled to rateable distribution as contemplated by the Explanation to the section, is not entitled to question a private alienation under this section, unless his claim be one "enforceable under the attachment"within the meaning of this section. The "attachment" referred to in this section is the attachment under which the execution sale is made. Therefore, a "claim enforceable under the attachment" means a claim enforceable under the attachment under which the execution sale is made.[1766] A claim, under any other attachment, is not a "claim enforceable under the attachment" within the meaning of this section. The result is that:

(a) if A obtains a decree against B, and B's property is attached in execution of the decree; and

(b) B subsequently alienates the property to C; and

(c) the property is thereafter attached and sold in execution of a decree obtained by D against B, and it is purchased by F; and

(d) C sues F for possession, then:

C's title is to be preferred to F's title, and C is entitled to possession of the property. D cannot object to the alienation to C, for the alienation to C was prior to his attachment. Nor is A entitled to question the alienation, for the sale in execution was not made under his attachment but under D's attachment. The sale having been made under D's attachment, A's claim cannot be said to be a "claim enforceable under the attachment" within the meaning of this section. The result would be the same even if we substitute A for D, that is, even if the decree-holder in both cases was the same person. This is the effect of the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mina Kumari v Bijoy Singh,[1767] a case under section 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 which did not contain the explanation which now occurs at the end of the present section. But the decision proceeded on the assumption that Sorabji v Govind,[1768] considered in the notes below was good law, an assumption which involved the proposition now quoted in the explanation. Mina Kumari's case, therefore, would also govern cases under the present section.

If, in the case, put above, the property was sold by the court under A's attachment, instead of D's and D had applied for execution before the court received the proceeds of the sale, the alienation to C would be void, it being contrary to A's attachment, and further, D would be entitled to rateable distribution under section 73.

The attaching decree-holder may agree with a purchaser of the property from the judgment-debtor pending the attachment that he will not bring the property to sale in execution of

---

1765. Annamalai v Palamalai, (1918) 41 Mad 265 (FB); Bhupal v Kundan Lal, AIR 1921 All 45 : (1921) 43 All 399; Radha Ballabha v Bohra Makhan Lal, AIR 1937 All 641.
1766. Annamalai v Palamalai, (1918) 41 Mad 265 (FB); Kasherchand v Wasa Begum, AIR 1937 Ngp 1.
1767. Mina Kumari v Bijoy Singh, 44 IA 72.
1768. Sorabji v Govind, (1892) ILR 16 Bom 91.

his decree. Such an agreement has the effect of rendering the alienation valid as against the attaching creditor.[1769] The same would follow where there is a waiver by the attaching decree-holder. But such waiver has to be proved by evidence of clear-cut intention.[1770] A lease in contravention of section 64 (i.e., after and during the subsistence of the attachment) is voidable at the instance of the person who has purchased the property in execution. Against such a purchaser, lessee cannot claim the status of the tenant.[1771] A lease created during the subsistence of an attachment in contravention of section 64 is voidable.[1772]

[s 64.8] Contrary to Such Attachment

These words have been substituted for the words, "during the continuance of the attachment", which occurred in section 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. The words "during the continuance of the attachment" were too wide, in that, they comprised alienations that could not possibly prejudice the rights of an attaching creditor, as where property is mortgaged by A to B, and the equity of redemption is subsequently attached at the instance of C, in execution of a decree obtained by C against A, and pending the attachment, the mortgage is transferred by B and A to D. In such a case, the transfer of the mortgage, though made during the continuance of the attachment, cannot prejudice C, the attaching creditor, for the effect of the transfer is merely to substitute D for B. But the transfer having been made 'during the continuance of the attachment', it came literally within the old section 276, though it was not contrary to the attachment, and it was accordingly contended, in a case before the judicial committee under section 276, that the transfer was void as against C. But this contention was overruled. Their Lordships held that the object of section 276 was merely to prohibit alterations contrary to the attachment, and that an alienation such as the above by B and A to D cannot, in any sense, be said to be contrary to the attachment.[1773] The words "contrary to the attachment" have now been substituted for the words 'during the continuance of the attachment' and they give effect to the Privy Council ruling, noted above. The object of the section is to safeguard the interest of the judgment-creditors and not to deprive the judgment-debtor, of his interest, in the property under attachment. Therefore, transfer of shares under attachment is void, if it becomes necessary to auction, or otherwise transfer, the attached shares for enforcement of claims. But if the attachment is for any reason raised, the transfer, though made during the continuance of attachment, would be valid.[1774] Similarly, a renewal, though pending the attachment of a mortgage already existing on the property, is not a transfer contrary to the attachment. But if the amount secured by the renewed mortgage exceeds the amount due under the original mortgage at the date of the attachment, the additional security is to that extent void.[1775] If a judgment-debtor transfers property after it has been attached in execution, and the property is then sold in execution, the transfer is void as against the auction-purchaser, even if the auction-purchaser is a surety for the satisfaction of the decree,[1776] but the 1769. Gangayya v Venkataramaya, AIR 1923 Mad 230 : (1923) 44 Mad LJ 80.

---

1770. Ramchandra v Ramchandra, AIR 1970 Ori 164.
1771. Om Prakash Garg v Ganga Sahu, (1981) 3 SCC 553.
1772. Johney D Couto v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1988 SC 109 : (1988) 1 SCC 116 : (1988) 1 SCR 787.
1773. Dinobundhu v Jogmaya, (1901) 29 Cal 154, p 166 : 29 IA 9, p 10; Srinivasa v Vellayan, AIR 1925 Mad 388 : (1924) 47 Mad LJ 913 (where the mortgage prior to the attachment was not kept alive); Prakasa v Yelamarti, AIR 1926 Mad 1082 : (1926) 51 Mad LJ 358; Qurban Ali v Ashraf Ali, (1882) 4 All 219.
1774. MK Sugar Mills v JK Sugar Mills, AIR 1965 All 135 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 1142; Official Receiver, Muzaffarnagar v Chandra Shekhar, AIR 1977 All 77.
1775. Mahadevappa v Srinivasa, (1882) 4 Mad 471.
1776. Dasarathlal v Anand Kumar, AIR 1951 Ngp 311.

transferee is a person whose interests are affected by the sale and is entitled to apply under O XXI, rule 90, to set aside the sale.[1777] Where a decree-holder attached property in execution of his decree and another decree-holder applied for rateable distribution without attaching the property, in execution of his decree and subsequently the judgment-debtor alienated the property and paid-off the attaching decree-holder, it was held that the alienation to satisfy the decree under which the attachment was made, was not contrary to such attachment within the meaning of this section and that the other decree-holder was not entitled to question the alienation under the section.[1778] The attachment which a judgment-creditor can have is as respect of the right, title and interest of his debtor at the date of attachment. He cannot have any right higher than that of his debtor at such date. Accordingly, if a person, having a contract of sale in his favour has a pre-existing right of specific performance, the attachment would not affect such right, for, the interest of the judgment-debtor in the attached property was subject to the promisee's right of specific performance. It follows that where an agreement for sale has been entered into prior to the attachment and the property is purchased by the promisee in specific performance of the agreement as a result of a consent decree, the right of such a promisee would prevail over the purchase of the property by the judgment-creditor at a court sale in consequence of the attachment.[1779] An attaching creditor does not attach the physical property but only the right of the judgment-debtor in it on the date of the attachment. If the judgment-debtor has incurred an obligation upon that right, prior to the attachment, such as an agreement to sell or mortgage, the attaching creditor cannot ignore such obligation as if the property was the absolute property of the debtor.[1780] What the section provides is that where property has been attached, any subsequent alienation is void against all claims enforceable under that particular attachment.[1781] An attachment effected after private alienation, is not assisted by an attachment before the alienation.[1782] When a sale is set aside, as the result of a deposit under O XXI, rule 89, the decree becomes satisfied and the attachment is extinguished and a mere claimant for rateable distribution who had not attached the property cannot claim the benefit of this section and assail the alienation made by the judgment-debtor.[1783]

[s 64.9] Explanation to the Section: Claims for Rateable Distribution of Assets under Section 73 are Claims Enforceable Under An Attachment

The Explanation to the section was inserted in 1908. A obtains a decree against B, and in execution of the decree attaches Rs 7,000 belonging to B in the hands of a railway company. B then assigns the said sum in the hands of the railway company to his attorneys for costs due to them subject to A's attachment. After the assignment, C, another creditor of B, obtains a decree against B, and in execution of his decree, attaches the said sum in the hands of the railway company. Thereafter, the company pays the said sum to the Sheriff of Bombay. The assignment by B to his attorneys, though made prior to C's attachment, is void as against C's claim, for, C's claim is a claim for rateable distribution of assets (Rs 7,000) within the meaning of section 73 and therefore, a claim enforceable under the attachment of A by virtue of the explanation to this section. C is, therefore, entitled to be paid in priority to B's attorneys.

1777. Naranappier v Chidambaram, AIR 1933 Mad 96 : (1932) 63 Mad LJ 945.
1778. Mehar Chand v Joti Prasad, AIR 1934 All 1057 : (1935) 33 All LJ 4.
1779. Purna Chandra v Daulat Ali, AIR 1973 Cal 432.
1780. Angu Pillai v MSMK Chettiar, AIR 1974 Mad 16 : (1973) 1 Mad LJ 334.
1781. Byrappa v S. Mani, AIR 1970 Mys 152 : (1969) 2 Mys LJ 465.
1782. Nana Rao v Arunachalam, AIR 1940 Mad 385 (FB) : (1940) Mad 526.
1783. Johor & Sons Ltd v Mathew, AIR 1962 Ker 106; following Ramiah v Namiah, AIR 1943 Mad 165 : (1943) Mad 175.

This is the law under the present CPC, and it is in accordance with the view taken by the Bombay High Court in Sorabji v Govind,[1784] decided under section 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. The view taken by the other high courts was that C's claim, being a claim merely for rateable distribution cannot be said to be a claim enforceable under the attachment, but this view is no longer law.[1785] The explanation gives effect to the Bombay decision. But the explanation does not apply unless the claim of the subsequent decree-holder can be said to be a claim for rateable distribution within the meaning of section 73. Now, the essential condition of enforcement of claims for rateable distribution under section 73 is that there should be assets held by the court (see section 73 below), and that condition was satisfied in Sorabji v Govind; but if there be no assets received by the court, as would be the case, if no payment was made by the railway company to the Sheriff, and A's attachment came to an end (O XXI, rule 55) by B satisfying A's decree out of court and certifying it to the court under O XXI, rule 2, C's claim cannot be enforced as a claim for rateable distribution, and the assignment to the attorneys will prevail over any claim, that may be made by C under his subsequent attachment.[1786] The explanation to the section protects only those decree-holder who are entitled to rateable distribution under section 73, and no decree-holder can be entitled to rateable distribution under that section unless there are assets held by the court.[1787] In a Calcutta case,[1788] A, an execution creditor, attached a debt and the garnishee paid the money to the Sheriff. The judgment-debtor obtained a stay order restraining the execution creditor from executing his decree for two months, the money being ordered to remain in the meanwhile in the hands of the Sheriff. While the money was with the Sheriff, B another creditor, attached the money before judgment, obtained a decree and applied for execution. B contended that he had a right of rateable distribution because while the money was in the Sheriff's hands, it had not been received by the court. But it was held that the money was assets received by the court when it was paid to the Sheriff, that B had no right of rateable distribution as his application was after the receipt of assets; and that, therefore B's attachment could not affect the rights of A as execution creditor. At the same time, it must be noted that it is not enough that a decree-holder is entitled to rateable distribution under section 73; to bring the explanation into play, it is also necessary that his claim must be one, enforceable under the attachment within the meaning of the present section.[1789] The result is that the decree-holder is not entitled to the benefit of the explanation and is not entitled to question a private alienation unless—

(i) he is entitled to rateable distribution under section 73, for which it is absolutely necessary that there should be assets held by the court; and

(ii) where there has been a sale in execution, his claim is one enforceable under the attachment under which the sale was made as explained in Illustration 41 under note, "A private transfer under this section".

1784. Sorabji v Govind, (1892) 16 Bom 91, referred to in Mina Kumari v Bijoy Singh, (1917) 44 IA 72 : ILR 4 Cal 662; followed in Chunilal v Karamchand, AIR 1922 Bom 241 : (1922) 46 Bom 895; Pratapa v AEL Mission, AIR 1926 Mad 307 : (1926) 19 Mad 38.
1785. Manohar v Ram Autar, (1903) 25 All 431; Kunhi v Makki, (1900) 23 Mad 478; Durga Churn v Monmohini, (1888) 15 Cal 771.
1786. Jetha Bhima & Co v Lady Janbai, (1912) 37 Bom 138; Mina Kumari v Bijoy Singh 44 IA 72 : 78 : 44 Cal 662 : 673; Annamalai v Palamalai, (1918) 41 Mad 265 : 275 : 285.
1787. Annamalai v Palamalai supra; Chindha v Chhaganlal, AIR 1928 Bom 545 : (1928) 30 Bom LR 1488; Babu Ram v Kaloo Mal, AIR 1934 All 1069 : (1934) All LJ 1091.
1788. Murlidas v Baijnath, AIR 1930 Cal 623 : (1930) 57 Cal 736.
1789. Mina Kumari v Bijoy Kumar, (1917) 44 IA 72, p 79.

As regards the first condition, it is obvious that it cannot be present if the judgment-debtor satisfies the claim of the decree-holder out of court, and that is what happened in the under mentioned cases.[1790] In the Privy Council case of Mina Kumari v Bijoy Singh,[1791] the first condition was satisfied or assumed to be satisfied, but the second condition was not.

The wider meaning given to the expression "claims enforceable under the attachment" by the explanation is confined to the purposes of section 64 only. There is no such provision in rule 58 or rule 60 of O XXI. Hence, an order made under O XXI, rule 58 cannot be given a wider meaning so as to cover not only the decree in execution but other decrees as well.[1792]

[s 64.10] Private Transfer under O XXI, Rule 83

The High Court of Bombay has held that a private transfer of his property by a judgment-debtor made pursuant to the provisions of O XXI, rule 83, is absolute, notwithstanding the provisions of this section, even against claims enforceable under the attachment.[1793] The contrary has been held by the Madras High Court.[1794]

[s 64.11] Mortgage Executed Before But Registered after Attachment, not Affected

An attachment will not affect a subsequent alienation. Under section 47 of the Registration Act, 1908, a registered instrument operates from the date of execution. So, if property is attached after the date of execution but before the date of registration of a mortgage, the mortgage will not be invalid as against claims enforceable under the attachment.[1795] But, the position seems to have been reversed by insertion of sub-section (2) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002, effective from 1 July 2002.

[s 64.12] Attachment Raised and Subsequently Restored

Where the property of a defendant is attached, and the attachment is subsequently raised by the executing court, but the attachment is restored by the high court on appeal, the order of the high court relates back to the date when the attachment was first made, with the result that an alienation of the property made by the judgment-debtor between the date on which the attachment was raised and that on which it was restored, is void, as against all claims enforceable under the attachment.[1796] Likewise, when an execution petition, under which the attachment is effected, is subsequently dismissed and in consequence the attachment ceases and subsequently the order dismissing the execution petition is set aside, whether it be in appeal, revision or a suit, the attachment revives as from the date when it was effected and any

---

1790. Jetha Bhima & Co. v Lady Janbai, (1912) 37 Bom 138; Annamalai v Palamalai, (1918) 41 Mad 265 (FB); Rangi Ram v Gangu, (1919) PR No 5 p 93; Bhupal v Kundan Lal, AIR 1921 All 450 : (1921) 43 All 399. Another case in which there may be no assets held by the court, is where the decree-holder is given leave to bid and to set-off the amount of the decree against the purchase-money under O XXI, rule 72, and the former exceeds the latter; Mina Kumari v Bijoy Singh, ILR 44 Cal 662 : (1917) 44 IA 72, p 78.
1791. Mina Kumari v Bijoy Singh, ILR 44 Cal 662 : (1917) 44 IA 72.
1792. Bibi Amar Kaur v Shiv Karan, AIR 1965 P&H 206 : (1965) 1 Punj 160.
1793. Shivlingappa v Chanbasappa, (1906) 30 Bom 337.
1794. Thiraviyam v Lakshmna, (1918) 41 Mad 616.
1795. Nabadwipchandra v Loke Nath, AIR 1933 Cal 212 : (1932) 59 Cal 1176.
1796. Annapurna Patrani v Lakshmana Kavi, AIR 1950 Mad 740; Jeta Bakhsh v Kunta, (1912) 34 All 490; Gopal v Kashi, (1920) 42 All 39; Dular Singh v Ram Rhander, AIR 1934 All 165.

private alienation of the property thereafter would be hit by the section.[1797] But this section contemplates only one attachment and no other. Hence, the attachment during the subsistence of which an alienation is made must be the same attachment under which all claims of the attaching creditor are enforceable. Therefore, where a attaching-creditor has got levied two attachments on the same property, one after the other, but the first attachment has come to an end and the attaching creditor enforces his claim under the second attachment, a transfer made by the debtor during the subsistence of the first attachment would not be void.[1798]

[s 64.13] Private Sale to Decree-holder

A obtains a decree against B. In execution of the decree, B's property is attached. Pending the attachment, B sells the property to C. A then buys the same property from B. Is the sale to C void under this section? No, because A brought the property not at a court-sale, but by private treaty with B. The title obtained by the purchaser on a private sale of properly in satisfaction of a decree, differs from that acquired upon a sale in execution. Under a private sale, the purchaser derives title through the vendor, and cannot acquire a title better than his. Under an execution sale, the purchaser, notwithstanding that he acquires merely the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor, acquires that title, by operation of law, adversely to the judgment-debtor, and freed from all alienations and incumbrances effected by him after the attachment of the property sold.[1799]

[s 64.14] Effect of Striking off Execution Proceedings or of Removing them from the File

An attachment is not necessarily at an end because the execution case is struck-off or removed from the file. The effect of such a proceeding depends on the circumstances of each case. Where, after an attachment has been made, the proceedings in execution are struck-off or removed from the file under circumstances which render a fresh attachment necessary to bring the judgment-debtor's property to sale, a private transfer of the property by the judgment-debtor made after the proceedings are struck-off is valid, though the same property may subsequently be re-attached in execution of the same decree on a fresh application for execution. But if the execution proceedings are struck-off or removed from the file under circumstances which render a fresh attachment necessary to bring the judgment-debtor's property to sale, a private transfer of the property by the judgment-debtor made after the proceedings are struck-off is valid, though the same property may subsequently be re-attached in execution of the same decree on a fresh application for execution. But if the execution proceedings are struck-off or removed from the file under circumstances which do not render a fresh attachment necessary, the transfer is void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment, and the mere fact that a fresh application for attachment is subsequently made in execution of the same decree will not render the transfer valid. The reason is that in the former case, the proceedings in execution are deemed to have terminated on their being struck-off or removed from the file, and the attachment is deemed to be at an end, and the transfer having been made after the termination of the attachment, it cannot be affected by the subsequent attachment. In the latter case, however, the proceedings in execution are merely suspended,

---

1797. Susila Bala v Guest Keen Williams Ltd, (1949) 1 Cal 177.
1798. Motilal Madan Chand Lodha v Ragho T Patil, AIR 1974 Bom 261 : 76 Bom LR 207 : (1974) Mah LJ 404.
1799. Dinendranath v Tarakchandra, (1881) 7 Cal 107; Budhu v Barkat Ram, (1920) 2 Lah LJ 99.

and the first attachment is, therefore, deemed to subsist, and the second application for attachment is a superfluity.[1800] Whether the execution proceedings have been struck-off or removed from the file under one or the other circumstances is a question of fact in each case.[1801] But where a fresh application for attachment is made, the presumption is that the first attachment has ceased and the burden of proof is on the party alleging that the first attachment was still subsisting when the second application was made and that the second application was superfluous.[1802] B's property is attached in execution of a decree obtained against him by A. The execution proceedings are then "struck-off". B then sells the property to C. The property is again attached on a fresh application by A. Is the sale valid? There being a fresh application for attachment, the presumption is that the first attachment ceased from the moment the proceedings were struck-off. The sale would, therefore, be valid and the second attachment inoperative unless A showed that the first attachment was still subsisting at the date of transfer and that the second application was superfluous.

The above cases would not have arisen if the court, instead of making an order for "striking off proceedings" or "removing proceedings from the file", had made an order either dismissing the application or adjourning the proceedings where the court was, by reason of default on the part of the decree-holder, unable to proceed further with the proceedings in execution. The practice of "striking off proceedings" or "removing proceedings from the file" had no justification under any of the previous Codes. To put a stop to this practice, it is now expressly provided by O XXI, rule 57, that where any property has been attached in execution of a decree, but by reason of the decree-holder's default, the court is unable to proceed further with the application for execution, it shall either dismiss the application, or for any sufficient reason adjourn the proceedings to a further date; upon the dismissal of such application the attachment shall cease. Cases like the above are not likely to arise under the CPC, if the procedure prescribed by O XXI, rule 57, is strictly followed. The High Court at Calcutta has commented on the impropriety of such orders as "struck-off" or "dismissed for the present" on an execution application.[1803]

[s 64.15] Effect of Dismissal of Execution in Default

If the execution petition was dismissed for default on the part of the decree-holder, the executing court has no other option, but to direct that the attachment shall cease.[1804]

Thereafter, fresh proceedings in execution petition had been filed. Though it is stated that all the execution proceedings are deemed to be the continuation of the earlier proceedings, it cannot be accepted in view of the provisions of section 64, CPC as interpreted by the Supreme Court.[1805]

1800. Kishen Lal v Charat Singh, (1901) 23 All 114; Puddomonee Dosee v Muthooranath, (1874) 12 Bom LR 411; Pearey Lal v Chundi Charan, (1906) 11 Cal WN 163; Shaikh-Kumar-ud-din v Jawahir Lal, 32 IA 102.
1801. Mohunt Bhagwan v Khetter Moni, (1896) 1 Cal WN 617; Rangaswami v Periasami, (1894) ILR 17 Mad 58; Mungul Pershad v Girja Kant, (1882) ILR 8 Cal 51 : 8 IA 123; Srinivasa v Sami Rau, (1894) ILR 17 Mad 180; Mahomed v Kishore-Mohun, (1895) 22 Cal 909 : 22 IA 129; Duad Ali v Ram Prasad, (1915) 37 All 542; Yakub Ali v Durga, (1915) 37 All 518.
1802. Hafiz v Abdullah, (1894) 16 All 133.
1803. Krishna Kamini v Gireeschandra, AIR 1936 Cal 293 : (1936) 63 Cal 57 : 39 Cal WN 1030.
1804. Athiappa Asari v Chinna Gounder, (1980) 93 Mad LW 542; Kaliammal v S Sambu, AIR 2003 Mad 6
1805. M Marathachalam Pillai v Padmavathi Ammal, (1970) 2 SCWR 174; see also Kaliammal v S Sambu, AIR 2003 Mad 6.

[s 64.16] Attachment Does Not Create a Charge

Attachment creates no charge or lien upon the attached property.[1806] It only confers a right on the decree-holder to have the attached property kept in custodia legis for being dealt with by the court in accordance with law.[1807] It merely prevents and avoids private alienations; it does not confer any title on the attaching creditors.[1808] There is nothing in any of the provisions of the CPC which, in terms, makes the attaching creditor a secured creditor or creates any charge or lien in his favour over the property attached.[1809] But an attaching creditor acquires, by virtue of the attachment, a right to have the attached property kept in custodia legis for the satisfaction of his debt, and an unlawful interference with that right constitutes an actionable wrong. Thus, it is an actionable wrong if A cuts and carries away crops attached by B in execution of a decree against C, and a suit will lie at B's instance against A to recover from A, damages which should not, however, exceed the value of the attached property.[1810] A person, who claims under a private transfer from the judgment-debtor after attachment is not entitled, to notice under O XXI, rule 22, as the decree-holder is entitled to ignore all alienations subsequent to the attachment.[1811]

[s 64.17] Effect of Order of Adjudication on Attachment

Where a judgment-debtor has been adjudicated an insolvent, the whole of his property vests in the official assignee. What is the effect of an order of adjudication on an attachment levied prior to the date of the adjudication order? Has the attaching creditor, by reason of his prior attachment, priority over the official assignee in respect of the property attached by him prior to the date of the adjudication order, or is the official assignee entitled to claim that the attached property by virtue of the adjudication order, as part of the property of the insolvent? The courts in India had held that whether the attachment is before judgment,[1812] or in execution of a decree,[1813] the attaching creditor had no priority over the official assignee. These decisions were based on the ground that an attachment in India does not create any charge or lien upon the attached property such as attaches in England upon seizure under a writ of fi fa;[1814] and that once the order of adjudication is made; the attaching creditor is relegated to the same position as other creditors. Again, the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, section 53, and the Provincial Insolvency Act, section 51, both enact that if execution

---

1806. Sarkies v Bundho Baeed, (1869) 1 NWPHC Rep 172; Soobul Chunder v Russick Lall, (1888) 15 Cal 202; Zemindar of Karvetnagar of Trustee of Tirumalai, (1909) 32 Mad 429; Frederick Peacock v Madan Gopal, (1902) 29 Cal 428; Narayan Ganesh v Fatma Duad, AIR 1952 Bom 70 : (1952) Bom 83 : 53 Bom LR 821; Hansraj v Dhanwant Singh, AIR 1961 P&H 510 : (1961) ILR Punj 369 : 63 Punj LR 391; Govt. of Travancore Cochin v Bank of Cochin Ltd, AIR 1954 TC 243 (FB) : (1954) TC 281.
1807. Krishan v Travancore Bank Ltd, AIR 1956 TC 34.
1808. Sheoraj Singh v Gajadhar Prasad, AIR 1942 Oudh 465 : (1942) 18 Luck 366; Motilal v Karrab-ul-din, (1898) 25 Cal 179 : 24 IA 170; Raghunath Das v Sundar Das, (1914) 42 Cal 72 : 41 IA 251; Ram Bhaj v Ram Das, AIR 1923 Lah 261 : (1922) 3 Lah 414; Subbarao v Official Receiver, AIR 1965 AP 52.
1809. Kristnaswamy v Official Assignee of Madras, (1903) 26 Mad 673; Deputy Commr of Police, Madras v S. Vedantam, AIR 1936 Mad 132 : (1936) 59 Mad 428; Manickam Chettiar v Income Tax Officer, Madras, AIR 1938 Mad 360 (FB) : (1938) ILR Mad 744; Kamala Bala Dasi v Surendra Nath Ganguly, AIR 1937 Cal 517 : (1937) 2 Cal 675.
1810. Shankaralinga v Kandasami, (1907) 30 Mad 413.
1811. Anasuryamma v Venkatagiri Rao, AIR 1957 AP 38.
1812. Kristnasawmy v Official Assignee of Madras, (1903) 26 Mad 673.
1813. Frederick Peacock v Mohan Gopal, (1902) ILR 29 Cal 428; Jitmand v Ramchand, (1905) 29 Bom 405; Sir Chand v Murli Lal, (1912) 34 All 628; Raghunath Das v Sundar Das, 41 IA 251; Muhammad Sharif v Radha Mohan, (1919) 41 All 274.
1814. Re Prem Lal Dhar, (1917) 44 Cal 1016.

of a decree has issued against the property of a debtor, no person shall be entitled to the benefit of execution against the official assignee or the official receiver except in respect of assets realised before the order of adjudication. On the other hand, certain dicta of the Privy Council in the case of Anantapadmanabhaswami v Official Receiver,[1815] raise a doubt as to the correctness of these decisions. In this case, property in Madras had been attached in execution of a decree in 1926, but the judgment-debtor was adjudged insolvent in 1928 by a foreign court—the District Judge of Secunderabad. The Official Receiver, Secunderabad, objected to the continuance of the execution proceeding on the ground that the property had vested in him. The Madras High Court upheld the objection as the official receiver had priority over the attaching creditor. The Privy Council reversed this decision for the reason that the question was one of the comity of nations and not one of the municipal bankruptcy codes of either country; and that although a foreign adjudication order will be recognised as effective, it will not be allowed to interfere with any process at the instance of a creditor already pending, even though the process be incomplete. The case was one of a foreign adjudication order and their Lordships were careful to distinguish a foreign adjudication order which operates under a rule of international law from a British adjudication order which operates by force of a statute. But, as to British Adjudication Orders, their Lordships observed that such orders would not be affected by section 64, as they were not private transfers. Their Lordships then proceeded to suggest that the test was whether the insolvent could have assigned the property to the trustee in bankruptcy. This seems to imply that if the judgment-debtor is prevented by the attachment from alienating the property, the property will not vest in the official receiver or the official assignee. With reference to the case law as to the effect of an attachment their Lordships said:

> In Krishnaswamy Mudaliar v Official Assignee of Madras,[1816] the court appears to have ignored the opinion expressed by this Board in Suraj Bunsi Koer v Sheo Proshad Singh,[1817] which was cited to them, and to have taken a dictum in the judgment of this Board in Motilal v Karrab-ul-din[1818] from its context and used it for a purpose which it did not have in view. In Frederick Peacock v Madan Gopal,[1819] the case of Suraj Bunsi Koer was not referred to and the dictum from Moti Lal's casewas similarly employed. Their Lordships desire to reserve their opinion as to the soundness of the Madras and Calcutta decisions. The decision of this Board in Raghunath Das v Sundar Das Khetri,[1820] was also referred to, but that decision proceeded on an admission by counsel, the point was not argued and the case of Suraj Bunsi was not referred to.

Where property has been sold before the order of adjudication and before the executing court had knowledge of the insolvency proceedings and there is no application to have the property delivered to the receiver, the executing court has jurisdiction to continue the execution proceeding.[1821] Where an order of adjudication is passed after attachment, but before sale, the attached property vests in the official assignee or receiver. The attaching creditor cannot obtain satisfaction of his decree by sale. The order of adjudication has the effect of divesting the right of the attaching creditor and remits him to the position

---

1815. Anantapadmanabhaswami v Official Receiver, AIR 1933 PC 134 : 60 IA 167, p 174–75 : 37 Cal WN 553.
1816. Krishnaswamy Mudaliar v Official Assignee of Madras, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 673.
1817. Suraj Bunsi Koer v Sheo Proshad Singh, (1878-79) 6 IA 88.
1818. Motilal v Karrab-ul-din, (1897) 24 IA 170.
1819. Frederick Peacock v Madan Gopal, (1902) ILR 29 Cal 428.
1820. Raghunath Das v Sundar Das Khetri, (1914) ILR 42 Cal 72 : 41 IA 251.
1821. Chandumal v Bhikamchand, AIR 1936 Ngp 117 : (1936) ILR Nag 41.

of an ordinary creditor.[1822] A transfer of property which is under attachment, is liable to be challenged only by the attaching creditor and persons whose claim arises under the attachment and not by other persons. It was, accordingly held that where the father was adjudicated insolvent and the official receiver sold the interest of his sons also, it was not open to them to question the same on the ground that their shares had been attached by the decree-holder before adjudication.[1823]

[s 64.18] Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, 1909

Under that Act, the father's power of alienating for his debts, his son's share in the joint property of a Hindu Mitakshara family vests in the official receiver but the Madras High Court has held that it is subject to the attachment made by the son's creditor which had been made before the vesting.[1824]

[s 64.19] Effect of Winding-up Order on Attachment

The position of the liquidator of a registered company differs from that of the official assignee in that the property of the company does not vest in him. An attachment, therefore, made on the property of the company at the instance of a decree-holder before the winding-up of the company cannot be released at the instance of the liquidator.[1825]

[s 64.20] Sub-section (2)—Concept of Registration

Section 64(2) of the CPC has been inserted by Amendment Act, 2002. Section 64, as it originally stood, has been renumbered as section 64(1). Section 64(1), inter alia, provides that where an attachment has been made, any private transfer or delivery of property attached or of any interest therein contrary to such attachment shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment. Sub-section (2) protects the aforesaid acts if made in pursuance of any contract for such transfer or delivery entered into and registered before the attachment. The concept of registration has been introduced to prevent false and frivolous cases of contracts being set up with a view to defeat the attachments. If the contract is registered and there is subsequent attachment, any sale deed executed after attachment will be valid, if it is unregistered, the subsequent sale after attachment would not be valid. Such sale would not be protected. There is no ambiguity in sub-section (2) of section 64.[1826]

Sale

[S 65] Purchaser's title.—Where immoveable property is sold in execution of a decree and such sale has become absolute, the property shall be deemed to have vested in the purchaser from the time when the property is sold and not from the time when the sale becomes absolute.

1822. Subbarao v Official Receiver, AIR 1965 AP 52.
1823. Ramachandran v Kanni Velan, AIR 1959 Ker 141.
1824. Swarup Chand v Jankiramayya, AIR 1942 Mad 330 : (1942) 1 Mad LJ 318.
1825. Amrita Lal v Anukul, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 586.
1826. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344 : JT 2005 (6) SC 486.

SYNOPSIS

[s 65.1]	Corresponding Section of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882	924
[s 65.2]	Changes Introduced in the Section	924
[s 65.3]	Vesting of Property in Auction—Purchaser	924
[s 65.4]	Successive Purchasers at Sales in Execution of Money Decrees	926
[s 65.5]	Successive Purchasers at Sales in Execution of Mortgage Decrees	927
[s 65.6]	Suit for Possession by Auction-purchaser	927
[s 65.7]	Mesne profits	927
[s 65.8]	Title of Auction-purchaser	928
[s 65.9]	Sale When Void and When Voidable	928
[s 65.10]	Effect of Reversal of Decree Upon Sale where Decree Reversed after Confirmation of Sale	929
[s 65.11]	Effect of Reversal of Decree upon Sale where Decree Reversed Before Confirmation of Sale	930
[s 65.12]	What Passes at a Court Sale	931
[s 65.13]	Non-application of Section	931

[s 65.1] Corresponding Section of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882

Section 316 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 ran as follows:

> When a sale of immovable property has become absolute in manner aforesaid, the court shall grant a certificate stating the property sold and the name of the person who at the time of sale is declared to be the purchaser. Such certificate shall bear the date of the confirmation of the sale; and, so far as regards the parties to the suit and persons claiming through or under them, the title to the property sold shall vest in the purchaser from the date of such certificate and not before:
>
> Provided that the decree under which the sale took place was still subsisting at that date.

The first part of section 316 now stands as O XXI, rule 94, with slight verbal alterations. The second part, with certain substantial alterations to be presently noted, stands as section 65. The proviso to section 316 was omitted altogether.

[s 65.2] Changes Introduced in the Section

Under section 316 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, the title to immovable property sold at an execution sale vested in the purchaser from the date of the certificate of sale, that is, the date on which the sale became absolute. Under the present section, the title to such property, where the sale has become absolute vests in the purchaser from the time when the property is sold, and not from the time when the sale becomes absolute. If the sale is otherwise in order, and the property is purchased by a stranger, the sale must be confirmed even though the decree in execution of which the sale was held, is reversed on appeal after the sale and before its confirmation.[1827] With the omission of proviso to section 316, it is not necessary that the decree must subsist at the date of the confirmation of the sale.

[s 65.3] Vesting of Property in Auction— Purchaser

In the case of a private sale of immovable property, the property vests in the purchaser from the time when the deed of sale is executed. The reason is that a voluntary sale becomes absolute on execution and delivery of the deed by the vendor. In the case, however, of a court sale, the property does not vest in the purchaser, immediately on the sale thereof. The reason is that a compulsory sale does not become absolute until sometime after the sale. A period of at least 30 days must expire from the date of sale before the sale can become absolute. During that period, the sale is liable to be set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor, on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, or on deposit by him in court, of the amount specified in the sale proclamation together with a percentage on the purchase money by way of compensation to the purchaser (O XXI, rules 89–90). An application by the judgment-debtor to set aside the sale in either of these two cases, must be made within 30 days from the date of sale. Where such an application is made, the sale does not become absolute merely on the passing of an order of confirmation, but on the termination of proceedings commenced with such an application to set aside the sale or the order confirming such sale.[1828]

---

1827. Sorimuthu v Muthu Krishna, AIR 1933 Mad 598 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 808.

If no such application is made, an order confirming the sale must be made and the certificate under O XXI, rule 94 issued.[1829] It is upon such confirmation that the sale becomes absolute (O XXI, rule 92). Once an order was made under O XXI, rule 92 confirming the sale, the title of the auction-purchaser related back to the date of the sale as provided under section 65 of the CPC. The title in the property, thereafter, vests in the auction-purchaser and not the judgment-debtor.[1830] After the sale has become absolute, a certificate is granted by the court to the purchaser, which is called a certificate of sale (O XXI, rule 94). Such certificate bears as date, the day on which the sale became absolute. It is only when the sale becomes absolute that the sold property vests in the purchaser.[1831] But though the property does not vest in the purchaser until the sale has become absolute, when it does vest in him it shall be deemed to have vested on the sale becoming absolute from the time when it was sold. The vesting of the property is thus made to relate back to the date of sale[1832] even when the sale is held by the collector under rules framed by the local government under section 68 of the CPC[1833] and the auction-purchaser is entitled to sue for profits from the date of the purchase.[1834] Though the sale does not become absolute till confirmation and the title till then does not vest in the purchaser, another decree-holder cannot enforce his decretal claim by attaching the same property.[1835] The High Court of Gujarat has held that since the title as well as possession as acquired by the auction-purchaser after the sale becomes absolute, the judgment-debtor, where the property is let out to the tenants, continues to be the landlord till then, and can collect the rents.[1836]

The fact that the purchaser has not taken possession of property through court or that he has taken only symbolical possession, does not affect his title as that is complete when the sale is confirmed.[1837] As the title of the purchaser vests not on the date of sale but on the date of its confirmation, it may be defeated by events subsequent to the sale which prevent its

---

1828. Narayan Pillai v Damodaran, AIR 1967 Ker 159.
1829. Bishan Paul v Mothu Ram, AIR 1965 SC 1994; Janak Raj v Gurdial Singh, AIR 1967 SC 608; Kocherlokota Venkata Jagannatha Rao Guru v Ravu Venkata Kumara Mahipati Rao, 63 IA 304 : 4 Cal WN 1130.
1830. Sagar Mahila Vidhayala, Sagar v Pandit Sadashiv Rao Harshe, (1991) 3 SCC 588.
1831. Vishnu v Yusuff, AIR 1925 Bom 483 : (1925) 27 Bom LR 963.
1832. Jamuna Devi v Mangal Das, AIR 1946 Pat 644 : (1945) ILR 25 Pat 13; Abdul Rahman v Fateh Narain, AIR 1926 Oudh 189 : (1926) 1 Luck 80; Nidphal v UOI, AIR 1966 All 360; Marimuthu v Ambujam Amfmal, AIR 1978 Mad 50.
1833. Ram Krishan v Satwa, AIR 1949 Ngp 127 : (1948) ILR Nag 610.
1834. Shyam Lal v Sunder Lal, AIR 1937 All 661; Bhagavandas Krishnadas v PS Soma Iyer, AIR 1969 Ker 263 : (1969) Ker LJ 80.
1835. VTC Chettiar v PSP Chettiar, AIR 1973 Mad 313.
1836. Chimanlal Narsibhai v Amratlal Chhotalal, AIR 1974 Guj 218.
1837. Giriyamman v Ramachandran, AIR 1954 TC 384; Velayudhan v Ouseph, AIR 1953 TC 574; Abdul Basti v Abdul Alim, AIR 1952 P&H 407.

confirmation. Thus, where the property sold was an estate which had, after the sale vested in the state, the sale could not be confirmed and the purchaser could get no title.[1838]

There is a conflict of opinion as to the right of a decree-holder auction-purchaser who is permitted to set-off the purchase to claim interest thereon after the date of sale. One view is that he is bound to set-off the purchase amount as on the date of sale and that the decree would stand eo extanti satisfied as on that date and cannot carry interest thereafter.[1839] The other view is that the vesting of title in the auction-purchaser has nothing to do with the decree-holder's right to withdraw the amount from court and that, therefore, the purchase amount to set-off should carry interest after the date of confirmation of sale.[1840] It is submitted that the latter view is doubtful. The decree-holder purchaser is entitled to profits from the date of sale as purchase by him takes effect from that date and it seems illogical that he should be entitled to both the interest on the purchase money and mesne profits from the land from the date of purchase till the date of confirmation.

[s 65.4] Successive Purchasers at Sales in Execution of Money Decrees

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, section 316, the property sold vested in the purchaser from the date of certificate of sale, and not before. This gave rise to some difficulty when the question arose as to which of two successive auction-purchasers should have priority in cases where the later purchaser had the certificate of sale issued to him first. Had the question been determined with exclusive reference to the terms of that section, the priority would have rested with the purchaser who first procured the certificate of sale. But this inequitable result was avoided, and the difficulty was got over by holding that the first purchaser has, by his prior purchase, obtained an equitable interest in the property, and that the subsequent purchaser must be deemed to have purchased the property subject to such interest.[1841] No such difficulty can arise under the CPC, for it is provided by the present section that the property is to be deemed to have vested in the purchaser from the date of sale, and not from the date of the certificate of sale.

ILLUSTRATION

In execution of a money-decree obtained by A against B, certain immovable property belonging to B is sold and purchased by P1. The same property is subsequently purchased by P2 at a sale in execution of a money-decree obtained by C against B. P2 obtains a certificate of sale first, and is placed in possession of the property. Subsequently P1 obtains a certificate of sale, and sites P2 for possession. Under the present section, P1 is entitled to possession, for the property is to be deemed to have, vested in him from the date of sale, and the sale to him was prior to the sale to P2. The same result was arrived at under the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 by holding that P2 bought subject to P1's equitable interest and he could not, therefore, retain possession against P1 after P1's title was perfected by the issue of a certificate to him. The principle is that a prior sale in pursuance of an attachment prevails over a subsequent sale even if the subsequent sale is in pursuance of an earlier attachment.[1842]

But where property is sold in execution of a decree to P1, and the sale is set aside on the ground of irregularity under O XXI, rule 90, and the sale property is subsequently sold in execution of another decree and is purchased by P2. P2 is entitled to priority as against P1, even though the sale to P1 may subsequently be confirmed. The sale to P1 not having been confirmed until after the

---

1838. Ramachandra v Eva Mitra, AIR 1960 Pat 378 : ILR 38 Pat 1.
1839. Vairavan Chettiar v Rayalu Ayyar & Co, AIR 1951 Mad 844 : (1951) 1 Mad LJ 298.
1840. Kishan Lal v Kothari Jathmal, AIR 1959 MP 115.
1841. Yeshwant v Govind, (1886) ILR 10 Bom 453; Chintamanra v Vithabai, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 88.
1842. VST Venkita Reddiar v S Noordeem, AIR 1978 Ker 11.

sale to P2, P1 is not entitled to priority over P2. Even under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, P1 would not be entitled to priority over P2, for the sale to him (P1) having been set aside, it could not be said that P2 purchased subject to P1's interest in the property. P1 had no interest in the property when it was sold to P2.[1843]

[s 65.5] Successive Purchasers at Sales in Execution of Mortgage Decrees

Priority between successive purchasers of the same mortgaged property in execution of mortgage decrees against the same mortgagor is determined by the dates of the several purchases, and not by the dates of the several mortgages.[1844]

[s 65.6] Suit for Possession by Auction-purchaser

It was held under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, that a purchaser of immovable property at a court-sale could not maintain a suit for possession thereof against a third person, unless he had a certificate of sale issued to him before suit, although the sale had become absolute. The reason given was that the transfer of property to a purchaser at a court-sale was not complete until a certificate of sale was issued to him. The decisions turned upon the language of section 259 which provided that the "certificate shall be taken and deemed to be a valid transfer of such right, title and interest" as had passed from the judgment-debtor to the purchaser. The line of reasoning adopted was that if a certificate was to be taken as a transfer, the transaction must necessarily be incomplete until the certificate was issued. The said words were construed as controlling the operation of section 256 which provided that a sale became absolute when it was confirmed by the court.[1845] But it was held that as against the judgment-debtor and his representatives, the purchaser's title became complete on the confirmation of the sale.[1846] Under the present section, it seems, that an auction-purchaser can maintain a suit for possession even against a person not a party to the suit after the sale is confirmed by the court, though no certificate has been issued to him before the institution of the suit, provided it is produced at or before the passing of the decree. The reason is that property under the present section vests in the purchaser immediately the sale is confirmed by the court and the vesting is not postponed until the grant of a certificate. In a case under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859 where the equity of redemption of the judgment-debtor was sold, it was held that the purchaser was entitled to sue the mortgagee for redemption, even before the issue of certificate, the reason given being that the suit was not one in ejectment on title, but one for redemption and, therefore, of an equitable nature, and the purchaser was equitably entitled to redeem. The certificate in that case was produced at the hearing.[1847]

[s 65.7] Mesne profits

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, the property sold vested in the purchaser from the date of the sale certificate and not before. Hence, it was held that the purchaser was entitled to mesne-profits from the date of the certificate, and not from the date of sale.[1848] Under the 1843. Banke Lal v Jagat Narain, (1900) ILR 22 All 168.

---

1844. Kutti v Subramania, (1909) 32 Mad 485; Nanakchand v Telukdye, (1880) ILR 5 Cal 265; Bogi Arijisah v Kannappa, AIR 1954 Mad 266 : (1953) 1 Mad LJ 477; Giriyamman v Ramachandram, AIR 1954 TC 384.
1845. Padu v Rakhmai, (1873) 10 Bom HC 435; Harkishandas v Bai Ichha, (1880) ILR 4 Bom 155.
1846. Raj Kishan v Radha Madub, (1874) 21 WR 349; Kushal v Bhimabai, (1888) ILR 12 Bom 589; Shivram v Ravji, (1883) ILR 7 Bom 254.
1847. Krishnaji v Ganesh, (1882) 6 Bom 139.
1848. Amir Kazim v Darbari, (1902) 24 All 475; Shiam Lal v Nathe Lal, (1911) 33 All 63.

present section, the property is to be deemed to vest in the purchaser from the date of sale. The purchaser, therefore, is entitled to mesne-profits from the date of sale.[1849]

[s 65.8] Title of Auction-purchaser

Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, property sold in execution of a decree vested in the purchaser so far as regards the parties to the suit and persons claiming through or under them. That is to say, a purchaser at a court-sale was entitled to hold the property only against the judgment-debtor and his representatives but not against third parties. The words italicised above, which occurred in section 316 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, have been omitted in the present section. The omission, however, has not the effect of enlarging the purchaser's rights, and a purchaser at a judicial sale will, now, as before, get a good title only against persons bound by the decree, but not against strangers.[1850]

[s 65.9] Sale When Void and When Voidable

A sale in execution of a decree is void, if the court has no jurisdiction to sell the property. Thus, a court has no jurisdiction to sell property in execution of a decree, if the notice required by O XXI, rule 22, is not served.[1851] Similarly, a court has no jurisdiction to sell the property of a person who was not a party to the suit in which the property was sold or property represented on the record.[1852] Again, the court of first instance has no jurisdiction to sell property after an order is made by the appellate court for stay of execution.[1853] In each of these cases, the sale is a nullity, and may be disregarded without any proceeding to set it aside.[1854]

But where a court has jurisdiction to sell the property, and there has been an irregularity in the course of execution proceedings, the sale is not void, but merely voidable. Thus, where the notice required by O XXI, rule 22, is served upon a person who was not, in fact, the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, but whom the court wrongly held to be his legal representative the sale is voidable, and not void.[1855] Similarly, a sale is voidable and not void if there has been material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale — O XXI, rule 90.

Irregularities of Procedure in Obtaining Decrees or in Execution Proceedings.—Provided that the court has jurisdiction to sell, a purchaser at a court-sale is not bound to inquire into the correctness of the decree or of the order for sale. 'To hold that a purchaser at a sale in execution is bound to inquire into such matters would throw a great impediment in the way of purchasers under executions. If the court has jurisdiction, a purchaser is no more bound to inquire into the correctness of an order for execution, than he is as to the correctness of the judgment upon which the execution issues'.[1856] "Strangers to a suit are justified in believing that the court has 1849. Ma Hawa Bi v Sein Kho, AIR 1928 Rang 67 : (1927) 5 Rang 803; Abdul Ghani v Lal Chand, AIR 1940 Lah 230.

---

1850. Umes Chunder v Zahur Fatima, (1891) 18 Cal 164, 178 : 17 IA 201.
1851. Raghunath Das v Sundar Das, 41 IA 251.
1852. Khairajmal v Diam, (1905) 32 Cal 296 : 32 IA 23; Radha Pradad v Lal Sahab, (1819) 13 All 53 : 17 IA 150; Beni Prasad v Mukhtesar, (1899) 21 All 316; Rashid-un-Nissa v Muhammad, (1909) 36 IA 168; Payidanna v Lakshminarasamma, (1915) 38 Mad 1076.
1853. Ramanathan v Arunachellam, (1915) 38 Mad 766.
1854. Khairajual v Daim, (1905) 32 Cal 296, p. 312.
1855. Malkarjun v Narhari, (1901) 25 Bom 337, 348 : 27 IA 216; Amarchand v Parmanand, AIR 1934 All 474.
1856. Rewa Mahton v Ram Kishen Singh, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 18, 24 : 13 IA 106; Mothura Mohun Ghose v Akhoy Kumar Mitter, (1888) 15 Cal 557; Narayan v Kaliana, (1896) ILR 19 Mad 219.

done that which by the direction of the Code it ought to do".[1857] Therefore, when property sold in execution of a decree under the order of a competent court is purchased by a stranger bona fide and for value, the sale cannot be set aside on the ground that the judgment-debtor has a cross-decree of a higher amount and the court, therefore, ought not to have directed the sale,[1858] or that the decree had been satisfied out of court before the sale,[1859] or that the court wrongly held that the defendant was served with the summons and on that finding passed an ex parte decree against him,[1860] or that though an attachment was subsisting at the date of the sale, the decree-holder's application for an order of sale had been dismissed for want of prosecution before sale,[1861] or that the property was not liable to attachment and sale within the meaning of section 60,[1862] or that the execution of the decree was barred by limitation,[1863] or that the decree proceeded upon an erroneous view of the law,[1864] or that the decree was one which the court ought not to have passed.[1865]

The above principles apply in favour of a third party purchasing at a court-sale; they do not apply where the decree-holder himself is the purchaser. The reason is that where the decree-holder himself is the purchaser, he "must be held to have had notice of all the facts" relating to the suit and execution proceedings.[1866] Nor do they apply in favour of a party to the suit, though he may not be a decree-holder.[1867] Auction sale was confirmed in the name of the highest bidder. Sale certificate was, however, issued in the name of a society. It was held that the sale did not become void thereby. The judgment-debtor cannot file a suit for possession on the basis of title. The society (the holder of the sale certificate), cannot be held to be a trespasser. Even if it is presumed that the sale certificate was wrongly issued in the name of the society, yet the sale in favour of the highest bidder was not void and the judgment-debtors could not take the stand that they were the true owners of the disputed house as the sale itself was void and that they were not required to file a suit for setting aside the sale. The sale of the property in question was perfectly valid and, as soon as the sale was confirmed in favour of the highest bidder under O XXI, rule 92 of the CPC, the judgment-debtor ceased to have any right or title in the property.[1868]

[s 65.10] Effect of Reversal of Decree Upon Sale where Decree Reversed after Confirmation of Sale

There is a great distinction between decree-holders who come in and purchase under their own decree, which is afterwards reversed or modified, and bona fide purchasers who come in

---

1857. Malkarjun v Narhari, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 337, 347 : 27 IA 216; Paresh Nath v Hari Charan, (1911) ILR 38 Cal 622.
1858. Rewa Mahton v Ramkishen Singh, (1887) ILR 14 Cal 18 : 13 IA 106.
1859. Mothura Mohun Ghose v Akhoy Kumar Mitter, (1888) ILR 15 Cal 557; Yellappa v Ramchandra, (1897) ILR 21 Bom 463.
1860. (1911) 38 Cal 622.
1861. Rangasami v Periasami, (1894) ILR 17 Mad 58.
1862. Dwarkanath v Tarini, (1907) ILR 34 Cal 199; Umed v Jas Ram, (1907) ILR 29 All 612; Pandurang v Krishnaji, (1904) ILR 28 Bom 125.
1863. Saroda Churn v Kahomed, (1885) ILR 11 Cal 376.
1864. Girdharee Lall v Kantoo Lall, (1875) 14 Beng LR 187 : 1 IA 321.
1865. Kaunsilla v Chandar Sen, (1901) ILR 23 All 25. See notes to section 60, "Objection that property not liable to attachment and sale when to be raised", notes to O XXI, rule 22, "Consequence of omission to give notice", and "Notice to wrong person", and notes to O XXI, rule 90, "Material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale".
1866. Khiarajmal v Daim, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 296, 315 : 32 IA 23; Mina Kumari v Jagat v Settani, (1844) 10 Cal 220; Gungapershad v Gopal Singh, (1897) ILR 11 IA 234.
1867. Official Receiver v Chettiappa, AIR 1926 Mad 78 : (1925) ILR 48 Mad 767.
1868. Sagar Mahila Vidyalaya v Pandit Sadashiv Rao Harsha, AIR 1991 SC 1825 : (1991) 3 SCC 588.

and buy at a sale in execution of the decree to which they are not parties, and at a time when that decree is a valid and subsisting decree and when the order for sale is valid order. A bona fide purchaser, who is a stranger to the decree, does not lose his title to the property by the subsequent reversal or modification of the decree. But, where the decree-holder himself is the purchaser, the sale may be set aside if the decree is subsequently reversed or modified. Where the purchaser is a stranger, the judgment-debtor whose property is sold is entitled only to the sale proceeds of the property if the decree is subsequently reversed. But where the purchaser is the decree-holder, he is bound to restore the property to the judgment-debtor.[1869]"A sale in execution of a decree at which a third party becomes the purchaser is upheld, notwithstanding the subsequent reversal of the decree, because otherwise there will be less inducement of intending purchasers to buy at an execution-sale, and consequently less chance of property fetching proper value at such sales".[1870] But where property sold in execution of a decree is bought by the decree-holder, and it is subsequently re-sold by him to a bona fide purchaser for value, such purchaser acquires a good title, though the decree may be subsequently reversed.[1871] A stranger auction-purchaser who is not a party to the decree, is protected against the vicissitudes of fortune of the litigation and remain unaffected and does not lose title to the property by subsequent reversal or modification of the decree. The property bona fide purchased ignorant of the litigation should be protected. The judicial sale in particular would not be robbed of all their sanctity. It is a sound rule based on legal and equitable and consideration but a distinction is made between such purchaser and a decree-holder who purchases the property in execution of his own decree which is afterwards modified or reversed. Where the purchaser is the decree-holder, he is bound to restore the property to the judgment-debtor by way of restitution. The true question is whether the stranger auction-purchaser had knowledge of the pending litigation about the decree under execution. If it is shown by evidence that he was aware of the pending appeal against the decree when he purchased the property, court cannot assume that he was a bona fide or innocent purchaser for giving him protection against restitution. His knowledge about the pending litigation would make all the difference in the case. He may be a stranger to the suit, but he must be held to have taken calculated risk in purchasing the property. He is evidently a speculative purchaser and in that respect, he is in no better position than the decree-holder purchaser. The need to protect him against restitution therefore, seems to be unjustified. Similarly the auction-purchaser who was a name lender to the decree-holder or who has colluded with the decree-holder to purchase the property, also could not be protected to retain the property, if the decree is subsequently reversed.[1872]

[s 65.11] Effect of Reversal of Decree upon Sale where Decree Reversed Before Confirmation of Sale

On referring to sections 316 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, it will be observed that it contained a proviso, the effect whereof was stated to be that a sale could not be confirmed if, at the time of application for confirmation, the decree under which the sale was effected

---

1869. Zain-ul-Abdin v Muhammad Asghar Ali, (1888) ILR 10 All 166 : 15 IA 12; Mukhoda v Gopal Chunder, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 734; Umedmal v Srinath, (1900) ILR 27 Cal 810; Paresh Nath v Hari Charan, (1911) II R 38 Cal 622, 627; Shirbai v Yesoo, (1919) II R 43 Bom 235, 238; Piari Lal v Hanif-un-Nisa, (1916) ILR 38 All 240 (stranger purchaser); Chintaman v Chunisahu, (1916) 1 Pat LJ 43, 46, (decree-holder purchaser); Agha Husain v Qasim Ali, AIR 1926 All 35 : (1925) ILR 23 All LJ 946.
1870. Mukhoda v Gopal Chunder, (1899) II R 26 Cal 734, 737. See notes to section 144, "Who may apply for restitution."
1871. Shick Ismal v Rajah Raushar, (1907) ILR 30 Mad 295; Marimuthu v Subbarayar, (1903) 13 Mad LJ 231.
1872. Chinnammal v P Arumugham, (1990) 1 SCC 513.

had ceased to be a subsisting decree.[1873] That proviso has not been reproduced in the present section. Under the present section, therefore, a sale held in execution of a decree may be confirmed, in any event where the purchaser is a third party, though the decree has been reversed before confirmation of the sale.[1874]

[s 65.12] What Passes at a Court Sale

See notes to O XXI, rule 94.

[s 65.13] Non-application of Section

The application of section 65 turns upon the scope of section 341 of UP Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950, which applies the provisions of the CPC to the proceedings taken under that Act. Section 341, however, applies to the court only so far as it can be applied consistently with the Act and not in derogation of it. As is clear, the procedure incorporated in UP Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act and the rules made under it specifically exclude the operation of section 65 of the CPC.[1875]

[S 66] Suit against purchaser not maintainable on ground of purchase being on behalf of plaintiff.—[1876][Rep. by Benami Transactions (Prohibition) Act, 1988 (45 of 1988), sec. 7 (w.e.f. 19-5-1988).]

The section prior to its repeal, was as follows:

> "(1) No suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certificate by the court in such manner as may be prescribed on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of someone through whom the plaintiff claims [and in any suit by a person claiming title under a purchase so certified, the defendant shall not be allowed to plead that the purchase was made on his behalf or on behalf of some-one through whom the defendant claims.]
>
> (2) Nothing in this section shall bar a suit to obtain a declaration that the name of any purchaser certified as aforesaid was inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without the consent of the real purchaser, or interfere with the right of a third person to proceed against that property though ostensibly sold to the certified purchaser, on the ground that it is liable to satisfy a claim of such third person against the real owner."

1873. Doyamoyi Dasi v Sarat Chunder, (1898) ILR 25 Cal 175; Mul Chand v Mukta, (1888) ILR 10 All 83; Ram Sukh v Ram Sahai, (1907) ILR 29 All 591; Nataraja v Ramaswamy, AIR 1922 Mad 481 : (1922) ILR 45 Mad 856.

1874. Sarimuthu v Muthu Krishna, AIR 1933 Mad 598 : (1933) ILR 56 Mad 808; Venkates Kotadia v Shanta Bai, (1960) 2 Mad LJ 346; Ambujammal v Thangavelu Chettiar, (1941) 1 Mad LJ 193. See O XXI, rule 92(1) and note the words, "court shall make an order confirming the sale."

1875. Jagdish Sugar Mills Ltd v CIT, Lucknow, (1986) 3 SCC 578.

1876. Omitted by the Benami Transactions (Prohibition) Act, 1988 (Act 45 of 1988), section 7 (w.e.f. 19-5-1988), prior to its omission section 66 stood as under :

> "S 66. Suit against purchaser not maintainable on ground of purchase being on behalf of plaintiff.—(1) No suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of someone through whom the plaintiff claims, and in any suit by a person claiming title under a purchase so certified, the defendant shall not be allowed to plead that the purchase was made on his behalf or on behalf of someone through whom the defendant claims.
>
> (2) Nothing in this section shall bar a suit to obtain a declaration that the name of any purchaser certified as aforesaid was inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without the consent of the real purchaser, or interfere with the right of a third person to proceed against that property, though ostensibly sold to the certified purchaser, on the ground that it is liable to satisfy a claim of such third person against the real owner."

The above section was repealed and replaced by the Benami Transaction (Prohibition) Act, 1988. We are providing hereinafter the commentary on the above section as it stood before its repeal for the benefit of those who would be interested in understanding the law as it stood prior to its repeal.

SYNOPSIS

[s 66.1] Section Explained 932
[s 66.2] Benami Purchases..... 932
[s 66.3] Section Must be Construed Strictly... 933
[s 66.4] Scope of the Section 934
[s 66.5] Whether Section Retrospective 934
[s 66.6] Suits outside the section..... 934
[s 66.7] Suit by a Third Person for a Declaration that the Certified Purchaser is merely a Benamidar 935
[s 66.8] Suit by Beneficial Owner in Possession for Declaration of Title 936
[s 66.9] Persons Claiming through Beneficial Owner 937
[s 66.10] Joint Purchase..... 937
[s 66.11] Where Beneficial Owner is in Possession with Permission of Certified Purchaser..... 939
[s 66.12] Suit for Specific Performance against Certified Purchaser..... 940
[s 66.13] Certified Purchaser 940
[s 66.14] Successor in Title of Certified Purchaser 941

[s 66.1] Section Explained

In a case where the real owner is in possession of the property and the benamidar, whose name is entered in the certificate of sale files against him a suit for possession, the real owner is prevented from a defence that the plaintiff is only a nominal purchaser. The bar now is against the real owner both as a plaintiff and as a defendant in a suit by or against his benamidar whose name as a purchaser is certified by the court.

[s 66.2] Benami Purchases

The object of the section is to put a stop to benami purchase at execution-sales,[1877] and to secure the best price for the properties sold in court auction.[1878] If A under a secret understanding with B purchases property with his own money but in B's name, the purchase is said to be benami. In such a case B is merely a benamidar or ostensible owner; he holds the property in trust and A may compel him to transfer the property to him (A). If, however, A's object in purchasing the property in B's name was to defraud his creditors and the object of the fraud is carried out, the court will not assist A in recovering possession of the property from B; but if the object of the fraud is not carried out, the court will assist A in recovering possession of the property from B notwithstanding A's primary intention to effect a fraud. This is the law as applicable to benami purchases at a private sale.[1879] The law, however, is different as to benami purchases at a court sale. If A purchases property in B's name at a court sale and a certificate of sale is issued to B (O XXI, rule 94), B will conclusively be deemed to be the real purchaser as against A, and no suit will lie under this section by A against B for possession of the property, unless A can prove that B's name was inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without his

---

1877. Bibi Kaniz Ayesha v Mojibul Hassun Khan, (1941) ILR 20 Pat 855 : (1942) AP 230; Prem Sukh Gulgulia v Habib Ullah, (1945) AC 355 : (1945) 49 Cal WN 371; Bodh Singh v Ganesh Chunder, (1874) 12 Beng LR 317; Ganga Sahai v Kesri, 37 All 544 : (1942) IA 177 : 19 Cal WN 1175.
1878. Latchumanan v Veerappa, AIR 1956 Mad 10.
1879. Govinda v Lala Kishun, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 370; Jadunath v Ruplal, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 967; Chenviappa v Puttappa, (1887) ILR 11 Bom 708; Sidlingappa v Hirasa, (1907) ILR 31 Bom 405; Yaramati v Chundru, (1897) ILR 20 Mad 326; Muthuraman v Krishna, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 72; Munisami v Subaryar, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 97; Kondeti v Nukamma, (1908) ILR 31 Mad 485. See Indian Trusts Act, 1882 section 84.

consent [see sub-section (2)]. The plaintiff filed a suit against a third party in the name of A and also obtained a decree in favour and in the name of A. The plaintiffs also executed the decree in the name of A and purchased in execution of that decree the property in question in the name of A at a court auction. The plaintiff thereafter took possession of the property and remained in possession without any difficulty from A. But after A's death, his sons got their names mutated and dispossessed the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs thereupon filed a suit against A's sons for possession which suit was held barred under sub-section (1).[1880] The same rule applies even if the claim made by the beneficial owner is not for the whole of the property of which of the property the defendant is certified purchaser. Thus, if B is the certified purchaser of certain property, part of which was purchased by him on his own account, and part benami of A, A is not entitled to maintain a suit under this section for recovery of the part purchased by B benami for him.[1881] This is so because the beneficial owner has necessarily to rely on the sale certificate issued in favour of the person in whose name the auction purchase has been made.[1882] The mere fact, however, that the plaintiff has described the defendant as a benamidar does not make the transaction benami if it was not benami in fact; it is a mere misdescription, and it is no ground for refusing the plaintiff relief to which he is otherwise entitled.[1883]

Sub-section (1) as it stood before its recent amendment laid down a bar against a suit by the real owner against the certified purchaser or person claiming title under him. The recent amendment provides an additional bar and that is that where the real owner is in possession of the property and the person, in whose favour the sale certified as certified by the court stands, files a suit against him for possession, the real owner as the defendant is barred from pleading that the purchase was made on his behalf or on behalf of someone through whom he claims. The bar under sub-section (1) is against the real owner both as a plaintiff in a suit filed by him against the certified purchaser and against him as a defendant in a suit filed by such purchaser.

[s 66.3] Section Must be Construed Strictly

Where a transaction is once made out to be benami, the courts of India, which are bound to decide according to equity and good conscience, will deal with it in the same manner as it would be treated by an English Court of equity.[1884] That is to say, effect will be given to the real and not to the nominal title, unless the result of doing so would be to work a fraud upon innocent persons.[1885] The present section provides that when property is sold at a court sale, no suit shall be maintained against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made benami. It provides in effect that the certified purchaser shall be conclusively deemed to be the real purchaser, and shall not be liable to be ousted on the ground that his purchase was really made on behalf of another. In other words, the provisions of the present section bar the equitable jurisdiction of the courts. The section, therefore, must be construed strictly and not extended beyond its express terms. But though the section prohibits suits against the certified purchaser to assert a benami title against him, it does not make benami purchases illegal.

1880. Jadunandan Singh v Baldeo Singh, 1965 AP 384.
1881. Durga v Bhagwandas, (1901) 23 All 34; see Bishan Dayal v Kesho Prasad, (1937) All 113 : (1937) AA 176. On appeal to Privy Council (1940) 42 Bom LR 138 : (1940) A PC 202. But see Hari v Ramchandra, (1907) 31 Bom 61.
1882. Rangasami Gounder v Easwarmurthi, (1967) ILR 2 Mad 112 : (1967) 2 Mad LJ 162 : 1967 AM 437.
1883. Venkatappa v Jaldyya, (1919) ILR 42 Mad 615 (FB).
1884. Re Kahandas, (1881) ILR 5 Bom 154.
1885. Mayne's, Treatise on Hindu Law and Usage, section 442.

The object of the stringent provisions of this section is to discourage benami purchases at court sales, but not to render such purchases illegal.[1886]

[s 66.4] Scope of the Section

The section refers to execution sales only and has no application to a sale held by receiver,[1887] not to sales held under the rules of the Co-operative Societies Act and sale certificates issued thereunder,[1888] not to revenue sales.[1889] But the section applies to sales held by a Collector in execution of decrees of civil courts transferred to him under section 67.[1890] Benamidar possesses ostensible title. He holds and represents the property for all practical purposes to the entire world, "except the real owner." Section 66 of CPC does not create any legal bar for a benamidar to recognise the title of a legal owner. He can do so, by an instrument which constitutes a deed of release. It is well settled that the purchaser of a property from an ostensible owner is protected from the real owner, save for the want of knowledge of a real owner. Hence a benamidar can transfer a valid title to the purchaser.[1891]

[s 66.5] Whether Section Retrospective

The High Court of Calcutta has held that this section does not apply if the sale was held and confirmed before 1 January 1909, when the present Code came into force, and that the section applicable is section 317 of the Code of 1882.[1892] That is also the view of the Lahore High Court.[1893] But if the sale was held before, but confirmed after that date, the present section applies for the title of the execution purchaser cannot be said to have been perfect until the confirmation of the sale.[1894] It is submitted that even if the sale was confirmed before 1 January 1909, this section would apply to the case and not section 317.[1895]

[s 66.6] Suits outside the section

Sub-section (1) as it stood before its recent amendment provided a bar only against a suit by the real owner against his benamidar on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of him—the plaintiff. In other words, it was only in suits against the certified purchaser as the defendant that such purchaser was to be conclusively deemed to be the real purchaser. That being so, it was held that if the real owner was in actual possession, he could resist a suit filed against him by the certified purchaser for possession or for rents or profits and plead that such

---

1886. Girija Nandini Devi v Bijendra Narain, AIR 1967 SC 1124 : (1967) 1 SCR 23; Ranchhoddas v Manga Bhika Bhole, (1950) AB 277; Shrideo Ram Mandir v Nathu Ram, (1941) Nag 90 : (1941) AN 84; Ganga Sahai v Kesri, 42 IA 177 : (1915) 37 All 545; Buhuns v Lalla Buhoree, (1872) 14 Moo Ind App 496; Lokhee v Kallypuddo, (1875) 23 WR 358 : 2 IA 154; Muhammad Abdul Jalil v Muhammad Obaid Ullah, (1929) 56 IA 330 : 51 All 675 : (1929) APC 228; Qandhara v Gokal Chand, (1933) 14 Lah 712 : (1933) AL 636; Abdul Hamid Muhammed, (1920) 2 Lah LJ 353, p 359.

1887. Narain Das v Ramchandra, (1926) 48 All 209 : ('26) AA 124.

1888. Srinivasacharyulu v Hanumantha Rao, (1955) AAP 10 : 1954 Mad WN 915.

1889. Munnabi v Mohanlal, 1952 Nag 366 : (1953) AN 259.

1890. Gangaram v Thulsiram, 1954 Nag 166 : (1954) AN 77.

1891. Satyabhamabai v Pandurang Marotrao Pawar, AIR 1990 Bom 134 (AA Desai, J).

1892. Promotha Nath v Mohini, (1920) ILR 47 Cal 1108.

1893. Jai Kishan v Parmeshri, (1937) AL 471.

1894. Fazlul v Sardar, (1928) 32 Cal WN 112 : ('28) AC 338.

1895. Muhammad Abdul Jalil v Muhammad Obaid Ullah, (1929) 56 IA 330, pp 331, 332 : 51 All 675 : (1929) APC 228 : 31 Bom LR 1393, pp 1395–1396.

certified purchaser was only his benamidar.[1896] This is no longer correct since the Amendment Act, 1976, has added that such a defence by the real owner is no longer available to him. But a suit by a certified purchaser as plaintiff for a declaration that he had purchased the property at the auction sale in his own right and not in benami is not barred.[1897] The section is also no bar to a suit by the beneficial owner for possession against the judgment-debtor pursuant to an agreement made between them after the sale of the property, provided the certified purchaser is joined as a party to the suit, and he does not claim the property.[1898] Section 66 does not bar the benamidar from recognising the title of the real owner by executing an instrument of release.[1899] In a Patna decision where all important cases were noticed and summarised X purchased the property at a court sale in the benami of Y. He then agreed to sell it to Z. Y proceeded on this agreement and executed the conveyance in favour of Z who paid the price not to X but to Y. A suit by X against Y to recover the money was held not to be barred.[1900] Again, if C, the certified purchaser sells the property purchased to D, and then D agrees to sell it to P, who is the beneficial owner, a suit by P against D to enforce the agreement of sale is based on a contract which is a separate transaction and outside the section.[1901]

The section applies, as is clear from its words either when a suit is filed by a person claiming to be the real purchaser as plaintiff against the certified purchaser as the defendant on the allegation that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of someone through whom the plaintiff claims. This is clear from the word "plaintiff" in sub-section (1). The section now provides a further bar against the beneficial owner claiming to be so in a suit against him by the certified purchaser for possession where the former is in possession. The question as to whether the bar applies to suits for partition was left open in Jitendra Nath Sur v Amarendra Nath Sur.[1902] In that case A was alleged to have purchased a property at a court sale in the benami of one of his sons, B. After A's death, his other son C filed a suit for partition against B claiming a share in that property. It was contended that this section was not a bar as in a partition suit every defendant was in the position of a plaintiff and the defence of B that it was his own acquisition was to be regarded as a claim made by him as if he was the plaintiff. The point was left open as the court found that the property was purchased by B with his own money.

[s 66.7] Suit by a Third Person for a Declaration that the Certified Purchaser is merely a Benamidar

Under the corresponding section 317 of the Code of 1882, the high court of Calcutta held that the only suits barred under that section were suits brought by the beneficial owner as plaintiff against the certified purchaser as defendant, and that suits brought by a third party as plaintiff against the certified purchaser as defendant for a declaration that the property, though

---

1896. Lokhee v Kallypuddo, 1875 23 WR 358 : 2 IA 154; Jan Muhammad v Ilahi Baksh, (1876) 1 All 290; Govinda v Lala Kishun, (1901) ILR 28 Cal 370; Vishnu v Ragho, (1903) 5 Bom LR 329; Ghazi-ud-din v Bishan Dial, (1905) 27 All 443; Haji Mohammad v Nur Fatma Begum, (1938) All 556 : ('38) AA 391; Kesavan Padmanabhan v Sanku Narayanan, AIR 1958 Ker 368 : 1958 Ker LJ 99 : 1958 Ker LT 524.
1897. Abdul Bari v The Uncovenanted Service Bank, (1896) ILR 18 All 461.
1898. Prem Sukh Gulgulia v Habib Ullah, (1945) AC 355 : (1945) 49 Cal WN 371; Sheo Shankar v Mahabir Prasad, (1947) 26 Pat 505 : ('48) AP 350; Saradindu v Gosta, (1922) 27 Cal WN 208 : (1923) AC 302; see Asghari Begam v Kanhaiya Lal, (1936) All LJ 1169 : (1936) AA 750.
1899. Satyabhamabai v Pandurang Pawar, AIR 1990 Bom 134 (DB).
1900. Sheo Shanker v Mahabir Prasad, (1947) ILR 26 Pat 505 : ('48) AP 350.
1901. Allibhai v Dadu, (1931) 33 Bom LR 1296 : (1931) AB 578; Muniappa v Thangavelu, (1937) AM 362.
1902. Jitendra Nath Sur v Amarendra Nath Sur, (1945) AC 458 : (1945) 79 Cal LJ 248.

ostensibly sold to the certified purchaser, is liable to satisfy a claim of such third party against the beneficial owner, were not barred under that section.[1903] On the other hand, the High Courts of Madras[1904] and Allahabad[1905] held that even suits brought by third person as plaintiff were barred under that section. The present section gives effect to the Calcutta decisions by providing in the sub-section (2) that:

> Nothing in this section shall bar a suit to obtain a declaration that the name of any purchaser certified as aforesaid was inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without the consent of the real purchaser, or interfere with the right of a third person to proceed against that property, though ostensibly sold to the certified purchaser, on the ground that it is liable to satisfy a claim of such third person against the real owner.

ILLUSTRATION

> A obtains a decree against B, and attaches certain property alleged to belong to B. C objects to the attachment, alleging that he is the certified purchaser of the property, having purchased the same at a court-sale held in execution of a decree obtained against B by D. A alleges that the property was purchased by C benami for B, and sues C for a declaration that C was merely the benamidar for B. The suit is not barred under this section, for it is a suit not by the beneficial owner, but by a third person.

[s 66.8] Suit by Beneficial Owner in Possession for Declaration of Title

There is a conflict of opinion whether a suit by a beneficial owner in possession for a declaration of his right to the property against the certified purchaser is barred under this section. The High Court of Calcutta in a case under section 317 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, held that such a suit was not barred under that section.[1906] On the other hand, the High Court of Allahabad held that such suit was barred under this section.[1907] A obtains a decree against B. In execution of the decree, certain property belonging to B is sold. B purchases the property in C's name. The certificate of sale is granted to C, but B continues in possession of the property. After a few years C gives notice to the tenants not to pay rent to B. B thereupon sues C for a declaration that he is the real purchaser and for an injunction restraining C from interfering with his tenants. The suit is not barred according to the Calcutta decision. It is barred according to the Allahabad decision. In the Calcutta case, the court said: "It is not a case in which the plaintiff seeks to obtain a decree for possession against the ostensible purchaser. Resting, as it does, on an existing possession, we do not think that it is a suit of the nature prohibited by section 317." As to this it was observed by Strachey CJ in the Allahabad case cited above:

> If the learned Judges in that case meant to lay down that section 317 applies only where the plaintiff, being out of possession, seeks to recover possession from a certified purchaser, and can never apply to a suit by a plaintiff in possession for a declaration that the certified purchaser out of possession was not the real purchaser, I cannot agree with them.

Bannerji J said: "The first paragraph [of the section] is not confined to a suit for recovery of possession only." The correctness of the Calcutta decision was doubted by the same court in

---

1903. Kanizak v Monohur, (1886) ILR 12 Cal 204; Subha Bibi v Hara Lal, (1894) 21 Cal 519.
1904. Rama Kurup v Sridevi, (1893) ILR 16 Mad 290. But see Kollantavida v Tiruvalli, (1897) ILR 20 Mad 362.
1905. Delhi and London Bank v Partab Bhaskar, (1899) ILR 21 All 29; Kishan Lal v Garuddhwaja Prasad, (1899) 21 All 238; Ram Narain v Mohanian, (1904) ILR 26 All 82; Khuda Baksh v Aziz Alam, (1905) ILR 27 All 194; Sarju Prasad v Bindeshri, (1911) ILR 33 All 382.
1906. Sasti Churn v Aunopurna, (1896) ILR 23 Cal 699.
1907. Bishan Dial v Ghazi-ud-din, (1901) ILR 23 All 175.

the under mentioned cases,[1908] but the principal of that decision was followed by the same high court in another case.[1909] It was held in the last-mentioned case that where a Mahomedan father purchases property at a court-sale with his own money in the name of one of his sons, and then lets the property to a tenant and the tenant pays rent to him, this section is no bar to a suit by the other sons against the tenant and the son in whose name the property was brought for recovery of rent after their father's death. The Patna High Court holds that a suit for a declaration of a title by the beneficial owner is barred, and that it is immaterial whether the plaintiff is in possession and seeks confirmation of possession, or whether he is out of possession and seeks to recover possession.[1910] It is submitted that the Patna view is correct. The words "no suit" with which sub-section (1) commences takes in all suits against the certified purchaser by the beneficial owner and it is immaterial whether such beneficial owner is in possession and seeks a declaration that it is rightful or whether he is not in possession and wants to recover it.

Where the beneficial owner has been in possession for twelve years or upwards, a suit will lie at his instance against the benamidar for a declaration of his title to the property. The basis of such is the plaintiff's title by possession. The suit is based, not on the ground that the defendant is a benamidar, but on the title by possession. Such a suit does not come within the purview of this section.[1911]

[s 66.9] Persons Claiming through Beneficial Owner

This section precludes a suit by the beneficial owner or one claiming through him.[1912] The amendment in sub-section (1) similarly precludes a plea by the defendant that the purchase by the plaintiff was made on his behalf or on behalf of someone through whom the defendant claims. It does not preclude a suit by a person who does not claim through the beneficial owner, but claims through another person.[1913] An attaching decree-holder does not claim under his judgment-debtor and is not debarred from claiming that property standing in the name of a third person really belongs to the judgment-debtor and that is expressly saved by sub-section (2).[1914]

[s 66.10] Joint Purchase

The provisions of this section are designed "to create some check on the practice of making what are called benami purchases at execution sales for the benefit of judgment-debtors, and in no way affects the title of persons otherwise beneficially interested in the purchase".[1915] It has accordingly been held that where one of several holders of a joint mortgage decree applies for execution of the decree under O XXI, rule 15, on behalf of all, and the purchase money is set off against the entire amount of the debts, the other decree-holders are entitled to a

---

1908. Hanuman Pershad v Jadu, (1916) ILR 43 Cal 20, 26; Umasasi v Akrur, (1926) ILR 53 Cal 297 : (1926) AC 542.
1909. Mahamad v Mahammad, (1919) 24 Cal WN 51.
1910. Keshri Mull v Sukan Ram, (1933) 12 Pat 616 : (1933) AP 264.
1911. Karim v Bibi Sakina, 1964 SC 1254; Muhammad Abdul Jalil v Muhammad Obaid Ullah, (1929) 56 IA 330 : 51 All 675 : (1929) APC 228; Karamuddin v Naimut, (1892) 19 Cal 199. See also Bishan Dial v Ghazi-ud-din, (1901) 23 All 175, pp 178—179; Ram Chardra v Jaith Mal, ('34) AA 990; Dolgovind v Anathbandhu, AIR 1954 Ori 244.
1912. Karim v Bibi Sakina, supra.
1913. Narain v Durga, (1913) 35 All 138.
1914. Shaligram v Narainsa, 1954 Nag 457 : (1954) AN 223.
1915. Ganga Sahai v Keshri, (1915) 37 All 545, pp 554—555 : 42 IA 177, 182.

declaration that the purchase was made on behalf of all the decree-holders,[1916] and so when one of three legal representatives of the deceased decree-holder applied to execute the decree under O XXI, rule 15(l) the purchase by him was held to ensure for the benefit of the other legal representatives as well and a suit by them for partition of their shares was held to be not hit by the section.[1917] Where the defendant is the holder of the certificate of sale, another person cannot claim that he was the owner of half of the property.[1918]

Where property is purchased at a court-sale by a member of a joint Hindu family in his name, but with family funds, the other members are entitled to sue him for a declaration that the purchase was made on behalf of the family, though the certificate of sale is in his name. The section does not apply to such a case. This was decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Bodh Singh v Gunesh Chunder,[1919] a case under the Code of 1859. Their Lordships said:

> [The provisions of the section] cannot be taken to affect the right of members of a joint Hindu family, who by the operation of law, and not by virtue of any private agreement or undertaking [such as exists between a benamidar and the beneficial owner], are entitled to treat as part of their common property an acquisition, howsoever made, by members of the family in his sole name, if made by the use of the family funds.

The same principle applies where the parties stand in the relation of partners, and the purchase is made by one of the partners in his name with partnership funds;[1920] or by the agent of one of the parties on behalf of all but the sale-certificate is not taken in the name of all.[1921] It cannot however be assumed that merely because two persons jointly provide funds for purchasing the property at an auction sale that constituted a partnership for a single venture.[1922] It has been generally held that when the plaintiff claims property not on the ground that the purchase was benami for him but on the ground that he is entitled to it under some general principles of law such as trust or on the basis of an agreement between the parties, this section has no application.[1923] It has been held by a Full Bench of the Andhra High Court that a suit based on allegations of benami is within the prohibition of the section and must fail, unless it falls within sub-section (2) and that it makes no difference that the parties stand in fiduciary relationship to each other and that section 82 of the Trusts Act is subject to this section.[1924] But persons who are not partners cannot contract themselves out of the section; and if several persons purchase property at a Court-sale in the name of one of them, the others cannot maintain a suit for their share against the certified purchaser.[1925]

When property is purchased at a court-sale by two or more persons jointly, the executing court has no power to grant the certificate of sale to one of them only without the consent of

---

1916. Ganga Sahai v Keshri, (1915) 37 All 545 : 42 IA 177, supra; Achhaibar v Tapasi, (1907) 29 All 557; Bibi Kaniz Ayestha v Mojibul Hassan Khan, (1941) 20 Pat 855 : (1942) AP 230.
1917. Thimmappa v Subba Rao, AIR 1960 Mys 249.
1918. Shivnarayan v Baulal, AIR 1988 MP 123.
1919. Bodh Singh v Gunesh Chunder, (1874) 12 Beng LR 317; Durgadas v Bagalananda, (1934) 61 Cal. 440 : (1934) AC 567 : 38 Cal WN 494; Girija Nandini Devi v Bijendra Narain, AIR 1967 SC 1124 : (1967) 1 SCR 93 : 46 Pat 193.
1920. Achhaibar v Tapasi, (1907) 29 All 557, 561; Vishvanath v Pandharinath, (1926) 50 Bom 600 : ('26) AB 525; Ratanlal Haiarilal v Seth Lakshmi Narain, (1962) A MP 28 : (1962) Jub LJ 75.
1921. Bhudarsao v Samarathmal, (1940) AN 1.
1922. Rangaswami Goundar v Easwarmurthi, (1967) 2 Mad 112 : 1967 AM 437 : (1967) 2 Mad LJ 162.
1923. Suryanarayana v Venkatasubbiah, 1951 (2) Mad LJ 76 : (1951) AM 943 : 64 LW 608; Lakshmanan Chettiar v Veerappa Chettiar, 1955 (2) Mad LJ 460; G Raman v G Keshavan, AIR 1959 Ker 249 : 1959 Ker LT 304.
1924. Kotaiah v Venkatasubbaiah, 1961 (2) And WR 196 : (1962) AAP 49; Jaduvandan Singh v Baldeo Singh, AIR 1965 AP 384.
1925. Iswar Chandra v Kabiruddin, (1934) 61 Cal 371 : ('19) AC 322.

the others. If it does so, the case is one within sub-section (2), and the other purchasers are entitled to maintain a suit against the certified purchaser for their share of the property.[1926]

If a joint Hindu family consists of A and his sons, and A purchases property at a court-sale with the family funds without the concurrence of his sons in the name of a third person, are the sons entitled to recover their share of the property from the third person [certified purchaser]? The High Court of Madras[1927] has held that they are, the reason given being that the purchase cannot in such a case be said to have been made by the father on behalf of the sons, and the sons are not, therefore, beneficial owners, and the section does not apply. On the other hand, the Allahabad High Court has held that if a managing member makes a purchase in the name of a third person, the purchase though made without the consent of his sons, must be deemed to have been made "on behalf of the sons," and the sons are precluded by this section from maintaining the suit.[1928] The Allahabad High Court purports to follow the Privy Council ruling in Suraj Narain v Ratan Lai,[1929] but that case, as pointed out by the Madras High Court, was a case under section 317 of the Code of 1882, which contained the words "on behalf of any other person," now altered into "on behalf of the plaintiff". The view expressed by the Allahabad High Court has been dissented from by the Calcutta High Court in Durgadas v Bagalananda.[1930] The Madras High Court has again considered the question in the light of the authorities referred to above and has held affirming its previous decision in Nataraja v Ramaswami supra that the sons are not precluded from recovering their share on the ground that the purchase was benami.[1931]

[s 66.11] Where Beneficial Owner is in Possession with Permission of Certified Purchaser

The High Court of Madras has held that if after obtaining a certificate of sale, the purchaser acknowledges that his purchase is benami and gives up possession, or does some act which clearly indicates an intention to waive his right, or restore the property to the beneficial owner, such act may, by reason of the antecedent relation between the parties, operate as a valid transfer of the property from the purchaser to the beneficial owner. Thus, if A is the manager of B's estate [and this is the antecedent relation between the parties], and the estate is sold in execution of a decree against B, and is purchased by B in A's name, a suit will lie at the instance of B against A for possession, if, after obtaining the certificate of sale, A delivers possession of the property to B, and then disturbs B in his possession. The reason given is that the permission to hold possession amounts to a transfer of title from the benamidar to the beneficial owner and the suit is thus based not on the ground that the purchase was benami but on a fresh title created by the transfer.[1932] The High Court of Allahabad has dissented from this view, and held, relying on the Privy Council case of Lokee v Kallypuddo,[1933] that the mere permission to hold possession cannot give or transfer a title from the benamidar to the 1926. Bhabatram v Durgesh, (1926) 51 Cal 992 : (1926) AC 719.

---

1927. Nataraja v Ramaswamy, (1922) 45 Mad 856 : (1922) AM 481; Natesa v Venkatramayan, (1883) 6 Mad 135; Minakshi v Kalianarama, (1897) 20 Mad 349.
1928. Baijnath Das v Bishen, (1921) 43 All 711 : (1921) AA 185 (purchased by manager, in his wife's name); Ram Rup v Khadiru, (1928) 50 All 52 : (1928) AA 619.
1929. Suraj Narain v Ratan Lai, (1917) 44 IA 201, p 211 : 40 All 159, 170.
1930. Durgadas v Bagalananda, 61 Cal 440 : 38 Cal WN 494 : (1934) AC 567 : 150 IC 1051.
1931. Krishna Bhatta v Ganapathi, AIR 1955 Mad 648.
1932. Monappa v Surappa, (1888) 11 Mad 234; Sankunni v Narayanan, (1894) 17 Mad 282; Kumbalinga v Ariaputra, (1895) 18 Mad 436; Venkatappa v Jalayya, (1912) 43 Mad 615, 616.
1933. Lokee v Kallypuddo, (1875) 23 WR 358 : 2 IA 154.

real owner, and that a suit like the above would be barred under this section.[1934] The Calcutta High Court has followed the Allahabad decision.[1935] However that may be, if the certified purchaser allows the beneficial owner to take possession, the section does not enable him to sue the beneficial owner for possession, because possession has come into the hands of the person entitled to it.[1936] This is so because as the section then stood the only bar was as against a suit by a beneficial owner against his benamidar. The section as now amended contemplates a suit by a benamidar against a beneficial owner or someone who claims through him. In such a- suit the defendant-beneficial owner is barred from taking the plea that the purchase by the plaintiff was on his behalf or on behalf of someone through whom he claims and therefore cannot recover possession from him. But where A purchased property in execution benami in the name of B and got into possession of the properties and thereafter B dies and his son C had his name entered in mutation proceedings and then A was dispossessed, a suit by him for declaration of title and possession was held barred by this section.[1937]

[s 66.12] Suit for Specific Performance against Certified Purchaser

In Venkatappa v Jalayya,[1938] a full bench of the Madras High Court held that this section does debar a plaintiff from maintaining a suit for specific performance against the certified purchaser, if the plaintiff's claim is based upon an agreement to convey the property entered into after the purchase. The decision in Venkatappa's case was approved by the Judicial Committee in Ramatbai v Peria.[1939] In Ramatbai's case it was held that the present section does not debar a plaintiff from maintaining a suit for specific performance against the certified purchaser if the plaintiff's claim is based upon an agreement made after the purchase to transfer the property to the plaintiff in pursuance of an agreement made before it. If the contract is subsequent to the purchase, such a purchase is not affected by the section.[1940] It has been held by the Bombay High Court that even a contract entered into prior to the sale is not hit by the section and a suit to enforce it again st the auction purchaser is maintainable[1941] but there are observations in the decisions of the Calcutta High Court which take a different view.[1942]

[s 66.13] Certified Purchaser

Where a purchaser, who had not obtained a certificate was sued, and afterwards applied for and obtained a certificate, it was held that he was a certified purchaser within the meaning of this section.[1943]

1934. Bishan Dial v Ghazi-ud-din, (1901) 23 All 175, 179-180.
1935. Harish v Nripandra, (1920) 24 Cal WN 1024; Ali Ahmad v Shamsunnessa, (1938) 42 Cal WN 1059 : (1938) AC 602.
1936. Muhammad Abdul Jalil v Muhammad Obaid Ullah, (1929) 56 IA 330 : 51 All 675 : (1929) APC 228.
1937. Saligram v Baldeo, AIR 1960 Pat 56.
1938. Venkatappa v Jalayya, (1919) 42 Mad 615; Baburam v Dokhina, (1919) 24 Cal WN 27.
1939. Ramatbai v Peria, (1920) 47 IA 108 : 43 Mad 643. See also Balaram v Nakru, (1928) 30 Bom LR 821 : (1928) APC 75.
1940. Prem Sukh Gulgulia v Habab Ulla, (1945) AC 355 : (1945) 49 Cal WN 371; Haran Chandra v Ram Kumar, (1932) 35 Cal WN 940 : (32) AC 170.
1941. Nimalchand v Madanlal, 1952 Bom 40 : (1952) AB 30.
1942. Haran Chandra v Ram Kumar, supra; Upendra v A. Ahmed, 61 Cal 371 : (1934) AC 322.
1943. Aldwell v Ilahl Baksh, (1883) 5 All 478.

[s 66.14] Successor in Title of Certified Purchaser

This section bars a suit not only against a certified purchaser, but also against persons claiming title from him.[1944] Under the Code of 1882 there was a conflict of decisions as to whether section 317 of that Code was a bar to suits against persons claiming title from the certified purchaser. On the one hand the High Courts of Madras, Allahabad and Calcutta held that the expression "certified purchaser" in section 317 of that Code did not include a person claiming through or under the certified purchaser, such as an heir or an assignee,[1945] and that that section, therefore, was no bar to a suit against such person. On the other hand, the Bombay High Court held that the expression "certified purchaser" included his successor in title.[1946] The present section contains a legislative recognition of the view taken by the High Court of Bombay.[1947] It is obvious that the section does not apply where the real owner seeks a declaration of his title against a person who does not claim under a certified purchaser.[1948]

[S 67] Power for [1949][State Government] to make rules as to sales of land in execution of decrees for payment of money.—[1950][(1)] The [State Government] [1951][* * *] may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make rules for any local area imposing conditions in respect of the sale of any class of interests in land in execution of decrees for the payment of money, where such interests are so uncertain or undetermined as, in the opinion of the State Government, to make it impossible to fix their value.

[1952][(2) When on the date on which this Code came into operation in any local area, any special rules as to sale of land in execution of decrees were in force therein, the [1953][State Government] may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare such rules to be in force, or may, [1954][* * *] by a like notification, modify the same.

Every notification issued in the exercise of the powers conferred by this sub-section shall set out the rules so continued or modified.]

[1955][(3) Every rule made under this section shall be laid, as soon as may be after it is made, before the State Legislature.]

Sub-section (2) was inserted in the section by the Code of Civil Procedure Amendment Act I of 1914. As to the result where no notification is issued as provided by sub-section (2), see the under mentioned cases.[1956]

1944. Sowkar Kamurudeen v Noor Mahomed, (1915) 28 Mad LJ 251.
1945. Theyyavelan v Kochan, (1898) 21 Mad 7; Sibta v Bhagoli, (1899) 21 All 196; Dukhada v Srimonto, (1899) 26 Cal 950.
1946. Hari v Ramchandra, (1907) 31 Bom 61.
1947. Manji v Hoorbai, (1911) 35 Bom 342, 347.
1948. Abinas Chandra v Pratul Chandra, (1928) 55 Cal 1070 : ('28) AC 448.
1949. Subs. for "Provisional Government" by A.O. 1950.
1950. Section 67 renumbered as sub-section (1) of that section by Act 1 of 1914, section 3.
1951. The words "with the previous sanction of the GG in C." omitted by Act 38 of 1920, section 2 and Sch I.
1952. Added by Act I of 1914, section 3.
1953. Substituted for "Provisional Government" by AO 1950.
1954. The words "with the previous sanction of the G.G. in C., " omitted by Act 38 of 1920, section 2 and Sch I.
1955. Inserted by the Delegated Legislation Provisions (Amendment) Act, 1983 (20 of 1983), section 2 & Schedule (w.e.f. 15-3-1984).
1956. Kishore Chand v Ishar Singh, (1913) PR No 89, p 318; Fakir v Amin Chand, AIR 1921 Lah 223 : (1921) 3 Lah LJ 5.

Delegation to Collector of Power to Execute Decrees against Immovable Property

[S 68—72].—[Rep. by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1956 (66 of 1956), sec.7 (w.e.f. 1-1-1957).]However, section 16 of the Amendment Act, 1956 provides:

> Where before the commencement of this Act, the execution of a decree has been transferred to the Collector under section 68 of the Principal Act and is pending before the Collector on such commencement, then notwithstanding the omission of sections 68 to 72 inclusive and the third schedule to the principal Act, the decree shall be executed by the Collector in accordance with the provisions of the said sections and the said schedule, as if this Act had not been passed.

In view of the above saving provision, those interested in pending cases are requested to refer to the previous edition for the commentary therein and also to MN Gujjar v GS Belekar.[1957]

Distribution of Assets

[S 73] Proceeds of execution sale to be rateably distributed among decree-holders.—(1) Where assets are held by a Court and more persons than one have, before the receipt of such assets, made application to the Court for the execution of decrees for the payment of money passed against the same judgment-debtor and have not obtained satisfaction thereof, the assets, after deducting the costs of realization, shall be rateably distributed among all such persons:

Provided as follows:—

(a) where any property is sold subject to a mortgage or charge, the mortgagee or incumbrancer shall not be entitled to share in any surplus arising from such sale;

(b) where any property liable to be sold in execution of a decree is subject to a mortgage or charge, the Court may, with the consent of the mortgagee or incumbrancer, order that the property be sold free from the mortgage or charge, giving to the mortgagee or incumbrancer the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold;

(c) where any immovable property is sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale for the discharge of an incumbrance thereon, the proceeds of sale shall be applied—first, in defraying the express of the sale;

secondly, in discharging the amount due under the decree;

thirdly, in discharging the interest and principal monies due on subsequent incumbrances (if any); and fourthly, rateably among the holders of decrees for the payment of money against the judgment-debtor, who have, prior to the sale of the property, applied to the Court which passed the decree ordering such sale for execution of such decrees, and have not obtained satisfaction thereof.

1957. MN Gujjar v GS Belekar, AIR 1965 Mys 250; Kuber Singh v Digvijay Singh, AIR 1968 All 125.

(2) Where all or any of the assets liable to be rateably distributed under this section are paid to a person not entitled to receive the same, any person so entitled may sue such person to compel him to refund the assets.

(3) Nothing in this section affects any right of the Government.

SYNOPSIS

[s 73.1] High Court Amendment 943
[s 73.2] Changes Introduced by the Section 943
[s 73.3] Rateable Distribution: Object of the Section 944
[s 73.4] Attachment of Salary 945
[s 73.5] Conditions for Rateable Distribution 946
[s 73.6] Application for Execution 946
[s 73.7] Application of the Section to Orders 947
[s 73.8] Court to which Application for Execution should be Made 947
[s 73.9] Before the Receipt of the Assets 949
[s 73.9.1] Sale by Collector 953
[s 73.9.2] Sale in Execution of Mortgage Decree 953
[s 73.10] Assets Held by a Court 953
[s 73.10.1] Payment Out of court 953
[s 73.10.2] Payment by Cheque 954
[s 73.10.3] Assets Recovered from Surety 954
[s 73.10.4] Undivided Hindu Coparcenery: Rateable Distribution 954
[s 73.11] Assets Available for Rateable Distribution 955
[s 73.12] Assets Not Available for Rateable Distribution 955
[s 73.13] Decrees for the Payment of Money 959
[s 73.14] Same Judgment-debtor 961
[s 73.14.1] Decree against a Firm and its Partners Individually 961
[s 73.14.2] Decree Against Legal Representatives of Judgment-debtors 962
[s 73.15] Clauses (A), (B) and (C) 963
[s 73.16] Claims for Rateable Distribution of Assets 964
[s 73.17] Attachment before Judgment 964
[s 73.18] Sub-section (2): Suit for Refund 965
[s 73.19] Declaratory Suit 965
[s 73.20] Inquiry into Validity of Decree 965
[s 73.21] Rights of Government Not Affected 966
[s 73.22] Attorney's Lien 968
[s 73.23] Rights Created by this Section not Affected by Insolvency 968
[s 73.24] Subsequent Occupier not Liable for Previous Electricity Dues 968
[s 73.25] Appeal 969
[s 73.26] Revision 969

[s 73.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Omit clause (c) of the proviso in sub-rule (1). Vide Cal Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

[s 73.2] Changes Introduced by the Section

The present section differs from the corresponding section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, in the following respects:

(i) The words, "where assets are held by a court," have been substituted for the words, "whenever assets are realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree." This it is submitted, introduces an important alteration, though the High Court of Bombay has held otherwise.[1958]

(ii) The words, "before the receipt of such assets," have been substituted for the words, "prior to the realisation."[1959]

1958. See notes, "Assets held by a court".
1959. See notes, "Before the receipt of the assets".

(iii) The words "by which such assets are held" are omitted after the words "made application to the court."

(iv) The word, "passed," has been added after the word, "money".[1960]

(v) The words, "interest in," in clause (b) have been substituted for the words, "right against," to bring the wording of that clause into line with the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, section 96. This is a mere verbal alteration.

[s 73.3] Rateable Distribution: Object of the Section

What is contemplated under the provisions of section 73 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 is the existence of more than one decree against the same judgment-debtor and the decree holders have made their applications for execution of their decrees and have not been fully satisfied. Once that is the position, as soon as the assets of the judgment-debtor are received by another court, they can make an application under section 73 for rateable distribution without getting their decrees transferred to the court which received the assets. Even the attachment of the assets of the judgment-debtor, by all the decree holders is also not necessary and the requirement is only to make an application after the receipt of the assets by the court, an application under section 73 for rateable distribution. If such applicant fulfils the other requirements contemplated under section 73, he is entitled for rateable distribution.[1961]

The object of section 73 is to prevent unnecessary multiplicity of execution proceedings, to obviate, in a case where there are many decree holders, each competent to execute his decree by attachment and sale of a particular property, the necessity of each and every one separately attaching and separately selling that property.[1962]

The object of this section is to provide a cheap and expeditious remedy for the execution of money-decrees held against the same judgment-debtor by adjusting the claims of rival decree-holders without the necessity for separate proceedings.[1963] The doctrine of rateable distribution does not apply to more than one decree held by the same decree-holder.[1964] Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, section 270, the creditor who first attached the property had a prior claim to have his decree satisfied out of the sale-proceeds to the exclusion of other creditors, but now, all judgment-creditors who apply to the court prior to the receipt of the sale-proceeds by the court, are entitled to share rateably.[1965] In Bithal Das v Nand Kishore,[1966] Strachey CJ said:

> The object of the section is two-fold. The first object is to prevent unnecessary multiplicity of execution proceedings, to obviate, in a case where there are many decree-holders, each competent to execute his decree by attachment and sale of a particular property, the necessity of each and every one separately attaching and separately selling that property. The other object is to secure an equitable administration of the property by placing all the decree-holders in the position I have described upon the same footing, and making the property rateably divisible among them, instead of allowing one to exclude all the others merely because he happened to be the first who had attached and sold the property.

1960. See notes, "Same judgment-debtor".
1961. Kanakam Srinivasa Rao v Ganga Venkateswara Rao, AIR 2003 AP 38.
1962. Boban v sajith Kumar, AIR 2004 Ker 181 (DB).
1963. Hasoon Arra v Jawadoonnissa, (1879) 4 Cal 29.
1964. Mohd Jan v H Abdul Satar, AIR 1971 Del 132 : 73 Punj LR 253.
1965. Kommachi v Pakker, (1897) 20 Mad 107, p 111.
1966. Bithal Das v Nand Kishore, (1901) 23 All 106, 110; Hari Lal v Chatrun Prasad, AIR 1941 All 110; Himatmal Devchand v Abdul, AIR 1945 Bom 76 : 46 Bom LR 757.

A obtains a decree against B in court X for Rs 4,000, and applies to that court for execution of his decree by attachment and sale of certain property belonging to B, and the property thereupon attached. C then obtains a decree also against B in court X for Rs 2,000, and applies to that court for execution of his decree by attachment and sale of the same property attached in execution of A's decree. The property is then sold by the court in execution of A's decree for Rs 3,000. C is entitled to share rateably in the net sale-proceeds, that is to say, if the net sale-proceeds amount to Rs 3,000, A will be paid Rs 2,000 and C will be paid Rs 1,000. It is not necessary to entitle C to participate in the assets that he should have given notice to A of the application made by him for execution of his decree.[1967] The section is wide enough to include transferees of decrees.[1968]

While considering the question of rateable distribution, only the unsatisfied portion of the decree ought to be taken into account.[1969] Rateable distribution should be made according to the amount due to each decree-holder at the time the distribution is made and not according to the amount due at the time when the assets were received by court.[1970]

If a plaintiff obtains a decree on the admission of the defendant[1971] and the decretal amount is directed to be recovered out of a sum due to the defendant judgment-debtor in another court, a rival decree-holder cannot claim rateable distribution out of the sum.[1972]

The section has no application to money belonging to third persons and deposited into court for a specific purpose. Thus, when a person, not a judgment-debtor, deposits into court, money for the express purpose of satisfying the mortgage decree and extinguishing the mortgage lien, that money does not belong to the judgment-debtor and is not available for rateable distribution.[1973] Where A, who had obtained a decree for reconveyance of properties on payment of a certain amount, entered into an agreement with B whereby B was to advance the amount and take a usufructuary mortgage over the properties therefor after reconveyance is obtained and in case of failure to obtain reconveyance was to be repaid out of the monies in court deposit, it was held that the latter were not assets belonging to the judgment-debtor and this section had no application.[1974] The language of the section is clear that the assets distributable are only what may be left over after deducting the costs.[1975]

[s 73.4] Attachment of Salary

Rateable distribution applies to attachment of salary which is attachable even though it is already under attachment by reason of O XXI, rule 48.[1976] The restriction imposed by section 60(1)(i) on the rights of the decree-holder to attach salary, operates only when the dispute is between him and the judgment-debtor. It has no application when the dispute is as to the rights of the decree-holders inter se. It is, therefore, not open to one decree-holder

---

1967. Chunni Lal v Jugal Kishore, (1905) 27 All 132.
1968. Venkatachellam v Subrahmaniam, AIR 1941 Mad 795.
1969. Chokkalingam v Muthuswami, AIR 1934 Mad 426 : (1934) 58 Mad 59.
1970. Co-op Society, Central Bank, Daryapur v Ganpat, AIR 1935 Ngp 214.
1971. See O XII, rule 6.
1972. Ram Govind Pandey v Brij Ratan Das, AIR 1937 All 424.
1973. Gopalan v Naniamma, AIR 1957 TC 107.
1974. Ramakrishna Chetty v Chinna Thangavelu Chetty, AIR 1956 Mad 574 : (1956) 2 Mad LJ 101 : 69 LW 289.
1975. Commercial and Industrial Bank Ltd v Mir Sarfaraz Ali Khan, AIR 1956 Hyd 65 (FB) : (1956) ILR Hyd 79.
1976. Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corp v Paresh Lal Roy, AIR 1939 Cal 485 : (1939) 1 Cal 40.

claiming rateable distribution under this section to raise an objection based on section 60(1)(i) against another decree-holder.[1977]

[s 73.5] Conditions for Rateable Distribution

To entitle a decree-holder to participate in the assets of a judgment-debtor, the following conditions must be present:

(i) The decree-holder claiming to share in the rateable distribution should have applied for execution of his decree to the appropriate court.

(ii) Such application should have been made prior to the receipt of the assets by the court.

(iii) The assets of which a rateable distribution is claimed must be assets held by the court.

(iv) The attaching creditor as well as the decree-holder claiming to participate in the assets should be holders of decrees for the payment of money.

(v) Such decrees should have been obtained against the same judgment-debtor.

No rateable distribution can be claimed under the section unless all the conditions enumerated above are fulfilled.[1978]

[s 73.6] Application for Execution

In order to entitle a decree-holder to the benefits of this section, it is necessary that he must have applied for execution before the receipt of assets are provided under O XXI, rule 11.[1979] It is not necessary that he should have, in addition filed an independent application for rateable distribution.[1980] Even the attachment of the assets of the judgment-debtor by all the decree-holders is not necessary and the requirement is only to make an application after the receipt of the assets by the court, an application under section 73 for rateable distribution. If such applicant fulfils the other requirements, contemplated under section 73, he is entitled for rateable distribution.[1981] A decree-holder who has not applied for execution cannot claim the benefit of rateable distribution.[1982]

An execution petition is not bad under this section for not containing all the particulars required by O XXI, rule 11. It is sufficient if it substantially complies with it.[1983] The question is, whether a decree-holder can participate in rateable distribution, if he has applied for that only without applying for execution. In Balaji v Gopal,[1984] it was held that he was not. In Devorojo Kuer v Jadunandan,[1985] an application under O XXI, rule 11 was held to be sufficient, 1977. Damodar Das v Kasi Prasad, AIR 1956 Cal 112; Indar Chand v Ganshyam Missir, 9 Cal LJ 210; Khariulla Khan v Meeran Khan, AIR 1941 Ngp 239; but see Himatmal Dev Chand v Abdul, AIR 1945 Bom 76 : 46 Bom LR 757.

---

1978. Boban v Sajith Kumar, AIR 2004 Ker 181 (DB).
1979. Krishna Shankar v Chandra Shankar, (1881) 5 Bom 198; RM Pandey v Md. Kazim, AIR 1939 Rang 20.
1980. Jambanna v Honnappa, AIR 1957 AP 1017 : 1956 Andh WR 1047; Peddi Reddi Gangaraju v Mangamma, AIR 1958 AP 334; Surajlal v PRK Sagar Works, AIR 1961 All 371; Shyam Sundar & Co v S Veeri & Co, AIR 1962 Mys. 12.
1981. Anakam Srinawasa Rao v Ganga Venkateswara Rao, AIR 2003 AP 38.
1982. K. Suryavati v T Suryakantam, AIR 1984 AP 273.
1983. Abdul Salam v Veerabadra, AIR 1929 Mad 763 : 57 Mad LJ 97 : (1929) Mad WN 611 : 30 LW 110.
1984. Balaji v Gopal, AIR 1929 Ngp 148.
1985. Devorojo Kuer v Jadunandan, AIR 1931 All 92.

although the applicant did not ask for attachment or sale of the property but only for rateable distribution of the assets to be realised at the execution sale of another decree-holder. A similar view was taken in Kasi Prosad v Motilal,[1986] where it was held that while a bare application for rateable distribution would not be valid under this section, an application which contains all the particulars required in O XXI, rule 11, would be valid though it did not pray for any of the reliefs mentioned in O XXI, rule 11, but only for rateable distribution. In Saraswathi v Govinda Rao, it has been held that rateable distribution is one of the modes of execution recognised by the CPC and a decree-holder who specifies that relief in the execution petition is also entitled to share in the distribution.[1987] Where he has recovered a part of the decretal amount out of court and filed an execution application for the balance, he would be entitled to rateable distribution even if such application is closed for want of bidder at the auction-sale.[1988]

A decree-holder who has applied for execution will be entitled to rateable distribution even though he has not attached the properties, provided he satisfies the other conditions mentioned in the section.[1989] It is not necessary to entitle a decree-holder to claim the benefit of this section that he should have given notice of execution to the other decree-holders or to the judgment-debtor.[1990] Before the decree-holder can claim rateable distribution under this section, the application must be one which on the face, of it is entitled to succeed.[1991] Where the execution application was not accompanied by a copy of the decree, as required by the rules of the Calcutta High Court, it was held that there was no valid execution petition and the decree-holder was not entitled to participate in the distribution.[1992]

The Andhra Pradesh High Court has held that a person who is a stranger to the execution proceeding, has no locus standi to file petition under section 73 of the Code for distribution of assets.[1993]

[s 73.7] Application of the Section to Orders

The section also applies where an application for execution is in respect of an order which has the force of a decree, as for instance, an order made under section 469 of the Companies Act, 1956.[1994]

[s 73.8] Court to which Application for Execution should be Made

Those decree-holders alone were, under the old law, entitled to rateable distribution who have applied for execution of their decrees as provided by O XXI, rule 11[1995] to the court by which the assets are held.[1996] Under the present CPC, it is sufficient that the application has been made to the appropriate court. This is because under section 63 where property has been attached in execution of decrees of several courts, the receipt of assets by one court 1986. Kasi Prosad v Motilal, AIR 1959 Cal 566 : 63 Cal WN 983; Fulsinh Kesari v Vallabhdas, AIR 1969 Guj 200 : 10 Guj LR 148.

---

1987. Saraswathi Bai v Govinda Rao, AIR 1961 MP 145 : (1961) Jab LJ 166.
1988. K. Srinivasa v Noor Mahomed, AIR 1970 Mad 504.
1989. Mangi Lal v Thakurse Bhai, AIR 1954 Hyd 238 : (1954) ILR Hyd 411; Manora Bai v Sultan Bakath, AIR 1968 AP 113.
1990. Chunilal v Jugal Kishore, 17 All 132; Brij Ballap v Hazarimal MBLJ, (1954) HCR 142.
1991. Krishnaji v Vishnu, AIR 1938 Bom 90.
1992. Satyendranath v Bibuthi Bhusan, AIR 1963 Cal 104.
1993. E. Subba Reddy v G. Dhananjay, AIR 2007 AP 16 : 2006 (6) Andh LT 98.
1994. Lyallpur Bank Ltd v Ramji Das, AIR 1945 PC 60 : 72 IA 85 : (1945) 20 Luck 152 : 47 Bom LR 640.
1995. Code of Civil Procedure 1882, section 235.
1996. Krishnashankar v Chandrashankar, (1881) 5 Bom 198.

constitutes receipt of assets by the other courts.[1997] The High Court of Punjab has taken the view that the appropriate court means the court which passed the decree or the court to which the decree is transferred for execution. No application, therefore, can directly be made to any other court, merely on the ground that that court holds asset, of the judgment-debtor. Too much importance cannot be attached to the article "the" in section 73. The words "the court" indicate that application has to be made to the appropriate court which passed the decree. The section merely sets out the prerequisite conditions before rateable distribution can be allowed. It does not, in terms, say that application for execution has to be made to the court where the assets are lying.[1998] On the other hand, the High Court of Madras has taken the view that section 73 cannot be read with section 63, that the application for execution in terms of section 73 must be filed in the court which has received and held the assets, and that this section cannot be construed so as to enable all the decree-holders, irrespective of their applications in different courts, to claim the benefit of rateable distribution. The reason is that the court which has received and held the assets may not know the number of applications in various courts.[1999] It is submitted that the Bombay and Punjab view is correct, first, because sections 73 and 63 must be read harmoniously and secondly, because the reason given in the Madras case cannot be sustained since the court receiving and holding the assets must know from the applications before it approves for execution in other courts. Besides, such a view is contrary to the primary principle that execution application must be lodged in the court which has passed the decree or to the court to which it is transferred for execution. An application to the court which passed the decree to issue a precept of attachment under section 46, to the court by which the assets are held is not sufficient.[2000] Nor is an application to a court in anticipation that the decree will be transferred to it for execution.[2001] But this was a decision of a single judge and has been overruled in Ademma v Venkatasubbayya,[2002] in which it was held that an application for execution may be entertained by the transferee court before the receipt of the decree. Where two decrees were passed against the same judgment-debtor in a small cause court and one of the decree, holders had his decree transferred to the original side and in execution thereof immovable properties were sold, it was held that the other decree-holder was not entitled to share in the distribution of the sale proceeds, as he had applied for execution only in the small cause court and had not got his decree transferred to the original side and applied there for execution.[2003]

The question is, where property of the same judgment-debtor is attached in execution of decrees of more courts than one and the property is sold by the court of the highest grade. whether the holders of decrees of inferior courts are bound, in order to have the benefit of rateable distribution, to have their decrees transferred to the court of the highest grade and make fresh applications for execution to that court? A obtains a decree against B in the court of a subordinate judge of the First Class. In execution of the decree, B's property is attached by that court. C then obtains a decree against B in the court of a subordinate judge of the Second Class and applies to that court for execution of his decree by attachment and sale of the same property. The property is then sold by the First Class subordinate judge in execution of A's

---

1997. Dhirendra Rao v Virbhadrappa, AIR 1935 Bom 176 : (1935) 59 Bom 310.
1998. Gurudial Kaur v Satindar Singh, AIR 1965 P&H 412 : (1964)ILR 2 Punj 233 : 66 Punj LR 1032.
1999. VTV Chettiar v PSP Chettiar, AIR 1973 Mad 313 : (1973) 1 Mad LJ 316.
2000. Kasiwar v Aswini, AIR 1926 Cal 249.
2001. Nanjunda v Nallakaruppan, AIR 1928 Mad 496 : (1928) 55 Mad LJ 120.
2002. Ademma v Venkatasubbayya, AIR 1933 Mad 627 : (1933) 56 Mad 192.
2003. Subbayamma v Bangaraju, AIR 1961 AP 422, following Sriramu v Ramudu, AIR 1943 Mad 262 : (1943) 1 Mad LJ 57.

decree, and the sale-proceeds are received by that court. Here the court of the subordinate judge of the First Class is the court by which the assets are held. Is C entitled to rateable distribution? No, according to a previous decision of the High Court of Bombay, he not having applied to the court of the subordinate judge of the First Class for execution of the decree, that being the court by which the assets are held.[2004] But this was a decision under the old CPC and is not now the law in Bombay.[2005] Yes, according to the Calcutta,[2006] Allahabad,[2007] Rangoon[2008] and Madras[2009] High Courts the reason given being that under section 63 the court of the subordinate judge of the First Class is the court to determine all claims relating to the attached property and such claims include claims for rateable distribution. It is not necessary that the other decree-holders should get their decrees transferred or should file fresh execution applications. They need only apply to the court carrying out the execution proceedings, for they have a claim which it is the duty of the court under section 63 to determine.[2010]

[s 73.9] Before the Receipt of the Assets

An application for execution must have been made before the receipt of assets by the court[2011] and it must be subsisting and pending at the date of the order.[2012] Where the judgment-debtor had died at the date of receipt of assets and his legal representatives had not been brought on record, it was held that there was no execution application pending at the material rate and that the decree-holder could not claim rateable distribution.[2013] So also, where the execution petition had been dismissed before the receipt of the assets, it was held that the decree-holder was not entitled to relief under this section.[2014] An order dismissing an execution petition for non-joinder of a receiver, who was a necessary party, was held to disentitle the decree-holder to relief under this section.[2015] But an order of dismissal can bar the grant of relief under this section only when it is judicial and is tantamount to a denial of the right on the merits and not when it is administrative and made for statistical purposes.[2016] Thus, where a judgment-debtor was brought under arrest and was granted time for payment of the decree amount on his furnishing security, and on that being done, the execution petition was dismissed; it was held that this order did not take away the right of the decree-holder to get rateable distribution.[2017] Where a decree-holder had attached the equity of redemption in certain properties of the judgment-debtor and thereafter they were sold in execution of a decree on the mortgage and the execution petition was, in consequence, dismissed but the attachment continued, it was held that the dismissal did not preclude the decree-holder from claiming rateable distribution in 2004. Nimbaji v Vadia, (1892) 16 Bom 683.

---

2005. Dhirendra Rao v Virbhadrappa, AIR 1935 Bom 176 : (1935) 59 Bom 310.
2006. Clark v Alexander, (1894) 21 Cal 200; Hari Bhagat v Anandaram, (1897) 2 Cal WN 126; Bejoy v Hukum, (1902) 29 Cal 773; Girindra v Kedar Nath, AIR 1925 Cal 966 : (1924) 29 Cal WN 575.
2007. Sarju Ram v Partap Narain, AIR 1933 All 563 : (1933) 55 All 622.
2008. Kwai Tong Kee v Lim Chaung, AIR 1928 Rang 157 : (1928) 6 Rang 131.
2009. Narasimhachariar v Krishnamachariar, (1914) 26 Mad LJ 406.
2010. Gourgopal v Kamalkillika, AIR 1934 Cal 559 : (1934) 61 Cal 240; Balmokand Ram v Ram Saran, AIR 1936 Lah 519.
2011. RM Pandey v Mohd Kazim, AIR 1939 Rang 20.
2012. Vishnubhotla Ramiah v Sajja Namayya, AIR 1943 Mad 165 : (1943) Mad 175; NML Chettiar Firm v Official Assignee, AIR 1935 Rang 135 : (1935) 13 Rang 514.
2013. Rajalakshmi v Bonomali supra.
2014. Ramavatar v Sitaram, AIR 1944 All 245 : (1944) All 321.
2015. Varghese v Parvathi, AIR 1953 TC 475 : (1952) TC 746.
2016. Cherain v Achiamma, (1961) Ker LJ 764 : (1961) Ker LT 531.
2017. Ramanatha v Alagan, AIR 1936 Mad 437 : 70 Mad LJ 68 : 43 LW 703 : (1936) Mad WN 223.

the mortgage decree-holder's sale.[2018] But where the application for execution was struck-off as infructuous, it was held that it could not be held to be pending merely because the attachment was ordered to continue for six months.[2019] In Sunil Roy v Bishwanath,[2020] a car belonging to the judgment-debtor and in the possession of a third party was attached on 8 August 1953 by A under O XXI, rule 46, in execution of his decree in the court of the second subordinate judge, Alipore. B, who had obtained a decree against the same judgment-debtor in the court of the subordinate judge, Alipore, attached the car on 21 September 1953 under O XXI, rule 43, and also applied for rateable distribution in the court of the second subordinate judge on 25 September 1953. The car was sold on 28 September 1953 and the sale proceeds deposited in the court. Thereafter, on the application of the judgment-debtor. The attachment in B's suit was raised by an order of the subordinate judge on 5 January 1954 on the ground that the attachment on 21 September 1953 under O XXI, rule 43 was bad, the proper provision being held to be O XXI, rule 46. On 25 January 1954, the execution petition also was dismissed for non-prosecution. The application for rateable distribution was subsequently dismissed by the second subordinate judge on the ground that the attachment effected on 25 September 1953 under O XXI, rule 43, was bad. It was held by the Calcutta High Court, reversing this order, that the attachment though irregular was not a nullity, B had acquired on the date of receipt of assets, a right to get rateable distribution and that could not be defeated by the subsequent order dismissing the execution petition. It was also observed that the dismissal of the execution petition would not affect the rights of the decree-holder to get rateable distribution unless he had waived or abandoned his rights against the judgment-debtor.[2021]

The corresponding section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 commenced as follows:

> Whenever assets are realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree, and more persons than one have prior to the realisation, applied to the court by which such assets are held.

The present section begins as follows:

> Where assets are held by a court and more persons than one have, before the receipt of such assets, made application to the court....
>
> The word "realisation" was rather obscure. Indeed it called for several decisions in which the courts had to define its precise meaning. The word "receipt" which is now substituted for 'realisation' is not likely to require any judicial interpretation. Cases of the character noted below which turned upon the word "realisation" are not likely to arise under the present section; so clear is the meaning of the word 'receipt'.

A, B and C held each a money-decree against the same judgment-debtor. In December 1892, A attached by a prohibitory order, funds of the judgment-debtor in the hands of D.[2022] In January 1893, B attached the same funds in execution of his decree. In February 1893, D paid the funds into court. On the same day, but after payment was made into court, C applied to attach the fund as property in the custody of the court (O XXI, rule 52, Code of Civil Procedure 1882, section 272). It was held under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882 that the funds should be rateably distributed between A and B, and that C was not entitled to participate therein, as his application was made subsequent to the realisation of the

---

2018. Krishnaswami Iyengar v Vedavali, AIR 1959 Mad 218 : 72 LW 19.
2019. Gulab Chand v Dargamal, AIR 1936 Ngp 277.
2020. Sunil Roy v Bishwanath, AIR 1956 Cal 373 : 60 Cal WN 624 : 97 Cal LJ 164.
2021. Byomkesh Chakravarthi v Hemanth Kumar, AIR 1915 Cal 16 : 18 Cal WN 1311; Kamala v Dwarka, AIR 1937 Pat 92.
2022. Code of Civil Procedure 1908, O XXI, rule 46; Code of Civil Procedure 1882, section 268.

assets by the court.[2023] The decision would be the same under the present section for it is quite clear that C's application was made after the receipt of the assets by the court.

It was held under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 that where property is sold in execution of a decree, the sale-proceeds are deemed to be realised not when the 25% is deposited by the purchaser into court under section 306 (now O XXI, rule 841), but when the balance of the purchase-money is paid.[2024] Hence, a decree-holder who applied for execution before the entire amount due from the purchaser had paid into court was held entitled to share in the rateable distribution though the application was made after deposit of the 25%. But, it was held that a decree-holder who applied for execution after the entire amount of the purchase-money had been paid into court, was not entitled to share in the rateable distribution, though his application was made before the sale was confirmed by the court under section 312 (now O XXI, rule 921); and the decision was put on the ground that the point of time when assets are realised is when the sale-proceeds are paid into court, and not when the sale becomes absolute.[2025] The result would be same under the present section if the word 'received' is substituted for the word "realised".[2026] Where the balance purchase money was deposited into court by the purchaser before the time specified in O XXI, rule 85, the assets must be held to have been realised on the date of actual deposit and not the date within which it could have been deposited.[2027]

Mere attachment of a fund in court does not amount to receipt of that amount by the executing court. Therefore, decree-holders who apply for execution before the assets are actually received are entitled to rateable distribution.[2028]

The Madras High Court held the view that where immovable property is sold inexecution, in separate parcels, the sale proceeds are not deemed to have been realised until the entire purchase money in respect of all the parcels is paid into the court.[2029] This view was followed at one time by the Calcutta High Court.[2030] But later on, the high court changed its view and held that where immovable property is sold in separate lots, the sale proceeds are deemed to have been realised on the several dates on which they are received by the court.[2031] As regards movables, the Lahore court had held that if the property consists exclusively of movables, and they are sold in separate lots on different dates, the sale-proceeds are deemed to be realised on the several dates on which they are received by the officer of the court and not on the date on which the last payment is received. Thus, if some of the movables are sold and the price thereof is received on January 5, and the rest are sold and the price thereof is received on January 10, a decree-holder who applies for rateable distribution on January 7 is entitled to rateable distribution of the sale-proceeds realised on January 10, but not of those realised on January 5.[2032] Assets in this section mean money. Where certain National Savings Certificates were

---

2023. Srinivasa v Seetharamayyar, (1896) 19 Mad 72.
2024. Hafez v Damodar, (1891) 18 Cal 242.
2025. Vishvanath v Virchand, (1882) 6 Bom 16.
2026. Maharaja of Burdwan v Apurba, (1911) 14 Cal LJ 50; Girindra Nath v Kedar Nath, AIR 1925 Cal 966 : (1924) 29 Cal WN 575.
2027. Subramanya Iyer v Sankaran Unni, AIR 1953 Tr & Coch 213 : (1953) Tr & Coch 56 : 1953 Ker LT 149.
2028. Venilal Rangildas v Gandha Bai, AIR 1952 Bom 222 : 54 Bom LR 72; Imperial Bank of India v Balasubramaniam, AIR 1945 Mad 12 : (1945) 2 Mad LJ 49.
2029. Ramanthan v Subramaniam, (1903) 26 Mad 179.
2030. Barendra Nath v Martin & Co., AIR 1921 Cal 801 : (1921) 33 Cal LJ 7.
2031. Girindra Nath v Kedar Nath, AIR 1925 Cal 966 : (1924) 29 Cal WN 575.
2032. Surjan Singh v Prag Das, (1918) PR No 33, p 128.

attached on 20 September 1950, and cashed on a creditor who had attached the certificates on 14 December 1950 he was held entitled to participate in the distribution.[2033]

Where property is sold in execution by a person appointed by the court under O XXI, rule 65, the receipt of purchase-money by such person is for the purposes of this section equivalent to receipt of assets by the court. The material date, therefore, is not the date on which the court receives the amount of the purchase-money from such person, but the date on which such person receives the purchase-money from the purchaser.[2034]

When property which is attached in execution of decrees of several courts is sold by a court of inferior grade and the sale-proceeds are transferred to the court of highest grade for rateable distribution, the date of receipt of assets is the date when the sale-proceeds are received by the latter court.[2035] If property is attached in execution of decrees of several courts and is sold by the court of superior grade, it is sufficient if execution applications to the inferior courts are made before the receipt of sale proceeds by the superior court and such applicants are entitled to rateable execution.[2036] A filed a suit in court X and attached before judgment, movables belonging to the defendant B. C filed a suit in court X against B and also attached the same movables before judgment. The movables being perishables were sold and the sale proceeds deposited in court X. Thereafter, both the suits were decreed. A applied for execution on 27 January 1948 and C on 7 February 1948. On 20 March 1948, the court ordered the payment of the entire amount to A. It was held by the High Court of Bombay, reversing this order that the assets must be taken to have been realised by the court only on 20 March 1948, when it passed an order for payment in the execution application and that in consequence, C, who had applied for execution earlier was entitled to rateable distribution.[2037] If court A attaches the proceeds of a sale held by the collector and directs the collector to send the sale-proceeds to itself, and the collector sends the proceeds not to court A but to court B, there is no constructive receipt of assets by court A.[2038]

When a decree-holder is given leave to bid and set-off at a court-sale, there is a receipt of assets when the sale takes place.[2039] In such a case, the decree-holder purchaser must share the proceeds of the sale rateably with the competing decree-holders.[2040] As set-off takes effect on the date of sale, it is only those decree-holders who had applied for execution before sale that would be entitled to share in distribution.[2041] Accordingly, where a decree-holder is permitted to bid and set-off and the amount of the bid is less than the decretal amount, the subsequent applicant, though applying immediately after the sale, is not entitled to the benefit of this section.[2042] The court, ordering rateable distribution, may make an order for the refund of the proportionate amount to be enforced by summary process in execution.[2043]

2033. Venkatasubbama v Adinarayana, AIR 1954 AP 44.
2034. Gulstaun v Bonnerjee, (1917) 44 Cal 789.
2035. Melarkodi Bank v Damodaraswami Naidu, AIR 1950 Mad 34; Godavaribai v Deekappa, AIR 1927 Bom 247 : (1927) 29 Bom LR 319.
2036. Dhirendra Rao v Virbhadrappa, AIR 1935 Bom 176 : (1935) 59 Bom 310.
2037. Narain Ganesh v Fatima, AIR 1952 Bom 70 : (1952) Bom 83 : 53 Bom LR 821.
2038. Ramanathan v Chidambaram, AIR 1933 Mad 342 : (1933) 65 Mad LJ 347.
2039. Ballelal v Manoharlal Guru, AIR 1944 Ngp 295 : (1944) ILR Nag 806; Ganga Ram v Muktiram, AIR 1931 Pat 405 : (1932) 11 Pat 250; Navaj v Totaram, AIR 1931 Bom 252 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 503; Shrinivas v Radhabai, (1882) 6 Bom 570.
2040. Navaj v Totaram, AIR 1931 Bom 252 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 503; Murgappa v Ramaswamy, AIR 1935 Mad 893.
2041. Subramanya v Sankaran Unni, AIR 1953 TC 213.
2042. Thirumayee Ammal v Palaniappa Gounder, AIR 1973 Mad 7 : (1972) Mad LJ 117.
2043. Bindeshwari v Raja Kirtyanand, AIR 1931 Pat 359 : (1931) 10 Pat 830.

Permission granted to decree-holder to bid for attached property in court auction sale and to set-off purchase money towards amount due under decree as provided under O XXI, rule 72 of the Code, is subject to provision of rateable distribution under section 73. The auction purchaser/decree-holder is liable to deposit portion of that purchase money for rateable distribution amongst other decree-holders.[2044]

Where the executing court and the custody court are the same, the money realised by a decree-holder even after application has been made for rateable distribution, must be distributed rateably.[2045] Where the executing court and the custody courts are the same, realisation takes place on the court passing an order directly or impliedly as custody court, transferring the amount to the credit of the decree under execution.[2046] And even when the court in which the money is in deposit and the court executing the decree are the same, until there is an order transferring the fund to the execution case, there is no receipt of assets and decree-holders who have applied for execution before the transfer are entitled to participate in the distribution.[2047]

[s 73.9.1] Sale by Collector

Where the sale is held by the collector, the application for execution must be made before the sale-proceeds are received by him, though he may send the sale-proceeds to the court under Sch III, clause 9, at a later date.[2048]

[s 73.9.2] Sale in Execution of Mortgage Decree

In the case of a sale in execution of a mortgage decree, the words "prior to the sale" in clause (c) show that the receipt of the assets is the date of the sale and not the date when the money is actually received.[2049]

[s 73.10] Assets Held by a Court

[s 73.10.1] Payment Out of court

Far more important than the change effected by the word "receipt" is the change introduced by the omission of the words "whenever assets are realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree", and the substitution therefor of the words "where assets are held by a court." The CPC contemplates the court receiving certain assets and then proceeding to hold them. The language of the section does not admit any limitation to the words "assets held by a court". Therefore, even where money is deposited in a court for the discharge and satisfaction of a particular decree, it is not that decree-holder alone who will be entitled to that money. Other decree-holders, whose applications for satisfaction of their money-decrees are pending before that court, have the right to share it.[2050] Money paid by a garnishee to the Sheriff are assets received and held by the court although the judgment-debtor obtains a stay order directing the money to remain in the Sheriff's hands.[2051] So also, money paid in court under the first proviso 2044. E.P. Abdul Latheef v K. Vinodan, AIR 2007 Ker 171 : 2007 (1) Ker LT 960.

---

2045. Chokkalingam v Muthuswami, AIR 1934 Mad 426 : (1934) 58 Mad 59.
2046. Imperial Bank of India v Balusubramania, AIR 1945 Mad 412.
2047. Ananda Rao v Motilal, AIR 1962 MP 217.
2048. Dattatraya v Pundlik, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1001; Narhar v Lahanu, AIR 1937 Nag 16.
2049. Jamnadas v Bai Soonabai, AIR 1932 Bom 622 : (1932) 34 Bom LR 1405.
2050. Vijay Raj v Lal Chand, AIR 1966 Raj 194 : (1966) 16 Raj 427.
2051. Mohant Murlidhar v Baijnath, AIR 1930 Cal 623 : (1930) 57 Cal 736.

to O XXI, rule 83 is asset held by the court.[2052] The words "held by the court" coupled with the word "realisation" which occurs later on in the section, include, it is submitted, several kinds of assets which were held not liable to rateable distribution under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. A right to rateable distribution is conditional upon there being assets in the hands of the court. Hence, where the decree-holder, who attaches the property of a judgment-debtor in execution of his decree, purchases the same by private treaty with the latter, in satisfaction of his decree before the sale of the property by the court, there are no assets held by the court.[2053] A decree, in favour of the judgment-debtor, which is liable to be extinguished by being set-off against a cross decree against the judgment-debtor cannot amount to assets held by the court within the meaning of this section if the right of set-off has been exercised.[2054] If a surety against whom execution has been taken out pays the amount out of court to the decree-holder, there is no receipt of any asset by the court.[2055]

[s 73.10.2] Payment by Cheque

Where, in the course of execution proceedings, a payment was made by a garnishee by cheque in favour of the court and the same was returned for correction and a fresh cheque was sent for the correct amount, there was a receipt of assets only when the new cheque was accepted.[2056]

[s 73.10.3] Assets Recovered from Surety

The liability of the surety is coextensive with that of the judgment-debtor. Hence, assets obtained in execution of a decree from the surety of the judgment-debtor cannot be rateably distributed to the holder of another decree against the judgment-debtor as the surety is not the judgment-debtor of such decree-holder and had not undertaken to stand surety for both the decrees.[2057] But according to the High Court of Rajasthan, although a surety of a judgment-debtor is not a judgment-debtor within the strict meaning of section 2(10), the liability sought to be enforced against him, by reason of the decree having been passed and his principal having failed to discharge it, is the same as that of his principal. Accordingly, the liability of the surety is not a distinct and separate liability and the surety of the judgment-debtor is not a different judgment-debtor to whom this section would not apply.[2058]

[s 73.10.4] Undivided Hindu Coparcenery: Rateable Distribution

Where the share of an undivided Hindu coparcener in the joint family is attached during his lifetime and sold in execution of a decree passed against him, the proceeds of such sale are available for rateable distribution under this section only among such creditors, who have attached the share of the coparcener during his lifetime in execution of their decrees against him.[2059]

2052. Ramanath Panda v Damodar Sahu, AIR 1950 Ori 230 : (1950) ILR Cut 208.
2053. Kedarwati v Radhey Lal, AIR 1937 Pat 609.
2054. Mahalingam v Ramanathan, AIR 1940 PC 173 : (1940) 42 Bom LR 1116 (PC).
2055. Dinanath v Mathura Das, AIR 1951 Raj 377 : (1951) Raj LW 353.
2056. Re Frank Morton Fisk, AIR 1956 Cal 656.
2057. Sakharam v Mahadeo, AIR 1940 Ngp 79.
2058. Vijay Raj v Lal Chand, AIR 1966 Raj 194 : (1966) 16 Raj 427.
2059. Urban Corp Bank Ltd v Hanavar Havik. Co-op Bank Ltd, AIR 1940 Bom 190 : 42 Bom LR 218.

[s 73.11] Assets Available for Rateable Distribution

Assets held available for rateable distribution under section 295 were:

(a) sale-proceeds of property sold in execution of a decree;[2060] and

(b) assets realised "otherwise in execution of a decree." These words were held to mean assets realised from the property of the judgment-debtor by such modes as those prescribed by section 291 (O XXI, rule 69), section 305 (O XXI, rule 83) and section 322 (Sch III, paras 2 and 7).[2061]

This was explained in decisions as meaning assets realised in one of the modes expressly prescribed by the sections of the Code.[2062] The following were held to be assets of this class:

(i) debts attached under section 268 (now O XXI, section 46 A) and paid into court by the garnishee;[2063]

(ii) rents of property under attachment realised by a receiver appointed under section 503 [now section 51, clause (d)] at the instance of the decree-holder.[2064] (The appointment of a receiver by the court in such a case is a "process of execution");

(iii) money in the custody of a public officer attached under section 272 (now O XXI, rule 52) and paid into court by that officer;[2065]

(iv) money realised in execution of a decree held by the judgment-debtor against another, where such decree is attached and realised under O XXI, rule 53 (Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, section 273);[2066]

(v) money paid under O XXI, rule 69, to the officer conducting the sale to stop the sale;[2067]

(vi) money raised by the judgment-debtor by private alienation under O XXI, rule 83, and paid into court;[2068]

(vii) the deposit of 25% paid by a defaulting execution purchaser which has not under O XXI, rule 86, been forfeited to government.[2069]

[s 73.12] Assets Not Available for Rateable Distribution

Assets not realised "by sale or otherwise in execution of "a decree" were not liable to rateable distribution under section 295". Following are instances of assets held not to be "realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree" within the meaning of section 295, and therefore not subject to rateable distribution.

2060. Prosonnomoyi v Sreenath, (1894) 21 Cal 809.
2061. Purshotamdas v Surajbharthi, (1882) 6 Bom 588; Gopal Dai v Chunni, (1886) 8 All 67; Vibhudhapriya v Yusuf, (1905) 28 Mad 380.
2062. Sew Bux v Shib Chunder, (1886) 13 Cal 225, 229; Prosonnomoyi v Sreenath, (1894) 21 Cal 809, 817; Vibhudhapriya v Yusuf, (1905) 28 Mad 381.
2063. Sarabji v Govind, (1892) 16 Bom 91.
2064. Fink v Bahadoor Singh, (1899) 26 Cal 722.
2065. Manilal v Nanabhai, (1904) 28 Bom 264; Narsing Das v Gulab Rai, AIR 1935 Pat 201.
2066. Amara v Annamala, (1908) 31 Mad 502.
2067. Purshotamdas v Surajbharathi, (1882) 6 Bom 588.
2068. Purshotamdas v Surajbharthi supra; Thiraviyam v Lakshmana, (1918) 41 Mad 616.
2069. Sree Mahant Prayaga v Paja of Kalahasti, AIR 1926 Mad 872 : (1926) 49 Mad 570.

In these cases, all decided under the present section,[2070] it was held that the moneys held by the court were not assets available for rateable distribution within the meaning of the section:

A—Sorabji v Kala.[2071]—Money paid into court by a judgment-debtor under O XXI, rule 55(a)[2072] for payment of the amount due to the decree-holder at whose instance the property was attached has been held not subject to rateable distribution under this section (this is the same as case B above). Sir Basil Scott CJ said:

> In the reference to the costs of realisation, we have an indication that the legislature contemplated that the assets referred to should be assets held in the process of execution. If we were to hold that money paid into court under O XXI, Rule 55, was assets held by the court within the meaning of Section 73, we should be only nullifying the provisions of Rule 55; for, there would no inducement to any judgment-debtor to procure a payment into court of the amount of the claim of his attaching creditor if the money could at once be absorbed by rateable distribution amongst a number of other creditors.

This assumes that the word "realised" means realised by sale or other process of execution expressly prescribed by the CPC. It is submitted, with respect, that the words "sale or otherwise" which occurred in section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 having been omitted in the present section, the interpretation put upon those words in previous cases[2073] can no longer govern cases arising under the present Code. All that is necessary under the present CPCis that:

(i) there should be assets held by the court; and

(ii) that such assets should have been realised or obtained in execution proceedings.

It cannot possibly be said that moneys paid into court by a judgment-debtor under stress of execution under O XXI, rule 55 (a), are not assets obtained in execution proceedings. It is indeed difficult to see how this view of the section nullifies the provisions of O XXI, rule 55; for money paid into court under rule 55 may be held to be assets subject to rateable distribution, and yet full effect may be given to rule 55. There is no reason why because a particular payment may operate to release the person (see case B) or property of a judgment-debtor from attachment, that payment should be applied for the benefit exclusively of the decree-holder at whose instance the person or property of the judgment-debtor was attached. Moreover, the object of O XXI, rule 65, is not to afford any inducement to a judgment-debtor as supposed by the court in Sorabji v Kala. All that O XXI, rule 55, says is that the circumstances mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of that rule shall have the effect indicate in the rule. As to the argument based on the costs of realisation, it cannot, possibly, be said that no costs were incurred in obtaining the moneys from the judgment-debtor. The decision in Sorabji v Kala has been disapproved by the High Court of Madras.[2074] It has also been disapproved by Pratt J in a later Bombay case—Nathmal v Maniram.[2075] As to the first of the two grounds on which the decision in Sorabji v Kala was based, namely, that the money was not realised in process of execution, Pratt J said that it followed the cases decided on the words "sale or otherwise", which were held to mean sale or other process of execution expressly provided for in the CPC. but that it was too restrictive a construction under the amended section.[2076] As to the second 2070. For cases under the Code of 1882, see the previous edition of this book.

---

2071. Sorabji v Kala, (1911) 36 Bom 156 : 12 IC 911.
2072. Section 275, Code of Civil Procedure 1882.
2073. Purshotamdas v Surajbharthi, (1882) 6 Bom 588; Sew Buse v Shib Chander, (1886) 13 Cal 225; Prosonnomoji v Sreenath, (1894) 21 Cal 809; Vibhudhapriya v Yusuf, (1905) 28 Mad 380.
2074. Thiruvayam v Lakshmana, (1918) 41 Mad 616; Pratapa v M E Mission, AIR 1926 Mad 307 : (1926) 49 Mad 38.
2075. Nathmal v Maniram, (1919) 21 Bom LR 975.
2076. Harai Saha v Faizlur Rahman, (1913) 40 Cal 619, 622.

ground, namely, that to allow rateable distribution of money paid into court under O XXI, rule 55 would be to nullify the provisions of rule 55, the learned judge said:

> I also venture to doubt the correctness of the second reason. Order XXI, rule 55, operates effectively where there is one decree-holder. If there are a number of decree-holders, there is no scope for the rule, for the judgment-debtor has no motive for paying off one judgment-creditor when the same property is liable to be re-attached by the others. To allow one decree-holder to be paid off in full when the property is insufficient to discharge other judgment debts might possibly be undue preference and defeat the object of the section which is equal distribution of all the moneys received in execution. Again, why should a judgment-creditor, whose attachment has been removed under Order XXI, rule 55, be in a better position than a judgment-creditor who has taken the trouble of bringing the property to sale. Lastly, if the money paid under Order XXI, rule 55, to remove an attachment is not available for rateable distribution, than a fortiori money paid to stop a sale under Order XXI, rule 83, would also not be so available. But even under the old section it was assumed by Sir Charles Sargent in Purshottamdas's case that money paid to stop a sale is available for rateable distribution. So that the interpretation put upon the section in Sorabji v Kala makes the new section more restrictive than the old one, and this is not what the Legislature intended.

The decision in Sorabji v Kala has also been dissented from by the Calcutta High Court in Noor Mahomed v Bilasiram.[2077] In that case Rankin J said:

> The money, paid with whatever motive, if paid to the court, is paid upon terms of the Code whatever they may be. These terms, as I read section 73, have been laid down so that distinctions in the form in which execution has been had, in the precise extent to which execution has been allowed to run, in the exact source or genesis of the fund in court, are now no part of the definition of the assets that are subject to distribution rateably. The object of the new Code is to avoid anomaly. To introduce a distinction on the strength of the voluntariness of the payment or the purpose of the debtor, is I think to cut down the language and intention of the Code upon a principle which is inapplicable to the subject-matter and which if applicable is very difficult to imply.

The same view has been taken in later decisions of the same court.[2078] The view taken in Sorabji's case has not been accepted by the Patna High Court.[2079] The Nagpur Court has held that money paid under coercive process is available for rateable distribution.[2080] In a later Bombay case,[2081] Mjrza J refused to follow the opinion of Scott CJ in Sorabji v Kala on the ground that it was obiter. However, in a later decision,[2082] Beaumont CJ relying on Sorabji's case observed:

> It seems to be clear that if a court receives money on terms that it is to be applied for payment of debt of A, it cannot apply the money in payment of the debt of B. The court cannot commit what would be in substance a breach of trust. The general principle above mentioned was laid down by a Division Bench of this court in Sorabji v Kala. The actual decision has been dissented from in some other High Courts...but the general principle has not, I think, been dissented from.

In a Madras case referred above,[2083] it was held that moneys paid into court under O XXI, rule 83(2), were assets liable to be distributed rateably within the meaning of this section.

2077. Noor Mahomed v Bilasiram, (1920) 47 Cal 515.
2078. Ghisulal v Todarmull, AIR 1922 Cal 19 : (1921) 26 Cal WN 169; Hari v Birendra, AIR 1921 Cal 749 : (1922) 35 Cal LJ 327, (money voluntarily paid into court are "assets"); Chittagone Urban Co-op Bank Ltd v Indo-Burmah Traders Bank Ltd, AIR 1938 Cal 521.
2079. Satnarain v Mahabir Prasad, AIR 1939 Pat 392 : (1939) 18 Pat 404.
2080. Nur Mahomed v Rajaram, AIR 1934 Ngp 62; Atmaram v Udey Raj, AIR 1933 Ngp 347.
2081. Indaji v Cooverji, AIR 1926 Bom 242 : (1926) 28 Bom LR 237.
2082. Lalchand v Ramdayal, AIR 1939 Bom 112 : (1939) Bom 133; Ningappa v Adiveppa, AIR 1939 Bom 468 : (1939) 41 Bom LR 997.
2083. Thiraviyam v Lakshmana, (1918) 41 Mad 616.

In the course of the judgment, however, the learned judges went to the length of observing that the assets referred to in the present section need not be assets obtained in execution proceedings. This indeed is an extreme view and it was dissented from Pratt J the learned judge holding that the reference to the costs of realisation and the position of the section in the CPC at the end of Pt II on Execution led irresistibly to the conclusion that the assets to be available for rateable distribution must have been obtained in execution.[2084] The view taken by Pratt J is, it is submitted, correct. A year later Rankin J took much same view as Pratt J[2085] The learned judge said:

> If for example a defendant is made to pay into court the amount of the plaintiff's claim as a condition of getting an adjournment it does not follow from my reading of section 73 that other creditors could claim to share. Nor could they under Order 21, rule 52, where funds in court are themselves the subject matter of the execution.

B—Ebji Umersey v W&A Graham & Co[2086]—Money paid by a judgment-debtor under arrest under section 55, proviso 4, to the officer arresting him in order to secure his release is not an asset subject to rateable distribution. Justice Macleod J said:

> It appears that the section was only intended to apply to assets realised by the sale of property attached.

This view of the section, it is submitted, is not correct. If this view were correct, money paid to stop a sale under O XXI, rule 69, and money raised by private alienation under O XXI, rule 83, would not be assets subject to rateable distribution. But even under the old section 39A it was assumed by Sir Charles Sargent in Purshotamdas's case that such moneys were available for rateable distribution. It cannot possibly be said that the present section is more restricted in its scope than the old section.[2087]

C—Nathmal v Maniram[2088]—A obtained a decree for money against B and in execution of the decree took out a warrant for attachment of the movable property of B under O XXI, rule 43. The bailiff entered B's shop and showed the warrant to B and pointed out that if the money were not paid he would seize and keep in his custody the movable property in his shop. B then paid the decretal amount and costs of execution and Sheriff's poundage. Upon these facts, Pratt J expressed the opinion that the moneyhaving been paid under stress of the warrant[2089] and the warrant being a process of execution, the money was an asset available for rateable distribution within the meaning of the present section. The learned Judge, however, felt bound by the decision of the Appellate Court in Sorabji v Kala, and held that the money was not subject to rateable distribution.

D—Ghisulal v Todarmull.[2090]—In a money-suit by A against B, B's property was attached before judgment, and then released on C standing security for the amount of the claim. The suit was ultimately decreed, and a applied for execution, whereupon C deposited the amount of the decree in court. On that very day, just before the deposit was made, D, another decree-holder, applied for execution of his decree. It was held that the moneys deposited by the surety were assets held by the court within the meaning of this section and D was entitled to rateable distribution.

2084. Nathmal Ghamirmal v Maniram Radhakisson, (1919) 21 Bom LR 975.
2085. Noor Mahomed v Bilasiram, (1920) 47 Cal 515; Sednath v Tej Bahadur, (1932) 54 All 516 : AIR 1932 All 411; Suikeema v Hajee Mahomed, (1913) 38 Mad 221.
2086. Ebji Umersey v W&A Graham & Co, (1917) 19 Bom LR 274 : 39 IC 623.
2087. See also the observations of Rankin J in Noor Mahommed's case cited in Sorabji's case above.
2088. Nathmal v Maniram, (1919) 21 Bom LR 975.
2089. Bissicks v Bath Colliery Co, (1878) 3 Ex D 174; Bidhoo v Keshub, (1868) 9 WR 642.
2090. Ghisulal v Todarmull, AIR 1922 Cal 19 : (1921) 26 Cal WN 169 : 70 IC 539.

E—For other cases see.—Order XXI, rule 52, notes: "Priority".

Order XXI, rule 72, notes: "Amount due on the decree".

Order XXI, rule 83, notes: "Rateable distribution."

Order XXI, rule 89, notes: "For payment to the decree-holder rateable distribution".

Order XXXVIII, rule 2, note: "Rateable distribution."

Compensation under Land Acquisition Act, 1894.—Compensation deposited by the collector in court under section 31 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, has been held to be "assets held by the court".[2091]

[s 73.13] Decrees for the Payment of Money

It is only the holders of decrees for the payment of money that are entitled to rateable distribution. The expression "decree for the payment of money" is illustrated by the following cases:

(i) A decree for the payment of mesne profits is a "decree for the payment of money" within the meaning of this section, notwithstanding that the amount of mesne-profits has not yet been ascertained. The holder of such a decree, who has applied for attachment under O XXI, rule 42 (Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, section 255), is entitled to a rateable distribution with other decree-holders under this section.[2092]

(ii) A decree upon a mortgage, which enables the mortgagee to realise the amount of the mortgage-debt 'from the mortgaged properties and from the defendants personally' was held to be a "decree for the payment of money" within the meaning of the old section by the High Court of Calcutta in Hart v Tara Prasanna Mukherji.[2093] In that case the court said:

> Every decree, by virtue of which money is payable, is to that extent a "decree for money" within the meaning of the section, even though other relief may be granted by the decree e.g., sale of mortgaged property; and the holder of such a decree is entitled to claim rateable distribution with holders of decree for money only.[2094]

Following these observations, the High Court of Madras held that where a decree upon a mortgage directs the mortgagor to pay the mortgage debt to the mortgagee within the period fixed by the court, and provides that in default the mortgaged property should be sold, and the balance (if any) should be recovered from the mortgagor, the decree was one "for the payment of money" within the meaning of the old section.[2095] In subsequent cases, however, which turned upon the meaning of the expression "decree for the payment of money" which occurred in section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (now section 481), the High Court of Calcutta dissented from the Madras decision on the ground that the decree in that case was not

---

2091. (Sait) Siva Pratapa Bhattadu v AEL Mission And Ors, AIR 1926 Mad 307 : (1926) 49 Mad 38.
2092. Viraragava v Varada, (1882) 5 Mad 123.
2093. Hart v Tara Prasanna Mukherji, (1885) 11 Cal 718; Mukhram Agarwalla v Eshan Ahmad, AIR 1934 Cal 764 (a decision under this Code).
2094. Hart v Tara Prasanna Mukherji, (1885) 11 Cal 718.
2095. Kommachi Kather v Pakker, (1897) 20 Mad 107, followed in Abdulla Sahib v Oosman Sahib, (1905) 28 Mad 224 (a case under section 230 of Code of Civil Procedure 1882, which contained the expression "decree for the payment of money", now section 48), and approved in Vaidinadasamy Ayyar v Sommasundaram Pillai, (1905) 28 Mad 473 (a case under section 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882, now O XXI, rule 2).

similar to the decree in Hart v Tara Prasanna Mukherji the decree in the latter case containing a distinct order upon the mortgagor personally, to pay the amount of the mortgage-debt.[2096] The decree in those cases was similar to the decree in the Madras case, and it was held that the decree was not a "decree for the payment of money" within the meaning of section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. The decision, it seems, would have been the same if the court had been called upon to interpret the same expression in section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and the observations in Hart's case set out above would have been regarded as mere obiter dicta. The Allahabad decisions, bearing on the expression "decree for the payment of money" in section 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, are also to the same effect.[2097] There is little doubt that if these High Courts were called upon to decide whether a decree of the character in the Madras case was a "decree for the payment of money" within the meaning of this section, they would hold that it was not. In any event, the Madras decision cannot be sustained under the CPC: see O XXI, rule 20. The High Court of Lahore had held that a mortgage decree passed under the provisions of O XXXIV, which directs that the amount due to the decree-holder shall first be paid out of the sale-proceeds of the mortgaged property, is not a personal decree in the first instance, even as regards costs which are directed to be recovered in the first instance from the mortgaged property.[2098]

(iii) A decree directing the payment under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 (now O XXXIV, rule 6) of the balance of the mortgage-debt remaining due after payment to the mortgagee of the net proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property is a "decree for the payment of money" within the meaning of this section.[2099]

(iv) A decree directing the payment of money by a person does not cease to be a decree for the payment of money so far as that person is concerned. Merely because it directs, as against another person, the realisation of the money claim from mortgaged property. Thus, a decree against A, B and C, which, so far as A and B are concerned, is a decree for the enforcement of a mortgage by sale of their property, but which does not direct the sale of any specific property belonging to C, is as regards C, a decree for the payment of money.[2100]

(v) A judgment entered up under section 86 of the Insolvent Debtors Act, 1842 is a money-decree.[2101]

(vi) Under section 73 of the CPC, sharing in the sale proceed is permissible only if a person seeking such share has obtained a decree or an order of an adjudication from the tribunal and has also complied with other conditions laid down under section 73.[2102]

(vii) The question was whether the auction-purchaser was liable to meet the liability of old consumer of electricity to the premises which was purchased by him in the auction-sale from the State Financial Corporation under section 29(1) of the State Financial Corporation Act, 1951. The Hon'ble Supreme Court held that where premises come to be owned or occupied by the auction purchaser, when

---

2096. Fazil v Krishna, (1898) 25 Cal 580; Kartick v Juggernath, (1900) 27 Cal 285.
2097. Ram Chran v Sheobarat, (1894) 16 All 418; Pahalvan v Narain, (1900) 22 All 401.
2098. Allahabad Bank v Punjab National Bank, AIR 1939 Lah 303.
2099. Mallikarjunnadu v Lingamurti, (1902) 25 Mad 244.
2100. Delhi and London Bank v Uncovenanted Service Bank, (1888) 10 All 35.
2101. Re Bhagwandas, (1884) 8 Bom 511.
2102. Allahabad Bank v Canara Bank, (2000) 2 LRI 207.

such purchaser seeks supply of electricity energy he cannot be called upon to clear the past arrears as a condition precedent to supply. There is no charge over the property.[2103]

[s 73.14] Same Judgment-debtor

The provisions of this section do not apply unless the judgment-debtor is the same. Where the holder of a decree against two or more persons applies for a rateable distribution of the assets realised from property belonging to one of such persons, the application is one for the execution of the decree against the same judgment-debtor.

ILLUSTRATION

X obtains a decree against A, and attaches A's property in execution of the decree. Y, who holds a decree against A and B, applies for execution of his decree by attachment and sale of A's property attached in execution of X's decree. Y is entitled under this section to share in the proceeds of the sale of A's property; it is immaterial that Y's decree is against B also and that the decree might have been separately executed against B.[2104]

Similarly, where the holder of a decree against one person applies for a rateable distribution of the assets of that person realised from property belonging to that person and another, such application is an application for the execution of a decree against the same judgment-debtor.

ILLUSTRATION

X obtains a decree against A, B and C, and attaches in execution of the decree certain property belonging to A, B and C jointly. Y holds a decree against A alone. Y is entitled under the provisions of this section to a proportionate distribution of the assets realised by the sale of the joint property so far as they represent the share of A in that property. Similarly, if Y held a decree against A and B, he would be entitled to a rateable distribution of the assets so far as they represented the share of A and B in the property.[2105] These were decisions under section 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1882. They have been followed under the present Code of Civil Procedure.[2106] In Balmer Lawrie & Co v Jadunath,[2107] it was doubted whether the earlier decisions were affected by the introduction in the present section of the word 'passed' which did not occur in the Code of Civil Procedure 1882. In Hoti Lal Chatura Prasad,[2108] there is a discussion as to the result of the use of the word "passed".

[s 73.14.1] Decree against a Firm and its Partners Individually

The High Court of Calcutta has held that a decree passed against a firm, is in effect, a decree against the partners individually. The decree-holder under such a decree is entitled to apply for rateable distribution in execution proceedings started by another decree-holder against the partners individually.[2109] The High Court of Mysore has also taken the same view.[2110] A 2103. Isha Marbels v BSEB, (1995) 2 SCC 648.

2104. Shumbhoo Nath v Lickynath, (1883) 9 Cal 920; Grant v Subramanian, (1899) 22 Mad 241; Delhi and London Bank v Uncovenanted Service Bank, (1888) 10 All 35.
2105. Ganesh v Shiva, (1903) 30 Cal 583; Gatti Lal v Bir Bahadur, (1905) 27 All 158; Ramanathan v Subramania, (1903) 26 Mad 179; Chhotalal v Nabibhai, (1905) 29 Bom 528.
2106. Hussein Saheb v Babaji, AIR 1926 Bom 150 : (1926) 28 Bom LR 78 : 93 IC 222; CRMA Chettyar v KRSV Chettyar, AIR 1928 Rang 96 : (1927) 5 Rang 757 : 707 IC 169 and Chaudhari Fateh Din v Diwan Chand, AIR 1938 Lah 801.
2107. Balmer Lawrie & Co. v Jadunath, (1915) 42 Cal 1 : 27 IC 644.
2108. Hoti Lal Chatura Prasad, AIR 1941 All 110 (FB) : (1941) All LJ 187.
2109. Pannaji Devichand Firm v Lakkaji Dalaji Firm, AIR 1943 Bom 156, Kritanta Kumar Guha v Pullin Krishna, AIR 1938 Cal 316 : (1938) 42 Cal WN 310.
2110. Lakkaji Dolaji & Co. v Md. Gous, AIR 1963 Mys 16.

decree-holder who has obtained a decree against a partner individually served or had obtained leave under O XXI, rule 50(2) is entitled to rateable distribution with a decree-holder who had obtained a decree against him personally.[2111] It has been held by the High Court of Madras that a decree against the partners of a firm and a decree against the partners in their individual capacity are not decrees against the same judgment-debtor within this section.[2112] And that is also the view of the Punjab High Court which has held that for section 73 to apply, there must be not only identity of judgment-debtors but also identity of capacity or interest.[2113]

[s 73.14.2] Decree Against Legal Representatives of Judgment-debtors

The High Courts of Bombay, Rangoon and Calcutta have held that if a decree is obtained by X against B and by Y after B's death against B's legal representative, the judgment-debtor is not the same and the present section does not apply.[2114] That was also the view of the Madras High Court at one time.[2115] But a full bench of the same high court has subsequently taken the opposite view[2116] and the Allahabad High Court has recently agreed with the Madras Full Bench.[2117] Following the full bench ruling, the Madras High Court has held that a decree obtained against two persons [eo nominee as members of the family and as against family properties and another decree obtained against one of them as manager of the joint family are against the same judgment-debtor.[2118] It has been held by the Bombay High Court that the expression "same judgment-debtor" should be construed liberally and that:

(i) a decree obtained against M;

(ii) a decree passed against the legal representatives of M in a suit instituted against him; and

(iii) a decree obtained against the legal representatives of M in a suit instituted against them after his death were all against the same judgment-debtor.[2119]

A Full Bench of Bombay High Court has held that a decree-holder who had obtained a decree against a Hindu father (governed by the Mitakshara law) alone is entitled to rateable distribution in the entire assets realised in execution of a decree obtained against the father and his undivided sons.[2120] There is a dictum in a Calcutta case[2121] that a decree against a defendant personally and a decree against the same defendant in a representative-character are not decrees against the same person; but the observation was not intended as a considered decision. The High Court of Calcutta has subsequently held that if a decree is obtained against a person as

---

2111. Pannaji Devi Chand v Lakaji, AIR 1943 Bom 156 : 45 Bom LR 181.
2112. Sundara Iyer v Balusami Iyer, AIR 1956 Mad 192 : (1955) 2 Mad LJ 276 : 1955 Mad WN 788.
2113. Girdharilal v Munilal, AIR 1963 Punj 43; Saduram v Firm Danpat Rai Theruram, AIR 1937 Lah 937 : (1937) ILR Lah 637.
2114. Govind v Mohoniraj, (1901) 25 Bom 494 : 3 Bom LR 407; Chunilal v Broach Urban Co-op Bank Ltd. AIR 1937 Bom 461 : (1937) ILR Bom 795; Sarju v Rangidhar, AIR 1940 Rang 243; Jahar Lal v Lalita Sundari, AIR 1930 Cal 454 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 294; Hemalati Dasi v Bengal Coal Co. Ltd. AIR 1935 Cal 738 : (1935) 40 Cal WN 26.
2115. Shrinivas v Kanthimatri, (1910) 33 Mad 465.
2116. Ramakrishnan v Viswanathan, AIR 1936 Mad 40 : (1936) 59 Mad 93; Palaniappa v Palani, AIR 1936 Mad 948.
2117. Hoti Lal v Chatura Prasad, AIR 1941 All 545 : (1941) All LJ 137.
2118. Swaminatha v Saivu, AIR 1936 Mad 123; Kandula v Bangaru, AIR 1937 Mad 504.
2119. Dundappa v Annaji Vardaji, AIR 1953 Bom 65 : (1953) ILR Bom 165 : 54 Bom LR 811; Mool Chand v Siddappa, AIR 1947 Bom 18 : 48 Bom LR 571.
2120. Mulchand Kesaji v Shidappa, AIR 1947 Bom 18 : (1947) ILR Bom 120 : 48 Bom LR 571 (FB); P.S. Lakshmamma v A. Rajarao, AIR 1972 AP 201.
2121. Hart v Tara Prasanna Mukherji, (1885) 11 Cal 718, 728.

heir of a deceased person and another decree is passed against him in his personal capacity, the two decrees are against the same judgment-debtor within the meaning of this section.[2122]

In Lakshminarayana Devasthanam v Khande Rao,[2123] it was held that a decree under which the judgment-debtor was personally liable and a decree under which properties inherited and possessed by him as heir and legal representative were liable were not against the same judgment-debtor as the character of the defendant in both the suits was different and that what was relevant for the application of the section was the nature of the decree and not the identity of the property liable under the decrees. It has been held by the Madras High Court that a decree against a widow as heir and one against her on a personal claim are both against the same judgment-debtor.[2124] In Ramzan Khan v Hiralal,[2125] it was observed that the stress was more on the identity of the properties than the identity of the judgment-debtor. A obtained a decree against B and in execution thereof attached cattle belonging to him. The attachment was raised on C executing a surety bond. A then started proceedings in execution against C. D obtained a decree against B and in execution of his decree, the cattle were attached and sold. It was held that A was entitled to rateable distribution as, though his execution was against the surety C, the liability of the latter was that of the judgment-debtor under the decree and not one independent of it.[2126]

[s 73.15] Clauses (A), (B) and (C)

The first paragraph of this section and clauses (a) and (b) have reference to sales in execution of simple money-decrees. Clause (a) declares the incompetence of the mortgagee of encumbrancer as such to share in any surplus proceeds when property is sold subject to his mortgage or charge. But the alternative is afforded to him by clause (h) of consenting to the property being sold free of his mortgage or charge, in which case the court may give him the same right against the sale-proceeds as he had against the property.[2127] Clause (c) has reference to a sale in execution enforcing an incumbrance; but in distributing the sale-proceeds the discharge of subsequent (and not prior) incumbrances is alone taken into account;[2128] but no payment can be made to a subsequent encumbrancer if the mortgagor challenges its existence or validity.[2129] Where there is a charge over a property in favour of the plaintiff for payment of the decretal amount which gives him liberty to apply for sale of that property for the discharge of the encumbrance is sold and its sale-proceeds are held by the court, such sale-proceeds must be applied in the first instance in discharging the amount due to the plaintiff and the balance left over distributed to other decree-holders applying for rateable distribution.[2130] Similarly, where a property is sold in execution of a decree in favour of a mortgagee, the next preference, if there is excess after satisfying that decree, should be in favour of a second mortgagee and the balance should be used for rateable distribution amongst simple money-decree-holders.[2131]

2122. Hemendra Nath v East Bengal Commercial Bank, AIR 1936 Cal 210 : (1936) 63 Cal 923; contra Jamiyatram v Umiya Shankar, AIR 1941 Bom 327 : (1941) ILR Bom 544 : 43 Bom LR 699.
2123. Lakshminarayana Devasthanam v Khande Rao, AIR 1954 Bom 446 : (1954) Bom 704 : 56 Bom LR 232.
2124. Krishnaswami Iyengar v Vedavalli Ammal, AIR 1959 Mad 218 : 72 LW 19.
2125. Ramzan Khan v Hiralal, AIR 1961 Raj 118 : (1960) ILR Raj 1510.
2126. Peddi Reddi Ganga Raju v Kondalla Mangamma, AIR 1958 AP 334; dissenting from Sakharam v Mahadeo, AIR 1940 Nag 79, and Kegendranath v PC Roy, AIR 1942 Oudh 791.
2127. See, for instance, Brij Mohan v The Deputy Commr, Pratabgarh, AIR 1937 Oudh 270.
2128. Jagat Dhundhey, (1883) 5 All 566; Mithu v Kishan, (1890) 12 All 546.
2129. Lachmi v Mithu, AIR 1927 All 467 : (1927) 49 All 936.
2130. Abdul Jabbar v Venkata Sastri, AIR 1969 SC 1147 : (1969) 1 SCC 573.
2131. SV Palaniapa v VR. Chettiar, AIR 1970 Mad 401 : (1970) 1 Mad LJ 458.

In cases coming under clause (c), the application for execution must be, made prior to the sale of the property.[2132]

A curious use was sought to be made of clause (b) in the following case:

B mortgaged property to A. A sued to enforce the mortgage, but the court holding that B had no title to the property granted A simple money-decree. A filed an application to execute the money-decree. During execution proceedings B became entitled to the property by succession. A believed that under section 43 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 the mortgage had become effective. He, therefore, withdrew his application and filed another application for execution by way of realisation of his supposed charge under section 43. This was, of course, disallowed as the decree was a simple money-decree. He then sought to treat his application as an application for attachment and sale of the property reserving a charge in the sale-proceeds under section 73(1)(b). This, the court disallowed as it was diverting the execution proceeding into an enforcement, not of a money-decree, but of a mortgage-decree.[2133] The court did not decide whether section 43 was at all applicable, but it may be noted that section 43 does not apply after the contract of transfer has merged in a decree.

Where properties are sold in execution of a mortgage-decree, the right of the decree-holder to be paid in full is not affected by the provision in the Madras Indebted Agriculturists (Repayment of Debts) Act, 1955, that the decree amount might be paid, in instalments.[2134] In Ramgopal v Dhannalal,[2135] the judgment-debtor in a mortgage suit effected a private alienation of the hypothecation with the permission of the court and with the consent of the decree-holder and deposited the decree amount into court. A claim for rateable distribution of this amount was made by holders of money-decree against the judgment-debtor on the ground that the mortgage decree-holder could not claim to be paid in full under section 73(1)[2136] as there was no sale in execution of the decree. It was held repelling this contention, that by consenting to the private alienation, the decree-holder had not abandoned his rights under the mortgage-decree and that section 73 had no application, as the question did not arise between holders of money-decrees.

[s 73.16] Claims for Rateable Distribution of Assets

These claims are claims enforceable under an attachment within the meaning of section 64.[2137]

[s 73.17] Attachment before Judgment

A decree-holder who caused property to be attached before judgment, is not entitled to share in a rateable distribution of the sale-proceeds of that property, unless he makes, after judgment, a fresh application for execution under O XXI, rule 11 (Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, section 235], O XXXVIII, rule 11 (Code of Civil Procedure 1882, section 490] does not touch the point (c). Where moneys are deposited in court for cancelling an attachment

---

2132. Dattatraya v Pundlik, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1001 : Compare O XXXIV, rule 13.
2133. Gowari Ambal v Ramanathan, AIR 1930 Mad 138 : (1930) 53 Mad 670.
2134. Vaithiam Nanjappa v Ramanathan Chetti, (1958) 2 Mad LJ 566.
2135. Ramgopal v Dhannalal, AIR 1958 MP 201 : (1958) Jab LR 351.
2136. Pallonji v Jordon, (1888) 12 Bom 400; Arunachellam v Haji Sheck Meera, (1910) 34 Mad 25; Moidin v Dakshayani, AIR 1941 Mad 125 : (1940) 2 Mad LJ 844; Commercial and Industrial Bank Ltd v Mir Sarfaraz Ali Khan, AIR 1956 Hyd 65 (FB) : (1956) ILR Hyd 79.
2137. See notes to section 64, "Explanation to the section".

before judgment, decree-holders who attached it before decree is passed in the suit are entitled to rateable distribution.[2138]

[s 73.18] Sub-section (2): Suit for Refund

The scheme of this section is to enable the court, as a matter of administration, to distribute the assets according to what may seem at the time to be rights of parties without this distribution importing a conclusive adjudication as to those rights, which may be subsequently readjusted in a suit brought under the penultimate paragraph of the section.[2139] Such a suit is virtually a suit for money had and received, and the period of limitation is three years from the date of the receipt of the assets by the defendant.[2140] The suit being one for money had and received, it would be premature if it were brought before the moneys were actually paid to the defendant. A mere order for the payment of money under the section is not sufficient to found the action.[2141]

Suit by Subsequent Mortgagee to Recover Balance of Money Realised by Sale in a Prior Mortgage.—X mortgages his property to A. He then mortgages the same property to B. Subsequently he executes a further charge on the property in favour of A. A sues X on the first mortgage, joining B as a defendant, and obtains a decree on the mortgage. The property is sold in execution of the decree and a balance of Rs 12,000 which remains after satisfying A's decree is deposited in court. A then obtains a decree for sale on further charge and in execution of the decree draws out the balance deposited in court. B is not joined as a party to this suit, nor is any notice given to him that A was drawing out of court, the balance of Rs 12,000. B then sues A to recover the amount drawn out by A, that is, Rs 12,000. Such a suit is not one under sub-section (2), and the period of limitation applicable to the suit is 12 years under Article 132 of the Limitation Act, 1963. The suit is really one to enforce payment of money charged upon immovable property within the meaning of that article.[2142]

[s 73.19] Declaratory Suit

Is a decree-holder claiming under this section entitled to file a suit for a declaration that another decree-holder is not entitled to rateable distribution, and for an injunction restraining him from receiving payment, before distribution of the assets by the court, or is he bound to wait until actual distribution is made and then sue for a refund? In a Madras case,[2143] Sadasiva Ayyar J expressed the opinion that he is entitled to sue for a declaration.

[s 73.20] Inquiry into Validity of Decree

The judgment of the Privy Council in Shankar Sarup v Mejo Mal,[2144] makes it clear that the court distributing the assets is acting in an administrative rather than a judicial capacity. The court, which is merely a distributive agency, cannot deal with the question whether any decree has been obtained by fraud or improper means as in an ordinary case of execution. The Courts

---

2138. Parvathi v Ganapathy, AIR 1954 TC 6.
2139. Shankar Sarup v Mejo Mal, (1910) 23 All 313 : 28 IA 203.
2140. Shankar Sarup v Mejo Mal, (1910) 23 All 313 supra; Brij Banke Lal v Ram Narain And Anr, (1917) 39 All 322; Baiznath v Ramadoss, (1916) 39 Mad 62; Limitation Act, 1963, Article 62.
2141. Hart v Tara Prasanna Mukherji, (1885) 11 Cal 718.
2142. Bharandeo v Tara Chand, (1914) 41 Cal 654 : 41 IA 45.
2143. Venkatarama v South Indian Bank Ltd, (1920) 43 Mad 381.
2144. Shankar Sarup v Mejo Mal, 28 IA 202 : 23 All 313.

of Calcutta,[2145] Madras,[2146] Bombay[2147] and Patna[2148] are agreed on the point, overruling some earlier decisions. Nor can such court go into the question that the decree was invalid on the ground that the court passing it had no territorial jurisdiction.[2149]

[s 73.21] Rights of Government Not Affected

A judgment-debt due to the government is entitled to precedence in execution.[2150] here is no difference in this respect between income tax and any other tax like sales tax due to the state[2151] nor does it affect the right of the state to be paid in full, that it has not obtained a decree, because its claim rests on the well-established principle recognised in sub-section (3) that Crown Debts are entitled to priority.[2152] In Builders Supply Corp v UOI,[2153] the Supreme Court held that the Government of India was entitled to claim priority for arrears of income tax due to it from a citizen over debts from him to unsecured creditors and that the English Common Law doctrine of priority of Crown Debts has been given judicial recognition in the territory then known as British India prior to 1950. Thus, that doctrine having been incorporated in Indian law, it was a law in force in the territory of India and by virtue of Act 372(1) of the Constitution it continued to be in force until it was validly altered, repealed or amended.[2154] However, in the absence of proof that it is so incorporated in the law of the erstwhile Hyderabad State and such priority having been extended only to land revenue under section 104 of the Hyderabad Land Revenue Act, no such priority could be claimed in the case of arrears of sales tax due to that state prior to its incorporation into the Indian Republic.[2155] But this priority exists only so long as the assets remain the property of the judgment-debtor. When an order for rateable distribution is made, the title of the judgment-debtor to the fund in court is extinguished and with that the right of the government to proceed against it must cease, there being no question thereafter of priority. It was accordingly held that where an order for rateable distribution had been made, a claim made thereafter by the Certificate Officer under the Public Debts Recovery Act for payment out of the fund in court was not maintainable.[2156] An attachment by the collector in independent proceedings for the recovery of arrears permitted under section 46 of the Income Tax Act, (now sections 222 of the Income-tax Act, 1961) is not sufficient for the purpose of enforcing the priority before the 2145. Biswambar v Aprana, AIR 1935 Cal 290 : (1935) 62 Cal 715.

---

2146. Saravana v Arunachalam, (1917) 40 Mad 841.
2147. Dattatraya v Purshotam, AIR 1922 Bom 21 (FB) : (1922) 46 Bom 635; Shidappa v Gurusangaya, (1913) 55 Bom 473 : AIR 1931 Bom 350.
2148. Bibi Uma v Rasoodan, AIR 1926 Pat 497 : (1926) 5 Pat 445; Mst Annapurni v Ashutosh, AIR 1934 Pat 545.
2149. ML Abdul Jabbar Sahib vs HV Venkata Sastri & Sons, AIR 1969 SC 1147 : (1969) 1 SCC 573.
2150. Secretary of State v Bombay Landing Co, (1868) 5 Bom HC 23; Income-tax-Officer v Chandan Bai, AIR 1957 Bom 91 : (1956) Bom 743 : 58 LR 564; Gulam Mohammad v Ahmad Gulam Dar, AIR 1960 J&K 45.
2151. State of Uttar Pradesh v Santal, AIR 1963 All 495.
2152. Manickam Chettiar v Income-tax Officer, Madras, AIR 1938 Mad 360 : (1938) ILR Mad 744 : (1938) 1 Mad LJ 351; State of Kerala v EP Mathew, AIR 1961 Ker 18 : (1960) 1 Ker LR 634 : (1960) Ker LJ 76; Excise And Taxation Officer v Gauri Mal Butail Trust, AIR 1961 P&H 292 : (1960) 1 Punj 809. But see Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd v Secy of State, AIR 1935 Lah 319; Murli Tahilram v T Asomal & Co., AIR 1955 Cal 423 : 59 Cal WN 701, considered in BS Corp v UOI, AIR 1956 Cal 26 : 59 Cal WN 1119.
2153. Builders Supply Corp v UOI, AIR 1965 SC 1061 : (1956) 2 SCR 289 : (1956) 56 ITR 91.
2154. Lakkamma v State, AIR 1970 Mys 198; Somasundaram Mills v UOI, AIR 1970 Mad 190 : 74 ITR 668.
2155. Collector of Aurangabad v Central Bank of India, AIR 1967 SC 1831 : (1967) 3 SCR 855 : (1967) 70 Bom LR 146.
2156. Basantkumar v Panchu Gopal, AIR 1956 Cal 23 : 59 Cal WN 17.

executing court. It is necessary that the executing court should be moved by the government, while the assets are still in the custody of the court as the property of the judgment-debtor. But the government's claim for priority cannot be enforced against the amount paid over to the attaching decree-holder before government made its application.[2157] If the state does not make an application for payment before the other attaching creditor takes away the amount it cannot later ask for payment, since no amount would be left with the court for payment.[2158] The under mentioned cases may be referred to in connection with sub-section (3) of this section.[2159] Two proceedings were going on, one before the executing court at the instance of a creditor and the other before the insolvency court at the instance of some creditors. The executing court passed an order for rateable distribution of the amounts realised in auction sale of some immovable properties of the judgment-debtor. It was held that the order of the executing court would not, in any way, affect the proceedings of the insolvency court. All rights over the properties of the debtor vested in the insolvency court after the admission of the insolvency petition and so the question of applicability of principle of res judicata did not arise in the present state of facts, if the application of the judgment-debtor or by the auction receiver as filed before the executing court is rejected and they do not file any appeal or suit or proceedings against the order. These applications would not affect the jurisdiction and the powers of the insolvency court.[2160]

Executing court's order for rateable distribution does not affect proceedings in insolvency court.[2161] Debts due to the state are entitled to priority over all other debts. If a decree-holder brings a judgment-debtor property to sale and the sale proceeds are lying in deposit in court', the state may, even without prior attachment, exercise its right to priority by making an application to the executing court for payment. If, however, the state does not chose to apply to the court for payment of its dues from the amount lying in deposit in the court but allows the amount to be taken away by some other attaching decree-holder, the state cannot, thereafter, make an application for payment of its dues from the sale proceeds since there is no amount left with the court to be paid to the state. However, if the state had already effected an attachment of the property which was sold even before its sale, the state would be entitled to recover the sale proceeds from whomever has received the amount from the court from filing a suit. The prior attachment effected by the state, similarly, fastens itself to the sale proceeds taken away by the decree-holder. The state is, therefore, entitled to recover the amount from the decree-holder who has taken away the amount. Section 73(3) read with section 73(2) of the CPC contemplate such a relief being granted in a suit.[2162] As soon as the question of rateable distribution between the decree-holders and the state having statutory priority is determined, and the court passes an order as to how to appropriate the assets of the judgment-debtor, the rights of the parties become crystallised and the moneys in question cease to be the property of the judgment-debtor and become the property of the decree-holder, regardless of whether

---

2157. Somasundaram Mills Pvt Ltd v UOI, AIR 1970 Mad 190 : 74 ITR 668.
2158. UOI v Somasundaram Mills, AIR 1985 SC 407 : (1985) 2 SCC 40; Kotak & Co v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1982) 1 SCC 438 : (1982) 1 SCJ 241.
2159. Oudh Commercial Bank v Secretary of State, AIR 1935 Lah 319; Varadachari v Secretary of State, AIR 1936 Mad 602 : (1936) 59 Mad 872; Deputy Commr of Police, Madras v Vedantam, AIR 1936 Mad 132 : (1936) 59 Mad 428; Secretary of State v Ma Myien Me, AIR 1937 Rang 380; IN Soniram Rameshur v Mary Pinto, (1934) 11 Rang 467 : AIR 1934 Rang 8; Muni Lal v Diwan Chand, AIR 1939 Lah 488.
2160. Dharamveer Agarwal v Kailash Chand, AIR 1989 Raj 17.
2161. Ibid.
2162. UOI v Som Sunderam Mills Pvt Ltd, (1985) 2 SCC 40.

or not actual payment pursuant to said order is made. The order partakes of the character of a judgment and decree passed by the court.[2163]

[s 73.22] Attorney's Lien

The section does not apply to a solicitor's common law lien for costs. That lien is not affected by the attachment of the decree.[2164] It has been held in Commercial & Industrial Bank Ltd v Mir Zarfaraz Ali Khan's case that the lien of an attorney or of a barrister for fees is not entitled to priority outside the Presidency Towns of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras.[2165]

[s 73.23] Rights Created by this Section not Affected by Insolvency

An order made under this section for rateable distribution is not affected by the insolvency of the judgment-debtor subsequent to the making of the order. But the order will be confined in its operation to the assets of the judgment-debtor realised up to the date of the order of adjudication; assets realised after the date of the order of adjudication will vest in the official assignee.[2166] Two proceedings were going on, one before the executing court at the instance of a creditor and the other, before the insolvency court at the instance of some other creditors. The executing court passed an order for rateable distribution of the amounts realised in an auction-sale of some immovable properties of the judgment-debtor. It was held that the order of the executing court would not, in any way affect the proceedings of the insolvency court after the admission of the insolvency petition. The question of applicability of the principle of res judicata did not arise in the present state of facts, if the application of the judgment-debtor or by the auction receivers (filed before the execution court) is rejected and if they do not file any appeal or suit or proceeding against the order. These applications would not affect the jurisdiction and the powers of the insolvency court.[2167]

A Division Bench of the Kerala High Court has held that where the creditor could be proceeded against under the Insolvency Act, a suit for administration is not maintainable before the civil court. The Insolvency Act provides for Administration of the property of the debtor. The court may appoint an interim receiver and/or a receiver. The Insolvency Act also provides for distribution of the property of the insolvent. The scheme of the Insolvency Act shows that it is a complete Code in itself. The remedy of the creditor is to initiate proceedings under the Insolvency Act and not through administration suit before the civil court.[2168]

[s 73.24] Subsequent Occupier not Liable for Previous Electricity Dues

Where the petitioner was bona fide purchaser of cold storage in an auction sale under section 29 of State Financial Corporation Act, and the electric supply to the cold storage was disconnected on account of arrears outstanding against previous owner, the petitioner was held not liable for the dues outstanding against previous owner.[2169]

2163. Kotak & Co. v State of Uttar Pradesh, (1987) 1 SCC 445.
2164. Tyabji, Dayabhai And Co v Jetha Devji & Co, (1927) 29 Bom LR 1196; Tyabji v Jetha, AIR 1927 Bom 542 : (1927) 51 Bom 855.
2165. Commercial & Industrial Bank Ltd v Mir Zarfaraz Ali Khan, AIR 1956 Hyd 65 : (1956) ILR Hyd 79.
2166. WE Howatson v WF Durrant, (1900) 27 Cal 351; Official Receiver of Tanjore v Venkatamma, AIR 1922 Mad 31 : (1922) 42 Mad LJ 361.
2167. Dharamveer Agarwal v Kailash Chand, AIR 1989 Raj 17.
2168. K Vijayarajan v D.K. Kalavathy, AIR 2007 Ker 25 : 2006 (2) Ker LJ 670 (DB).
2169. Maa Mamta Cold Storage Pvt Ltd v B.S.E., AIR 2002 Pat 54 (DB).

[s 73.25] Appeal

Prior to the Amendment Act, 1976, the position as regards orders passed under this section was as follows:

An order made under this section is not appealable unless all the conditions enumerated in section 47 are present.[2170] However, an order which decides a matter covered by section 47(1) may, although it be passed ostensibly under this section, be the subject of appeal.[2171] One of those conditions is that the question decided by the court should be one which arose between the parties to the suit, that is, between the judgment-debtor on the one hand and the decree-holder on the other.[2172] Hence, an order made under this section determining a question between two rival decree-holders, in which the judgment-debtor had no interest does not fall within section 47 and no second appeal lies from such order.[2173] But if the question determined by the order arose not only between rival decree-holders, but also between the judgment-debtor on the one hand and the decree-holder on the other, the order would be within section 47, and would, therefore, be appealable.[2174] An order allowing or refusing a prayer for rateable distribution is a judgment within clause 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable.[2175] An order under section 73 deciding a question between rival decree-holders in which the judgment-debtor has no interest, does not fall under section 47 and is not appealable.[2176]

But in view of the deletion of the words "within section 47" in section 2(2) by the Amendment Act, 1976 and the order under this section being one enumerated in O XLIII, an order under this section, even if it satisfies all the conditions of section 47, is not appealable.

[s 73.26] Revision

As to revision, see the under mentioned cases.[2177]

A revision is not possible, provided the conditions laid down in the amended section 115 are satisfied.

2170. Musammat v Musammat, AIR 1921 Pat 401 : (1920) 5 Pat LJ 415.
2171. Shib Das v Bulakhi Mal & Sons, AIR 1927 Lah 100; followed in Bishan Das v Tulsi Shal, (1935) 16 Lah 990 : AIR 1935 Lah 302.
2172. Jagadish v Kripa Nath, (1909) 36 Cal 130; Dwarkadas v Jabab, AIR 1924 Cal 801 : (1924) 51 Cal 761.
2173. Balmer Lawrie & Co v Jadunath Banerjee, (1914) 42 Cal 1; Varada v Venkataratnam, AIR 1922 Mad 99 : (1922) 42 Mad LJ 473; Navaj Bhavdu Patil v Totaram Govind Patil, AIR 1931 Bom 252 : (1931) 33 Bom LR 503; Shidappa Laxmanna v Gurusangaya Akhandaya, AIR 1931 Bom 350 : (1931) 55 Bom 473; Than Mal v The Income Tax Officer, AIR 1958 All 636.
2174. Sorabji Coovarji v Kala Raghunath, (1911) 13 Bom LR 1193 : 12 Ind Cas 911; Sorabji v Kala, (1912) 36 Bom 156; Rajah of Karvetnagar v Venkata Reddi, (1916) 39 Mad 570; Lalchand Radhakisan v Ramdayal Ramnarayan, AIR 1939 Bom 112 : (1939) Bom 133.
2175. Satyendra Nath Bose v Bibhuti Bhusan Bhar, AIR 1963 Cal 104.
2176. Lakshminarayanan Devesthanmam v Khande Rao, supra.
2177. Dwarkadas Marwari v Jadab Chandra Ganguli, AIR 1924 Cal 801: (1924) 51 Cal 761, allowed; Hari v Birendra, AIR 1921 Cal 749 : (1922) 35 Cal LJ 327 (refused); Karpaga v Vania, AIR 1925 Mad 587 : (1925) 48 Mad LJ 459 (allowed); Musammat v Musammat, AIR 1921 Pat 401 : (1920) 5 Pat LJ 415 (refused); SAS Chettyar v SARA Firm, AIR 1928 Rang 163 : (1928) 6 Rang 582 (allowed); Har Narain v Bird & Co, AIR 1936 Oudh 132; Birendra Bikram Singh v T Basdeo, AIR 1936 Oudh 185; Lyallpur Bank Ltd v Ramji, AIR 1940 Oudh 237; Lalchand Radhakisan v Ramdayal Ramnarayan, AIR 1939 Bom 112.

Resistance to Execution

[S 74] Resistance to execution.—Where the Court is satisfied that the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property or that the purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree has been resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property by the judgment-debtor or some person on his behalf and that such resistance or obstruction was without any just cause, the Court may, at the instance of the decree-holder or purchaser, order the judgment-debtor or such other person to be detained in the civil prison for a term which may extend to thirty days and may further direct that the decree-holder or purchaser be put into possession of the property.

[s 74.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Omit the words "that the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property or" after the words "Court is satisfied"; and the word "immovable" before "property"; insert the words "referred to in Section 28 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1822"; after the word "property" and before the words "sold in execution" omit the words "decree-holder or" between the words "at the instance of the" and "purchaser"; omit the words "decree-holder or" between the words "direct that the" and "purchaser". Vide Cal Gaz Pt I, dated 20 April 1967.

PART III

INCIDENTAL PROCEEDINGS

Commissions

[S 75] Power of Court to issue Commissions.—Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the Court may issue a commission—

(a) to examine any person;

(b) to make a local investigation;

(c) to examine or adjust accounts; or

(d) to make a partition;

[1][(e) to hold a scientific, technical, or expert investigation;

(f) to conduct sale of property which is subject to speedy and natural decay and which is in the custody of the court pending the determination of the suit;

(g) to perform any ministerial act.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 75.1] Scope 971
[s 75.2] Appointment of Second Commissioner 972
[s 75.3] Appointment of Commissioner—Revision 972

[s 75.1] Scope

The general powers of courts in regard to commissions have been summarised in this section. The detailed provisions are set forth in O XXVI. This section having set out the purposes for which a commission can be issued, there is no question of the court invoking its inherent jurisdiction to issue a commission for any other purpose.[2] In a title suit for specific performance of contract, the plaintiff can adduce evidence relating to claim of delivery of possession of suit land and damages before trial court, deputation of Survey Knowing Commissioner would amount to collecting evidence on behalf of plaintiff, therefore, the order rejecting application of the plaintiff for deputing said Commissioner was found proper.[3] The Supreme Court issued a Commission for scientific investigation while observing that if scientific investigation of document facilitates ascertaining of truth, naturally it has to be order in the interest of justice.[4]

1. Inserted by the CPC (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), section 26 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
2. Jaiswal Coal Co v Fatehganj Co-op Marketing Society Ltd, AIR 1975 Cal 303.
3. Madhu Sudan Pradhan v Santosh Kumar Das, AIR 2004 Ori 86.
4. Rama Avatar Soni v Laxmidhar Das, AIR 2018 SC 5597 : (2019) 11 SCC 415 : (2019) 1 Supreme 738.

[s 75.2] Appointment of Second Commissioner

Where the report of the commissioner for local investigation substantially complied with the writ of commission issued to him, court should not order an appointment of a new commissioner, when there was no possibility that the new commissioner could do anything more, and there was nothing on record to show what the difficulty felt was.[5]

[s 75.3] Appointment of Commissioner — Revision

Where the order under Revision only directs the commissioner to propose a scheme for partition of the properties covered by the preliminary decree, no prejudice can be said to have been caused to the revision petitioner and the Andhra Pradesh High Court found no grounds to interfere with the order impugned.[6]

[S 76] Commission to another Court.—(1) A commission for the examination of any person may be issued to any Court (not being a High Court) situate in a [State] other than the [State] in which the Court of issue is situate and having jurisdiction in the place in which the person to be examined resides.

(2) Every Court receiving a commission for the examination of any person under sub-section (1) shall examine him or cause him to be examined pursuant thereto, and the commission, when it has been duly executed, shall be returned together with the evidence taken under it to the Court from which it was issued, unless the order for issuing the commission has otherwise directed, in which case the commission shall be returned in terms of such order.

See O XXVI rule 4.

[S 77] Letter of request.—In lieu of issuing a commission the Court may issue a letter of request to examine a witness residing at any place not within [7][India].

[s 77.1] Scope

The section empowers the court to issue a letter of request to any person other than the court to examine witnesses residing at any place outside India. This power is not subject to any reciprocal agreement between governments. The power is discretionary and not to be interfered with an appeal on the mere ground that witnesses examined thus, on commission. cannot be effectively cross-examined or that their examination would entail heavy costs. These are matters which would be taken into account by the court while exercising its discretion.[8]

The letter of request must, however, be issued in accordance with the procedure laid down therefor.[9] The provisions of O XVI, especially O XVI, rule 19 have no application to witnesses residing out of India. They are applicable only to witnesses residing within India. Section 77 and O XXVI, rule 5 come into play where the witnesses are residing out of India. The court may issue a commission or letter of request for the examination of such witness. Therefore. the

---

5. Budhia Dhöbia v Nakhelal Mahto, AIR 1991 NOC 64 (Cal).
6. R Ramakrishna Reddy v M Kamala Devi, AIR 2004 AP 484.
7. Substituted by CPC (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951 for "the States".
8. Filmistan Pvt Ltd v Bhagwandas, AIR 1971 SC 61 : (1970) 3 SCC 258.
9. JG Insurance Co v Dhandhiya Jewellers, AIR 1973 Raj 156.

question always is that of the exercise of discretion by the court.[10] An Indian court may issue a letter of request to a person other than a court at Kabul (Afghanistan) even if the local law of Afghanistan prohibits the examination of witnesses by consular authorities.[11]

[12][[S 78] Commissions issued by foreign courts.—Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the provisions as to the execution and return of commissions for the examination of witnesses shall apply to commissions issued by or at the instance of—

(a) Courts situate in any part of India to which the provisions of this Code do not extend; or

(b) Courts established or continued by authority of the Central Government outside India; or

(c) Courts of any State or country outside India.]

Neither the intervener nor the witnesses to whom the commission is sought to be issued in pursuance to the letter of request issued by the foreign court are even proper parties much less necessary parties to the proceedings and so the intervener has no right to object to the execution of the commission.[13]

[s 78.1] Alterations in the Section

This section has been substituted for the old section by section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951 (2 of 1951).

The words "subject to—prescribed" and "or at the instances of" are to avoid any possible conflict between the section and rules 19 to 22 of O XXVI.

---

10. IC Corp v Daewoo Corp, AIR 1990 Bom 152.
11. Filmistan Pvt Ltd v Bhagwandas, AIR 1971 SC 61 : (1970) 3 SCC 258.
12. Substituted by Act 2 of 1951, section 11.
13. Wooster Products Inc v Magna Tek Inc, AIR 1989 Del 6, 9.

PART IV

SUITS IN PARTICULAR CASES

Suits by or against the Government or public officers in their official capacity

[1][[S 79] Suits by or against Government.—In a suit by or against the Government, the authority to be named as plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be, shall be—

(a) in the case of a suit by or against the Central Government, the Union of India, and

(b) in the case of a suit by or against a State Government, the State.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 79.1]	Changes in the Section	975	[s 79.4]	Act of State	977
[s 79.2]	Scope of the Section	975	[s 79.5]	Jurisdiction	978
[s 79.3]	Disputes Between Union and State Governments and Their Departments—Parties to Abide by Decision of the Committee	976	[s 79.6]	Suits Against the Railway	978
			[s 79.7]	Part "C" State	979
			[s 79.8]	Mis-description in Naming the Authority	979

[s 79.1] Changes in the Section

The present section is the result of the Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order, 1948, as further adapted by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

As to procedure in suits by or against the government or public officers in their official capacity, see O XXVII.

[s 79.2] Scope of the Section

This section does not enlarge or in any way affect the extent of the claims or liabilities, enforceable by or against the government which formerly depended on the provisions of the Government of India Act (section 65 of the Government of India Act, 1858, section 32 of the Government of India Act, 1915 and then section 176(1) of the Government of India Act, 1935) and in the 21st century, depends on Article 300 of the Constitution of India. This section gives no cause of action but only declares the mode of procedure when a cause of action has arisen.[2] Suit was filed against Government of Assam. Chief Secretary to the Government of Assam was impleaded as defendant in his capacity as representative of the State of Assam. It was held that the requirements of section 79 and O XXVII, rule 5A were fulfilled. Section 79 being a procedural section, substantial compliance with the requirements thereof is sufficient.[3]

1. Substituted by AO 1948 for section 79.
2. Jehangir v Secretary of State, (1903) 27 Bom 189.
3. Ganesh Chandra Das v Chief Secretary to the State of Assam, AIR 1990 Gau 74; Sri Laxmi Paper Depot v SDM, Bangaun, AIR 1998 Cal 195.

The Secretary of State or any other authority as provided for and in the 21st century, either the Union of India or a state, as the case may be, were held not to be a proper party to a suit under section 42 of the Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877) filed by an owner of land against a member of the public who claims use of such land as a public road and thereby endangers the title of the owner.[4] In case of a dispute as to tenure holder ship under section 176 of the Uttar Pradesh Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950, between two rival parties, the state is not a necessary party.[5] But the state is a necessary party in a suit to set aside the sale ordered for realisation of government dues.[6]

[s 79.3] Disputes Between Union and State Governments and Their Departments—Parties to Abide by Decision of the Committee

Under the scheme of the Constitution of India, Article 131 confers original jurisdiction on the Supreme Court in regard to a dispute between two states of the Union of India or between one or more states and the Union of India. It was not contemplated by the framers of the Constitution of India or the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (Code of Civil Procedure) that two departments of a state or the Union of India will fight a litigation in a court of law. It is neither appropriate nor permissible for two departments of a state or the Union of India to fight litigation in a court of law. Indeed, such a course cannot but be detrimental to the public interest as it also entails avoidable wastage of public money and time. Various departments of the government are its limbs and, therefore, they must act in co-ordination and not in confrontation. Filing of a writ petition by one department against the other by invoking the extraordinary jurisdiction of the high court is not only against the propriety and polity, as it smacks of indiscipline, but is also contrary to the basic concept of law which requires that for suing or being sued, there must be either a natural or a juristic person. The states/Union of India must evolve a mechanism to set at rest all inter-departmental controversies at the level of the government and such matters should not be carried to a court of law for resolution of the controversy. In the case of disputes between public sector undertakings and Union of India, in Oil and Natural Gas Commission v Collector of Central Excise,[7] the Supreme Court called upon the Cabinet Secretary to handle such matters. Further in Oil and Natural Gas Commission v Collector of Central Excise,[8] the Supreme Court directed the Central Government to set up a committee consisting of representatives from the Ministry of Industry, the Bureau of Public Enterprises and the Ministry of Law, to monitor dispute between ministry, the Government of India and public sector undertakings in between themselves, to ensure that no litigation comes to court or to a tribunal without the matter having been first examined by the committee and its clearance for litigation. The government may include a representative of the ministry concerned in specific cases and one from the Ministry of Finance, in the committee. Senior officers only should be nominated so that the committee would function with status, control and discipline.[9]

Undoubtedly, the right to enforce a right in a court of law cannot be effaced. However, it must be remembered that courts are overburdened with a large number of cases. The majority

---

4. Chuni Lall v Ram Kishen, (1888) 15 Cal 460.
5. Ram Dass v Board of Revenue, Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1967 All 481.
6. Kishoresingh v Tej Singh, AIR 1967 MP 120.
7. Oil and Natural Gas Commission v Collector of Central Excise, (1992) Supp 2 SCC 432.
8. Oil and Natural Gas Commission v Collector of Central Excise, (1995) Supp 4 SCC 541.
9. Chief Conservator of Forests, Govt of Andhra Pradesh v Collector, AIR 2003 SC 1805 : AIR 2003 SCW 1251 : (2003) 3 SCC 472 : 2003 2 SCR 180 : JT 2003 (5) SC 210.

of such cases pertain to government departments and/or public sector undertakings. As is stated in Chief Conservator of Forests' case,[10] it was not contemplated by the framers of the Constitution of India or Code of Civil Procedure that two departments of a state or Union of India and/or a department of the government and a public sector undertaking fight a litigation in a court of law. Such a course is detrimental to public interest as it entails avoidable wastage of public money and time. These are all limbs of the government and must act in co-ordination and not confrontation. The mechanism set up by the Supreme Court is not only to conciliate between the government departments but for purposes of ensuring that frivolous disputes do not come before courts without clearance from the High Powered Committee. If it can, the High Powered Committee will resolve the dispute. If the dispute is not resolved, the Committee would undoubtedly give clearance. However, there could also be frivolous litigation proposed by a department of the government or a public sector undertaking. This could be prevented by the High Powered Committee. In such cases, there is no question of resolving the dispute. The Committee only has to refuse permission to litigate. No right of the department/public sector undertaking is affected in such a case. The litigation being of a frivolous nature must not be brought to court. To be remembered that in almost all cases, one or the other party will not be happy with the decision of the High Powered Committee. The dissatisfied party will always claim that its rights are affected, when in fact, no right is affected. The Committee is constituted of highly placed officers of the government, who do not have an interest in the dispute; it is thus expected that their decision will be fair and honest. Even if the department/public sector undertaking finds the decision unpalatable, discipline requires that they abide by it. Otherwise, the whole purpose of this exercise will be lost and every party against whom the decision is given will claim that they have been wronged and that their rights are affected. This should not be allowed to be done.[11]

[s 79.4] Act of State

It was held in Sarjerao v Government of the Province of Bombay[12] that an act done by a state fell under three heads, namely:

(i) acts which are capable of being done by a private individual;

(ii) acts which only the supreme government can perform such as making treaties and declaring war; and

(iii) matters and questions which are solely in the hands of the government, and that the phrase "Act of State" would comprise of the last two heads but not the first.

The meaning of the phrase "Act of State" has as already stated,[13] undergone a change in modern times and has come to denote:

(i) an act done by the state in the exercise of its sovereign status in relation to another state or subjects of another state; and

(ii) governmental acts done in exercise of its executive power against its own subjects or foreigners resident within its territories.

---

10. Chief Conservator of Forests, Govt of Andhra Pradesh v Collector, AIR 2003 SC 1805 : AIR 2003 SCW 1251 : (2003) 3 SCC 472 : 2003 2 SCR 180 : JT 2003 (5) SC 210.
11. Mahanagar Telephone Nigam Ltd v Chairman, Central Board, Direct Taxes, AIR 2004 SC 2434 : AIR 2004 SCW 2934.
12. Sarjerao v Government of the Province of Bombay, AIR 1943 Bom 427 : (1943) ILR Bom 534 : 45 Bom LR 810.
13. Note on Act of State under section 9.

The former are not justifiable but the latter are, within the limits recognised by the municipal law. This, and the following section, presupposes that the government is under a substantive liability capable of enforcement in the civil courts and lays down the procedure to be adopted with respect to those proceedings. The secretary of state under the old sections could only have been sued in respect of those matters for which the East India Company could have been sued, viz, matters for which private individuals or trading corporations could have been sued, or in regard to those matters for which there is express statutory provision. No suit could lie against the East India Company in respect of acts of state or acts of sovereignty, and, therefore, no suit in respect of such acts would have been competent.[14] The same rule will apply to suits against the Union of India or a State.[15] A Municipal Council being a body corporate can be sued in its corporate name. Wrong description cannot defeat the suit if the parties understand who are the real parties.[16]

The plaint reveals that the suit in respect of property is claimed by the state as its property and the relief sought is also on behalf of the state. However, the headmistress in her name has filed the suit. Further, court found that the headmistress of the school is not an authorised person by the state government and thus, the suit is rejected.[17]

[s 79.5] Jurisdiction

A suit against the government can only be brought in the court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the cause of action arises. The words "dwell", or "reside", or "carry on business", or "personally work for gain", which occur in sections 16, 19 and 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (CPC) and clause 12 of the Letters Patent do not apply to the government.[18] But it has been held by the Supreme Court[19] that the government can, in relation to the administration of the railways, be said to carry on business and that it can therefore be sued where the head office of the railway is located.[20]

[s 79.6] Suits Against the Railway

It has been held that a suit to enforce a claim against the railway administration can properly be laid against the government or the state without impleading the railway[21] and conversely,

---

14. Secretary of State Rustom Khan, AIR 1941 PC 64 : 68 IA 109; P&O SN Co v Secretary of State, (1861) 5 Bom HC App 1, approved in 40 IA 48, p 51; Jehangir v Secretary of State, (1903) 27 Bom 189 (damages for defamation); Shivabhajan v Secretary of State, (1904) 28 Bom 314; Ross v Secretary of State, (1916) 39 Mad 781; McInerny v Secretary of State, (1911) 38 Cal 797; Secretary of State v Cockcraft, (1916) 39 Mad 351 (damages of injury of person); Dhakjee v East India Co, (1843) 2 Morley's Digest 307; Secretary of State v Hari, (1882) 5 Mad 473; Vijaya v Secretary of State, (1884) 7 Mad 466; Muhammad v Secretary of State, AIR 1938 All 158 : (1938) All 114.
15. Sew Kishendas v Dominion of India, AIR 1957 Cal 617.
16. Oscar v Barbil Municipality, AIR 1990 Ori 207.
17. Ganesh Choudhary v The Middle School, 2019 (3) Pat LJR 544.
18. Dominion of India v RVK Nath & Co, AIR 1950 Cal 207; Doya Narain v Secretary of State, (1887) 14 Cal 256; Rodricks v Secretary of State, (1913) 40 Cal 308; Govindarajulu v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 Mad 689 : (1927) 50 Mad 449; Anant Rai v Governor General in Council, AIR 1955 Cal 331; Azizuddin and Co v UOI, AIR 1955 Mad 345 : (1955) 1 Mad LJ 316.
19. UOI v Ladulal Jain, AIR 1963 SC 1681 : (1964) SCJ 101.
20. See notes to section 20.
21. Chandra Mohan v UOI, AIR 1953 Assam 193 : (1953) 5 Assam 326; Natwarlal Govardhan Das v UOI, AIR 1957 MP 157 : (1957) Jab LJ 331; State of Kerala v GHS Rly Madras, AIR 1965 Ker 277 : (1965) 2 Ker 112 : (1965) 1 Ker LR 449.

a suit for recovery of freight for carrying goods on railways could be instituted by the Union of India.[22]

[s 79.7] Part "C" State

It has been held by the Supreme Court that a suit on a contract entered into by the Government of Vindhya Pradesh which was a Part "C" state could be filed against the State of Vindhya Pradesh and that it need not be against the Union of India.[23]

[s 79.8] Mis-description in Naming the Authority

See Subedar Samundar v Secretary of State.[24]

[S 80] Notice.—[25][(1)] [26][Save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2), no suit [shall be instituted][27] against the Government, (including the Government of the State of Jammu and Kashmir)] or against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity, until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been [28][delivered to, or left at the office of—

(a) in the case of a suit against the Central Government, [29][except where it relates to a railway], a Secretary to that Government;

[30][[31][(b)] in the case of a suit against the Central Government where it relates to a railway, the General Manager of the railway;]

[32][(bb) in the case of a suit against the Government of the State of Jammu and Kashmir, the Chief Secretary to that Government or any other officer authorised by that Government in this behalf;]

(c) in the case of a suit against [33][any other State Government], a Secretary to that Government or the Collector of the district; [34][]

(d) [35][]

and, in the case of a public officer, delivered to him or left at his office, stating the cause of action, the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims; and the plaint shall contain a statement that such notice has been so delivered or left.

---

22. UOI v RC Jall, AIR 1958 MP 425 : (1958) Jab LR 611.
23. State of Vindhya Pradesh v Moula Bux, AIR 1962 SC 145 : (1962) 2 SCR 794 : (1961) 2 SCJ 549; on appeal from Moula Bux v State of Vindhya Pradesh, AIR 1956 VP 1.
24. Subedar Samundar v Secretary of State, AIR 1939 Lah 298.
25. Section 80 re-numbered as sub-section (1) thereof by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), section 27 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
26. Substituted by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), section 27, for "No suit shall be instituted" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
27. Substituted by Act 26 of 1963, section 3 (w.e.f. 5-6-1964).
28. Substituted by AO 1937.
29. Inserted by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1948 (6 of 1948), section 2.
30. Inserted as clause (aa) by Act 6 of 1948, section 2.
31. Clause (aa) re-lettered as clause (b) and former clause (b) omitted by IAO 1948.
32. Inserted by Act 26 of 1963, section 3 (w.e.f. 5-6-1964).
33. Substituted for "a State Government" by ibid.
34. The word "and" omitted by IAO 1948.
35. Clause (d) omitted by IAO 1948.

[36][(2) A suit to obtain an urgent or immediate relief against the Government (including the Government of the State of Jammu and Kashmir) or any public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity, may be instituted, with the leave of the Court, without serving any notice as required by sub-section (1); but the Court shall not grant relief in the suit, whether interim or otherwise, except after giving to the Government or public officer, as the case may be, a reasonable opportunity of showing cause in respect of the relief prayed for in the suit:

Provided that the Court shall, if it is satisfied, after hearing the parties, that no urgent or immediate relief need be granted in the suit, retain the plaint for presentation to it after complying with the requirements of sub-section (1).

(3) No suit instituted against the Government or against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity shall be dismissed merely reason of any error or defect in the notice referred to in sub-section (1), if in such notice—

(a) the name, description and the residence of the plaintiff had been so given as to enable the appropriate authority or the public officer to identify the person serving the notice and such notice had been delivered or left at the office of the appropriate authority specified in sub-section (1), and

(b) the cause of action and the relief claimed by the plaintiff had been substantially indicated.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 80.1]	State Amendment	981
[s 80.2]	Changes in the Section	981
[s 80.3]	Application of the Section	981
[s 80.4]	Provisions of This Section Imperative	983
[s 80.5]	Object of Notice	983
[s 80.6]	Notice: When to Be Given	984
[s 80.7]	Notice Given Prior to the Coming into Force of Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937	984
[s 80.8]	Sufficiency of Notice	985
[s 80.9]	Substantial Compliance	987
[s 80.10]	Relief Claimed	989
[s 80.11]	Reply to Notice—Duty of Government	990
[s 80.12]	Rejection of Plaint	990
[s 80.13]	Government Formally Joined	991
[s 80.14]	Waiver of Notice	991
[s 80.15]	Notice to Government	993
[s 80.16]	Notice to Public Officer: Act Purporting to Be Done in Official Capacity	994
[s 80.17]	Suits on Contracts and Torts	997
[s 80.18]	Declaratory Suits	998
[s 80.19]	Suits for Injunction	998
[s 80.20]	Withdrawal of Suit	999
[s 80.21]	By What Name Public Officer to Be Sued	999
[s 80.22]	Death of Complainant After Notice but Before Suit	999
[s 80.23]	Amendment of Plaint	1000
[s 80.24]	Notice to Collector	1001
[s 80.25]	Notice to Cantonment Committee	1001
[s 80.26]	Notice to Coal Mines Provident Fund Commissioner	1001
[s 80.27]	Municipal Council and Village Panchayat: Notice Not Necessary	1001
[s 80.28]	Notice to Official Assignee	1001
[s 80.29]	Notice to Receiver	1002
[s 80.30]	Notice to Official Liquidator	1002
[s 80.31]	Notice to Official Trustee	1003
[s 80.32]	Notice to Administrator-General	1003
[s 80.33]	Notice to Common Manager Appointed Under Section 95 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 8 of 1885	1003
[s 80.34]	Limitation	1003
[s 80.35]	Place of Suing	1003
[s 80.36]	Notice Not Part of the Cause of Action	1004

36. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

[s 80.37] Suit Under O XXI, Rule 63..... 1004
[s 80.38] Constitutionality of the Section..... 1004
[s 80.39] Railways..... 1004
[s 80.40] Sub-section (2) 1005
[s 80.40.1] Two options 1006
[s 80.40.2] "Urgent or Immediate Relief" 1007
[s 80.40.3] Service of Notice 1008
[s 80.40.4] Specific Order 1009
[s 80.40.5] Implied Leave..... 1010
[s 80.41] Sub-section (3) 1010

[s 80.1] State Amendment

Madhya Pradesh.—The following amendment were made by Madhya Pradesh Act 29 of 1984, section 3, dated 14 August 1984.

In its application to the State of Madhya Pradesh,

(a) In section 80(1), for the words, brackets and figures "sub-section (2)" substitute "sub-section (2) or sub-section (4)".

(b) After sub-section (3) insert as under—

"(4) Where in a suit or proceeding referred to in rule 3B of Order 1, the State is joined as a defendant or non-applicant or where the Court orders joinder of the State as defendant or non-applicant in exercise of the powers under sub-rule (2) of Rule 10 of Order 1 such suit or proceeding shall not be dismissed by reason of omission of the plaintiff or applicant to issue notice under sub-section (1)".

[s 80.2] Changes in the Section

The original words will be seen from the text of the old section, before its adaptation in 1937 by the Government of India Adaptation of Indian Laws Order, 1937 which ran thus:

> 80. No suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council, or against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity, until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council, delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District, and, in the case of a public officer, delivered to him or left at his office, stating the cause of action, the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims; and the plaint shall contain a statement that such notice has been so delivered or left.

By the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1963 (26 of 1963).:

(1) the words 'including the Government of the State of Jammu and Kashmir';

(2) Clause (bb) was inserted; and

(3) in clause (c) the words "any other" were substituted for "A".

The Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976) has renumbered the original section as sub-section (1). It has also inserted two new sub-sections (2) and (3) and in consequence has added the words "save as otherwise provided in sub-section (2)" in sub-section (1). For the effect of these changes, see the note under the new "sub-sections (2) and (3)". A recommendation for the repeal of section 80 has been made more than once by the Law Commission of India.[37]

[s 80.3] Application of the Section

The applicability of this section must be determined on the law as it stood on the date of the suit. If the CPC had no application on that date, its coming into force during the pendency

37. Law Commission of India, 14th Report, vol 1, p 475; 27th Report pp 21–22, 54.

of the action cannot affect its maintainability.[38] This section was not incorporated in the rules governing suits filed in the federal court and so, a suit instituted in that court under section 204 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is not bad for want of notice.[39] On the same principle, no notice is necessary if the defendant's interests devolve on government during the suit, as for example when a private railway company is taken over by the government; for then, the suit had already been instituted.[40] Likewise, a notice which complies with the requirements of the section as it stood on the date of the cause of action is not rendered invalid by reason of the subsequent amendment of the section.[41] A notice claiming damages against the Bengal Assam Railway filed before the partition of India in 1947 and decreed thereafter was held to be sufficient to sustain a second suit against the Union of India on the same cause of action.[42] But if the suit was instituted in a court which had no jurisdiction to try a suit against government and the devolution occurs after the plaint was returned for presentation to the proper court, notice is necessary.[43]

Giving a notice under this section does not preclude the party from taking proceedings, other than suit, if they are permissible under the law. Thus, an application under Article 226, complaining of infringement of right of the petitioner to certain properties as contravening Article 19 of the Constitution of India, is not barred on the ground that he had given a notice of suit with reference to the claim.[44] A statutory body—whether it be the Electricity Board or the Food Corporation or Union Development Corporation or any other category—may be an instrumentality of the state within the meaning of Article 12 of the Constitution of India. Nevertheless, it would not answer the description of "government" as it is understood in law and as it is understood in the context of section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure.[45] Section 80 does not apply to election petitions under the Bengal Panchayat Act, 1957.[46] A notice under section 80 was sent by the plaintiff to the Bangalore Water Supply and Sewerage Board instead of notice under section 126 of the Bangalore Water Supply and Sewerage Act, 1964, and there was no reply at all from the defendant for the notice. It was held that the notice under section 80 must be deemed to have been issued in terms of section 126 of the Bangalore Water Supply and Sewerage Act, 1964, when all the details with regard to the claim, the amount due and the facts required to be incorporated in the suit were clearly given in the notice. And so, the suit for recovery of amount filed by the plaintiff against the Board after more than two months from the date when such notice was received by the defendant, was not liable to be dismissed on ground of absence of notice under section 126 of the Act.[47]

---

38. Manganiram v Government of India, AIR 1953 Hyd 139 : (1952) ILR Hyd 983; RL Singh v AA Singh, AIR 1958 Mani 7.
39. State of Seraikalla v UOI, AIR 1951 SC 253 : (1951) SCR 474 : (1951) SCJ 425.
40. GIP Rly v Mahadev, AIR 1926 All 585 : 24 All LJ 726; Velayudam v Governor General in Council, AIR 1952 Mad 783 : (1952) ILR Mad 446; UOI v Tej Narayan, AIR 1957 MB 108; Khirodimal v Haji Suleman, AIR 1960 MP 136 (where the properties, were after the suit, declared evacuee property); Commissioner of Hindu Religious Endowments v KVN Chatram, AIR 1960 AP 535 (in which the previous Endowment Board had been dissolved, and a new Board constituted under a fresh legislation).
41. UOI v Kedarnath, AIR 1954 Assam 147 : (1953) ILR Assam 305.
42. PC Mahanti v UOI, AIR 1960 Cal 403 : 64 Cal WN 381.
43. Hirachand v GIP Railway, AIR 1928 Bom 421 : ILR 52 Bom 548.
44. Shiv Dutt v State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1953 HP 95.
45. V Padmanathan Nair v Kerala State Electricity Board, AIR 1989 Ker 86; Minakshi Patra v Secy. Irrigation and Power, Court of Orissa, AIR 1999 Ori 137.
46. Anil Pahar v Subhas Mahato, AIR 1985 Cal 169 (DB).
47. Bangalore Water Supply and Sewerage Board v Sugesan & Co Pvt Ltd, AIR 1999 Mad 49 (DB).

[s 80.4] Provisions of This Section Imperative

The section is a matter of civil procedure and cannot be said to be subject to section 65 of the Government of India Act, 1935, or of the corresponding section of the other Government of India Acts or the corresponding article of the Constitution of India.[48] As it stood before its amendment in 1976, it was held to be explicit and mandatory, admitting no implications or exceptions.[49] Its language being imperative, it was held that it debarred absolutely a court from entertaining a suit instituted without compliance of its provisions and had in that case to be rejected under O VII, rule 11(d).[50] The High Court of Bombay has held that the question of compliance of the requirements of sub-section (1) is a matter relating to the court's jurisdiction and therefore the question of waiver of the notice by the government or the public officer cannot arise.[51] The fact that the suit would be barred by limitation if the notice had to be given and two months' period had to lapse is no ground for not giving a notice. In fact, that period is eligible for exclusion while calculating the period of limitation.[52] The rigour of sub-section (1) is sought to be reduced by inserting in the section, sub-section (2) in cases where an urgent or immediate relief is sought to be obtained and leave of the court has been obtained.

This section applies to all suits against the government or a public officer whether the action relates to past or future acts[53] and is not limited to any particular relief which may be claimed in the plaint.[54] When the suit is against the state, it should be in the name of that state and not the Union of India and the notice must be served in the manner mentioned in sub-clause (c).[55] The burden of proving that the requirements of the section have been satisfied is on the plaintiff.[56]

The words "two months" in sub-section (1) do not necessarily mean 60 days. The period has to be calculated month wise.[57]

[s 80.5] Object of Notice

The object of the notice required under the section is to give the government or the public officer concerned, an opportunity to reconsider the legal position and to make amends or settle the claim, if so advised, without litigation.[58] When a statutory notice is issued to public authorities, they must take the notice in all seriousness and they should not sit over it and

---

48. See note "Scope of the Section" under section 79.
49. Bhagchand v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 PC 176 : (1972) 54 IA 338 : 51 Bom 725; Ramabrahma Chabri v Dominion of India, AIR 1958 Cal 183.
50. Government of the Province of Bombay v Pestonji Ardeshir Wadia, AIR 1949 PC 143 : 76 IA 85 : (1949) 53 Cal WN 489; Bachchu v Secretary of State, (1902) 25 All 187; Jagdishchandra v Debendraprasad, AIR 1931 Cal 503 : (1931) 58 Cal 850.
51. Ebrahimbhai v State, AIR 1975 Bom 13 : 76 Bom LR 769 : (1974) Mah LJ 663. But see below under the heading "Waiver of Notice".
52. UOI v Devangere Cotton Mills, AIR 1976 Mad 20.
53. State of Madras v Chittor Venkata Durga Prasada Rao, AIR 1957 AP 675.
54. Mohd Hasham v Hyderabad Municipal Corp, AIR 1958 AP 102 : (1957) 2 Andh WR 20.
55. Madho Prasad v Vindhya Prasad State, AIR 1955 VP 1.
56. Kishan Prasad v UOI, AIR 1960 Cal 264 : 64 Cal WN 272.
57. Lakshmi Narain v State, AIR 1977 Pat 73 : (1976) 55 Pat 151.
58. Raghunath Das v UOI, AIR 1969 SC 674; State of Punjab v Geeta Iron and Brass Works, AIR 1978 SC 1608; Province of Bihar v Kamakshya Narain Singh, AIR 1950 Pat 366; Secretary of State v Perumal, (1901) 24 Mad 279; Shahebzadee v Ferguson, (1881) 7 Cal 499; Munndra v Secretary of State v Perumal, (1901) 24 Mad 279; Shahebzadee v Ferguson, (1881) 7 Cal 499; Manindra v Secretary of State, (1970) 5 Cal LJ 148; Secretary of State v Gulam Rasul, (1916) 40 Bom 392, p 396; Secretary of State v Nagarao, AIR 1938 Nag 415; Bhuban Mohini v Biraj, AIR 1940 Cal 1; Kashi Nath v Nawab Alam, AIR 1935 Bom 229 : (1935) 37 Bom LR 341; Uttar Pradesh Government v Nanhoomal, AIR 1960 All 420 : (1959) 2 All 561.

force the citizen to the vagaries of litigation. They are expected to let the claimant (who has given notice), know, what stand they take, within the statutory period, or, in any case before the plaintiff embarks upon litigation.[59] The whole object of serving a notice under section 80 is to give the government sufficient warning of the case proposed to be instituted, so that government (if it so wishes) can settle the claim without litigation or afford restitution without recourse to court of law.[60] The section has been enacted as a measure of public policy, with the object of ensuring that before a suit is instituted against the government or a public officer, the government or the officer concerned is afforded an opportunity to scrutinise the claim and if it be found a just claim, to take immediate action and thereby avoid unnecessary litigation and save public time and money by settling the claim without driving the person who has issued the notice to restitute the suit involving considerable expenditure and delay.[61] A suit against the government or a public officer, to which the requirement of a public notice under section 80 of the CPC is attracted, cannot be validly instituted until the expiration of the period of two months next after the notice in writing has been delivered to the authority concerned in the manner prescribed for in the section and if filed before the expiry of said period, the suit has to be dismissed as not maintainable. The public purpose underlying the provisions of section 80 is advancement of justice and securing of public goods by avoidance of unnecessary litigation. The language of the section is express, explicit and mandatory and it admits no implication or exception. Therefore, it is the plain duty of the court to give effect to it and considerations of hardship will not be a legitimate ground for not faithfully implementing the mandate of the legislature.[62] The whole object of serving a notice under section 80 is to give the government sufficient warning of the case which is going to be instituted against it and that the government, if it so wished, can settle the claim without litigation or afford restitution without records to a court of law. Though the terms of section 80 have to be strictly complied with, that does not mean that the notice should be scrutinised in a pedantic manner divorced from common sense. The point to be considered is whether the notice gives sufficient information as to the nature of the claim such as would enable the recipient to avert the litigation. If the notice substantially fulfils its work of intimating the parties concerned generally of the nature of the suit intended to be filed, it would be sufficient compliance of this section.[63]

[s 80.6] Notice: When to Be Given

A notice given before the cause of action has arisen is invalid.[64]

[s 80.7] Notice Given Prior to the Coming into Force of Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937

Where for the purpose of instituting a suit against the secretary of state, a notice was served under section 80, prior to the coming into force of Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, but the suit was lodged after the aforesaid order came into force, the suit is saved by virtue of paras 9 and 11 of the Preamble to the aforesaid Order.[65]

---

59. New India Assurance Co Ltd v DDA, AIR 1991 Del 298.
60. Ghanshyam Dass v Dominion of India, (1984) 3 SCC 46.
61. Bihari Choudhary v State of Bihar, AIR 1984 SC 1043 : (1984) 1 SCC 627.
62. Bihari Choudhary v State of Bihar, AIR 1984 SC 1043 : (1984) 1 SCC 627.
63. Ghanshyam Dass v Dominion of India, (1984) 3 SCC 46.
64. Kessoram v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 Cal 74 : (1928) 54 Cal 960; Bhairabendra Narain Bhup v State of Assam, AIR 1953 Assam 162; Braham Dutt v East Punjab Province, AIR 1958 Punj 351 : (1958) Punj 244; Chunilal v State of Madras, AIR 1958 AP 670.
65. Thakur Das v Tulsi Ram, AIR 1940 Lah 455.

[s 80.8] Sufficiency of Notice

In Secretary of State v Perumal,[66] the High Court of Madras took the view that a notice by two out of three plaintiffs was sufficient. Such a view is not correct in view of the subsequent Privy Council decision in Bhagchand v Secretary of State.[67] Later, the same high court changed its former view and held that a notice by one of two plaintiffs was not valid,[68] and this was approved by the Privy Council.[69] The principle deducible from these decisions is that there must be identity between the person who issues the notice and the person who brings the suit. Accordingly, when a person carries on business in a particular name and style but issues notice in his own name, the suit should also be instituted in his name.[70] Where the notice was issued in the name of the concern but the suit was instituted in another name as the proprietor of that concern, the notice was held to be bad.[71] But where notice was issued in the name of the firm before its dissolution and the suit was filed after such dissolution by one of the partners authorised to collect its outstandings, the notice was held to be valid.[72] Where notice was issued in the name of Koshikode Lime Centre but the suit was in the name of Koshikode Lime Centre, by proprietor, PP Abubaker, it was held that though there was difference in the names, there was no possibility of any confusion in the mind of the defendant as regards the identity of the party.[73] But where the notice was issued on behalf of Ramjilal Giriraj Prasad and the suit was filed in the name of Ramjilal, described as the manager of the joint family business and the notice did not clarify that Ramjilal was the proprietor, it was held that the identity of the person suing and the person giving the notice was not established.[74] Notice was issued in the name of the plaintiff's mother in respect of a property. On the basis of that notice, suit could not be filed after her death in the son's name when the son had, during his mother's life-time, assigned all his rights in that property in the name of a third party.[75] A notice in the name of the concern, by which name and style the plaintiff, its sole proprietor, is carrying on business is valid in respect of a suit by the plaintiff described as the sole proprietor of such concern.[76] If there is difference in the names of the person giving the notice and the person who institutes the suit, the fact that no objection is raised by the defendant in the pleadings as to the validity of the notices indicates that the defendant did not consider the person suing as being one different from the person who issued the notice.[77] A joint notice by plaintiffs in two different suits complies with the requirements of the section.[78]

If notice has been sent to the state, it is not further necessary that the concerned agency of the state must also be served with notice.[79] In a Madras case, the plaintiff undertook construction work for the defendant. Defendant cancelled the contract. Subsequently, the plaintiff continued construction work on the basis of revised estimates. Defendant finally terminated the contract.

---

66. Secretary of State v Perumal, (1901) 24 Mad 279.
67. Bhagchand v Secretary of State, 54 IA 338 : 51 Bom 725.
68. Appa Rao v Secretary of State, AIR 1931 Mad 175 : 54 Mad 416 : 59 Mad LJ 923 : 32 LW 810; on appeal, AIR 1935 Mad 389 : 41 LW 59.
69. Vellayan Chettiar v Province of Madras, 74 IA 223 : (1947) 2 Mad LJ 209.
70. SN Dutt v UOI, AIR 1961 SC 1449; Dominion of India v Purshottam Das, AIR 1961 All 176; Vellayan Chettiar v Province of Madras 74 IA 223 : (1947) 2 Mad LJ 209.
71. Naseema Textiles v UOI, AIR 1971 Ker 192 : (1970) Ker LR 463.
72. UOI v Mohd JH Ibrahim, AIR 1971 Ori 221.
73. PP Abubaker v UOI, AIR 1972 Ker 103.
74. Ramjilal v UOI, AIR 1974 Raj 18.
75. BT Pillai v S Iyer, AIR 1974 Mad 282.
76. UOI v Kuthari Trading Co, AIR 1969 Assam & Nag 84 : (1969) ILR Assam 81.
77. Raghunath Das v UOI, AIR 1969 SC 674.
78. Dhondoji Rao v Dominion of India, AIR 1957 Mys 94 : (1954) ILR Mys 465.
79. Gulam Rasool v State of Jammu & Kashmir, (1983) 4 SCC 623.

Plaintiff gave notice to the defendant under section 80 with reference to the earlier termination of the contract, while the suit, as filed, was based on subsequent termination of the contract. Notice was held to be invalid.[80] The notice must enable its recipient to identify the claimant. There should be identity between person issuing the notice and person instituting the suit. Any other view would amount to admitting implications or exceptions to the section which is not permissible under the section as interpreted in Vallayan Chettiar v Government of Province of Madras.[81] From the contents of the notice given to the railway by the plaintiff (for damages for loss of goods carried by railway), it was clear that the railway had been put on notice of the claim on behalf of "Madras Heavy Chemicals", irrespective of whether it was a proprietary or partnership business. What is required is that the circumstances which give rise to the claim be mentioned in the notice. It is really unnecessary that the respondent be also informed about the nature and constitution of the business as such. Judgement contains strong observations as to hyper technical defences by government.[82] Plaintiff, who originally belonged to the Prisons Department was later absorbed in the Labour Department. But still later, he was reverted to the Prisons Department. He challenged the reversion by notice under section 80. The order of reversion was later replaced by another order which was a repetition of the earlier order. It was held that fresh notice was not required.[83]

A single judge of the Allahabad High Court held that the "cause of action" in section 80 means the reason which impels the plaintiff to seek a remedy or, in other words, that which, according to the plaintiff, gives him a right to sue the defendant. In the above case, the plaintiff who was a Rakshak in the Railway Protection Force, had been served with a chargesheet resulting ultimately in his dismissal from service and his departmental appeal against it was also dismissed. He then gave a notice to the General Manager of the Railway, challenging his removal from the Railway Security Force, para 2 of the notice was as under:

> That the plaintiff was removed from service by the order dated 30 August 1968 illegally and without giving reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the principles of article 311 of the Constitution.

It was held that the notice did not give sufficient facts about the cause of action. The court expressed itself as under:

> It was not clear as to whether the plaintiff wanted to say that he was dismissed by an authority who was subordinate to that by which he was appointed. It is also not clear as to whether he was challenging the order of dismissal on the ground that no charge-sheet was served on him or that no enquiry was made against him or that he was not given an opportunity of adducing his evidence, or cross-examining the witnesses produced against him, or making his submission or that he was not at all heard in person, or that no copies of the relevant documents were furnished to him, or that the evidence was taken behind his back. The plaint, no doubt, gives the details of those facts on which the order of dismissal was impugned. The notice was, however, silent on the point. As pointed out earlier, the object of Section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure notice is to enable the Government of India to consider its position and decide for itself as to whether the claim of the plaintiff should be accepted or resisted; and this the Government could do only when it was informed of the nature of the suit proposed to be filed and the facts on which the claim of the plaintiff was founded.[84]

---

80. R Kamalam v State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1980 Mad 86.
81. Ghanshyam Dass v Dominion of India, AIR 1984 SC 1004 : (1984) 3 SCC 46.
82. Jaswant Chand S Mehta v UOI, AIR 1989 NOC 79 (Mad).
83. Pratap Narain Sinha v State of Bihar, AIR 1984 Pat 212.
84. Qamaruddin v UOI, AIR 1982 All 169.

With respect, this seems to be too technical a view of the matter. What the plaintiff has narrated in the notice seems to have been fairly sufficient to give an idea of the proposed suit. The mention of Article 311, made the notice intelligible enough, at least for the department for which it was meant.[85] The notice under section 80 was issued to the railways for non-delivery of consignment. The notice was neither signed by the party nor his advocate; however, the identity of the person who gave notice, particulars of his client, value of consignment undelivered and its intended legal actions clearly spelt out a notice. It was held that notice complied with the requirement of section 80 of the CPC.[86]

In a suit for possession filed by the landlord against government, notice under section 80 of the CPC is necessary. However, notice of termination of tenancy under section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, is no substitute for notice under section 80. Since suit for possession cannot be filed unless the tenancy is validly terminated and since notice under section 80 should contain the cause of action, hence a quit notice under section 16 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, cannot be said to be a composite notice under both the provisions.[87]

The notice should state the names, descriptions and places of residence of all the plaintiffs. In a suit by 63 plaintiffs, notice contained the names, descriptions and places of residence of two of them only. The notice was held to be insufficient.[88] The notice must be such as to enable the addressee to identify the claimant.[89] A notice setting out the business address of a businessman need not give his residential address also.[90]

[s 80.9] Substantial Compliance

There are a large number of decisions laying down that a notice would be sufficient if it substantially fulfils its object in informing the concerned parties of the nature of the suit to be filed.[91] The Supreme Court, accordingly, has held that though the terms of the section have to be strictly complied with, that does not mean that the notice should be scrutinised in a pedantic manner divorced from common sense.[92] Nevertheless, the notice must convey to its recipient sufficient information to enable him to consider the claim.[93] A notice which states that the cause of action and reliefs are set out in the copy of the proposed plaint annexed to

---

85. Qamaruddin v UOI, AIR 1982 All 169.
86. Sha Jetmal v General Manager, Southern Railway, AIR 1995 Kant 219.
87. Ajara Urban Co-op Bank Ltd v State of Maharashtra, 2009 (4) AIR Bom R 75 : 2009 (2) Mah LJ 814.
88. Government of the Province of Bombay v Pestonji Ardeshir Wadia, AIR 1949 PC 143 : 76 IA 85 : (1949) 53 Cal WN 489; Bhola Nath v Secretary of State, (1913) 40 Cal 503; Secretary of State v Hargovandas, AIR 1935 Bom 229 : (1935) 37 Bom LR 341.
89. Bhattacharjee v UOI, AIR 1957 Assam 159.
90. Bhupal v Governor-General in Council, 52 Cal WN 808.
91. Secretary of State v Chimanlal, AIR 1942 Bom 161 : (1942) ILR Bom 357 : 44 BLR 295; Haji Mohamed v Province of Bengal, AIR 1942 Cal 343 : (1942) 1 Cal 211 : (1941) 46 Cal WN 59; Lady Dinbai Dinshaw Petit v Dominion of India, AIR 1951 Bom 732; Jehangir v Secretary of State, (1903) 72 Bom 189; Sankunni Menon v SI Railway, (1951) 1 Mad LJ 463 : 64 LW 323; State of Bombay v Advani, AIR 1963 Bom 13 : (1962) ILR Bom 552.
92. Dhian Singh Shoba Singh v UOI, AIR 1958 SC 274 : (1958) SCR 781 : (1958) SCJ 303 : (1958) SCA 307; UOI v Jeewan Ram, AIR 1958 SC 905; State of Madras v CP Agencies, AIR 1960 SC 1309; Amarnath v UOI, AIR 1963 SC 424 : (1964) 1 SCR 657; State v Ajit Kumar, AIR 1977 Cal 273 : 81 Cal WN 168; Ghanshyam Dass v Dominion of India, (1984) 3 SCC 46.
93. Surjit Singh v UOI, AIR 1965 Cal 191; Braham Dutt v East Punjab, AIR 1958 Punj 351 : (1958) ILR Punj 244; UOI v Sankar Stores, AIR 1974 Ori 85.

it as forming part of it is sufficient.[94] The ingredients of the notice are the name, description, place of residence and the relief which is proposed to he claimed. An incorrect statement of fact inadvertently made in the body of the notice relating to a matter which makes no difference to the real issue does not render the notice invalid.[95] If the notice substantially sets out the nature of the suit and the grounds of complaint, splitting up of the claim in different suits does not render the suits bad only because a joint notice in respect of the claims in the suits subsequently filed was given.[96] The fact that some of the reliefs claimed in the notice were given up in the suit also does not matter,[97] nor the fact that the amount claimed in the suit is less than that claimed in the notice.[98] The omission in the notice of one of the grounds on which relief is sought in the plaint also does not mean non-compliance of the section,[99] nor the fact that the notice mentioned an incorrect number of the railway receipt,[100] nor the fact that in a representative suit against government a plaintiff, who had joined in the notice had not joined the other plaintiffs in applying for permission to file such a representative suit,[101] nor the fact that the notice was signed not by the plaintiff but by some other person but under his authority and on his behalf.[102] The notice does not have to state the section under which it is made so long as the ingredients of section 80(3) of the CPC have been substantially complied with.[103]

A notice addressed and delivered to the secretary to the government is not bad on the ground that it was not addressed to the government.[104] Where a notice which ought to have been addressed to the Secretary, Civil Supplies (Food Department), was addressed to the Secretary to the Commissioner of Civil Supplies and sent by the latter to the former, it was held that the section had been substantially complied with.[105] When a notice addressed to a wrong person is forwarded to the right person, the object of the section is achieved and the notice is valid.[106] A notice claiming damages for loss of goods consigned to a railway for carriage, which was addressed to the Member-in-Charge, Railway Board, and was forwarded by him to the General Manager of the concerned railway was held to be sufficient.[107] In respect of such a claim against the railway administration, the section requires a notice delivered or left at the office of the General Manager of the railway to which it relates. It is not necessary that it should be addressed to the Union of India, though the claim made is against it.[108] There is substantial compliance if the plaint sets out the correct number of a railway receipt, though the notice contains an incorrect number.[109] Mis-description of the addressee may be condoned if,

---

94. Province of Bihar v Kamakshya Narain Singh, AIR 1950 Pat 366; Secretary of State v Dhirendra Nath, AIR 1934 Cal 187.
95. UOI v Panipat Woolen and General Mills Co, AIR 1967 P&H 469; State of Andhra Pradesh v Suryanarayana, AIR 1965 SC 11; BR Sinha v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1969 SC 1256 : (1969) 1 SCC 798; BC Narsimharao v State, AIR 1972 AP 130.
96. Kashi Nath v Nawab Alam, AIR 1934 Pat 346.
97. Sheik Mohamed Zia v United Provinces, AIR 1943 All 345 : (1943) ILR All 845.
98. Braham Dutt v East Punjab Province, AIR 1958 Punj 351 : (1958) Punj 244.
99. B Poornaish v UOI, AIR 1967 AP 338.
100. Firm, Deokishan v UOI, AIR 1966 All 16.
101. State of Andhra Pradesh v Suryanarayana, AIR 1965 SC 11.
102. Sahdul Mian v UOI, AIR 1968 Pat 188.
103. Y Savarimuthu v State of Tamil Nadu, (2019) 13 SCC 142 : 2019 (8) Scale 104 : 2019 (4) All MR 482.
104. State of Bombay v Advani, AIR 1963 Bom 13 : (1962) ILR Bom 552.
105. State of Madras v CP Agencies, AIR 1954 Nag 342; confirmed on appeal in, AIR 1960 SC 1309.
106. Governor-General in Council v Srimathi Bhanwari Devi, AIR 1961 All 14; UOI v Chaman Singh, AIR 1955 Pepsu 51 : (1954) ILR Patiala 563.
107. Governor-General in Council v Sankarappa, AIR 1953 Mad 838.
108. Harbansingh Ajitsingh v UOI, AIR 1973 Bom 363 : (1973) 75 Bom LR 559.
109. Bishwanath v NE Railway, AIR 1978 Pat 223.

in fact, the government or the public officer has not been misled.[110] An averment in the plaint that "notice had been given" instead of "notice has been delivered" does not justify a dismissal of the suit.[111] No fresh notice is necessary if the public officer on whom the notice has already been served is succeeded by another officer though the latter has to be impleaded.[112] On the question of substantial compliance with this section, see the cases noted below.[113]

The words "cause of action" should be construed liberally in favour of the subject. The section does not preclude the plaintiff from putting forward fresh grounds in respect of the claim by reason of the fact that they had not been mentioned in the notice.[114]

If the sued public officer is a receiver appointed by the court, the application for leave to sue the receiver does not dispense with the necessity for notice.[115]

It is permissible to give a combined notice under section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure and section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.[116]

[s 80.10] Relief Claimed

The cause of action to be stated in the notice is the bundle of facts which go to make up the right in respect of which the plaintiff proposes to sue. It may be that before the suit can be brought, that bundle of facts will be added to or subtracted from. A notice will not be invalidated, therefore, if it refers to a possible additional claim, consequent upon the cause of action specified therein and states that if such, additional claim arises, the plaintiff will sue also in respect thereof.[117] A landlord served notice upon the State of Maharashtra on 3 October 1966, terminating the monthly tenancy in its favour as from 31 October 1966. The state contended that the notice under section 80 was not valid as one of the essential ingredients of the cause of action for possession, that is, the termination of tenancy, was not in existence at the date of notice. It was held that the contents of the notice were sufficient to enable the state to realise what the consequences would be if there was no compliance made in terms of the notice. The notice did set out on payment of rent for more than six months and also that if default was made in payment of arrears of rent, a suit for possession would be instituted.[118] Moreover, an alternative and a lesser claim which is not mentioned in the notice cannot derogate from the plaintiff's right to have the suit tried on the issue claimed in the notice.[119] If in the circumstances of a particular case it is open to the court to give relief to the plaintiff against an ordinary defendant on the basis of the pleading of such a defendant without amending the plaint, the mere fact that the defendant is a government or a public officer does not debar the court from granting the relief on the ground that such an alternative relief was

---

110. Ramabrahma Chabri v Dominion of India, AIR 1958 Cal 183.
111. Rekhchand v GG in Council, AIR 1954 All 495.
112. Metro General Traders v Calcutta Corp, AIR 1965 Cal 442.
113. Dominion of India v Eversharp Agency, 50 Bom LR 532; Madhav Prasad v Vindhya Pradesh State, AIR 1955 VP 1; Chunilal v State of Madras, AIR 1958 AP 670; Firm Sundarlal v UOI, AIR 1958 Punj 149 : (1958) ILR Punj 467; Walluram v UOI, AIR 1961 Punj 329; Salig Ram v Dominion of India, AIR 1953 Punj 43.
114. DD Petit v Dominion of India, AIR 1951 Bom 72; State of Madras v CP Agencies, AIR 1954 Nag 342.
115. Jagadischandra v Debendraprasad, AIR 1931 Cal 503 : (1931) 58 Cal 850.
116. Rawat Hardeo Singh v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1981 Raj 280.
117. Chandulal v Province, AIR 1943 Bom 138 : (1943) Bom 188 : 45 Bom LR 497.
118. Rayabai D Kabve v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 Bom 59 : (1972) Mah LJ 706 : (1971) 74 Bom LR 501; State v Rajkumar Jain, AIR 1972 All 444.
119. Chandulal Vadilal v Province of Bombay, AIR 1943 Bom 138 : (1943) Bom 188 : 45 Bom LR 197; Secretary of State v Nagorao, AIR 1938 Nag 145.

not claimed in the notice.[120] Where a notice is served and on a subsequent discovery that a certain plot of land had been omitted from the notice, another notice adding the plot to the subject matter of the dispute is served, a suit filed more than two months after the first notice but within two months from the date of the second notice would not be bad so far as it relates to the plots mentioned in the first notice and relief as to those plots cannot be denied if the evidence justified that relief.[121] Where the railway administration made part payment in full settlement of a claim after service of notice and the plaintiff accepted the same under protest, if a new set of facts arises giving rise to a fresh cause of action, a fresh notice would be necessary in respect of such fresh cause of action.[122] Where there are several prayers in a plaint, the suit is good if the notice embodies only those reliefs which are claimed against the public officer.[123]

By the notice given under section 80, relief proposed to be claimed was for a declaration that the employee's resignation was invalid, on the ground that it was obtained by coercion and undue influence. In the suit, relief claimed was for a declaration that the order of acceptance of resignation was invalid. It was held that the notice was invalid, as relief claimed in the suit and cause of action of such relief were not specified in the notice. It was held that even if the acceptance of the plaintiff's resignation was bad on any such ground, the suit cannot yet succeed for want of a valid notice under section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The reason was that the order cannot be declared to be illegal unless a declaration was claimed to that effect, and a declaration to that effect could not be claimed in the suit unless it was specified in the notice as one of the reliefs proposed to be claimed in the suit, and the ground on which the suit was to be filed or the cause of action of the same were duly specified in the notice.[124]

[s 80.11] Reply to Notice—Duty of Government

These provisions cast an implied duty on all concerned governments and states and statutory authorities to send appropriate reply to such notices. Having regard to the existing state of affairs, directions were given to all concerned governments, central or state or other authorities, whenever any statute requires service of notice as a condition precedent for filing of suit or other proceedings against it, to nominate, within a period of three months, an officer who shall be made responsible to ensure that replies to notices under section 80 or similar provisions are sent within the period stipulated in a particular legislation. The replies shall be sent after due application of mind. Despite such nomination, if the court finds that either the notice has not been replied to or reply is evasive and vague and has been sent without proper application of mind, the court shall ordinarily award heavy cost against the government and direct it to take appropriate action against the concerned officer including recovery of costs from him.[125]

[s 80.12] Rejection of Plaint

Non-compliance with the requisites of this section[126] or an omission of an averment in the plaint that notice required by this section has been served, will merit rejection of the plaint

---

120. State of ASI Kota Ltd, AIR 1971 Raj 128.
121. Secretary of State v District Board, Rangpur, AIR 1939 Cal 758.
122. Kothari Trading and Investment Co Ltd v UOI, AIR 1972 Cal 466.
123. Charu Chandra v Snigdhendu, AIR 1948 Cal 150 : (1947) 52 Cal WN 212.
124. Janaradan Misra v State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1981 All 213.
125. Salem Advocates Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353.
126. RT Officer v NY Motor Service, AIR 1973 Ker 219 : (1973) Ker LJ 608.

under O VII, rule 11.[127] But where the suit is against a public officer and a private individual and no notice is served on the public officer, the plaint is not to be rejected but the suit would be carried on with the name of the public officer struck off.[128] This would also be the position where the suit is against government and a private person.[129]

However, if notice has been served and a statement of service is not averred in the plaint, an amendment of the plaint in that respect should be allowed.[130]

[s 80.13] Government Formally Joined

It has been held that even in a case in which the secretary of state was a pro forma defendant (i.e., no relief had been asked against him), notice was necessary and that if no such notice was given, the name of the secretary of state would be expunged.[131] But such a course cannot be followed where such expunging is not possible without material change in the nature of the suit.[132]

[s 80.14] Waiver of Notice

There can be no dispute to the proposition that a notice under section 80 can be waived. But the question is whether merely because in the amended written statement such a plea is not taken, it amounts to waiver.[133] It is settled proposition of law that the provision under section 80, Code of Civil Procedure is mandatory but the right can be waived by the party for whose benefit it has been provided; and no suit can be instituted without service of notice because such service of notice either under section 80 of the CPC, or under the provisions of the relevant Act, for instance, the Municipality Act, 1872, in some cases, is required statutorily as a condition precedent.[134] It is competent for government to waive notice. The government may also be estopped from objecting to want of notice at a later stage of the trial on the ground that it must be taken to have been waived.[135] The right under section 80 may be waived by the party for whose benefit it is provided.[136] Thus, where the plea of want of notice was raised in the written statement but no issue was raised thereon in the courts below, the objection was not allowed to be raised for the first time in the second appeal. Such an objection was held to have been waived.[137]

The requirement of section 80 is a procedural one and does not go into the root of the jurisdiction. Further, if the plea of want of notice is not being raised by the government in the written statement or additional written statement filed in the suit, then it would be deemed to have been waived.[138]

---

127. Baldeo v Sukhi Singh, AIR 1938 Pat 127; Bakshi Ghulam v GN Sadiq, AIR 1968 J&K 98; Sawkat Ali v Supdt of Police, Sibsagar, AIR 1972 Assam & Nag 29 : (1971) Assam 319; Gangappa Gurupadappa Gugwad v Rachawwa, AIR 1971 SC 442 : (1970) 3 SCC 716; Muktarei Devi v State, AIR 1978 Gau 17.
128. Boyini Kanganna v Pedini Ramlingam, AIR 1948 Pat 117.
129. NG Tipnis v UOI, AIR 1970 MP 5.
130. Tipan Prasad v Secretary of State, AIR 1935 Pat 86.
131. Secretary of State v Amarnath, AIR 1936 Pat 339 : (1936) 15 Pat 353.
132. Baldeo v Sukhi Singh, AIR 1938 Pat 127.
133. Bishandayal & Sons v State of Orissa, AIR 2001 SC 544 : AIR 2001 SCW 155.
134. Dayanand v State, AIR 2001 Raj 257.
135. UOI v Tej Narain, AIR 1957 MB 108.
136. State of Bihar v Panchratna Devi, AIR 1980 Pat 212.
137. State v Bamadeb, AIR 1971 Ori 227; Munuswamy Chatty v Commissioner of HR&CE, AIR 1993 Mad 144.
138. Jai Luxmi Labour and Construction Co-op Society Ltd v Dev Singh Negi, C.R. No. 104 of 2018, decided on 29 April 2019 (Himachal Pradesh High Court)..

It has been held by the Supreme Court that where the plea of want of notice under section 80 was not raised by the government in the written statement or additional written statement, such defect will be deemed to have been waived.[139] DK Jain, J, speaking for the bench in the above case observed as follows:

> Accordingly, we decline to interfere with the finding recorded by the High Court on this aspect of the matter. The High Court has held that having participated in the original proceedings, it is not now open to the Sate to raise a fresh issue as to the maintainability of the suit, in view of waiving the defect at the earliest point of time. The High Court has also observed that knowing fully well about non-issue of notice under Section 80, CPC the State had not raised such a plea in the written statement or additional written statement filed in the suit, and therefore, deemed to have waived the objection. It goes without saying that the question whether in fact, there is waiver or not necessarily depends on facts of each case and is liable to be tried by the Court, if raised, which, as noted above, is not the case here.[140]

Where the amended portion of the plaint was not set out in the notice but no issue or argument was raised about it in the trial court, nor was it made a ground of appeal it was held that there was waiver.[141] However, when notice given in respect of original plaint as it originally stood and amended plaint was filed on the basis of entirely new cause of action, the fresh notice regarding this new cause of action was not given, the suit was not maintainable for want of notice.[142] Likewise, though the state objected to the maintainability of the suit on the ground of want of notice but that objection was rejected by the lower appellate court and the state, though a party, did not raise the objection in the second appeal, it was held that the state was deemed to have waived the objection.[143] But the High Court of Bombay has held that a waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right and where it is sought to be relied on by a party it is for that party to establish the circumstances under which he wants an inference of either, express or implied waiver to be drawn. It has further held that the section contains a bar against filing suits without notice and to that extent the matter relates clearly to the jurisdiction of the court and consequently the question of waiver either by the state or by a public officer cannot arise.[144] The High Court of Orissa has also held that if the issue as to want of notice has been raised but not pressed in the trial court, the defendant state would not be estopped from raising it at the appellate stage since there is no estoppel against law.[145] It is submitted that these last two decisions require reconsideration. A majority of the high courts have taken a different view. Further, the section lays down only a condition on a plaintiff's right to maintain the suit. It does not restrict the jurisdiction of the courts, for, it does not say that no court shall entertain a suit where the notice has not been served. The notice is for the protection of the state and if, in a particular case it does not require that protection, it can lawfully waive its right thereto.[146] The Madras High Court has held that where the government waives notice under this section, such waiver is binding on all persons interested in the subject matter.[147] Thus, where the secretary of state took objection to the sufficiency of the notice in his written statement but raised no issue on the point and took no objection during the trial.

---

139. State of Andhra Pradesh v Pioneer Builders, AIR 2007 SC 113 : (2006) 12 SCC 119.
140. State of Andhra Pradesh v Pioneer Builders, AIR 2007 SC 113, para 18, at p 118 : (2006) 12 SCC 119.
141. UOI v Joytirmoyee, AIR 1967 Cal 461.
142. Bishandayal & Sons v State of Orissa, AIR 2001 SC 544 : AIR 2001 SCW 155.
143. K Karthiyani v Neelacanta, AIR 1969 Ker 280 : (1969) Ker 440.
144. Ebrahimbhai v State, AIR 1975 Bom 13.
145. UOI v Shankar Store, AIR 1974 Ori 85 : 39 Cut LT 1043.
146. State v Juwan Das, AIR 1971 Pat 141; Paleti Suvarna Krishnaiah v Executive Engineer, AIR 1978 AP 389; J Mandal v UOI, AIR 1978 Pat 42.
147. State of Madras v Sulaiha Beevi, AIR 1960 Mad 81; Raj Kumar v Vijayakumar, AIR 1960 All 161.

it was held that another defendant could not raise this issue at a later stage as the secretary of state had waived notice.[148] If the defendant wants to rely on the invalidity of the notice, it is for him to raise a specific issue on the point.[149]

Section 80(2) of CPC was filed by the petitioner to seek the permission to institute suit without complying with the provisions of section 80 of the CPC, which was duly rejected. The hon'ble high court observed that the case is of urgent matter as is clear from the averments made in the suit and the application filed under section 80(2); thus, the requirement of notice was waived off.[150] In a case relating to claim under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1885, it was held by the Gauhati High Court that where maintainability of the claim application was challenged by the opposite party, but no specific ground was taken as to why the application was not maintainable and at no stage the State took the plea of non-service of notice under section 80 of the Code, the requirement of notice may be safely held to have been waived.[151]

In a suit against Government, where notice had been given to the concerned government department which was a necessary party, in a proper manner, the requirement of notice upon other parties like State Government and others may be waived. It was held that on account of such technical defect, the suit should not be allowed to be defeated.[152]

[s 80.15] Notice to Government

Where a suit is to be instituted against government, notice under this section must be given in all cases, whether the act in respect of which the suit is to be brought is purported to have been done in official capacity or not. This expression "in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity" refers to the public officer and not to government. This was made clear by the substitution of the words "by such public officer" for the words "by him" which occurred in the corresponding section 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882.

Where suit is filed for recovery of money from the state government on a matter relating to the health department, then a summons served on the Chief Secretary is not valid.[153] A state electricity board is not government and its assistant engineer is not a public officer.[154]

Uttar Pradesh State Handloom Corporation, Electricity Board or Food Corporation of India or any other statutory corporations are instrumentalities of the government and are "State" within the meaning of Article 12 of the Constitution of India. Nevertheless, they would not answer to the description of government as understood in law. Thus, the Uttar

---

148. Vellayan Chettiar v Prince of Madras, AIR 1947 PC 197 : 75 IA 223 : (1948) ILR Mad 214; Province of Bihar v Kamaksha Narain Singh, AIR 1950 Pat 366; Manindra v Secretary of State, (1907) 5 Cal LJ 148; Bholanath v Secretary of State, (1912) 40 Cal 503; Muralilal v EV David, AIR 1925 All 241 : (1925) 47 All 291; (see however, observations at p 128 in Baldeo v Sukhi Singh, AIR 1938 Pat 127 and in Gaekwar Baroda State Rly v Hafiz, AIR 1938 PC 165 : (1938) 65 IA 182 : (1938) All 601); District Board, Benares v Churhu Rai, AIR 1956 All 680; Lakshmi Narain Gauri v UOI, AIR 1958 Pat 489 : ILR 37 Pat 442; Kishore v Municipal Committee, Piparia, AIR 1958 MP 393.
149. Lalchand v UOI, AIR 1960 Cal 270.
150. Hemant Sharma v State of Himachal Pradesh, CMPMO No. 305 of 2019, decided on 4 July, 2019 (Himachal Pradesh HC)..
151. Maya Rani Ghosh v State of Tripura, AIR 2007 Gau 76 : 2007 AIHC 2169 (DB).
152. Manindra Ch Paul v State of Tripura, AIR 2007 Gau 103 : 2007 (3) GLT 300 (Agartala Bench).
153. State of Punjab v Tripta Rani, AIR 1990 P&H 252.
154. Padmanabhan Nair v Kerala State Electricity Board, AIR 1989 Ker 86.

Pradesh State Handloom Corporation not being the State Government within the meaning of section 80 of the CPC, notice for institution of suit against it would not be mandatory.[155]

[s 80.16] Notice to Public Officer: Act Purporting to Be Done in Official Capacity

According to the Concise Oxford Dictionary, to "purport" in this context means to "be intended to seem". Applying this meaning, the words "any acts purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity" mean any act "intended to seem" to be done by him in his official capacity.[156] If the act was one such as is ordinarily done by the officer in the course of his official duties, and he considered himself to be acting as a public officer and desired other persons to consider that, he was so acting, the act clearly "purports to be done in his official capacity" within the ordinary meaning of the term "purport".[157] Where in a suit against government for recovery of a sum of money, the allegation was that a postal clerk was guilty of negligence in that he paid the amount from the plaintiff's saving account to a wrong person. The postal clerk was a necessary party and failure to give him notice rendered the suit liable to dismissal.[158] A suit for compensation for medical negligence against the government hospital and the doctors working therein was filed, wherein a relief was also claimed against the doctor who attended to the patient. It was held that the doctor was discharging his duty as a public officer and separate notice to him under section 80 is necessary.[159] In a case where the official receiver of the Calcutta High Court was sued for negligence in that he failed to collect rents, Rankin CJ, held that the section applied to non-feasance as well as to misfeasance and referred to the definition of the word "act" in the General Clauses Act, 1897, as extending to illegal omissions.[160] In a suit for refund of excess payment of royalty under section 20, Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Act, 1973, notice was sent to the district mining officer who was the authorised agent of the state to realise the royalty. State was not prejudiced. It was held that the notice was not invalid on the ground that it was not addressed to a secretary to government.[161] A government servant sued individual government servants for damages, for pecuniary loss of position and prestige and mental agony, caused by the conduct of the defendants in creating false evidence, to implicate the plaintiff, resulting in the plaintiff's reversion. The defendants pleaded that the acts were done in their official capacity and, therefore notice under section 80 was necessary. Without deciding whether the act was connected with the official duties of the defendants, the trial court (and, on appeal the first appellate court), dismissed the suit, for want of notice. It was held by the high court, that the dismissal was illegal, as the judgements did not show how the acts alleged were connected with official duty. If the suit is filed against a public officer, then notice is mandatory only when the suit is in respect of an act purporting

---

155. Uttar Pradesh State Handloom Corp Ltd v Prem Sagar Jaiswal, 2008 (6) All LJ 150 : 2008 (4) All WC 3523.
156. Nand Kumar Sinha v Pasupati Ghosh, AIR 1941 Pat 385 : (1940) Pat 417; Koti Reddi v Subbiah, (1918) 41 Mad 792.
157. Nand Kumar Sinha v Pasupati Ghose, AIR 1941 Pat 385 : (1940) Pat 417; Abdul Rahim v Abdul Rahman, AIR 1924 All 851 : (1924) 46 All 884.
158. UOI v Chhattar Singh, AIR 1973 P&H 339.
159. A Sarangadharn v Dr Vijayan, AIR 1999 Ker 310.
160. Prasaddas v Bonnerjee, AIR 1931 Cal 61 : (1939) 57 Cal 1127; Amalgamated Electricity Co v Ajmer Municipality, AIR 1969 SC 227; State of Maharashtra v Chandrabhan, AIR 1977 SC 145; SV Swaminarayan v Lakshmi Hardware Stores, AIR 1978 Kant 100.
161. State of Bihar v Bera Colliery Co Pvt Ltd, AIR 1991 Pat 178.

to be done in his official capacity.[162] Where a revenue officer is to be impleaded in a suit for an official act (alleged to be illegal), notice under section 80 is required.[163]

Where a public officer had not done any act in his official capacity, it was held by the Supreme Court that the suit could not be discussed for non-service of notice under section 80 of the Code on the said public officer, if notice has been served on the State.[164] In the above case, some lands had been transferred to the plaintiff in lieu of his acquired lands. The transfer was duly approved by the District Collector and mutation was allowed. Later on, the said order of approval was revoked and the land in possession of the plaintiff was delivered to District Education Officer. Explaining the requirement of notice under section 80 of the Code, Tarun Chatterjee J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench observed as follows:

> The suit which is not in respect of any act done by the respondent No. 3, as a public officer, and in which no act of respondent No. 3 is either challenged or sought to be set aside is not a suit to which Section 80 of the CPC can very well apply. Therefore, in the facts and circumstances of the present case, the respondent No. 3 had not acted in his official capacity for which service of notice under Section 80 of the CPC was necessary. That apart, it is not in dispute that the respondent No. 2 was Administrator and overall in-charge including the Government Middle Schools (Students Institutions) in the District and the notice served on the State Government through District Collector of the District was sufficient compliance with the requirements of Section 80 of the CPC.[165]

Notice to government, as prescribed in the section, must be given in all cases whatever the nature of the suit.[166] But notice to a public officer is necessary in those cases only where the suit is "in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity". Therefore, if the suit does not relate to any act or omission purporting to be done by a public officer in his official capacity, this section will not apply.[167] It follows that notice to a public officer is not necessary where the act done by him is not within his sphere of duties. Thus, where a public officer took possession of property which he had no authority to seize and was sued for trespass, it was held that the suit was not against him in his official capacity but as a private individual, and therefore, no notice was necessary and for that purpose pleadings have to be examined.[168] So also, when an investigating police officer assaulted a witness,[169] or a sub-overseer was assaulted by his superior officer and the suit was for damages, the act complained of was not an act purporting to be done by the defendant in his official capacity, and, therefore, no notice was necessary.[170] No notice is necessary when the suit is not in respect of an act done by the public officer, although he is made a defendant, as when a collector is made a party defendant for the protection of the title of a minor;[171] or when the suit is against the official trustees for the determination of the rights of beneficiaries to trust funds in his hands;[172] or when the official assignee, as representing the estate of an insolvent, is made a party in a suit for declaration of title and no act of the official assignee is complained of except an objection to the entry of plaintiff's name on the record of the rights.[173] The relief asked for in

---

162. Bidhu Bhusan v SA Aziz, AIR 1985 Pat 165.
163. Shina Sundari Lekri v Palu Hemram, AIR 1982 Cal 5.
164. Ram Kumar v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2009 SC 4 : (2008) 10 SCC 73.
165. Ram Kumar v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2009 SC 4, para 10, at p 8 : (2008) 10 SCC 73.
166. Secretary of State v Kalekhan, (1914) 37 Mad 113.
167. Amalgamated Electricity Co v Ajmer Municipality, AIR 1969 SC 227 : (1969) 1 SCR 430.
168. Rameshwar Prasad Singh v Md Ayub, AIR 1950 Pat 527; Ganoda v Nalini, (1909) 36 Cal 28.
169. Dattatraya v Annappa, AIR 1938 Bom 352 (FB) : (1928) 52 Bom 832.
170. Mumtaz Hussain v Lewis, (1910) 7 All LJ 301.
171. Anantharaman v Ramasami, (1888) 11 Mad 317.
172. Shahebzadee v Fergussion, (1881) 7 Cal 499.
173. Damodar Govindji, AIR 1923 Bom 392 : (1923) 25 Bom LR 378.

a suit for a change or cancellation of an entry made by the registrar under the Madhya Pradesh Public Trusts Act, 1951, is not one against the government or the registrar personally and hence no notice is necessary for such a suit.[174] No notice is necessary in a suit against the common manager under section 95 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, to enforce a mortgage executed by a former manager. Such a suit is not against the manager personally and his omission to pay off the debt is not an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity.[175] So also, the mere setting up of a claim to property, for example, the debt due to insolvent on behalf of the estate which the official receiver represents, cannot be considered to be an act purporting to be done by a public officer in his official capacity.[176] In a suit against an official receiver of an estate for recovery of arrears of rent, notice is not necessary as the omission of the receiver to pay rent is not an act purporting to have been done by him in his official capacity.[177] In a suit for royalty of lands in the possession of the receiver, non-payment of the royalty cannot be said to be an official act done by the receiver. Hence, this section does not apply.[178] Orders passed by the deputy commissioner and the commissioner under sections 68 and 61 of the Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Act, 1959, are judicial orders and a right to sue to set them aside is provided by section 62. In such a suit, no notice is required as the commissioner is not sued in his capacity as a public officer but as a statutory body.[179] The Orissa High Court has, however, held that although section 43(3) of the Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act, 1914, provides for a suit, in a suit against the Director of Industries by a certificate-debtor against the rejection of his objection, notice is necessary.[180]

The decisions are conflicting as to whether notice is necessary under this section when a public officer acts mala fide, that is, maliciously or dishonestly, it being held in some cases that it is not[181] while in others that it is[182] necessary. The former proceed on the ground that an act done mala fide by a public officer cannot be said to be an "act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity". The latter proceed on the ground that the section makes no distinction between acts done bona fide and acts done mala fide and that notice is necessary in every case where a public officer purports to act in his official capacity. Thus, a suit against a police officer, for having searched the house of the plaintiff, dragged him to the thana, and detained and kept him in confinement for several hours maliciously and without cause, could be filed according to the former view without notice because the officer having acted illegally and in bad faith could not be said to have acted in his capacity as a public officer.[183] Similarly, in a suit against a district magistrate and two officers of police for conspiracy and malicious

---

174. Chandrakant G Deshmukh v State, AIR 1970 Bom 301 (FB).
175. Rebati Mohan v Jatindra Mohan, AIR 1934 PC 96 : (1934) 61 IA 171 : 61 Cal 470; reversing 59 Cal 961.
176. Narayanchandra v Surendranath, AIR 1938 Nag 499.
177. Debendra Nath v Official Receiver, AIR 1938 Cal 191 : (1938) 65 Cal LJ 561.
178. Raja v Samuel, AIR 1940 Pat 516.
179. Chenchuramaiah v Dy Commissioner, AIR 1966 AP 123.
180. Director of Industries v Janardan, AIR 1969 Ori 58 : (1968) Cut 432.
181. Shahebzadee v Fergussion, (1881) 7 Cal 499 per CUNNINGHAM, J; Muhammad v Panna Lal, (1904) 26 All 220 per BANERJI, J; Raghubans Sahai v Phool Kumari, (1905) 32 Cal 1130 per MUKERJEE, J; Peary Mohun Das v Weston, (1906) 16 Cal WN 145 per FLETCHER, J (reversed on merits on appeal); Ranchhod v Municipality of Dakor, (1884) 8 Bom 421.
182. Jogendra Nath Roy v Price, (1897) 24 Cal 584; Koti Reddi v Subbiah, (1918) 41 Mad 792 (FB); Wilson v Nathmull, AIR 1930 Mad 458 : (1930) 59 Mad LJ 501; Collector of Bihar v Mumtear, (1880) 3 All 20; Bakhtwar Mall v Abdul Latif, (1907) 29 All 567; Bachchu Singh v Jafar Beg, (1915) 13 All LJ 788; Jugal Kishore v Jugal Kishore, (1911) 33 All 540; Abdul Rahim v Abdul Rahman, AIR 1924 All 851 : (1924) 46 All 884; Cecil Gray v Cantonment Committee of Poona, (1910) 34 Bom 583; Chhaganlal v The Collector of Kaira, (1911) 35 Bom 42 per Chandavarkar, J; Dakshina v Omar Chand, AIR 1924 Cal 145 : (1923) 50 Cal 992.
183. Muhammad v Panna Lal, (1904) 26 All 220.

arrest and search, it was held that the suit was one in which the public officer was sued in respect of an act done in bad faith and therefore no notice under this section was required.[184] On the other hand, in Jogendra Nath Roy v Price[185] where the plaintiff sued a district magistrate for damages for illegal and malicious arrest under a warrant, it was held that though the act was said to have been done maliciously, notice was necessary under this section. The court said:

> The section does not seem to us to warrant the drawing of any distinction between acts of this kind done inadvertently or otherwise.

Following the above decision, the High Court of Allahabad, in a suit against a police officer to recover certain books seized by him in a search, said that if he seized the books, which was denied, he did so in his capacity of police officer and that notice was necessary under this section.[186] In a case decided by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court,[187] A sued B and attached, before judgment, certain wood belonging to B. Thereafter, the village munsiff sold the wood for arrears of revenue due from B though there was no necessity to sell the whole and after retaining the amount due for arrears of revenue handed over the balance of the sale-proceeds to B, although he had knowledge of the attachment. Thereupon, A brought a suit against the village munsiff for damages, alleging that the munsiff had colluded with B and paid the balance to him. The court found that the munsiff was aware of the attachment and that he dishonestly and fraudulently paid over the balance of the sale-proceeds to B. On the question of notice under this section, the Full Bench held that the munsiff was entitled to notice under this section, although he acted mala fide in the discharge of his duties. The general trend is that notice is necessary even if the act is mala fide[188] or malicious.[189] Accordingly, it has been held that this section applies in respect of a suit for malicious prosecution against a police officer.[190]

[s 80.17] Suits on Contracts and Torts

The High Court of Bombay had held in a series of cases that the requirement of notice was limited to suits on tort and that no notice was necessary in suits founded on contract.[191] In Prasaddas v Bannerjee,[192] Rankin CJ, said:

> It is, no doubt, broadly speaking, true that such a section as this is not intended to apply to actions ex contractu and there are other classes of actions no doubt which do not come within the meaning of the expression "in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity."
>
> The learned Chief Justice then referred to the case of Sharpington v Fulham Guardians.[193] In that case, the guardians were under a public duty to supply a receiving house for poor children and had employed a builder to alter a mansion house so as to make it a receiving house for the children of paupers. The guardians were sued by the builder on the contract with him. Farewell, J, held that the guardians were not entitled to a special period of limitation provided by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, because it was a breach of a private contract that was complained of and that it was not a complaint by a number of children or by a member of the public in respect of a public duty. In Rebati Mohan v

---

184. Peary Mohan Das v Weston, (1906) 16 Cal WN 145.
185. Jogendra Nath Roy v Price, (1897) 24 Cal 584.
186. Bakhtwar Mal v Abdul Latif, (1907) 29 All 567.
187. Koti Reddi v Subbiah, (1918) 41 Mad 792.
188. Bakshi Gulam v GM Sadiq, AIR 1968 J&K 98; State of Maharashtra v Chander Kant, AIR 1977 SC 148.
189. BL Shukla v Fatmabai, AIR 1976 Guj 29.
190. Muhammad Sharif v Nasir Ali, AIR 1933 All 742 : (1931) 53 All 44.
191. Rajmal v Hanmant, (1896) 20 Bom 679; Cecil Gray v Cantonment Committee of Poona, (1910) 34 Bom 583; Bhau v Nana, (1889) 13 Bom 343; Sardar Sangji v Ganpat, (1890) 14 Bom 395.
192. Prasaddas v Bannerjee, AIR 1931 Cal 61 : (1930) 57 Cal 1127.
193. Sharpington v Fulham Guardians, (1904) 2 Ch 449.

Jatindra Mohan,[194] the Privy Council, however, held that the section applies to suits on contrast. This decision has the effect of overruling a series of cases in which the requirement of notice was limited to suits on tort.

[s 80.18] Declaratory Suits

The section applies to suits for declaration.[195]

[s 80.19] Suits for Injunction

There was, at one time, a conflict of decisions as to whether the section applied to suits for perpetual injunction. This conflict was resolved by the Privy Council in Bhagchand v Secretary of State[196] approving Calcutta, Madras and Allahabad decisions,[197] that this section and the corresponding section 424 of the previous Codes should be strictly complied with and that they applied to all forms of action and all kinds of relief. That decision overruled the Bombay decisions that no notice was necessary in a suit for injunction against a public officer or against the secretary of state even when the act to be restrained against might occasion serious or irreparable damage.[198] In delivering the judgment of the Board, Viscount Summer said:

> To argue, as the appellants did, that the plaintiffs had a right urgently calling for a remedy, while Section 80 is a mere procedure, is fallacious, for Section 80 imposes a statutory and unqualified obligation upon the court. So, too, the contention that the "act purporting to be done by the collector in his official capacity, in respect a which" the suit was begun, was his threatened enforcement of payment is fallacious also, since the illegality, if any, is in the order for recovery of the tax. If that was valid, there was nothing to be restrained. Hence, though the act to be restrained is something apprehended in the future, the act alone "in respect of which" the suit lies, if at all, is the order already completed and issued.

In a Bombay case, it was left open whether if with notice of a suit the intended defendant proceeded to act in such a way as to anticipate a hostile order of the court in the intended suit, the court could restore the status quo ante on an interlocutory application before the trial.[199] The section applies to all suits for injunction perpetual and prohibitory as well as mandatory.[200] The decision in State of Bihar v Raghunandan Singh[201] that the section has no application to future acts and that accordingly, no notice is necessary for a suit for permanent injunction restraining the government from settling the ghat in future is, it is submitted, not

---

194. Rebati Mohan v Jatindra Mohan, AIR 1934 PC 96 : (1934) 61 IA 171 : 61 Cal 470.
195. Chhaganlal v Collector of Kaira, (1911) 35 Bom 42; Bhagchand v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 PC 176 : (1927) 54 IA 338 : ILR 51 Bom 725.
196. Bhagchand v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 PC 176 : (1927) 54 IA 338 : ILR 51 Bom 725; Gobindachandra v Sub-Divisional Officer, Chandpur, AIR 1932 Cal 163 : (1931) 58 Cal 1288.
197. Secretary of State v Rajlucki, (1898) 25 Cal 239; Dakshina Ranjan v Omkar Chand, AIR 1924 Cal 145 : (1924) 50 Cal 992; Secretary of State v Kalekhan, (1914) 37 Mad 113, Koti Reddi v Subbiah, (1918) 41 Mad 792; Bachchu v Secretary of State, (1902) 25 All 187; Abdul Rahim v Abdul Rahman, AIR 1924 All 851 : (1924) 46 All 884; NW Railway Administration v NW Railway Union, AIR 1933 Lah 302 : (1933) 14 Lah 330; Arunachelam v David, AIR 1937 Mad 166 : (1927) 50 Mad 239, must be taken to have been overruled by the Privy Council in Bhagchand's case.
198. Secretary of State v Gajanan, (1911) 35 Bom 362; Naginlal v Official Assignee, (1912) 37 Bom 243; Secretary of State v Gulam Rasul, (1916) 40 Bom 392.
199. Narayan v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 Bom 649 : (1927) 29 Bom LR 1427.
200. Babulal v State, AIR 1955 MB 75; Abida Begum v Rent Control and Eviction Officer, AIR 1959 All 675; Certificate Officer v Kasturi Chand, AIR 1970 Ori 239; UOI v Brij Nath, AIR 1971 All 209 : (1970) All LJ 1114; UOI v Baij Nath, AIR 1970 Cal 56; State of Bihar v Jiwan Das Arya, AIR 1971 Pat 141, Chandrama Singh v Y Singh, AIR 1972 Pat 128, p 134.
201. State of Bihar v Raghunandan Singh, AIR 1960 Pat 530; Arunachalam Chettiar v Official Assignee, Ramnad, AIR 1927 Mad 166 : 50 Mad 239; Rameswara Prasad v Mohd Ayub, AIR 1950 Pat 527.

correct. A suit for injunction filed against the government seeking restrain on encashment of bank guarantee furnished by the plaintiff, the suit was filed without taking leave of the court and without serving notice to government under section 80. The court, before granting the injunction, ordered the notice to be issued to the government. The suit is not bad for want of notice under section 80.[202] An application for injunction in a pending arbitration proceeding under the Arbitration Act, 1940 being not a suit, the provisions of section 80 of the CPC will not be attracted. Section 41(a) of the Arbitration Act, 1940, makes procedural rules of the CPC applicable to the proceedings pending in the court only and, therefore, there is no necessity of service of notice under section 80.[203]

In a suit for grant of permanent injunction under the J&K Civil Procedure Code (Smvt. 1977), where no notice was issued to government and no leave was obtained from the court to institute the suit and service of notice had not been waived by the authorities, it was held that the court had no jurisdiction to grant interim relief when such interim relief had not even been prayed for.[204]

[s 80.20] Withdrawal of Suit

A plaintiff, who gives a notice under this section and institutes a suit before the expiry of the two months prescribed in the section and is permitted to withdraw that suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit, is entitled to institute a fresh suit without a fresh notice.[205] The Supreme Court has affirmed this position.[206] One of the grounds under which withdrawal be permitted with liberty to sue afresh is that a suit must fail by reason of some formal defect. Non-service of notice under section 80 of the CPC is a formal defect on the basis of which a suit has failed.[207]

[s 80.21] By What Name Public Officer to Be Sued

The suits referred to in this section are suits against the public officer personally in respect of acts done in his official capacity. The public officer cannot be sued by his official name unless he is a corporation sole.[208]

[s 80.22] Death of Complainant After Notice but Before Suit

In some decisions, a view was taken that when a claimant gave notice but died before filing a suit, the notice did not ensure for the benefit of his legal representatives and that a suit by them without a fresh notice was not maintainable.[209] But a different view was taken where one of the plaintiffs, who alone had served notice, died pending the suit. The suit was continued by his transferees who were on record as co-plaintiffs. It was held that the suit did not fail.[210] The question as to whether a notice under section 80 is valid or not is a question of judicial construction. Section 80 of the CPC is but a part of the Procedure Code passed to provide the

---

202. Basic Tele Services Ltd v UOI, AIR 2000 Del 1.
203. Sita Ram v District Abhiyanta Durasanchar, Raipur, AIR 1994 MP 71.
204. Three Star Enterprises v State of Jammu & Kashmir, AIR 2009 J&K 45 : (2009) 2 JKJ 257.
205. Vallabhram v Secretary of State, AIR 1935 Bom 21 : (1934) 59 Bom 149.
206. Amarnath Dogra v UOI, AIR 1963 SC 424 : (1963) 1 SCR 657.
207. Umesh Chandra Saxena v Administrator General Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1999 All 109 (DB).
208. Sheriff of Bombay v Hakmaji, AIR 1927 Bom 521 : (1927) 51 Bom 749; NW Railway Administration v NW Railway Union, AIR 1933 Lah 203 : (1933) 14 Lah 330.
209. Mahadev v Secretary of State, AIR 1930 Bom 367 : 32 Bom LR 604; Haribar Mohappa v Hari Otha, AIR 1959 Ori 257; Buchan v Secretary of State, (1902) 25 All 187.
210. Parma Sah v Union Provinces; AIR 1939 Oudh 196.

regulation and machinery, by means of which the courts may do justice between the parties. It is, therefore, merely a part of the adjective law and deals with procedure alone and must be interpreted in a manner so as to subserve and advance the cause of justice rather than to defeat it. As far as possible, no proceedings in a court of law should be allowed to be defeated on mere technicalities. This is the principle on which our laws of procedure are based.[211]

[s 80.23] Amendment of Plaint

Where notice of a proposed suit is once given, it is not necessary to give a fresh notice of two months if the plaint has to be amended owing to discovery of facts not within the plaintiff's knowledge at the time of the institution of the suit,[212] or for adding further grounds for the cause of action already disclosed,[213] or when new facts have arisen subsequent to the suit.[214] No notice is necessary for an amendment which does not call for any new relief or introduce a new cause of action.[215] That would also be so when facts on which the amendment is proposed to be made, are already on record and therefore do not cause any surprise or prejudice to the other side.[216] But no amendment will be allowed if the effect of the amendment is to convert the suit into another of a different character, e.g., a suit based on negligence into one based on nuisance. In such a case, a fresh suit must be brought after giving fresh notice as required by this section.[217]

There can be no dispute to the proposition that a notice under section 80 can be waived. But the question is whether merely because in the amended written statement such a plea is not taken it amounts to waiver. Even otherwise when in the suit itself, Issue No 4 had been raised as to whether or not there was a valid and appropriate notice under section 80. Such a point having been taken in the original written statement and an issue having been raised, it was not necessary that in the amended written statement such a plea be again raised. If the original notice was only in respect of a claim under the plaint as it originally stood that claim was on the basis that there was a concluded contract and that the appellants had already acquired rights in the mill and the lands. Those reliefs were not maintainable and were given up before the appellate court. The amended plaint was on an entirely new cause of action. It was based on facts and events which took place after the filing of the original plaint. It was a fresh case. The claim was for specific performance of the agreement alleged to have been entered into on 29 December 1978. Admittedly, no notice under section 80, CPC was given for this case. As there was an issue pertaining to notice under section 80, the trial court should have dealt with this aspect. The trial court failed to do so. It was then pressed before the appellate court. The finding in the impugned judgement that the suit based on this claim was not maintainable is correct and requires no interference. If a new cause of action is being introduced, a fresh notice under section 80, CPC would be required to be given. The same not having been given, the suit on this cause of action was not maintainable.[218]

---

211. Ghanshyam Dass v Dominion of India, (1984) 3 SCC 46.
212. Ezra v Secretary of State, (1903) 30 Cal 36, p 72.
213. Lady Dinbai Dinshaw Petit v Dominion of India, AIR 1951 Bom 72.
214. Lal Chand v UOI, AIR 1960 Cal 270.
215. Gulam Mohiuddin v State of Jammu and Kashmir, AIR 1961 J&K 6.
216. Madanlal v UOI, AIR 1968 Ori 234.
217. Province of Madras v RB Poddar Firm, AIR 1949 Mad 214; Mc Inerny v Secretary of State, (1911) 38 Cal 797.
218. Bishandayal & Sons v State of Orissa, AIR 2001 SC 544 : AIR 2001 SCW 155 : (2001) 1 SCC 555.

[s 80.24] Notice to Collector

A collector is entitled to notice under this section of a suit for damages in respect of an act done by him in his official capacity as agent of the court of wards, but he is not entitled to such notice if he is sued or joined as a party not by reason of any act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity, but merely for the protection of a minor's title.[219] This section does not apply to a suit to contest the legality of the collector's decision as to levy of assessment of land revenue, brought pursuant to an undertaking given under section 14 of the Bombay City Land Revenue Act II of 1876 within 30 days from the decision. The reason is, first, that there is a conflict between that Act which is a special Act and the provisions of this section (General Act), and, secondly, that the Act itself draws a distinction between suits brought on account of land revenue and suits brought on account of acts done in their official capacity by the collector or any of his assistants and section 80 refers to the latter class of suits and not to the former.[220]

[s 80.25] Notice to Cantonment Committee

Cantonment Committee constituted under the Indian Cantonments Act, 1889, is a "public officer" within the meaning of this section.[221]

[s 80.26] Notice to Coal Mines Provident Fund Commissioner

The Coal Mines Provident Fund Commissioner is not a public officer within the meaning of the term in section 2(17)(h) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.[222]

[s 80.27] Municipal Council and Village Panchayat: Notice Not Necessary

A municipal council is not a public officer and no notice is necessary when a suit is filed against a municipality.[223] A village panchayat also is not a public officer.[224] The commissioner of a municipal corporation is a public officer[225] but not the port commissioners of Calcutta.[226] A suit against the director of municipal administration for restraining him from implementing a motion of non-confidence passed at a meeting alleged to be illegal necessitates a notice.[227]

It has been held by the Supreme Court [228] that a municipal council is not a public officer and no notice is necessary when a suit is filed against a municipality. Therefore, the question of sufficiency of notice under section 80 of the CPC does not arise at all.

[s 80.28] Notice to Official Assignee

The official assignee is a public officer, and he is entitled to notice under this section before a suit is filed against him in respect of any act purporting to be done by him in his official

---

219. Anantharaman v Ramasami, (1888) 11 Mad 317; Bhau v Nana, (1889) 13 Bom 343.
220. Collector of Bombay v Kamalavahooji, AIR 1934 Bom 162 : (1934) 36 Bom LR 297.
221. Cecil Gray v Cantonment Committee of Poona, (1910) 34 Bom 583.
222. Coal Mines Provident Fund Commissioner v Ramesh Chandra Jha, (1990) 1 SCC 589.
223. Municipal Council, Anantapur v Vasudeva, AIR 1931 Mad 808 : (1932) 55 Mad 207.
224. Makundarao v Durgaprasad, AIR 1944 Nag 130 : (1944) ILR Nag 687.
225. Siva Dhan v Corp of Calcutta, 64 Cal WN 60.
226. Moolji Doshi v Governor-General in Council, AIR 1951 Cal 443.
227. JR Sirsat v BN Karekar, AIR 1973 Goa 1.
228. City Municipal Council Bhalki v Gurappa, AIR 2015 SC 3826 : (2016) 2 SCC 200.

capacity.[229] The same rule applies to a receiver appointed under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920.[230] But no notice is necessary when the official assignee or receiver is made a party to a suit to realise a charge on the property of the insolvent which has vested in him and no act or omission on the part of the receiver is alleged.[231] The Bombay High Court had held that no notice was necessary in a suit to restrain an official receiver from selling goods claimed by the plaintiff;[232] but as stated above, this case has been overruled by the Privy Council.[233] The Lahore High Court had accordingly held that in such a case, notice is necessary.[234] In a suit to set aside a sale by an official receiver, the receiver is a necessary party and notice must be served upon him under this section.[235] A suit against the official receiver by the wife of an insolvent, for a declaration that she is entitled to retain certain property as long as her claim for dower-debts is not satisfied is liable to be dismissed for want of notice to the official receiver under this section.[236]

[s 80.29] Notice to Receiver

A receiver appointed in a suit is a public officer and is entitled, even after his discharge to notice before a suit is filed against him for acts purporting to have been done in his official capacity.[237] But no notice is necessary where the complaint is in respect of an act not done by him in his official capacity,[238] or where no relief is claimed against the receiver, as for instance where the suit is for a declaration that a mortgage executed by him is not binding on the estate.[239] A manager appointed in an administration suit with power to collect rent and royalties is a public officer and so notice is necessary when his official acts are the subject matter of the suit.[240] But this section does not apply to a case where a suit for possession is brought against the owner of the estate in respect of which a receiver is appointed and which suit the receiver has to defend.[241]

[s 80.30] Notice to Official Liquidator

The official liquidator, under the Companies Act, 2013, is an officer of the court and is a public servant and is entitled to notice under the section.[242] But no notice is necessary if the act complained of, is not an act done by him in his official capacity.[243] Judicial opinion is divided on the question of whether a liquidator appointed by the registrar under section 42 of the

---

229. Joosub v Kemp, (1902) 26 Bom 809; Wilson v Nathmull, AIR 1930 Mad 458 : (1930) 59 Mad LJ 501.
230. De Silva v Govind, (1920) 44 Bom 895; Murari Lal v David, AIR 1925 All 241 : (1924) 47 All 291; Bishambarnath v Janaki Ballabh, AIR 1952 All 402.
231. Skipper & Co v David, AIR 1927 All 132 : (1927) 48 All 821.
232. Naginlal v Official Assignee, (1912) 37 Bom 243.
233. Bhagchand v Secretary of State, AIR 1927 PC 176 : (1927) 54 IA 338 : 51 Bom 725.
234. Duli Chand v Kalyan Singh, AIR 1931 Lah 703 : (1931) 12 Lah 260.
235. Haveli Ram v Jagan Nath, AIR 1937 Lah 386.
236. Asia Khatun v Amarendra, AIR 1940 Cal 578.
237. Jagadish Chandra Deo Dhabal v Debendra Prosad Bagchi, (1930) 59 Cal 850; Radharani v Purnachandra, AIR 1930 Cal 737 : (1930) 34 Cal WN 671.
238. Palanibala Debi v Katlipada, (1950) 54 Cal WN 960.
239. Annapurna Dasi v Sarat Chandra, AIR 1942 Cal 394 : (1941) 46 Cal WN 355.
240. Hira Lal Murarka v Mangtulal Bagaria, AIR 1947 Cal 221 : (1944) 2 Cal 513 : 48 Cal WN 421.
241. Bhuban Mohini v Biraj, AIR 1940 Cal 1 : 44 Cal WN 74.
242. Kathiawar and Ahmedabad Banking Corp v Ram Charam Lal, AIR 1934 Oudh 458 : (1934) 9 Luck 577.
243. Union Bank v Tatanagar Foundry, AIR 1974 Cal 213.

Co-operative Societies Act, 1912, is a public officer within this section. Some decisions hold that he is,[244] while others that he is not.[245]

[s 80.31] Notice to Official Trustee

By section 16 of the Official Trustees Act, 1913 (2 of 1913), it is enacted that nothing in section 80 of the CPC shall apply to any suit against the official trustee in which no relief is claimed against him personally.

[s 80.32] Notice to Administrator-General

By section 41 of the Administrator General's Act, 1913 (3 of 1913), it is enacted that nothing in section 80 of the CPC shall apply to any suit against the Administrator-General in which no relief is claimed against him personally.

[s 80.33] Notice to Common Manager Appointed Under Section 95 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 8 of 1885

Such a manager is a public officer within the meaning of this section, and he is entitled to notice under this section.[246] This proposition was disputed before the Privy Council. Their Lordships did not decide whether the manager was, or was not, entitled to notice; but held that the omission of a manager to redeem a mortgage by a former manager was not an act purporting to be done in his official capacity so as to make notice necessary.[247]

[s 80.34] Limitation

In computing the period of limitation, prescribed for a suit under this section, the period of the notice should be excluded.[248]

[s 80.35] Place of Suing

Where a suit was filed by the Chairman of the Marine Products Export Development Authority, claiming that he was entitled to provident fund and gratuity, making the Union of India and the said authority as defendants, the suit filed after the expiry of two months' period from the date of issuing notice under section 80 of the CPC would not be barred by limitation on the mere ground that section 80 is not applicable to the Marine Products Export Development Authority.[249] Time spent in service of notice under section 80 is to be excluded in computation of limitation. If a Sunday intervenes, that also is to be excluded.[250]

---

244. SK Kalan Co-op Bank v Ayodhya Prasad Shamlal, AIR 1939 All 232; Abdul Ghouse v Anjuman Dehi Imdad, AIR 1942 Lah 487; Vasant v Khaddathar, AIR 1949 Nag 25.
245. Kuppu Govindan Chetty v Uthukottai Co-op Society, AIR 1940 Mad 831 : (1940) ILR Mad 929; Jhansi Co-op Mills v Lala Makanlal, AIR 1957 All 492.
246. Sukumari Gupta v Dhrendara Nath Roy Chowdhury, AIR 1941 Cal 643 : 73 Cal LJ 356; Beni Madhab v Deb Narayan, AIR 1932 Cal 275 : (1919) 59 Cal 961.
247. Rebatimohan v Jatindramohan, AIR 1934 PC 96 : (1934) 61 IA 171 : 61 Cal 470.
248. Limitation Act, 1963, section 15(2); Jai Chand Sawhney v UOI, (1969) 3 SCC 642; State v RD Singh, AIR 1972 Raj 241; North-Western Rly v Ram Dhanshib Lal, (1917) PR No 52, p 187; Mohd Quaramuddin v State of Andhra Pradesh, (1994) 5 SCC 118.
249. TPK Nair v UOI, AIR 1991 Ker 80 (S Padmanabhan, J).
250. See section 15(2) of the Limitation Act, 1963. Also, see notes to section 79 above, "jurisdiction".

[s 80.36] Notice Not Part of the Cause of Action

Though a notice under this section is necessary before a suit can be filed, it is not part of the cause of action and consequently, a court which has otherwise no jurisdiction to entertain a suit does not get jurisdiction to entertain it on the ground that the notice was issued within its jurisdiction.[251]

[s 80.37] Suit Under O XXI, Rule 63

The High Court of Punjab took the view that no notice is necessary for a suit under O XXI, rule 63 as the government was a party to the claim proceedings and the suit was only a continuation thereof.[252] In consonance with this proposition, the Allahabad High Court also held that where on dismissal of an objection by the collector in proceedings for recovery of arrears of income tax, the objector files a suit under O XXI, rule 63, such a suit is in continuation of the claim proceedings under O XXI, rule 58 and hence no notice is necessary.[253] This is no longer good law, for the Supreme Court has rejected the proposition that a suit under O XXI, rule 63 is either a continuation of the objection proceedings under O XXI, rule 58 or is a form of appeal against the order passed in them and emphasised that these proceedings under O XXI, rule 63 were in the form of a suit and such a suit being against government required notice.[254] Rule 63 of O XXI has been deleted by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976); hence, these decisions have only academic value.

[s 80.38] Constitutionality of the Section

The provision as to notice is not repugnant to Article 14 of the Constitution of India.[255]

[s 80.39] Railways

Before the enactment of the Government of India Act, 1935, it had been held that if a railway was owned by government, a suit for a claim against the railway administration must be brought against the secretary of state after notice under this section.[256] Notice of a claim to the railway administration under section 77 of the Railway Act, 1890, does not dispense with the necessity for notice under this section to the secretary of state.[257] Omission by the defendant to reply to a notice under section 80 may, along with other facts, be relevant for assuming that the defendant was not ready and willing to go to arbitration.[258] The notice under section 80 was neither signed by the party or his advocate; however, the identity of the person who gave notice, particulars of his client, value of undelivered consignment and its intended legal actions clearly spelt out a notice. It was held that notice complied with the requirement of section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure.[259] In a suit against the railways, the notice under section 80 was

---

251. Bata Shoe Co v UOI 55 Bom LR 746; Azizuddin v UOI, AIR 1959 Cal 273; Narayan v UOI, AIR 1960 Cal 391 : 64 Cal WN 503; contra PC Biswas v UOI, AIR 1956 Assam 85; UOI v Kedar Prasad, AIR 1970 Pat 212. See notes under section 20.
252. Ramasundari v Collector of Ludhiana, (1959) ILR Punj 413.
253. UOI v Parvati, AIR 1965 All 154.
254. Sawai Singhal v UOI, AIR 1966 SC 1068.
255. State of Madras v Chittor Venkata Durgg Prasad, AIR 1957 AP 675.
256. Shaik Elahi Baksh v East India Railway Administration, AIR 1931 Pat 326 : (1931) 10 Pat 466.
257. Ali Asmat v GIP Railway, AIR 1931 All 476 : (1930) 52 All 837; Himachand v GIP Railway, (1928) 52 Bom : 1928 Bom 421; Secretary of State v Firm Fazaluddin, AIR 1933 All 54 : (1933) 55 All 121.
258. State v Harsh Singh, AIR 1986 All 169.
259. Sha Jetmal v General Manager, Southern Railway, AIR 1995 Kant 219.

sent to the Union of India as represented by the Chief Commercial Superintendent (Claims) and not to the General Manager of Railways, as provided by section 80. It was held that such a notice is no notice under that section; hence, it is to be regarded as there being no compliance with the requirement of section 80. It cannot be contended that a notice under section 78B of the Railways Act, 1890, was properly given, or that it would be tantamount to a notice under section 80. The scope of section 78B of the Railways Act, 1890, and section 80, are completely different from each other and one is not an alternative of the other.[260] Suit was filed against the Central Government relating to railway. Notice was left at the office of the General Manager. Notice so left at the office was held to have duly complied with the statutory requirement under section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It was held that personal notice is not a condition precedent to the institution of the suit.[261] But as a result of the amendment of the section in 1948 in its present form, it is no longer necessary to send two notices, one to the government and another to the railway authorities. The two notices can be combined and sent to the authority named in the section.[262] A notice under this section would be treated as a combined notice both under this section as well as section 77 of the Railways Act, 1890.[263] There is a difference of opinion on the question as to whether when goods are carried by more railways than one, a notice should be given to all of them. One view is that for the purpose of this section, each railway must be regarded as a distinct legal entity and accordingly a claim must fail if no notice is given to the particular railway against which relief is claimed.[264] A notice to the general manager of the railway and copies thereof to the general manager of another railway is sufficient.[265] The contrary view is that as all the railways are owned by government, a notice as provided under section 80 is a notice to government which would consequently be liable and that it is not necessary that all the railways should have separate notices.[266] The submission is that the latter view is in consonance with the realities since all railways are owned by government. Besides, under the Railways Act, 1890, each railway has no legal entity and the railways are divided into different zones only for expediency. On the question of sufficiency of notice to railways administration, see the cases noted below.[267]

[s 80.40] Sub-section (2)

The requirement of notice under this section was condemned on several occasions—both in judicial pronouncements and otherwise. The ground for such condemnation was that it made an unjustified discrimination between suits against citizens and those against governments and public officers. There was considerable justification in the condemnation in view of the fact

---

260. UOI v BD Jhunjhunwala, AIR 1988 Ori 267.
261. UOI v TN Small Industries Corp, AIR 1981 Mad 316.
262. Moolji Bhai v Dominion of India, AIR 1952 Nag 22; UOI v Lakshmi Narain, AIR 1954 Pat 424 : (1954) ILR Pat 214.
263. DK Lakshmiah v UOI, AIR 1969 AP 366.
264. Dominion of India v Firm Kishan Prasad, AIR 1950 Nag 85 : (1950) ILR Nag 212; UOI v Durga Dutt, AIR 1957 Cal 202 : 59 Cal WN 1064; Sundarlal v UOI, AIR 1959 Punj 149 : (1957) Punj 46; UOI v Shamsuddin, AIR 1958 Pat 575; KP Cloth Stores v UOI, AIR 1960 Ori 154 : (1960) ILR Cut 110; Jagannath Chetram v UOI, AIR 1956 Cal 540.
265. DK Lakshmiah v UOI, AIR 1969 AP 366.
266. Narayanaswamy v UOI, AIR 1960 Mad 58 : (1959) Mad 939 : (1959) 2 Mad LJ 479; Dominion of India v Jagadish Prasad, AIR 1949 Cal 622 : 87 Cal LJ 175; Ramco Textiles v UOI, AIR 1960 Ker 257 : (1960) ILR Ker 435; Chandra Mohan v UOI, AIR 1953 Assam 193 : (1953) ILR Assam 326; Natwarlal Gowardhan Das v UOI, AIR 1957 MP 157; UOI v Kalinga Textiles Pvt Ltd, AIR 1969 Bom 401 : 71 Bom LR 214 : (1969) Bom 864.
267. Dominion of India v Ram Kumar, AIR 1959 All 168; Khudomal Madan Mohun v Dominion of India, AIR 1963 All 276; Sha Jetmal v General Manager, Southern Rly, AIR 1995 Kant 219.

that in the 21st century, governments have ventured in a big way in ordinary commercial and trading activities and do no longer confine themselves to what are known as sovereign acts. In view of this criticism, it was proposed that the section should be omitted from the CPC; but the joint committee of Parliament, to which the Amendment Bill 1974 was referred, ruled that the proposed deletion would not be in public interest and might encourage some persons to file suits against government and obtain ex parte reliefs and thus, hinder the pace of developmental activities. The committee, accordingly, recommended the retention of the section but sought to reduce the rigour of it by proposing certain relaxations. These relaxations are subject to two conditions. Sub-section (2) of section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure permits a suit to be filed without notice if:

(i) it is for obtaining an urgent or immediate relief; and

(ii) leave of the court is obtained thereof.

The sub-section further provides that the court shall not grant relief, including an interim relief, without giving an opportunity to the defendant government or public officer of being heard. The proviso to sub-section (2) of section 80 further makes it mandatory for the court to return the plaint for presentation to it after complying with the necessity of notice if it is satisfied after hearing the parties that no urgent or immediate relief need be granted. These restrictions have the effect of retaining the discriminatory character of the provision for notice which was complained of. The urgency for which an interim relief is intended to be prayed for might also in some cases lose much of its meaning where during the interval between the filing of the suit and giving opportunity for being heard, the court is faced with fait accompli especially in matters where possession of property is threatened. Courts have the power of vacating ex parte interim reliefs granted by them in suitable cases where a defendant makes such an application. Such a power is an adequate safeguard against interim orders unjustifiably obtained.

In Sudhir Kumar Sharma,[268] the Supreme Court examined the power of a court under section 80(2) in granting leave for exemption. In this case, a suit was filed by the respondent against the State in which an interlocutory application (IA) was instituted seeking leave of the court under section 80(2). The State on the other hand also filed an IA under O VII, rule 11 for non-compliance of section 80(1). The State's IA was heard and rejected by the trial court. The high court on appeal held that in view of the fact that the trial court had heard the State's IA even though the respondent's application under section 80(2) was pending for decision, it could be presumed that the application under section 80(2) was allowed and, hence, plaint was not liable to be rejected for non-compliance of section 80(1). The Supreme Court, however, reversed the view taken by the high court and held that a suit filed without complying with section 80(1) cannot be regularised simply by filing an application under section 80(2). When an IA under section 80(2) is filed, a court has to consider the facts and circumstances in which the leave was sought for filing the suit without issuance of notice under section 80(1).

[s 80.40.1] Two options

A plaintiff intending to institute a suit against the government has two options before him. He may file a suit after serving two months' notice under section 80 of the CPC or he may file a suit without serving a notice. But in the latter event, he may satisfy the court that an urgent

---

268. State of Kerala v Sudhir Kr Sharma, (2013) 10 SCC 178 : 2013 (10) SCR 62 : JT 2013 (12) 1 : 2013 (11) Scale 107.

and immediate relief was required and he must also obtain previous leave of the court. In the event of the first course being adopted, the suit cannot be filed before the expiry of two months of giving of the notice. This explains the reason for using the word "shall" in sub-section (1) of section 80 by Parliament. However, in the second case, he has the choice to file the suit without giving the requisite notice, but only after obtaining leave of the court. It is for this purpose, the word "may" has been used in section 80(2).[269]

[s 80.40.2] "Urgent or Immediate Relief"

Sub-section (2) of section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure, has been introduced in the amended Code of Civil Procedure with a view to mitigate the rigours of sub-section (1) of section 80 and to enable a person to seek urgent and immediate relief. It is in the nature of an exception to section 80(1) and enables the plaintiff to file a suit to obtain an urgent and immediate relief without serving any notice as required by sub-section (1), subject to the condition that such a suit has to be filed with the leave of the court. The most important condition envisaged under section 80(2) is relating to urgency in the matter. Where the court is satisfied that urgent and immediate relief is required and the plaintiff would not be in a position to wait for the period of notice to expire, leave may be granted to a plaintiff to file suit against the state without service of notice contemplated under section 80(1). Even in such cases where leave is granted, the court is enjoined not to grant relief in the suit, whether interim or otherwise, without giving the state reasonable opportunity of showing cause in respect of the relief sought for in this suit. As indicated in the proviso, if upon hearing the parties, the court is satisfied that no urgent or immediate relief need be granted, the court is to return the plaint for presentation after complying with the requirement regarding service of notice contemplated under section 80(1). It is thus clear that section 80(2) has been introduced with a view to entertain suits where urgent or immediate relief is required to be given.[270]

Sub-section (2) of section 80 of the Code mellows down the rigours of the requirement of service of notice for suits against government, by providing that the requirement can be dispensed with the leave of the court truly when urgent and immediate relief is to be granted. However, it has been laid down that before granting relief, opportunity should be given to the government to show cause.[271] DK Jain J, speaking for the Supreme Court Bench in the above case, observed as follows:

> 16. Thus, from a conjoint reading of sub-section (1) and (2) of s 80, the legislative intent is clear, namely, service of notice under sub-section (1) is imperative except where urgent and immediate relief is to be granted by the Court, in which case a suit against the Government or a public officer may be instituted, but with the leave of the court. Leave of the court is a condition precedent. Such leave must precede the institution of a suit without serving notice. Even though s 80(2) does not specify how the leave is to be sought for or given yet the order granting leave must indicate the ground (s) pleaded and the application of mind thereon.[272]

Where suit against government is instituted without notice under section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure but after obtaining leave of the court, the judgment and decree cannot be interfered with or the ground that the suit was filed without notice under section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure.[273]

---

269. Himachal Steel Rerollers and Fabrication v UOI, AIR 1988 All 191.
270. Prakash Industries Ltd v Maitri Shukla, AIR 1998 Ori 45.
271. State of Andhra Pradesh v Pioneer Builders, AIR 2007 SC 113 : (2006) 12 SCC 119.
272. State of Andhra Pradesh v Pioneer Builders, AIR 2007 SC 113, para 16, at p 117 : (2006) 12 SCC 119.
273. State of Uttar Pradesh v Jaman Singh, AIR 2007 UP 10 : 2007 UC 558.

In a suit against a public officer, the court granted ex parte temporary injunction as an interim relief on the ground of urgency by invoking its inherent powers. Such an order could not be justified. Where there are provisions for dealing with certain matters in the CPC, resort to the inherent powers of the court overriding those provisions is prohibited. If an urgent or immediate relief has to be given to the plaintiff, the provisions of the CPC can be dispensed with under section 80(1). But if, after hearing both parties, the court comes to the finding that no urgent or immediate relief need be granted in the suit, the plaint will be returned for compliance with the requirements of section 80(1). Therefore, even in the matter of an urgent or immediate relief (interim or otherwise), the court cannot dispense with giving to the other party an opportunity of showing cause in respect of the relief prayed for in the suit.[274] For the purpose of section 80(2), what is material in the grant of leave is the urgency of the relief sought and not the merits of the case.[275] The Allahabad High Court has held that where the plaintiff wants a temporary injunction to restrain the government from holding an auction, service of notice under section 80 cannot be dispensed with. If the case is not urgent, this is the ordinary rule.[276] Leave under section 80(2) would be granted if the purpose of suit would be frustrated if notice was required to be served.[277]

In a suit against government, the leave to proceed without service of notice, as contemplated under sub-section (2) of section 80 was refused by the trial court. The plaint was returned to the plaintiff and there was no suit before the trial court. The high court in revision passed interim order directing the parties to maintain status quo. At the time of final disposal, the high court vacated the interim order and remitted the matter to the trial court on concession that the order of the trial court was a non-reasoned order. It was held by the Supreme Court that the trial court was bound to consider the question of grant of leave afresh.[278]

It was further held by the Supreme Court in the above case that in a suit against government, where leave to proceed without notice is refused by the trial court, superior courts can grant such leave, as otherwise, in an emergent situation, litigants may be left without remedy once such leave is refused and they may be required to wait out the statutory period of two months after giving notice under section 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure.[279]

However, where suit against government authorities is instituted without notice under section 80 of the Code and the application for grant of leave is refused by the trial court, there is no suit before the court and the court has no authority to grant interim relief.[280]

[s 80.40.3] Service of Notice

"Giving" of anything as ordinarily understood in the English language is not complete unless it has reached the hands of the person to whom it has to be given. In the eye of law, however, "giving" is complete in many matters where it has been offered to a person but not accepted by him. Tendering of a notice is in law, therefore, giving of a notice even though

---

274. State of Tripura v Sajal Kanti Sengupta, AIR 1982 Gau 76.
275. NV Ashar v State of Gujarat, (1984) 2 GLR 333.
276. Islamia Junior High School v State, AIR 1986 All 92.
277. Harish Chandra (India) Ltd. v Corpn Bank, AIR 1992 Del 279.
278. Bajaj Hindustan Sugar & Industries Ltd v Balrampur Chini Mills Ltd., AIR 2007 SC 1906 : (2007) 9 SCC 43.
279. Bajaj Hindustan Sugar & Industries Ltd v Balrampur Chini Mills Ltd, AIR 2007 SC 1906, at p 1911 : (2007) 9 SCC 43.
280. Gyanajeet Moharana v Binodini Pattanaik, 2009 (107) Cut LT 132 : 2008 (2) Ori LR 926.

the person to whom it is tendered refuses to accept it. We can find, however, no authority or principle for the proposition that as soon as the person with a legal duty to give the notice despatches the notice to the address of the person to whom it has to be given, the giving is complete.[281]

Therefore, mere despatch of notices to the address of the persons is not sufficient, and it must be actually either delivered or tendered to the person/s to whom they are required to be given under section 80(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure.[282]

In a suit against the railways, the notice under section 80 was sent to the Union of India as represented by the Chief Commercial Superintendent (Claims). It was not sent to the General Manager of Railways. It was held that there had been no compliance with the requirements of section 80 and the suit was bound to fail on such account. It cannot be argued that a notice under section 78B of the Indian Railways Act, 1989 was properly given, and would tantamount to a notice under section 80 of the CPC. The scope of section 78B of the Indian Railways Act and section 80 of the CPC are completely different from each other and one is not an alternative of the other.[283]

The removal of encroachment by demolition of plaintiff's hotel by defendant, by Administrator of Municipal Corporation, the act being done in official capacity, the statutory notice under section 401(2) of the Madhya Pradesh Municipal Corporation Act, 1956 (23 of 1956) was necessary prior to filing suit for recovery of damages against defendant. Service of notice by father of the plaintiff under section 80 of the CPC to defendant's father is not sufficient. Plaintiff being the aggrieved party himself ought to have served notice; therefore, the suit is not maintainable.[284]

[s 80.40.4] Specific Order

Where there is application by the plaintiff for leave, the court must pass a specific order thereon.[285]

Application was made by the plaintiff for leave to institute a suit without serving notice under section 80(1). It was held that the court must pass specific order on the application, considering the nature of the case and reaching conclusion as to whether or not immediate relief is required to be afforded.[286] Section 80(2) does not prescribe any form or manner in which leave of the court for institution of the suit under section 80(2), without notice under sub-section (1), has to be granted. Where a suit is instituted without notice, in expectation of leave under section 80(2), return of the plaint is permissible only if the court is satisfied that no urgent or immediate relief is needed.[287] Where a plaintiff files an application for leave under section 80(2), it is incumbent on the trial court to have passed a specific order. This could be done by taking into account the nature of the case, and also on reaching a conclusion as to whether or not immediate relief is required to be afforded to him. Trial court must apply its

---

281. K Narasimhiah v HC Singri Gowda, AIR 1966 SC 330.
282. State of Karnataka v M Muniraju, AIR 2002 Kant 287.
283. UOI v BD Jhunjhunwala, AIR 1988 Ori 267.
284. Manoj Kumar Shrivastava v Arvind Kumar Choubey, AIR 2002 MP 152.
285. KK Sharma v State of Punjab, AIR 1989 P&H 7.
286. KK Sharma v State of Punjab, AIR 1989 P&H 7.
287. KK Sharma v State of Punjab, AIR 1989 P&H 7.

mind. No doubt, the trial court can return the plaint, but that can be done only if it is satisfied that no urgent or immediate relief need be granted in the suit.[288]

Dismissal of suit for want of notice under section 80 is wrong when application under section 80(2) is pending for grant of leave.[289]

[s 80.40.5] Implied Leave

Section 80 does not prescribe any form or manner in which leave of court for institution of the suit under section 80(2) without notice under sub-section (1) has to be granted. What it says is only "with the leave of the court, without serving any notice as required by sub-section (1). Leave need not be by a formal order. It can be implied also and could be gathered from what the court does. Proceeding with the suit after the objection, by considering any relief, could be a visible manifestation of an implied leave being granted. Section 80(2) does not specify how the leave is to be sought for, or given. In such cases, the mode or form of request or grant is not material. What is material is only the substance whether there was a proper request and whether it was considered and granted. Request with grounds, if any, must be there, and there need only be indications, as to whether the request is allowed or not. A reasoned order may be good and an application is also appreciable, but neither of these is mandatory.[290]

It appears from record that originally the suit was instituted without issuing notice, but on an objection taken by the office, an application was filed under section 80(2) of the Code of Civil Procedure to dispense with the issuance of notice on the ground of urgency, and the defendants in the suit had not chosen to file any counter and ultimately the said application was allowed and in view of the same even framing of issue on this point by the trial court may not be necessary and equally so even in appeal a point for consideration need not be framed.[291]

A perusal of sub-section (2) of section 80 of the CPC shows that no separate application and an express order are the essential requisites; such leave could be presumed; the leave need not be granted by passing a formal order. The leave under sub-section (2) of section 80 could be implied and could be gathered from what the court does. The prayer for leave could be in any form. From the reading of the plaint, it appears that the plaintiff has expressly prayed for leave to present the plaint under sub-section (2) of section 80 of the CPC and gave reasonable explanation in support of such prayers, the trial court has granted leave to the plaintiff to present the plaint in exercise of its power under sub-section (2) of section 80 of the CPC. The requirements of section 80(2) of the CPC were substantially complied with.[292]

[s 80.41] Sub-section (3)

Sub-section (3) is a relaxation, in that a suit is not to be dismissed for any technical error or defect, if, in the notice, there is sufficient material to identify the plaintiff and the cause of action and the relief claimed are substantially indicated. The sub-section is a legislative recognition of what the courts have been all along doing.[293]

---

288. KK Sharma v State of Punjab, AIR 1989 P&H 7; Inder Singh v State of HP, AIR 2002 HP 23.
289. Yashod Kumari v MCD, AIR 2004 Del 225 (DB).
290. TV Parangodan v District Collector Trichur, AIR 1989 Ker 276.
291. State of Andhra Pradesh v Singam Selty Yallananda, AIR 2003 AP 182.
292. Janak Raji Devi v Chandrabati Devi, AIR 2002 Cal 11.
293. See notes under the heading "Substantive Compliance".

[S 81] Exemption from arrest and personal appearance.—In a suit instituted against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity—

(a) the defendant shall not be liable to arrest nor his property to attachment otherwise than in execution of a decree, and

(b) where the Court is satisfied that the defendant cannot absent himself from his duty without detriment to the public service, it shall exempt him from appearing in person.

[s 81.1] Otherwise Than in Execution of a Decree

The object of clause (a) is to exempt a defendant who is a public officer from mesne arrest and his property from mesne attachment. (See O XXVII, rule 8.)

[S 82] Execution of decree.—[294][(1) Where in a suit by or against the Government, or by or against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity, a decree is passed against the Union of India or a State or, as the case may be, the public officer, such decree shall not be executed except in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2)].

(2) Execution shall not be issued on any such decree unless it remains unsatisfied for the period of three months computed from the date of [295][such decree].

[296][(3) The provisions of sub-sections (1) and (2) shall apply in relation to an order or award as they apply in relation to a decree, if the order or award—

(a) is passed or made against [297][the Union of India] or a State or a public officer in respect of any such act as aforesaid, whether by a Court or by any other authority, and

(b) is capable of being executed under the provisions of this Code or of any other law for the time being in force as if it were a decree].

SYNOPSIS

[s 82.1] Changes in the Section 1011
[s 82.2] Non-compliance with the Section..... 1012

[s 82.1] Changes in the Section

Leaving out the formal alteration made by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950, the words "where in a suit by or against the government, or by or against a public officer in respect of any such act as aforesaid, a decree is passed against the Dominion of India or a Province or, as the case may be, the public officer" were substituted by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1949, for the words "Where the decree is against the Dominion of India, or a Province or against a public officer in respect of any such act as aforesaid".

294. Substituted by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), section 28 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
295. Substituted by ibid for "such report" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
296. Inserted by Act 32 of 1949.
297. Substituted by the A.O. 1950 for "the Dominion of India".

By the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1956 (66 of 1956), the words "or within three months from the date of the decree where no time is specified" were inserted in sub-section (1).[298]

The Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976) has modified sub-sections (1) and (2) with the object of simplifying the execution of decrees passed against the government or a public officer. As sub-sections (1) and (2) stood before this amendment, they ran as follows:

> (1) Where in a suit by or against the Government, or by or against a public officer in respect of any such act as aforesaid, a decree is passed against the Union of India or a State or, as the case may be, the public officer; a time shall be specified in the decree within which it shall be satisfied, and, if the decree is not satisfied within the time so specified, or within three months from the date of the decree where no time is specified, the court shall report the case for the orders of the State Government.
>
> (2) Execution shall not be issued on any such decree unless it remains unsatisfied for the period of three months computed from the date of such report.

The Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976) does away with the cumbersomeness and time-consuming procedure by eliminating:

> (i) the requirement of time to be specified for execution,
>
> (ii) the requirement of a report by the court to the state government if the decree has not been satisfied within the time set out therein; and
>
> (iii) suspension of execution for a further period of three months after the date of the report.

Under the amended sub-section (2), the execution remains suspended for a period of three months only from the date of the decree.

[s 82.2] Non-compliance with the Section

Under the section, as it stood before its amendment, the decree could not be executed unless the three conditions set out above were complied with,[299] though the decree, for want of compliance, was not void.[300] In other words, the decree until such compliance was treated as inchoate and not in an executable stage, and therefore, the question of limitation which can be raised under section 47 could not arise.[301] The position then also was that if the decree did not specify any period for its satisfaction, the right to execute it could arise only after the expiry of three months from the date of the report, required to be made and the decree-holder had three years under Article 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963, to execute it from the date such decree became executable.[302] As a result of the amendment, the period of suspension of execution is only three months from the date of the decree. That period is provided to enable the government to move its machinery to satisfy the decree.

---

298. Prasada Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1961 Pat 271.
299. Dominion of India v Gortha Behary Kundu, AIR 1950 Cal 247; Governor General v Pyarelal Marwari, AIR 1948 Pat 179; State of Andhra Pradesh v Somaraju, AIR 1959 AP 165 : (1958) 2 Andh WR 513.
300. Uttar Pradesh Government v Brij Mohan Lal, AIR 1953 All 96.
301. UOI v K Khandelwal, AIR 1970 Ori 137.
302. State of Kerala v Kesavan, AIR 1966 Ker 104.

Where an order of court directed the defendant to withdraw an order suspending the plaintiff forthwith, it was held that failure by him to comply with it was not contempt of court until the period prescribed in the section expired and, as the section then stood, the procedure laid down therein was exhausted.[303]

[304][Suits by Aliens and by or against Foreign Rulers, Ambassadors and Envoys]

[305][S 83] When aliens may sue.—Alien enemies residing in India with the permission of the Central Government, and alien friends, may sue in any Court otherwise competent to try the suit, as if they were citizens of India, but alien enemies residing in India without such permission, or residing in a foreign country, shall not sue in any such court.

Explanation.—Every person residing in a foreign country, the Government of which is at war with India and carrying on business in that country without a licence in that behalf granted by the Central Government, shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed to be an alien enemy residing in a foreign country.

SYNOPSIS

[s 83.1] Changes in the Section 1013
[s 83.2] Alien Enemy 1013
[s 83.3] Alien Enemy Residing in India with Permission of the Central Government 1014
[s 83.4] Limitation 1014

[s 83.1] Changes in the Section

Section 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951 (2 of 1951), except for certain minor changes necessitated by the independence, practically reproduces the old section. So, the cases on different topics under the old section are retained and given below as providing helpful guidance on principles.

[s 83.2] Alien Enemy

As to who are alien enemies, see the undermentioned cases.[306] A person residing or carrying on business in a friendly country indefinitely occupied by the enemy is not hit by this section.[307] A resident of Pakistan who has come to this country on a casual visit is not an alien enemy and is entitled to file a suit for restitution of conjugal rights in the courts of this country.[308] Where suit is instituted after the close of the Indo-Pak conflict (1965) and after the Proclamation of Emergency has been revoked on 10 January 1968, there is no "enemy alien" and the suit is not barred by section 83 of the Code.[309] Where a suit is brought by a person residing in a foreign

303. Dasarathi v Kirpal Singh, AIR 1960 Cal 454.
304. Substituted for former heading and sections 83 to 87 by Act 2 of 1951, section 12.
305. Substituted by Act 2 of 1951, section 12, for section 83.
306. Janson v Driefontein Consolidated Mines, Ltd., AIR 1902 Cal 484, at p 505; Daimler Company, Ltd v Continental Tyre and Rubber Co Ltd, (1916) 2 Cal 388; Haji Ali v Abdul Jalil, AIR 1944 All 97 : (1920) ILR All 188.
307. Chem Abbheong v MA Packiri Mahomed Rowther, AIR 1946 Mad 328 : (1946) Mad 786.
308. Nizamuddin v Huseni, AIR 1960 MP 212.
309. Gyasuddin v Allah Tala Waqf Mansuma, AIR 1986 All 39.

country, which was not an enemy country at that time, the maintainability of the suit is not affected by the fact that subsequently, that country became an enemy country.[310]

[s 83.3] Alien Enemy Residing in India with Permission of the Central Government

A filed a petition in the Allahabad High Court for judicial separation against her husband. The parties were Germans, and the petition was filed while England was at war with Germany. At the time of filing the petition, A was residing in Lucknow apparently with the permission of the Government of India, while her husband was in Germany. After filing the petition, A applied for an order directing the summons together with a copy of the petition to be sent to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court in England for transmission to the Foreign Office for service upon the respondent. The court granted the application.[311] In a decision, the Calcutta High Court held that where there was no bar to the institution of the suit against the plaintiff at its commencement, but during its pendency, the plaintiff became disqualified to prosecute it as a result of the declaration of emergency by India, the proper order by the court is to suspend the trial during the period of the plaintiff's disqualification and not to dismiss it.[312]

The words "may sue" are to be understood with reference to the point of time when the suit is instituted and not to any subsequent stage in the suit.[313]

[s 83.4] Limitation

Where the right of alien enemies to sue is suspended by an order of the government, the period during which the right is suspended will not be excluded from the time prescribed by the Limitation Act, 1963, for the suit.[314]

[S 84] When foreign States may sue.—A foreign State may sue in any competent court:

Provided that the object of the suit is to enforce a private right vested in the Ruler of such State or in any officer of such State in his public capacity.

[s 84.1] Private Right Vested in the Head of a State

This section refers to those private rights of a state that must be enforced through a court of justice as distinguished from its political rights.[315] The expression "a private right" in the proviso means a private right vested in the head of the state or some public officer of such state and not the private right of its subject.[316]

[S 85] Persons specially appointed by Government to prosecute or defend on behalf of foreign Rulers.—(1) The Central Government may, at the request of the Ruler of a foreign State or at the request of any person competent in the opinion

---

310. SN Banerjee v Bhupati Charan, AIR 1976 Cal 267.
311. Anjelina v Joseph, (1917) 39 All 377 : 39 IC 862.
312. SN Banerjee v BC Chakraborty, AIR 1976 Cal 267.
313. Feroza Begam v Dewan Daulat Rai, AIR 1975 Del 1.
314. Deutsch Asiatiche Bank v Hira Lall, (1919) 46 Cal 526.
315. Hojon v Bur Singh, (1885) 11 Cal 17.
316. Mirza Ali Akbar Kashani v United Arab Republic, AIR 1966 SC 230 : (1966) 1 SCR 319.

of the Central Government to act on behalf of such Ruler, by order, appoint any persons to prosecute or defend any suit on behalf of such Ruler, and any persons so appointed shall be deemed to be the recognized agents by whom appearances, acts and applications under this Code may be made or done on behalf of such Ruler.

(2) An appointment under this section may be made for the purpose of a specified suit or of several specified suits, or for the purpose of all such suits as it may from time to time be necessary to prosecute or defend on behalf of such Ruler.

(3) A person appointed under this section may authorise or appoint any other persons to make appearances and applications and do acts in any such suit or suits as if he were himself a party thereto.

SYNOPSIS

[s 85.1] Recognised Agents Specially Appointed Under This Section 1015
[s 85.2] Discovery..... 1015

[s 85.1] Recognised Agents Specially Appointed Under This Section

This section is an enabling section. It enables a sovereign prince or a ruling chief to prosecute or defend suits through recognised agents specially appointed in that behalf; it does not prevent the institution of a suit by a sovereign prince in his own name or through a recognised agent appointed under O III rule 2 [Code of 1882, section 371].[317]

A plaint in a suit instituted on behalf of a ruling chief is signed by AB. At the time of signing the plaint, AB was not specially appointed to sue on behalf of the chief under this section. The plaint is nevertheless good if AB is subsequently appointed to sue on, behalf of the chief, and if the appointment is made before the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit.[318] In the undermentioned case, however, it was held that the provisions corresponding to this section, which are enacted for a privileged class of persons, must be strictly construed and that a subsequent authority obtained under this section for the first time after the presentation of the appeal against the dismissal of the suit cannot cure the defect.[319]

The section does not require that notice should be given to the opposite party before a certificate is granted. When the consent of the government is sought to sue a ruler, the latter can ask the government for permission to be represented by an agent in the action.[320] A certificate granted under this section is conclusive and not liable to be questioned in a court.[321]

The abovementioned cases though decided under the old section, express the principles underlying the present section.

[s 85.2] Discovery

In England, a foreign state is not considered exempt from having to give discovery.[322]

317. Maharaja of Bharatpur v Kacheru, (1897) 19 All 510; Beer Chunder v Ishan Chunder, (1884) 10 Cal 136; Rameshchandra v Maharaja Birendra, AIR 1925 Cal 513 : (1924) 29 Cal WN 287.
318. Maharaja of Rewah v Swami Saran, (1903) 25 All 635 distinguished in Abdul Latif v Jawahar State, AIR 1940 Bom 172 : (1940) 42 Bom LR 262.
319. Abdul Latif v Jawhar State, AIR 1940 Bom 172.
320. N Ibohal Singh v Budh Chandra Singh, AIR 1961 Mani 40.
321. Mirza Akbar Kasini v United Arab Republic, AIR 1960 Cal 768.
322. United States of America v Wagner, (1867) 2 Ch App 590; Republic of Peru v Wagueline, (1875) LR 20 Eq 140.

[[S 86] Suits against foreign Rulers, Ambassadors and Envoys.—(1) No [323][* * *] foreign State may be sued in any Court otherwise competent to try the suit except with the consent of the Central Government certified in writing by a Secretary to that Government:

Provided that a person may, as a tenant of immovable property, sue without such consent as aforesaid [324][a foreign State] from whom he holds or claims to hold the property.

(2) Such consent may be given with respect to a specified suit or to several specified suits or with respect to all suits of any specified class or classes, and may specify, in the case of any suit or class of suits, the Court in which the [325][the foreign State] may be sued, but it shall not be given, unless it appears to the Central Government that [326][the foreign State]—

(a) has instituted a suit in the Court against the person desiring to sue [327][it], or

(b) by [328][itself] or another, trades within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(c) is in possession of immovable property situate within those limits and is to be sued with reference to such property or for money charged thereon, or

(d) has expressly or impliedly waived the privilege accorded to [329][it] by this section.

[330][(3) Except with the consent of the Central Government, certified in writing by a Secretary to that Government, no decree shall be executed against the property of any foreign State.]

(4) The preceding provisions of this section shall apply in relation to—

[331][(a) any Ruler of a foreign State;]

[332][(aa)] any Ambassador or Envoy of a foreign State;

(b) any High Commissioner of a Commonwealth country; and

(c) any such member of the staff [333][of the foreign State or the staff or retinue of the Ambassador] or Envoy of a foreign State or of the High Commissioner of a Commonwealth country as the Central Government may, by general or special order, specify in this behalf,

[as they apply in relation to a foreign State].

[334][(5) The following persons shall not be arrested under this Code, namely:—

---

323. The words "Ruler of a" omitted by Act 104 of 1976, section 29 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
324. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 29, for "a Ruler" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
325. Substituted for "the Ruler" by Act 104 of 1976, section 29 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
326. Substituted for "the Ruler" by Act 104 of 1976, section 29 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
327. Substituted for "him" by Act 104 of 1976, section 29 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
328. Substituted for "himself" by Act 14 of 1976, section 29 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
329. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 29, for "himself" (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
330. Substituted by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), section 29, for sub-section 3 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
331. Inserted by ibid (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
332. Clause (a) re-lettered as clause (aa) by Act 104 of 1976, section 29 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
333. Substituted by Act 104 of 1976, section 29 for certain words (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).
334. Inserted by Act 104 of 1976, section 29 (w.e.f. 1-2-1977).

(a) any Ruler of a foreign State;

(b) any Ambassador or Envoy of a foreign State;

(c) any High Commissioner of a Commonwealth country;

(d) any such member of the staff of the foreign State or the staff or retinue of the Ruler, Ambassador or Envoy of a foreign State or of the High Commissioner of a Commonwealth country, as the Central Government may, by general or special order, specify in this behalf.

(6) Where a request is made to the Central Government for the grant of any consent referred to in sub-section (1), the Central Government shall, before refusing to accede to the request in whole or in part, give to the person making the request a reasonable opportunity of being heard].

SYNOPSIS

[s 86.1] Changes in the Section 1017
[s 86.2] Immunity of a Foreign State 1018
[s 86.3] Scope of the Section 1019
[s 86.4] Foreign State..... 1020
[s 86.5] Consent Shall Not Be Given "unless it appears, etc"..... 1020
[s 86.6] Consent Must Be Obtained Before Institution of Suit 1020
[s 86.7] Proceedings Under the Companies Act, 2013..... 1022
[s 86.8] Waiver of Want of Consent..... 1022
[s 86.9] Sub-section (4) 1023
[s 86.10] Immunity Against Arrest in Execution of a Decree..... 1023
[s 86.11] Limitation..... 1023

[s 86.1] Changes in the Section

The first changes in the section were carried out by section 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951 (II of 1951). It replaced the words "such Prince or Chief" by the words "Ruler of a foreign State". In all other respects otherwise, it reproduced the old section except two changes:

(i) it added a new clause, clause (d) to sub-section (2); and

(ii) it extended the provisions of the section to High Commissioners of the Commonwealth countries and specified members of the staff of diplomatic missions [vide sub-section 4, clauses (b) and (c)].

By section 29 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976 (104 of 1976), several changes have been effected in the section. In sub-section (1), the words "Ruler of a" have been deleted. In the proviso to sub-section (1), the words "a Ruler" have been substituted by the words "a foreign State". Following upon these changes, the words "the Ruler" wherever they occurred in sub-section (2) were substituted by the words "the foreign State", and the words "him" and "himself" by the words "it" and "itself".

Sub-section (3) which barred the arrest of a ruler of a foreign state in execution of a decree and also execution of such decree except with the consent of the Central Government has been substituted by the present sub-section (3). In sub-clause 4, the original clause (a) has been renumbered as clause (aa) and a new clause (a), viz, "any Ruler of a foreign State" has been inserted. In clause (c) the words "of the foreign State or the staff or retinue of the Ambassador" have been substituted for the words "of the Ruler", etc. In the same clause, the words "as they apply in relation to a foreign state" have been substituted for the words "as they apply in relation to the Ruler of a foreign State".

Sub-sections 5 and 6 were inserted by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1976. For definition of the terms "Foreign State" and "Ruler" see section 87A.

[s 86.2] Immunity of a Foreign State

Sub-section (1) contains statutory provisions covering a field which otherwise would be covered by the doctrine of immunity of a foreign state under the Public International Law. This sub-section is contrary to what prevails in England where the jurisdiction of the courts to entertain an action against a foreign state is barred. But as our Supreme Court has observed, every sovereign state is competent to make its own laws in relation to the rights and liabilities of foreign states to be sued within its own municipal courts. Just as an independent sovereign state may statutorily provide for its own rights and liabilities to sue and be sued, so can it provide for the rights and liabilities of foreign states to sue and be sued in its municipal courts. The effect of sub-section (1), thus, is to modify to this extent the doctrine of immunity recognised by the international law. When, therefore, a suit is filed with the consent of the Central Government, it would not be open to the foreign state to rely on the doctrine of immunity as the municipal courts are bound by the statutory provisions such as sub-section (1) of this section. The sub-section is not merely procedural, but is in a sense a counterpart of section 84 which confers on a foreign state, the right to sue.[335]

Immunity under section 86 cannot be claimed by a company owned by the Government of Sri Lanka and incorporated under Sri Lanka statute. It cannot be equated with the Government of Sri Lanka.[336] Kenya Airways was considered to be a "Foreign state" within the meaning of section 86, as the entire shares of the company were held by the Government of Kenya and the transfer of company shares to public, though, was permissible, but no such transfer was effected.[337] Suit against an organ of a foreign state, DSR Lines of the erstwhile German Democratic Republic, is not barred by section 86. But if the plea is taken that the defendant would be entitled to sovereign immunity in international law, the plea would be decided as a preliminary issue.[338] In a Delhi case, it was pointed out that certain developments had taken place in regard to sovereign immunity and the following observations of the court are of considerable interest.[339]

It is interesting to note that there have been instances where repairs have been done to the property of sovereign states which have not been paid for by the sovereign states, which led to the filings of proceedings for recovery of such monies. One such instance is reported in[340] Planmount Ltd v Republic of Zaire, in which the plaintiff sought to recover money on account of repairs done to the property belonging to the Republic of Zaire. Plea was taken that being a sovereign state Republic of Zaire could not be sued. The single judge dealing with the matter noted several judgements on similar issues which had arisen in various jurisdictions in different countries including England and Germany. The judge noted that there has been a change in the international law regarding such liabilities of foreign states, and that distinction has been made in the interenational law regarding liability arising out of commercial activity of sovereign

---

335. Mirza Ali Akbar Kashani v United Arab Republic, AIR 1966 SC 230 : (1966) 1 SCR 319; Chandulal Kushalji v Awad, (1897) 21 Bom 351; GDR v Dynamic Industrial Undertaking, AIR 1972 Bom 27 : (1972) ILR Bom 731 : 73 Bom LR 183.
336. Capstan Shipping Enterprises v Ceylon Shipping Lines, AIR 1989 NOC 175 (Cal).
337. Kenya Airways v Jinibai B Kheshwala, AIR 1998 Bom 287(DB).
338. New Central Jute Mills v VEB Deutr-Frachit Seerederai Rostock, AIR 1983 Cal 225 (DB).
339. Century Twenty-One Pvt Ltd v UOI, AIR 1987 Del 124; Harbhajan Singh v UOI, AIR 1987 SC 9, commented upon in Indian Journal of International Law, Vol 27, No 4, 1987, pp 483–86.
340. Planmount Ltd v Republic of Zaire, (1981) 1 All ER 1110.

states. The single judge, in that case, held that contract for repairs of a building has to be regarded as an act of transaction of private or commercial nature and not as a governmental act done by a sovereign government. The single judge has relied upon judgement of the court of appeal in the case Trendtex Trading Corp Ltd v Central Bank of Nigeria.[341] In that case, the applicable international law was reviewed, and the change in the international law which has come into being in America and England noted.

In another case, refusal to give permission to sue the Government of Algeria for charges was claimed by the applicant for permission. In respect of building, maintenance, etc, work done at the embassy premises in New Delhi was found to be unjustified. In reply to the application, the Ministry had stated that permission could not be given on political grounds.

The court found apparent contradiction in what was stated in the refusal to give permission to sue and what was stated in the affidavit of the government. The court held that it was not for the government to decide whether there was a prima facie case or not; that was for the judiciary to adjudicate.

In the above judgement, certain other important observations were made which are of great relevance as under:

> In this case, the petitioner had a right to carry on the work of maintenance and repairs in this country. This right is granted to him under the Constitution and he trades within the local limits of the courts in India and the foreign State which he wants to sue his immovable property in India within the limits of this country. There is a dispute about the petitioner's claim. That dispute has not been judicially determined. It has not been held that the claim of the petitioner is frivolous. In that view of the matter, it appears to us that a foreign State in this country if it fulfils the conditions stipulated in sub-section (2) of Section 86 of the Code would be liable to be sued in this country. That would be in conformity with the principles of international law as recognised as part of our domestic law and in accordance with our Constitution and human rights.

[s 86.3] Scope of the Section

The words "sue", "be sued" and "suits" used in sub-sections (1) and (2) indicate that the section applies only to suits. A proceeding which does not commence with a plaint is not a suit. It has been held that since an insolvency proceeding is started not with the presentation of a plaint but with the presentation of a petition it does not attract this section even if read with section 141 merely by reason of the fact that a ruler is one of the creditor.[342] For the same reason, the section cannot apply to probate proceedings,[343] nor to proceedings taken under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.[344] The observation in Mirza Akbar Kasini's case that the section contemplates a suit against a natural and not an artificial person is no longer applicable in view of the omission of the word "Ruler" in sub-sections (1) and (2) and the substitution of the words "foreign state" in its place. Principles underlying the earlier decisions in cases where the rulers and chiefs of the former Indian states were sued are, except to the limited extent set out in section 87B, also no longer relevant in view of the deletion of Article 362 of the Constitution and their ceasing to be recognised as rulers under Article 363A by the Constitution (Twenty-Sixth Amendment) Act, 1971, which came into force with effect from 28 December 1971.

---

341. Trendtex Trading Corp Ltd v Central Bank of Nigeria, (1977) 1 All ER 881 : [1977] 1 QB 529.
342. Madan Lal v HH The Nawab Saiyed Raza Ali Khan, AIR 1940 Cal 244.
343. Indrajit Singh v Rajendra Singhji, AIR 1956 Bom 45 : (1955) Bom 912.
344. Bhagwat Singh v Rajasthan, AIR 1963 Raj 22 : (1962) ILR Raj 571.

[s 86.4] Foreign State

The by-laws show that the Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister of Defence and Aviation have to implement the decree of the Council of Minister. The Saudi Arabian Airlines Corporation is a public and independent organisation. It is attached to the Ministry of Defence and Aviation. It is managed by a board which is presided by the Minister of Defence and Aviation and comprises of nine members appointed by the resolution of Council of Ministers on nomination by Minister of Defence and Aviation. It clearly shows that the control over the defendant airlines corporation is with the state. Merely because it is carrying on an independent work will not take it away from the purview of sub-section (1) to section 86. It will still be a foreign state because of the nature of the by-laws and the control which is almost complete with the state and its functionaries. Consequently, before the suit could be filed, the consent of the Central Government certified in writing by the secretary to the government was necessary.[345]

[s 86.5] Consent Shall Not Be Given "unless it appears, etc"

The words "it appears to the Central Government", which is the consenting authority, make it clear that the decision granting the consent is final and not open to question by the court.[346] The earlier decisions which assumed to the contrary are not sustainable.[347] It is also not open to the court to question the propriety of an order granting or refusing the consent.[348]

Suit was proposed to be filed against foreign consulate general—consent of the Central Government was refused. The refusal was on "political grounds". The order did not state what political considerations necessitated the refusal. It was held that the refusal was liable to be quashed. The matter was remitted to the Central Government for decision according to law.[349]

[s 86.6] Consent Must Be Obtained Before Institution of Suit

Provisions of section 86(1) are not impliedly superseded by provisions of Carriage by Air Act, 1972.[350]

The consent by the Central Government must be obtained before the institution of the suit. Consent obtained after the institution of the suit is not sufficient. If the consent has not been obtained before the institution of the suit, the proper course is to dismiss the suit or perhaps allow the plaintiff to withdraw it with liberty to bring a fresh suit under O XXIII, rule 1 (Code of 1882, section 373).[351] Once consent has been obtained for the institution of the suit, it is consent also for the continuation of that suit.[352]

In a consumer dispute, a foreign airline approached the Supreme Court on the ground that a foreign State or its instrumentality cannot be proceeded against under the Consumer

---

345. Mansoor Mumtaz v Saudi Arabian Airlines Corp, AIR 2002 Del 103.
346. Govindram v State of Gondal, AIR 1950 PC 99 : 77 IA 156 : (1950) 54 Cal WN 419 (PC).
347. Beer Chunder v Raj Coomer Nobadeep Chunder, (1883) 9 Cal 535; Maharaja of Jaipur v Lalji Sahai, (1907) 29 All 379.
348. Govindram v State of Gondal, AIR 1950 PC 99; Mohammad Raza v Kapurthala Estate, AIR 1955 Oudh 164.
349. Shanti Prasad Agarwalla v UOI, AIR 1991 SC 814 : (1991) Supp 2 SCC 296; Harbhan Singh Bhalla v UOI, (1986) 4 SCC 678.
350. Mansoor Mumtaz v Saudi Arabian Airlines Corp, AIR 2002 Del 103.
351. Mirza Ali Akbar v UAR, AIR 1966 SC 230; Chandulal v Awad Bin Umar, (1897) 21 Bom 351, at pp 355–358; Maharana Sir Nripendra v Maharaja Manindra, (1912) 17 Cal WN 1942.
352. BM Ghorpade v SB Padaki, AIR 1976 Kant 164.

Protection Act, 1986, without obtaining prior permission from Central Government. It was contended that a foreign State or its instrumentality can legitimately claim sovereign immunity from being proceeded against under the Act in respect of a civil claim. It was held by the Supreme Court that the proceedings before the consumer redressal fora fall within the definition of "suit" as they are proceedings in which consumers may pursue the remedies afforded to them by the Consumer Protection Act, 1986, and other laws and where the rights of the parties are fully litigated by an organ of justice. It was further held by the Supreme Court that the Code of Civil Procedure itself does not claim to make Section 86 applicable to proceedings before the Consumer Forum. Instead, the Code of Civil Procedure includes a saving clause, providing that "in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing in [CPC] shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any special … law … or any special form of procedure prescribed, by or under any other law…" In addition, Section 86 only applies to a "suit in any court". This term should be understood differently than the term "court" because CPC refers exclusively to the civil courts. In particular, CPC specifically refers to the District Courts, the High Courts, and the Supreme Court and makes little, if any, reference to other, quasi-judicial fora like the consumer redressal bodies at issue here. It was further held that Section 86 of CPC is inapplicable because the legislative intent is deemed to exclude older and more general statutes by more recent and special statutes, eg, the Consumer Protection Act, 1986 and the Carriage by Air Act, 1972 and under these Acts, Ethiopian Airlines is not entitled to sovereign immunity in a suit such as the one at issue. Thus, it was held that the consent of Central Government was not required to subject Ethiopian Airlines to suit in an Indian court, let alone in a consumer redressal forum. Speaking for the Court, Dr. Dalveer Bhandari, J, observed as under[353]:

> 83. On a careful analysis of the American, English and Indian cases, it is abundantly clear that the appellant Ethiopian Airlines must be held accountable for the contractual and commercial activities and obligations that it undertakes in India.
>
> 84. It may be pertinent to mention that Parliament has recognised this fact while passing the Consumer Protection Act, 1986 and the Carriage by Air Act, 1972. Section 86 was itself, a modification and restriction of the principle of foreign sovereign immunity and thus, by limiting Section 86's applicability, Parliament through these Acts, further narrowed a party's ability to successfully plead foreign sovereign immunity.
>
> 85. In the modern era, where there is close interconnection between different countries as far as trade, commerce and business are concerned, the principle of sovereign immunity can no longer be absolute in the way that it much earlier was. Countries who participate in trade, commerce and business with different countries ought to be subjected to normal rules of the market. If State-owned entities would be able to operate with impunity, the rule of law would be degraded and international trade, commerce and business will come to a grinding halt.
>
> 86. Therefore, we have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that the appellant cannot claim sovereign immunity. The preliminary objection raised by the appellant before the court is devoid of any merit and must be rejected.

For seeking permission under section 86, a letter in the following form was held to be sufficient:

> Kindly permit me to hand over this matter to my legal adviser for taking legal recourse for ejectment. I would like to take this recourse only upon your permission.[354]

---

353. Ethiopian Airlines v Ganesh Narain Saboo, (2011) 8 SCC 539.
354. Century Twenty One Pvt Ltd v UOI, AIR 1987 Del 124.

[s 86.7] Proceedings Under the Companies Act, 2013

The Allahabad High Court held that this section did not apply to proceedings under section 184 of the Companies Act, 2013, as the latter section imposes a statutory obligation upon the court to settle the list of contributories but that this section applied to all proceedings under sections 186 and 187 of the Companies Act, 2013. Hence, no order could be made to make calls on or order payment by a shareholder who was a ruling chief (after the amendment, a ruler of a foreign state).[355] The position would be the same under the Companies Act, 1956 and therefore this section will not apply to proceedings under section 467, but will govern proceedings under sections 469 and 470.

[s 86.8] Waiver of Want of Consent

The short question which can be considered is as to whether if such a defence of bar under section 80(1) is not taken, it would tantamount to waiver the plea that was available to the defendant. It must be stated at the outset that waiver is a conscious abandonment of a right. It has to be seen in the facts and circumstances of each case as to whether that right has been waiver or not.[356]

It is well-settled that where a court has no jurisdiction at all to entertain a suit, objection to its jurisdiction can be taken at any stage of the suit even though the defendant might have, at one stage, waived the objection, for a defect in jurisdiction cannot be cured by waiver. But if the case is one of irregular exercise of jurisdiction, the defect may be cured by waiver on the part of the defendant (see notes under section 21). The High Court of Bombay, after an exhaustive review of authorities held under the old section that if a suit was entertained against a sovereign prince without the consent of the Governor-General in Council having been obtained, the case would be one of irregular exercise of jurisdiction and if the defendant had not objected until the suit was ripe for hearing, he would be deemed to have waived the objection to jurisdiction.[357] This view was dissented from by the High Court of Madras on the ground that "the recognition of cases of waiver, as excepted from the ordinary provisions of International Law as understood in England, cannot be imported into the clear language of the Indian Code".[358] The Patna High Court went to the length of holding that even applications for adjournment made on behalf of a ruling chief amounted to a waiver of his privilege and debarred him from objecting to the court's jurisdiction.[359] The Privy Council, however, in a later case, held that this and the next section related to an important matter of public policy in India, that the provisions contained therein were imperative and had to be observed and that having regard to the public purposes which they served, they could not be waived.[360] The effect of the Privy Council's decision was to overrule the decisions of the Bombay and Patna High Courts. In a later case, the Bombay High Court following Gackwar Rly case, held that there could be no waiver of want of notice under this section.[361] It has also been held that the rule as to consent in this section is not merely a rule of procedure.[362] The plea of bar of section

---

355. Official Liquidators, DDM Electric Tramways Co v President Council of Regency, Nabha State, AIR 1936 All 826 : (1936) 58 All 742 (FB).
356. Mansoor Mumtaz v Saudi Arabian, Airlines Corp, AIR 2002 Del 103.
357. Chandulal v Awad Bin Umar, (1897) 21 Bom 351.
358. Narayappa v The Cochin Sircar, (1918) 39 Mad 881.
359. Maharaj Bahadur v Siva Saran, AIR 1921 Pat 23 : (1921) 6 Pat LJ 185.
360. Gackwar Baroda State Rly v Hafiz, AIR 1938 PC 165 : (1938) 65 IA 182; reversing the decision, the High Court of Allahabad reported in AIR 1934 All 749; Madanlal v HH The Nawab Sayed Reza Ali Khan, AIR 1940 Cal 244.
361. Thakore Sahib Kanji Keshari v Gulam Rasul, AIR 1955 Bom 449 : 57 Bom LR 824.
362. Madan Lal v HH The Nawab Sayad Reza Ali Khab, AIR 1940 Cal 244.

86 was pleaded for the first time after almost 16 years of the filing of the suit after submitting themselves to the jurisdiction of the court. Foreign Airline has filed their appearances and appeared in the proceedings. Foreign Airline had given undertaking and made statements thereby avoiding appointment of court receiver. Foreign Airline has filed their respective statement wherein this plea has not been raised. Having submitted to the jurisdiction of the court, Foreign Airline would be deemed to have waived their rights, if any, under section 86 of the Code. Foreign Airline cannot, therefore, be permitted to raise the plea in respect of maintainability of this suit under section 86 of the Code.[363]

But suit filed against Saudi Arabian Airlines Corporation, which was attached to Ministry of Defence and Aviation of Saudi Arabia, control over same being with the state, would be termed as foreign state. Consequently, before suit could be filed, consent of Central Government certified in writing by Secretary to Government would be necessary.[364]

[s 86.9] Sub-section (4)

Though the amendment omitted the words "Ruler of a" from sub-section 1, it has provided the protection of the section to rulers of foreign states, by adding to sub-section 4 a new clause (a). The protection of the section is extended to four categories of persons enumerated in clauses (a), (aa), (b) and (c). The privilege of notice under this section enjoyed by the ex-rulers of Indian states no longer exists, since as a result of the deletion of Article 362 of the Constitution and the new Article 363A, they have ceased to be recognised as such rulers. The old cases pertaining to them have therefore ceased to have any relevance. The principle laid down in the earlier cases relating to the ex-rulers of the Indian states that the provisions of this section applied to them even when they were sued in their private capacity,[365] it is submitted, holds good when a suit is filed against a ruler of a foreign state.

[s 86.10] Immunity Against Arrest in Execution of a Decree

Sub-section 5 is new. It furnishes immunity against arrest in execution of a decree to the categories of persons there set out including rulers of foreign states.

[s 86.11] Limitation

In computing the period of limitation, a plaintiff in a suit to which this section applies, is not entitled to deduct the time spent in obtaining the consent.[366] Section 15(5) of the Limitation Act, 1963, provides that in computing the period of limitation for any suit the time during which the defendant has been absent from India shall be excluded. The Calcutta view was that the time must be excluded even if the defendant was carrying on business in what then was called British India through an authorised agent during his absence.[367] The Bombay High Court, on the other hand, held that section 13 of the Limitation Act, 1908 (section 15 of the Limitation Act, 1963) must be read with sections 85, 86 and 87 (as they then stood) of the Code so far as a sovereign prince or a ruling chief was concerned; and that such a prince or chief must be treated as residing in British India for purposes of the Limitation Act,

---

363. Kenya Airways v Jinibai B Kheshwala, AIR 1998 Bom 287(DB).
364. Mansoor Mumtaz v Saudi Arabian Airlines Corp, AIR 2002 Del 103.
365. Narayanan v The Cochin Sircar, ILR 38 Mad 635, affirmed in (1966) 39 Mad 681; Rewa Shankar v Narasinghji, AIR 1957 HP 16.
366. Shrimant Sayaji Maharaj v Madhavrao, AIR 1929 Bom 14 : (1929) 53 Bom 12.
367. Pooma Chunder v Sasson, (1998) 25 Cal 496 (FB).

1908, in so far as he carried on business through his representatives.[368] It is submitted that the Bombay view is correct. Before refusing sanction, natural justice must be observed. Besides this, the decision must be expressed in such a manner that reasons can be spelt out from such a decision.[369]

[370][[S 87] Style of foreign Rulers as parties to suits.—The Ruler of a foreign State may sue, and shall be sued, in the name of his State:

Provided that in giving the consent referred to in section 86, the Central Government may direct that the Ruler may be sued in the name of an agent or in any other name].

[s 87.1] High Court Amendment

Calcutta.—Omit the words "and shall be sued", after the words "Ruling Chief may sue" and before the words "in the name of"; omit the proviso Calcutta Gazette pt I, dated 20 April 20 1967.

This section does not apply to rulers of former Indian states.[371]

[372][[S 87A] Definitions of "foreign State" and "Ruler".—(1) In this Part,—

(a) "foreign State" means any State outside India which has been recognised by the Central Government; and

(b) "Ruler", in relation to a foreign State, means the person who is for the time being recognized by the Central Government to be the head of that State.

(2) Every court shall take judicial notice of the fact—

(a) that a State has or has not been recognized by the Central Government;

(b) that a person has or has not been recognized by the Central Government to be the head of the State].

The word "Ruler" in clause (b) takes in rulers of all foreign states, whatever their forms of government, for the time being, and is recognised by the Central Government to be the head of the state.[373]

Suits Against Rulers of Former Indian States

[S 87B] Application of sections 85 and 86 to Rulers of Former Indian States—[374][(1) In the case of any suit by or against the Ruler of any former Indian State which is based wholly or in part upon a cause of action which arose before the commencement of the Constitution or any proceeding arising out of such suit, the provisions of section 85 and sub-sections (1) and (3) of section 86 shall apply in relation to such Ruler as they apply in relation to the Ruler of a foreign State.]

---

368. Shrimant Sayaji Maharaj v Madhavrao, AIR 1929 Bom 14 : (1929) 53 Bom 12.
369. Harbhajan Singh v UOI, AIR 1987 SC 9 : 1986 (4) SCC 678 : 1987 (1) SCR 114 : (1986) JT 765 : (1987) 1 SCJ 318.
370. Substituted for former sections 83 to 87 by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951 (2 of 1951), section 12.
371. N Ibohal Singh v Budh Chandra Singh, AIR 1961 Mani 40.
372. Substituted for former sections 83 to 87 by Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1951 (2 of 1951), section 12.
373. Mirza Ali Akbar Kashani v Union Arab Republic, AIR 1966 SC 230 : (1966) 1 SCR 319.
374. Substituted by Act 54 of 1972, section 3 for sub-section (1).

(2) In this section—

(a) "former Indian State" means any such Indian State as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify for the purposes of this section; [375][* * *]

[376][(b) "commencement of the Constitution" means the 26th day of January, 1950; and

(c) "Ruler" in relation to a former Indian State, has the same meaning as in Article 363 of the Constitution].

SYNOPSIS

[s 87B.1] Scope 1025
[s 87B.2] Constitutionality 1026

[s 87B.1] Scope

This section was substituted for the one which stood prior to the enactment of the Rulers of Indian States (Abolition of Privileges) Act, 1972 (54 of 1972). As the section stood till then the word "Ruler" in relation to a former Indian State was defined by clause (b) of sub-section (2) to mean the person who, for the time being, was recognised by the president as the ruler of the state for the purposes of the Constitution. Act 54 of 1972 was the sequel of the Constitution (Twenty Sixth Amendment) Act, 1971 which came into force with effect from 28 December 1971 and which inserted a new article, Article 363A, which provided that:

> Notwithstanding anything in this Constitution or in any law for the time being in force—
>
> (a) the Prince, Chief or other person who, at any time before the commencement of the Constitution (Twenty Sixth Amendment) Act, 1971 was recognised by the President as the Ruler of an Indian state or any person who, at any time before such commencement, was recognised by the President, as the successor of such Ruler shall, on and from such commencement, cease to be recognised as such Ruler or the successor of such Ruler.

The result of this Constitution Amendment Act is that the former rulers who were entitled to claim protection under this section, can no longer do so by reason of the fact that with effect from 28 December 1971, they ceased to be recognised as such rulers—thus nullifying section 87B as it then stood. Act 54 of 1972 saves protection earlier enjoyed by such rulers in a very limited way which is for all practical purposes academic, in that it is confined only to suits based wholly or in part on a cause of action which arose before the commencement of the Constitution, i.e., 26 January 1950 and proceedings arising out of such suits.

The immunity under the section is personal to the rulers.[377]

As the section formerly stood, it was held that it had no application to suits filed by ex-rulers and that consequently any claim by them for exemption from personal appearance would have to be dealt with under the ordinary law.[378] This is no longer correct, as the section to the extent, it affords immunity applies to suits by and against the ex-rulers.

---

375. The word "and" omitted by Act 54 of 1972, section 3.
376. Substituted by Act 54 of 1972, section 3, for clause (b).
377. Bhagwan Pandia v Nayan Kunvarba, AIR 1953 Sau 53.
378. Darbar Saheb v New India Assurance Co Ltd, (1955) Bom LR 236.

[s 87B.2] Constitutionality

A conjoint reading of the provisions contained in section 87B of the Code of Civil Procedure, Articles 366(22) and 363- of the Constitution of India demonstrates that the rulers of Indian states form a class by themselves and the special treatment given to them by section 87B of the Code of Civil Procedure cannot be said to be based on unconstitutional discrimination. There is, of course, discrimination between the ex-rulers and the rest of the citizens of India, but that discrimination is justified having regard to the historical and legislative background.[379]

The section has been held not to be repugnant to Article 14 of the Constitution as it is based on a valid classification.[380]

Interpleader

[S 88] Where interpleader-suit may be instituted.—Where two or more persons claim adversely to another the same debts, sum of money or other property, movable or immovable, from another person, who claims no interest therein other than for charges or costs and who is ready to pay or deliver it to the rightful claimant, such other person may institute a suit of interpleader against all the claimants for the purpose of obtaining a decision as to the person to whom the payment or delivery shall be made and of obtaining indemnity for himself:

Provided that where any suit is pending in which the rights of all parties can properly be decided, no such suit of interpleader shall be instituted.

See O XXXV.

SYNOPSIS

[s 88.1]	Changes in the Section	1026	[s 88.4]	Amendment of Plaint in an Interpleader Suit 1028
[s 88.2]	What Is an Interpleader Suit	1026
[s 88.3]	Who Claims No Interest Other Than for Charges or Costs	1027

[s 88.1] Changes in the Section

This section corresponds with section 470 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars:

(i) The words, "the same debt, sum of money or other property, movable or immovable", have been substituted for the words, "the same payment or property".

(ii) The words, "who claims no interest therein other than for charges or costs", have been borrowed from RSC, O LVII, rule 2, and have been substituted for the words, "whose only interest therein is that of a mere stakeholder".

[s 88.2] What Is an Interpleader Suit

An interpleader suit is one in which the real dispute is between the defendants only and the defendants interplead, that is to say plead against each other instead of pleading against

379. Narendra Singh Rajawat v Thakur Mohan Singh Kanota, AIR 2002 Raj 218.
380. Mohan Lal v Sawai Mansinghji, AIR 1962 SC 73 : (1962) 1 SCR 702.

the plaintiff as in an ordinary suit. In every interpleader suit, there must be some debt or sum of money or other property in dispute between the defendants only, and the plaintiff must be a person who claims no interest therein other than for charges or costs and who is ready to pay or deliver it to such of the defendants as may be declared by the court to be entitled to it. Thus, suppose certain property is claimed by A as well as by B, and X is in possession of that property and claims no interest in the property himself and is ready and willing to deliver it to such party as may be declared by the court to be the rightful owner of it, X as plaintiff may institute an interpleader suit against A and B as defendants. In such a case, X will, as a rule, be dismissed from the suit at the first hearing after his costs are provided for, and A and B will be left to interplead and to fight the matter out between themselves as if one of them was plaintiff and the other was defendant (O XXXV rule 4). But before the plaintiff is dismissed from the suit, he must deposit the property in dispute in court (O XXXV, rule 2). X can even move the court for an order to get his name removed from the suit.[381] It would appear that in such a suit it is not necessary that the plaintiff must admit the claim against him in its entirety. To the extent he admits his liability, he may ask the rival claimants to interplead. Thus, where the plaintiff mortgagors claimed that they were agriculturists and as such were entitled to have the mortgage debt scaled down under Tamil Nadu Agriculturists Relief Act, 1938 (Act 4 of 1938) and when so scaled down, the debt would only be Rs 30,000 and the defendants asserted their rival claims to the debt and while doing so denied that the plaintiffs were agriculturists or that the debt was liable to be scaled down it was held that to the extent of the admitted liability for Rs 30,000, the suit was maintainable as an interpleader suit.[382]

[s 88.3] Who Claims No Interest Other Than for Charges or Costs

These words indicate that the plaintiff in an interpleader suit must be in a real position of impartiality.[383] A railway company which claims no interest in goods in its possession other than a lien on the goods for wharfage, demurrage and freight, may institute an interpleader suit where the goods are claimed by two persons adversely to each other.[384]

A holds in his hands a sum of Rs 5,000 which is claimed by B and C adversely to each other. A institutes an interpleader suit against B and C. It is found at the hearing that A had entered into an agreement with B before the institution of the suit that if B succeeded in the suit he should accept from A Rs 4,000 only in full satisfaction of his claim. Here A has, by virtue of the agreement, an interest in the subject matter of the suit, and he is not, therefore, entitled to institute an interpleader suit. The suit must be dismissed.[385]

A party who has taken an indemnity from one of the claimants is not entitled to file an interpleader suit.[386]

A suit is not necessarily an interpleader suit and subject to the provisions of this section, merely because one of the reliefs claimed by the plaintiff requires the defendants to interplead

---

381. National Insurance Co Ltd v Dhirendra Nath, AIR 1938 Cal 287 : (1939) 1 Cal 53.
382. Inuganti Sobhanadrirao v M Jaggayya, AIR 1966 AP 92.
383. Sambiah v Subba Reddiar, (1951) 1 Mad LJ 353.
384. Bombay Baroda Rly Co v Sasoon, (1894) 18 Bom 231; Allenborough v St Katharine's Docks, (1878) 3 CPD 450.
385. Murrietta v South American Co, (1893) 62 LJQB 396.
386. Hari Karmakar v Robin, AIR 1927 Rang 91 : (1927) 4 Rang 465.

together concerning certain claims. The court must have regard to all the prayers of the plaint to determine the exact nature of the suit.[387]

[s 88.4] Amendment of Plaint in an Interpleader Suit

A plaint in an interpleader suit can be amended by inclusion of new properties and joinder of new parties.[388]

---

387. Juggannath v Tulka Kera, (1908) 32 Bom 592.
388. Raja Bhagwati Baksh Singh v Civil Judge, AIR 1961 All 599.

PART V

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

[1][[S 89] Settlement of disputes outside the Court.—(1) Where it appears to the Court that there exist elements of a settlement which may be acceptable to the parties, the Court shall formulate the terms of settlement and give them to the parties for their observations and after receiving the observations of the parties, the Court may reformulate the terms of a possible settlement and refer the same for—

(a) arbitration;

(b) conciliation;

(c) judicial settlement including settlement through Lok Adalat; or

(d) mediation.

(2) Where a dispute has been referred—

(a) for arbitration or conciliation, the provisions of the Arbitration an Conciliation Act, 1996 (26 of 1996) shall apply as if the proceedings for arbitration or conciliation were referred for settlement under the provisions of that Act;

(b) to Lok Adalat, the Court shall refer the same to the Lok Adalat in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (1) of section 20 of the Legal Services Authority Act, 1987 (39 of 1987) and all other provisions of that Act shall apply in respect of the dispute so referred to the Lok Adalat;

(c) for judicial settlement, the Court shall refer the same to a suitable institution or person and such institution or person shall be deemed to be a Lok Adalat and all the provisions of the Legal Services Authority Act, 1987 (39 of 1987) shall apply as if the dispute were referred to a Lok Adalat under the provisions of that Act;

(d) for mediation, the Court shall effect a compromise between the parties and shall follow such procedure as may be prescribed.]

SYNOPSIS

[s 89.1] Alterations in the Section 1030
[s 89.2] "shall formulate the terms of settlement" 1033
[s 89.3] Element of Compromise—Discretion of the Court 1033
[s 89.4] Can Parties by Agreement Appoint Court as Arbitrator 1034

1. Inserted by Act 46 of 1999, section 7 (w.e.f. 1-7-2002). Earlier section 89 (relating to Arbitration) was repealsed by Act 10 of 1940, section 49 and Sch II.

[s 89.5] Reference to Arbitration or Conciliation 1035
[s 89.6] Reference to Mediation..... 1036
[s 89.7] Expenses..... 1037
[s 89.8] Panel..... 1037
[s 89.9] Family Court..... 1037
[s 89.10] Model Case Flow Management Rules 1038
[s 89.11] This Section and Section 8, Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 26 of 1996 1038
[s 89.12] Lok Adalat—Refund of Court Fee..... 1039
[s 89.13] This Section and O X, rules 1A, 1B and 1C..... 1040

[s 89.1] Alterations in the Section

The earlier section 89 given below as regards Arbitration as also section 104, clauses (a)–(f) and the Second Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (CPC) have been annulled by the Arbitration Act, X of 1940 (now replaced by Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996).

The Amending Act of 1999 has inserted section 89 in the CPC. The amended Act comes into effect from 1-7-2002. The provisions of section 89 of the CPC shall not effect any suit in which an issue has been settled before the commencement of the present section; and every such suit shall be dealt with as if the present section 89 had not come into force. Corresponding amendments have also been made in rules 1A, 1B and 1C of O X of the CPC.

The "Notes on Clauses" of the CPC (Amendment) Bill, 1997 stated the following with regard to this provision.

> Clause 7 provides for the settlement of disputes outside the court. The provisions of clause 7 are based on the recommendations made by Law Commission of India and Malimath Committee. It was suggested by Law Commission of India that the court may require attendance of any party to the suit or proceedings to appear in person with a view to arriving at an amicable settlement of dispute between the parties and make an attempt to settle the dispute between the parties amicably. Malimath Committee recommended to make it obligatory for the court to refer the dispute, after issues are framed, for settlement either by way of arbitration, conciliation, mediation, judicial settlement or through Lok Adalat. It is only when the parties fail to get their disputes settled through any of the alternate dispute resolution methods that the suit could proceed further. In view of the above, clause 7 seeks to insert a new section 89 in the Code in order to provide for alternate dispute resolution.

A new section 16 was inserted in the Court-fees Act, 1870 by the same CPC (Amendment) Act, 1999, which reads as follows:

> Where the Court refers the parties to the suit to any one of the mode of settlement of dispute referred to in section 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (5 of 1908) the plaintiff shall be entitled to a certificate from the Court authorising him to receive back from the collector, the full amount of the fee paid in respect of such plaint.

Where a matter referred to a Lok Adalat in terms of section 89(2) CPC read with section 20(1) of the Legal Services Authorities Act, 1987 is settled, the refund of the court-fee is governed by section 16 of the Court-fees Act, 1870 read with section 21 of the Legal Services Authorities Act, 1987 and the plaintiff is entitled to the refund of the whole of the court-fee paid on the plaint.

Section 89 of the CPC was earlier repealed by the Arbitration Act of 1940. Section 89 was later on inserted again by the Amending Act of 1999.

The amended section 89 provides that where it appears to the court that there exists elements of settlement which may be acceptable to the parties, the court shall formulate the terms of settlement and give them to the parties for their observations and after receiving the observations of the parties, the court may reformulate the terms of possible settlement and refer the same for:

(i) arbitration;

(ii) conciliation;

(iii) judicial settlement including settlement through Lok Adalat;

(iv) mediation.

Where a dispute has been referred for Arbitration or Conciliation, the provisions of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 shall apply as if the proceedings for arbitration or conciliation were referred for settlement under the provisions of the Act.

Where the court has referred the dispute for judicial settlement, it shall refer the same to a suitable institution or person and such institution and such person or institution shall be deemed to be a Lok Adalat and all the provisions of Legal Services Authorities Act, 1987 shall apply.

Further, where the dispute is referred for mediation, the court shall effect a compromise between the parties and shall follow such procedure as may be prescribed.

Section 20 of the Legal Services Authorities Act, 1987 provides that a matter can be referred to Lok Adalat: (i) with the consent of the parties, (ii) on an application of one of the parties, (iii) where the court is satisfied that the matter is an appropriate one to be taken cognisance of by the Lok Adalat. However, no case shall be referred to the Lok Adalat, on an application of one of the parties, by the court, without giving a reasonable opportunity of being heard to the parties. The Legal Services Authorities Act, 1987 is amended by the Act 37 of 2002 which comes into effect from 1-06-2002, consequent to which sections 22A–22E have been inserted. The inserted sections deal with pre-litigation conciliation and settlement. It would be interesting to see how the amendments in this Act affect section 89 of the CPC.

Alongwith the insertion of section 89, the Legislature has also amended O X of the CPC, by inserting rules 1A, 1B and 1C. The said rules provide that after recording the admissions and denials, the courts shall direct the parties to the suit to opt for either mode of settlements outside the court as specified in sub-section (1) of section 89. On the option of the parties, the court shall fix the date of appearance before such forum or authorities as may be opted by the parties. It is mandatory for the parties to appear before the designated forum or authority, for conciliation of the suit. Further, where the presiding officer of the forum or the authority is satisfied that it will not be proper in the interest of justice to proceed with the matter further, then, it shall refer the matter once again to the court and direct the parties to appear before the court on the date fixed by it.

Reading the amended section 89, and the insertions in O X, it appears that the following conditions should be satisfied before matter could be referred to an Alternate Dispute Redressal:

(i) existence of elements of settlement in the opinion of the court;

(ii) the parties must share the opinion of the court;

(iii) formulation of the terms of settlement by the court;

(iv) the court should invite the observation of the parties on the terms of settlement;

(v) observations of the parties must be received by the court;

(vi) if need be, reformulate the terms of settlement and refer the same for Alternate Dispute Redressal contemplated under section 89.

In the opinion of the authors, the court should not be asked to entertain the exercise contemplated to formulating and reformulating the terms of settlement by sub-section (1) of section 89. It is possible that while formulating the terms of settlement or while reformulating the terms of the settlement after receiving the observations of the parties, that the court may be obliged to express some opinion on a particular aspect of the dispute which may not be liked by one of the parties. Besides, doing so would invite comments and suspicion upon the neutrality of the court as an impartial arbiter.

The judicial settlement contemplated in clause (c) of sub-section (2) may be effectively implemented in cities and big towns where a number of senior lawyers, institutions, and retired judges are available. There may be difficulties in implementing the same in smaller towns where there is only one court, and there are not enough senior lawyers or retired judicial offices of high integrity. Any amendment to be effective should be such which can be implemented throughout the length and breadth of the entire country with equal ease as it can be implemented in some parts of the country.

The Law Commission in its 163rd report was of the opinion that the proposed section 89 (as it then was) may be suitably modified to provide as under:

(i) After the settlement of issues in every suit (when both the parties would have also filed their basic documents as required by the proposed provisions relating to the filing of documents alongwith the pleadings), the suit shall be referred to a board of conciliators to explore whether there existed elements of settlement which were acceptable to the parties and if it appeared to the board that such elements of settlement did exist, they shall refer the suit for arbitration, judicial settlement or settlement through Lok Adalat. The method of conciliation could be tried by the board itself if found feasible. Such reference could be made either after reformulating the terms of possible settlement, if the board found the same feasible and advisable or without such reformulation, as the case may be.

(ii) The presiding officer of the principal civil court in every city and town shall constitute, in consultation with his senior colleagues, a board of conciliators consisting of retired judicial officers and senior lawyers of known integrity and competence.

(iii) A time-limit should be prescribed within which the board of conciliators shall complete its work that is either refer the suit to arbitration/judicial settlement or settlement through Lok Adalat — or bring about a settlement through conciliation — if it finds that such a course was advisable or report to the court that it could not find any elements of settlement which might be acceptable to the parties and that, therefore, any reference of the suit to arbitration/ conciliation/judicial settlement or settlement through Lok Adalat was not warranted or advisable. This period could range between four months to one year, as may be specified by each court.

(iv) To delete the alternative mode of mediation mentioned under clause (2) of sub-section 1 of the proposed section 89. Mediation by a court could be resorted to at any stage of the proceedings and it should not be stipulated as a matter of law either at the stage of the issues or at any subsequent stage. Such a course is always open to the court and there is no reason to define or codify it. Accordingly, clause (d) in sub-section 2 of section 89 might be deleted.

It would have been appropriate if the recommendations of the Law Commission were adhered to and Act was amended accordingly.

[s 89.2] "shall formulate the terms of settlement"

As can be seen from section 89, its first part uses the word "shall" when it stipulates that the "court shall formulate terms of settlement". The use of the word "may" in the later part of section 89 only relates to the aspect of re-formulating the terms of a possible settlement. The intention of the legislature behind enacting section 89 is that where it appears to the court that there exists element of a settlement which may be acceptable to the parties, they, at the instance of the court, shall be made to apply their mind so as to opt for one or the other of the four alternative dispute resolution methods mentioned in the section, and if the parties do not agree, the court shall refer them to one or other of the said modes. Section 89 uses both the word "shall" and "may" whereas O X, rule 1A uses the word "shall" but on harmonious reading of these provisions it becomes clear that the use of the word "may" in section 89 only governs the aspect of re-formulation of the terms of a possible settlement and its reference to one of the alternative dispute resolution methods. There is no conflict. It is evident that what is referred to one of the alternative dispute resolution modes is the dispute which is summarised in the terms of settlement formulated or re-formulated in terms of section 89.[2]

In the case, the petitioner was represented by its counsel who, without the permission of the petitioner, accepted the amount deposited by the other party before the court and withdrew the suit. The petitioner being aggrieved, preferred the civil revision petition and contended that the court failed to follow the mandate of section 89, CPC. The petitioner contended that it was the duty of the court to inform the parties of the terms of the settlement and give them time to respond. The court accepted the contentions made by the petitioner and held that the impugned order is bad in law and liable to be set aside.[3]

[s 89.3] Element of Compromise—Discretion of the Court

If a defendant appears in a suit and offers to compromise the claim raised by the plaintiff, one can say that an element of compromise exists; but if the plaintiff, reacting to such offer, right away rejects the offer of compromise and if he wants a decision in the suit on merit, the element of compromise can no longer be said to exist/survive. In such a situation, if the court makes no further efforts to make the parties reach an amicable settlement of their dispute, the court cannot be said to have failed to exercise its jurisdiction under section 89. In a situation of this kind, the court, which is in seisin of the matter, is the best judge of the matter, and even if the revisional court happens to think that the trial court should have pursued the offer of compromise, notwithstanding the resistance offered, the revisional court will be slow to interfere, for, it is trite that if two equally reasonable views are possible, the revisional court will be slow to substitute its views in place of the views of the trial court.[4]

However, no court can compel any unwilling party to submit to the jurisdiction of the arbitration and to get their dispute settled through arbitration as per section 89 of the CPC. It is only when all the parties agree to get their dispute settled and express their intention in this regard before the civil court that the civil court can formulate the terms of settlement and refer the dispute to arbitration.[5]

---

2. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344 : JT 2005 (6) 486.
3. Housing & Urban Development Corp Ltd v Ahongsangbam Inao Singh, AIR 2019 Manipur 17.
4. West Bengal State Electricity Board v Shanti Conductors Pvt Ltd, AIR 2004 Gau 70.
5. BOC India Ltd v Instant Sales Pvt Ltd, AIR 2007 Cal 275 : 2007 (2) Cal LJ 385.

The issue involved herein was "whether the parties who resolve their matter outside the modes mentioned under section 89 of CPC are entitled to receive refund of full court fees or not"? The court said that as per section 69A of Tamil Nadu Court-Fees and Suits Valuation Act, 1955, the party can seek refund of the court fees when the matter is resolved by any of the methods mentioned under section 89 of CPC. Further, the court said that those parties who do not seek court's interference to reach a settlement are not given the refund of full court fees then such an interpretation would lead to absurd outcome. Hence, the Hon'ble Apex Court made an observation that the parties who privately agree to settle their dispute outside the modes contemplated under section 89 of CPC are also entitled to refund of court fees.[6]

A Division Bench of the Kerala High Court in a suit for partition of properties within family, held that for settlement of dispute outside court, it is open for court to identify and segregate issues which can be settled in Alternative Dispute Resolution Mechanisms (ADRs) and which are to be adjudicated by the court. Those segregated issues can be referred for settlement in one of the ADR mechanisms. Even if there is no agreement among defendants on all the issues referred for ADR by settlement, some of the defendants may satisfy the plaintiff and thus enter a compromise.[7]

As per the decision in Afcons Infrastructure Ltd v Cherian Varkey Construction Pvt Ltd,[8] a judicial settlement under section 89(2)(d) would be where "the court shall effects a compromise between the parties". The court found that proposals were exchanged between the parties, and due to the efforts of the counsels, the settlement was arrived at by the parties. Thus, the court said that this is a compromise which took place in court as per O XXIII rule 3 of CPC, and would be regarded as a judicial settlement as laid down in Afcons case. Henceforth, relying on the provision of the Court Fees Act, the court held that the petitioner is liable to get full refund of the court fees paid.[9]

Family disputes and business disputes should be resolved through mediation/ arbitration. Lawyers should advise their clients accordingly.[10]

[s 89.4] Can Parties by Agreement Appoint Court as Arbitrator

The government, or for that matter any party, cannot compel or obligate a civil court to arbitrate the matters between the parties on the strength of an agreement entered into between the parties. The fact that the government is one of the parties to the arbitration agreement makes no difference. Courts are created or established by law in this country and function in accordance with the jurisdiction conferred on them by the enactments which confer a jurisdiction and function in accordance with the procedural law that regulates the proceedings of the court. Even section 89 of the CPC does not obligate the court to conduct arbitration, but enables the court wherever it is satisfied with reference to the dispute in a pending suit that there is a possibility of settlement either by way of arbitration or conciliation to refer the same to arbitration or conciliation.[11]

---

6. The High Court of Judicature at Madras v MC Subramaniam, (2021) 3 SCC 560.
7. Aravammal Parkum AB v Panangadan Vachali Subhadra, 2008 (3) Ker LT 233 : (2008) 2 Ker LJ 508 (DB).
8. Afcons Infrastructure Ltd v Cherian Varkey Construction Co Pvt Ltd, (2010) 8 SCC 24.
9. Munish Kalra v Kiran Madan, (2019) 198 AIC 622.
10. BS Krishna Murthy v BS Nagraj, AIR 2011 SC 794 : (2011) 15 SCC 464 : (2011) 1 SCR 387.
11. K Venkulu v State of AP, AIR 2004 AP 85 (DB).

[s 89.5] Reference to Arbitration or Conciliation

One of the modes to which the dispute can be referred is "arbitration". Section 89(2) provides that where a dispute has been referred for arbitration or conciliation, the provisions of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 shall apply as if the proceedings for arbitration or conciliation were referred for settlement under the provisions of 1996 Act. Section 8 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 deals with the power to refer parties to arbitration where there is arbitration agreement. As held in P Anand Gajapathi Raju v PVG Raju,[12] the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 governs a case where arbitration is agreed upon before or pending a suit by all the parties. The Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, however, does not contemplate a situation as in section 89 of the CPC where the court asks the parties to choose one or other alternative dispute resolution methods including arbitration and the parties choose arbitration as their option. Of course, the parties have to agree for arbitration. Section 82 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 enables the high court to make rules consistent with this Act as to all proceedings before the court under the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996. Section 84 enables the Central Government to make rules for carrying out the provisions of the Act. The procedure for option to arbitration among four alternative dispute resolution methods is not contemplated by the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996, and, therefore, section 82 or 84 has no applicability where parties agree to go for arbitration under section 89 of the CPC. As already noticed, for the purposes of section 89 and O X, rules 1A, 1B and 1C, the relevant sections in Part X of the CPC enable the high court to frame rules. If reference is made to arbitration under section 89 of the CPC, the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 would apply only from the stage after reference and not before the stage of reference when options under section 89 are given by the court and chosen by the parties. On the same analogy, the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 in relation to conciliation would apply only after the stage of reference to conciliation. The Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 does not deal with a situation where after suit is filed, the court requires a party to choose one or other alternative dispute resolution methods including conciliation. Thus, for conciliation as well rules can be made under Part X of the CPC for purposes of procedure for opting for "conciliation" and up to the stage of reference to conciliation. Thus, there is no impediment in the ADR rules being framed in relation to civil court as contemplated in section 89 up to the stage of reference to alternative dispute resolution. The Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 comes into play only after the stage of reference up to the award. Applying the same analogy, the Legal Services Authority Act, 1987 or the rules framed thereunder by the state governments cannot act as impediment in the high court making rules under Part X of the CPC covering the manner in which option to Lok Adalat can be made, being one of the modes provided in section 89. The Legal Services Authority Act, 1987 also does not deal with the aspect of exercising option to one of the four alternative dispute resolution methods mentioned in section 89. Section 89 makes applicable the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 and the Legal Services Authority Act, 1987 from the stage after exercise of options and making of reference.[13]

It has been held that under section 89 for settlement of disputes outside court through arbitration where parties agree to such reference of disputes and differences between them

---

12. P Anand Gajapathi Raju v PVG Raju, AIR 2000 SC 1886 : AIR 2000 SCW 1489 : (2000) 4 SCC 539 : (2000) 3 Scale 330.
13. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344 : JT 2005 (6) 486.

in a pending suit, inclusion of additional issues which were not part of lis in civil suit are permissible.[14]

The language of section 89 unmistakably conveys that the Legislature has reckoned arbitration also as one of the four methods of ADR available to the Courts. The language of section 89 also disabuse any confusion as to whether it is a method of settlement. Taking note of the language on section 89, it can be seen to convey that all the four methods are ADR methods contemplated by the provision and they are methods of settlement.[15]

Depending on the nature of the case, its facts, the contentions and the possible resolution, it is open to the court to come to the conclusion that even if the parties do not agree, they can be referred to one or the other modes of the said modes of dispute resolution. One of the modes undoubtedly is arbitration. What applies to the goose must apply to the gander also. If section 89 can be read to conclude that compulsory reference for mediation, conciliation and judicial settlement is possible without the consent of the parties, nothing can stand in the way of the court adopting an interpretation that arbitration is not beyond the ken of section 89.[16]

Where there was no clause with regard to appointment of arbitrator in the agreement between parties to a dispute, it was held by the Uttrakhand High Court that resort can be taken to alternative dispute resolution mechanism as contemplated by section 89 of the CPC. Consequently the matter was referred to a retired judge for deciding the dispute.[17]

In a case from Madhya Pradesh, a decree for restitution of suit properties in terms of the arbitral award was passed. During the pendency of a writ petition challenging the decree of restitution, the parties agreed to settle their dispute and the Court appointed a Conciliator. It was held by the Division Bench of the high court that since the parties have entered into a settlement in terms of the provision as contained in O XXIII of the CPC, while invoking the provisions contained in section 89 of CPC, providing for Special Proceedings and have finally resolved their dispute amicably, it would be in the interest of justice to affirm the terms of the Settlement arrived at amongst the parties.[18]

[s 89.6] Reference to Mediation

The question of clause (d) of section 89 (2) of the CPC is whether the terms of compromise are to be finalised by or before the mediator or by or before the court. It is evident that all the four alternatives, namely, arbitration, conciliation, judicial settlement including settlement through Lok Adalat and mediation are meant to be the actions of persons or institutions outside the court and not before the court. Order X, rule 1C speaks of the "conciliation forum" referring back the dispute to the court. In fact, the court is now involved in the actual mediation/conciliation. Clause (d) of section 89(2) only means that when mediation succeeds and parties agree to the terms of settlement, the mediator will report to the court, and the court, after giving notice and hearing the parties, "effect" the compromise, and pass a decree in accordance with the terms of settlement accepted by the parties. Further, in this view, there is no question of the court which refers the matter to mediation/conciliation being debarred

---

14. UOI v Titagarh Capital Pvt Ltd, (2015) 16 SCC 143.
15. Afcons Infrastructure Ltd v Cherian Varkey Construction Pvt Ltd, 2007 (1) Ker LT 196 : 2007 (1) Ker LJ 333.
16. Afcons Infrastructure Ltd v Cherian Varkey Construction Pvt Ltd, 2007 (1) Ker LT 196 : 2007 (1) Ker LJ 333.
17. Ramola Construction Co v Executive Officer, Nagar Panchayat, Muni-ki-Reti, (2007) 1 UC 345 : 2006 (64) All LR 341.
18. Ashok Kumar Bansal v Sushila Devi Bansal, AIR 2010 MP 145 : (2010) 1 MPLJ 612 (DB) (Gwalior Bench).

from hearing the matter where settlement is not arrived at. The judge who makes the reference only considers the limited question as to whether there are reasonable grounds to expect that there will be settlement and on that ground he cannot be treated to be disqualified to try the suit afterwards if no settlement is arrived at between the parties.[19]

[s 89.7] Expenses

The question also is about the payment made and expenses to be incurred where the court compulsorily refers a matter for conciliation/mediation. Considering the large number of responses received by the committee to the draft rules, it has been suggested that in the event of such compulsory reference to conciliation/mediation procedures, if expenditure on conciliation/mediation is borne by the government, it may encourage parties to come forward and make attempts at conciliation/mediation. On the other hand, if the parties feel that they have to incur extra expenditure for resorting to such alternative dispute resolution modes, it is likely to act as a deterrent for adopting these methods. The suggestion was found laudable. The Central Government was directed by Supreme Court to examine it and it agreed to make a request to the Planning Commission and Finance Commission to make specific financial allocation for the judiciary for including the expenses involved for mediation/conciliation under section 89 of the CPC. In case the Central Government has any reservations, the same were directed to be placed before the court within four months. In such event, the Government was directed to consider provisionally releasing adequate funds for these purposes also having regard to what Supreme Court had earlier noticed about many statutes that are being administered and litigations pending in the courts in various states are central legislations concerning the subjects in List I and List III of such VII to the Constitution of India.[20]

[s 89.8] Panel

With a view to enable the court to refer the parties to conciliation/mediation, where parties are unable to reach a consensus on an agreed name, there should be a panel of well-trained conciliation/mediation to which it may be possible for the court to make a reference. It would be necessary for the high courts and district courts to take appropriate steps in the direction of preparing the requisite panels.[21]

In a case involving dispute between two government owned corporations, the Supreme Court found that the permanent machinery of arbitration, put in place in March 1989 was outside the statutory scheme of the Arbitration Act, 1940 and continued to be outside the purview of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 as well. To resolve the dispute, therefore, the matter was referred to arbitration under section 89 and retired CJI KG Balakrishnan was appointed as the sole arbitrator.[22]

[s 89.9] Family Court

A doubt was expressed about the applicability of ADR rules for disputes arising under the Family Courts Act, 1984 since that Act also contemplates rules to be made. It is, however, to be

---

19. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344 : JT 2005 (6) 486.
20. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344 : JT 2005 (6) 486.
21. Salem Advocate Bar Association v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3353 : (2005) 6 SCC 344 : JT 2005 (6) 486.
22. Northern Coalfields Ltd v Heavy Engineering Corp Ltd, AIR 2016 SC 3715 : (2016) 8 SCC 685 : JT 2016 (7) SC 437 : (2016) 6 Scale 820.

borne in mind that the Family Courts Act, 1984 applies to the CPC for all proceedings before it. In this view, ADR rules made under the CPC can be applied to supplement the rules made under the Family Courts Act, 1984 and provide for alternative dispute resolution insofar as conciliation/mediation is concerned.[23]

A matrimonial dispute in Kerala generated eleven litigations within a period of one year before various fora. It was held by the Kerala High Court that attempt for alternative redressal is not only the statutory obligation of the court but it is also their duty to public. Being judicial officers, they have expertise in peace making. It was observed that one case settled is ten cases avoided because in settlement, peace is purchased and both parties part as friends.[24]

[s 89.10] Model Case Flow Management Rules

Model case flow management rules have been separately dealt with for trial courts and first appellate subordinate courts and for high courts. These draft rules extensively deal with the various stages of the litigation. The high courts can examine these rules, discuss the matter and consider the question of adopting or making case law management and model rules with or without modification, so that a step forward is taken to provide to the litigating public a fair, speedy and inexpensive justice.[25]

[s 89.11] This Section and Section 8, Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 26 of 1996

Section 89 of the CPC cannot be resorted to for interpreting section 8 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 26 of 1996 as it stands on a different footing and it would be applicable even in cases where there is no arbitration agreement for referring the dispute for arbitration. Further, for that purpose, the court has to apply its mind to the condition contemplated under section 89 of the CPC and even if the application under section 8 of the Act is rejected, the court is required to follow the procedure prescribed under the said section.[26]

Where in a matter, there was no arbitration agreement, but parties had agreed to resolve dispute vide arbitration, the high court was found to be correct by the Supreme Court in appointing a substitute arbitrator namely Radhakrishnan J, in place of Sujata Manohar J, to resolve the dispute.[27] Speaking for the bench, Sikri J, in his supplementing opinion held that the purpose for enacting section 89 is to encourage the parties to the dispute to settle their dispute by adopting one of the four methods provided therein. Sikri J, further observed that not only does it result in lessening the burden of the court; many cases which come to the court can be resolved more suitably and with better outcomes if the methods of ADR prescribed in section 89 are resorted to. Therefore, once an arbitration agreement was entered into between the parties, that too in a pending suit, it can be deduced that the intention of the parties was to settle the matter through arbitration and not to come back to the court again for the decision of the same dispute by the court adjudicatory process.

---

23. Northern Coalfields Ltd v Heavy Engineering Corp Ltd, AIR 2016 SC 3715 : (2016) 8 SCC 685 : JT 2016 (7) SC 437 : (2016) 6 Scale 820.
24. T Vineed v Manju S Nair, 2008 (1) Ker LJ 525 : 2008 (65) All Ind Cas 327 (DB) : ILR (2008) 1 Ker 646.
25. T Vineed v Manju S Nair, 2008 (1) Ker LJ 525 : 2008 (65) All Ind Cas 327 (DB) : ILR (2008) 1 Ker 646.
26. Sukanya Holdings Pvt Ltd v Jayesh H Pandya, AIR 2003 SC 2252 : (2003) 5 SCC 531.
27. Shailesh Dhairyawan v Mohan Balkrishna Lulla, (2016) 3 SCC 619.

In relation to ADR method, arbitration contemplated under section 89 (1) and 89 (2) is not a reference under section 8 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996 and hence the words "as if" has been used in section 89(2)(a).[28]

Sections 89 (1)(a) and 89 (2)(a) do refer to reference of a dispute for arbitration and does not specifically refer to any reference to Arbitrator. Going strictly by the language of sections 89 (1)(a) and 89 (2)(a) of the CPC, a doubt arises whether this means and implies that reference can be made for arbitration as indicated in section 8 of the Arbitration and Conciliation Act, 1996. But an interpretation cannot be resorted to that is divorced of the context and the purpose which has to be served under section 89. If the high court were to make a reference only for arbitration without specifying any Arbitrator, it would necessarily involve a dispute obliging the parties to go before the Chief Justice under section 11 of the Act to get the Arbitrator appointed. Such a procedure instead of contributing to expedition in the disposal of case and settlement of dispute would contribute to further unnecessary delay and protraction. Therefore, the power for reference for arbitration and conciliation which appears in section 89 (1)(a) and (b) and 89 (2)(a) must certainly be interpreted to inhere in it the power and the jurisdiction of the court to refer to a specified Arbitrator.[29]

[s 89.12] Lok Adalat—Refund of Court Fee

On a careful reading of the provisions it can be seen that when a matter is referred to Lok Adalat by a civil court, the provisions contained in the Legal Services Authorities Act, 1987 shall govern the parties in the matter of resolving the dispute and also in the matter of refund of the court fees. There is a specific provision in the Legal Services Authorities Act, 1987 which provides for refund of the court fee when the matter is settled by the Lok Adalat and as per section 16 of the Court-fees Act, 1870 the entire court fee paid on the plaint is liable to be refunded and the court which has referred the matter shall issue a certificate to the plaintiff to receive the amount from the collector.[30]

In the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002, there is no such provision directing refund of court-fee. Even in the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1999, section 34 inserted a new section 16 in the Court Fees Act, 1870, in which the refund of court-fee is provided only in a case where the court refers the parties to the suit to any one of the mode of settlement of disputes referred to in section 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908 the plaintiff shall be entitled to a certificate from the court authorising him to receive back from the collector, the full amount of the fee paid in respect of such plaint, but no such provision has been made when the appeal is held to be not maintainable. In the circumstances, the provision of the Court Fees Act, 1870 can be seen. The refund of court fee is envisaged in sections 13, 14 and 15 of the Court Fees Act, 1870. Under section 13 of the Court Fees Act, 1870, the refund of court fees of Memorandum of Appeal can be ordered in the circumstances when an appeal or plaint, which has been rejected by the lower court on any of the grounds mentioned in the CPC, is ordered to be received or if a suit is remanded in appeal, on any of the grounds mentioned in section 35 (now O XLI, rule 23 of the CPC) of the same CPC, for a second decision by the lower court, the appellate court is authorised to grant the appellant a certificate for refund. Section 14 provides refund of court fee on an application for review of judgment and section 15 provides for refund of court fee where the court reverses or modifies

---

28. Afcons Infrastructure Ltd v Cherian Varkey Construction Pvt Ltd, 2007 (1) Ker LT 196 : 2007 (1) Ker LJ 333.
29. Afcons Infrastructure Ltd v Cherian Varkey Construction Pvt Ltd, 2007 (1) Ker LT 196 : 2007 (1) Ker LJ 333.
30. Vasudevan v State of Kerala, AIR 2004 Ker 43.

its former decision on the ground of mistake. But, in the present case, the right of appeal which was available prior to 1 July 2002 has been taken away by the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act, 2002 without making any such provision of refund of court fee.[31]

[s 89.13] This Section and O X, rules 1A, 1B and 1C

